"Although this volume is more readable than a large part of the souurces on which it is based, the expert must still consult a standard physical geography. Most readers will find the book rewarding, for limited as it is to physical geography, it is based on solid material. And since the primary sources are practically unavailable, even a compilation from scattered Soviet treatises may be considered a real contribution."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:160 Je '51 180w

MISSAKIAN, J. Searchlight on the Armenian question (1878-1950). 154p $2.50 Hairenik assn, inc, 212 Stuart st, Boston 16

956.6 Armenian question 51-162

"In this little book Mr. Missakian, a British-Armenian journalist, attempts to present a summary of the Armenian question during the last seventy-five years. In his chosen task he has burdened himself with the double object of portraying the unenviable lot which fell to the Armenians under the Turks, and of summarizing diplomatic deals which worked, almost invariably, to the detriment of the Armenians." Ann Am Acad

Reviewed by A. O. Sarkissian

Ann Am Acad 273:301 Ja '51 300w

Foreign Affairs 29:331 Ja '51 10w

MITCHELL, EDWIN VALENTINE. Romance of New England antiques. 265p il $3 Current bks.

745 Antiques. Collectors and collecting 50-9718

A study of the early New England craftsmen, and the articles they made. The author discusses "dealers, auctions, reproduction, fakes, thefts, and hiding places and follows this with a categorical survey of the product—clocks, chests, chairs, pewter, silver, pottery, and so on. His main concern is with antiques before they become antiques and with their makers and first users." (Sat R of Lit) Illustrated with reproductions of old engravings.

Booklist 47:92 N 1 '50

"Delightful blend of fact and legend."

+ Bookmark 10:5 O '50 20w

"Pleasant peregrinations by a popular guide among the scenes behind the scenes of New England antiques today. . . Edwin Valentine Mitchell has a unique and intimate quality in his writing."

+ Kirkus 18:493 Ag 15 '50 150w

"This book is for reading—the point is worth stressing in a field in which most of the literature is for reference, consultation, or instruction. . . The beginner will learn much from Mr. Mitchell's erudition, and the connoisseur should be able to find material not offered in more elaborate treatises on the subject." J. T. Winterich

+ Sat R of Lit 34:19 Ja 20 '51 140w

MITCHELL, SYDNEY KNOX. Taxation in medieval England; ed. by Sidney Painter. 413p $5 Yale univ. press

336.2 Taxation—Great Britain. Middle ages 51-2051

"The book tends to show that earlier periods of our society did not accept without question the fiscal foundations of states as we now know them. . . With meticulous attention to detail, this volume traces the reluctant acceptance of the idea that taxation for the support of the whole was a right of the state. Typically English, the story records the utilization of local sources of administration, with the by-product of gradual acceptance of central control. Since fiscal power is obvious, as well as great, the evolution was a very real part of the political struggle between decentralization and centralization." U S Quarterly Bk R

"This important volume continues the researches in taxation which established Professor Mitchell's reputation and represented his life's work." B. Wilkinson

+ Pol Sci Q 66:472 S '51 900w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:168 Je '51 230w

MITCHELL, WALTER LEROY. How to use your trade association. 287p il $5.25; to schools $3.95 Prentice-Hall

650.6 Trade and professional associations 51-5416

"A thorough study of the use of the trade association as a tool of management in the individual firm. The author explains and discusses the various activities and functions of the trade association, and shows how these can be effective aids to its members while remaining within the limitations, ethical as well as legal, of the antitrust legislation. Special chapters deal with help that can thus be obtained with respect to safeguarding supply of materials and ideas, employee relationships, research, standardization, accounting methods, information, public relations and liaison activities. A contributed chapter treats of anticipated 'Functions of the Future.' Bibliography." Library J

Booklist 48:25 S 15 '51

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 76:1568 O 1 '51 90w

MITCHELL, WESLEY CLAIR. What happens during business cycles; a progress report. 386p $5 Nat. bureau of economic research

338.54 Business cycles 51-3649

"Not the exposition of cyclical theory for which economists have long been waiting, this posthumous book, containing three Parts of a study planned in seven, places emphasis upon cyclical behavior rather than upon the explanation of causal forces. It thus represents an intermediate stage between a cyclical theory and Professor Mitchell's earlier preparatory work." U S Quarterly Bk R

MITCHELL, W. C.—Continued

Reviewed by K. E. Boulding

Ann Am Acad 278:211 N '51 800w

"What we have here is not a completed book; it is truly a progress report, presenting that part of the work which the author was able to complete. Nevertheless, students of business cycles will be interested in seeing the use to which Mitchell has put the statistical methods and materials which he and the National Bureau developed." L. V. Chandler

N Y Times p35 S 23 '51 330w

"This is not a work for the general public, nor would it be easy reading for one without substantial training in economics, for the language is in a large measure technical, the discussion assumes considerable familiarity with the subject, and the description is statistical rather than historical."

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:261 S '51 190w

MITFORD, NANCY. The blessing. 305p $3 Random house

51-13267

"Grace, a beautiful, dull English smart blonde . . . marries a madly glamorous French marquis and gets swept into the network of Parisian society, with its peculiar contemporary complexities. They have a child—The Blessing—named Sigismond. . . Grace, on a specially guided tour of the private houses of Paris, finds her husband making love to his mistress, and returns in tears to England. There she oscillates for a while between members of White's and the literary intelligentsia, until the book ends with a reconciliation with the marquis." Times [London] Lit Sup

"A comedy of manners which ought to be quite as entertaining a play as it is a novel." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 188:84 N '51 500w

Bookmark 11:60 D '51 30w

"The Blessing is irredeemably vulgar and pretentious; it treats with cheap petulance material which in other hands could rise to comedy or tragedy." Riley Hughes

— Cath World 174:314 Ja '52 250w

"Miss Mitford tells her story with much wit, intelligence, and polish, and with a heartlessness that recalls the Evelyn Waugh of 'Decline and Fall.' But, unlike Waugh, she nowhere suggests the existence of a more stable and familiar moral order than that which governs her characters. The only weakness of 'The Blessing' is the imperfect combination of the story of Grace and Charles-Edouard with the story of Sigismond, their son." Milton Crane

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 O 28 '51 260w

Kirkus 19:402 Ag 1 '51 230w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield

Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 27 '51 140w

"The book is a delightful jeu d'esprit, featherweight but never feather-headed, and as perceptive as it is witty. Only readers who learn their vocabulary at Miss Mitford's knee will be disappointed." John Richardson

+ New Statesman & Nation 42:107 Jl 28 '51 650w

"'Love in a Cold Climate' had mockery and cruelty and wit, and it glittered like ice. 'The Blessing' is only hard, and frivolous like rock-candy. However, even a confection can have its virtues, and this book has several, all satiric. The story can be disregarded. . . However, 'The Blessing' attains a kind of mocking brilliance in spite of its plot which Miss Mitford must have lying around in one of her old castles." Phyllis McGinley

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 O 14 '51 550w

"Nancy Mitford's latest book, cunningly constructed, artfully written, echoing delightfully in the mind, is purely frivolous, divinely farcical." Elizabeth Janeway

+ N Y Times p5 O 7 '51 850w

Reviewed by Anthony West

New Yorker 27:132 O 27 '51 1000w

San Francisco Chronicle p26 N 4 '51 500w

"One of my French friends used to talk about 'le high-life,' making it rhyme mysteriously with fig-leaf. I was reminded of that in reading 'The Blessing' for it is high-life with a decided French accent, and a very diverting picture it is, too. . . Her analysis of the characteristic French and English virtues and faults is, on the whole, shrewd and just." R. C. Benet

+ Sat R of Lit 34:33 O 6 '51 600w

"It is great fun to read about the rich again, and in a period that seems to have a literary fixation on Nannies, Miss Mitford's is among the very best." Marghanita Laski

+ Spec 187:168 Ag 3 '51 180w

Time 58:126 O 15 '51 550w

"The Blessing, though witty and amusing enough in many of its parts, is hardly up to her usual standard. Its story is rather weak and its characters incline to the preposterous. . . It is almost impossible for Miss Mitford to be dull and much of her dialogue is deliciously light and sparkling. She gives us some neat satire. . . Where she breaks down, apart from the weakness of her story, is in the strained nature of her 'Frenchness.'"

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p497 Ag 10 '51 450w

MITTELHOLZER, EDGAR. Shadows move among them. 334p $3 Lippincott

51-8454

"The scene is laid in a remote jungle village of British Guiana; the chief persons are the British pastor, his family, and a young man who has come to be cured of a neurosis about his wife's death. The village civilisation, dictated by the clergyman, is complete and extraordinary. . . The theme is conveyed in atmosphere, that of the dense, insect-infested river forest, with moss-grown ruins of Dutch settlements." Manchester Guardian

"A work of wit, whim, and iron."

+ Atlantic 188:85 O '51 220w

Reviewed by Milton Crane

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 18 '51 360w

Kirkus 19:363 Jl 15 '51 180w

"Top-drawer fiction, recommended for collections where attention can be given to the extraordinary and extraordinarily good." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 76:1423 S 15 '51 110w

"The book has a surface charm of humour and sharp characterisation; its inner content is obscure but entrancing." Elizabeth Jenkins

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 6 '51 130w

"A bizarre and disturbing book with moments of great beauty." John Raymond

New Statesman & Nation 41:573 My 19 '51 800w

"A delicious and very fresh (in both connotations of that term)—literary morsel." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 S 9 '51 600w

"Mr. Mittelholzer's novel is primarily a story, original, exotic, entertaining and imaginative; and secondarily a satire, oblique and sometimes ambiguously shaded." A. S. Morris

+ N Y Times p5 S 9 '51 460w

"The wit is urbane and delicate, and behind the wit there is real comedy. The language is formal and precise, and its clarity gives the writing a pleasantness that reminds one of the best French and Italian prose. And under cover of the light entertainment, it discusses serious ideas sensibly and rationally, putting forward the cool combination of Voltairianism and hedonism that is the hallmark of its school." Anthony West

+ New Yorker 27:121 O 6 '51 800w

"Along with enchanting characters, brilliant dialogue, and a pleasingly mad slant on society, Mr. Mittelhölzer has provided a surprisingly tender love story. In all, his book is as unexpectedly delightful a confection as is likely to come along for some time." E. J. Fitzgerald

+ Sat R of Lit 34:25 S 29 '51 180w

Reviewed by R. D. Charques
Spec 185:534 Ap 20 '51 90w

Time 58:114 S 17 '51 600w

"Shadows Move Among Them has, certainly, many passages of powerful and even beautiful writing, and at least one character, Harmston's precocious 12-year-old daughter Olivia, whose touching simplicity remains in the mind."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p193 Mr 30 '51 260w

MIZENER, ARTHUR MOORE. Far side of paradise; a biography of F. Scott Fitzgerald. 362p il $4 Houghton
B or 92 Fitzgerald, Francis Scott Key
51-9185

A full length biography of F. Scott Fitzgerald which incorporates some critical study of his writings. The author has had access to Fitzgerald's papers, and to the reminiscences of his daughter and of his friends. Index.

"The portraiture is warm and vital but always clear-eyed and psychologically acute, and the same applies to the critical appraisal of Fitzgerald's writings. I found the book so absorbing that I wished it were longer, and normally I have a deep affection for brevity." C. J. Rolo
+ Atlantic 187:85 Mr '51 500w

Booklist 47:204 F 1 '51

+ Bookmark 10:106 F '51 30w

Reviewed by J. A. Clark
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ja 28 '51 700w

Kirkus 18:719 D 1 '50 230w

"Despite frank treatment of writer's alcoholism and his wife's insanity, somehow not a depressing book. Recommended as a companion piece (or antidote) to The Disenchanted, Budd Schulberg's recent roman à clef about Fitzgerald." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 76:177 F 1 '51 130w

Manchester Guardian p4 D 7 '51 240w

Reviewed by Delmore Schwartz
Nation 172:180 F 24 '51 1600w

"The present revival in Scott Fitzgerald has now the support of a biography, the first to be written. It is a factual, thoughtful, thorough and sympathetic book, expository rather than critical." V. S. Pritchett
+ New Statesman & Nation 42:565 N 17 '51 2350w

"Mr. Mizener's book is the first official biography of Fitzgerald; there is much in it that is lively gossip of the 1920's and there are many entertaining facts, but from time to time the narrative is interrupted (and in the curious jargon of 'the new criticism') by classroom synopses of Fitzgerald's novels and short stories. Despite these handicaps, the irresistible charms of Fitzgerald's writing, his life and its legend survive." Horace Gregory
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ja 28 '51 2950w

"Sympathy for Fitzgerald's physical, emotional, financial and professional crack-up is evident while understated on almost every page, along with a thoughtful evaluation of his artistic accomplishments and aspirations. Yet Mizener spares us none of the harrowing details; with tact, with discretion, with a scholar's reserve, he traces the sickening downward plunge of the desperately gay Fitzgeralds into the lower reaches of anxiety, alcoholism, unproductivity, debt, mental illness, painful separations, until at last Fitzgerald finds himself broke and broken, his creative energies on the brink of a dead stop." Budd Schulberg
+ N Y Times p1 Ja 28 '51 200w

Reviewed by Lionel Trilling
New Yorker 26:90 F 3 '51 1750w

"This is the first full-length biography of Fitzgerald, and it is an interesting one. Entirely aside from any importance of his own writing, Fitzgerald is a 'good character.' He himself, we may say, realized this fact, for he generally made his own chief character a not very carefully disguised projection of his own. Because of this, plus Mr. Mizener's own skillful handling of the subject-matter, 'The Far Side of Paradise' is good reading. . . I would venture to remonstrate with Mr. Mizener in some instances. He is a little too ready, I believe, to accept the legend, if it makes a good story." G. R. Stewart
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ja 28 '51 1350w

"The first full-length biography of Scott Fitzgerald, is an intelligent, sensitive, and very often fascinating book. The story of Fitzgerald's career has a symbolism that often seems more interesting and imbued with larger dimensions of tragedy than much of Fitzgerald's work. Mr. Mizener is particularly good in his accounts of the Princeton years and of the publication of 'This Side of Paradise.'" Maxwell Geismar
+ Sat R of Lit 34:10 Ja 27 '51 800w

Reviewed by D. S. Savage
Spec 187:860 D 21 '51 650w

Reviewed by Richard Henchey
Springf'd Republican p6D F 25 '51 420w

"If The Far Side of Paradise is not a distinguished biography, it is at least an honest and sympathetic effort to see Fitzgerald as he really was."
Time 57:106 Ja 29 '51 1800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p744 N 23 '51 1550w

"The few important stories Professor Mizener distinguishes from the dross of Fitzgerald's popular writings, and the author of those stories is, mercilessly and mercifully, brought here to full life."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:129 Je '51 250w

Wis Lib Bul 47:61 Mr '51

"Fitzgerald's personality is so intriguing and his story so fascinating in itself that you are likely to overlook the skill required for an adequate presentment of him. Mizener's presentment has a delusive air of simplicity. But that is a measure of the discretion and sobriety of the biographer and the rigor with which he has subordinated the author of the book to its subject." J. W. Beach
+ Yale R n s 40:750 summer '51 550w

MOATS, ALICE LEONE. Violent innocence. 312p $3.50 Duell
B or 92
51-9604

Reminiscences of the author's childhood in Mexico, some thirty years ago. Her father was an American business man, her mother a beautiful Southern belle, and between them and their lively daughter, they managed quite an exciting life in a country torn by frequent revolutions.

Booklist 47:345 Je 1 '51

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Je 17 '51 380w

Kirkus 19:147 Mr 1 '51 190w

"The reports of bystanders on current history are always welcome. Miss Moats' book will help historians to understand a little of what happened in Mexico during the fateful years of revolution, and more about the Americans who happened to be there while the shooting was going on." Hubert Herring
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Je 3 '51 550w

New Yorker 27:120 Ap 28 '51 150w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles
San Francisco Chronicle p15 Jl 29 '51 390w

Wis Lib Bul 47:165 Je '51

MOBERG, VILHELM. The emigrants; tr. from the Swedish by Gustaf Lannestock. 366p $3.75 Simon & Schuster
51-11040

This is the first volume of a trilogy which tells the story of a band of Swedish emigrants

MOBERG, VILHELM—Continued
to the United States. This volume tells the story in particular of one family, Karl Oskar Nilsson, his wife and children, and his young brother Robert, of their life in Sweden and of the long, arduous journey across the Atlantic in the summer of 1850.

Booklist 48:12 S 1 '51

Bookmark 11:34 N '51 40w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Cath World 174:73 O '51 230w

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Jl 15 '51 550w

Reviewed by Ruth Chapin
Christian Science Monitor p7 Jl 19 '51 500w

Kirkus 19:135 Mr 1 '51 160w

"The story is rich in the folklore and superstitions of the times. Librarians wary of books with frank sex discussions should read before purchase. An excellent book for the thoughtful reader." M. P. McKay
+ Library J 76:1027 Je 15 '51 120w

"At times Moberg's grim earthiness may prove strong meat even for hardened American stomachs, but surely his coarse language will not become a cause célèbre here as it did in Sweden. He writes with clarity and vigor and uses irony with telling effect." Hudson Strode
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Jl 15 '51 1000w

"'The Emigrants' is a novel of peasant life, drawn to the last homely and superstitious detail. It is a story of poverty and heartbreak over which human faith has its will. And it is filled with an earthy humor, the unpredictable flash of human malice and emotion which bring Mr. Moberg's characters sharply into focus." John Nerber
+ N Y Times p5 Jl 15 '51 400w

"A worthy book, very big, very thorough, very serious in its purpose. . . Mr. Moberg's concern with the group rather than with the individual gives his work a generalized, cold, unfocussed air, and his writing, which is pitched to a missionary tone, has a sprightly, colloquial lifelessness that is very depressing."
+ — New Yorker 27:75 Jl 28 '51 60w

"This is a story of epic proportions, told simply by a master story-teller." Jack Aldridge
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 29 '51 900w

"'The Emigrants' is so thoroughly documented from obviously accurate records that it is not easy reading; but the book has a cumulative force as it continues. It should be rated as one of the soundest and most inspiring novels to appear this year." Harrison Smith
+ Sat R of Lit 34:11 Jl 28 '51 1000w

MODELL, MRS MERRIAM (EVELYN PIPER, pseud). The plot. 204p $2.50 Simon & Schuster 51-9997

Mystery story.

Kirkus 19:37 Ja 15 '51 80w

"An overly subtle mystery, tenuous to the point of incredibility."
— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Ap 29 '51 100w

Reviewed by Nancie Matthews
N Y Times p12 Je 24 '51 80w

"Miss Piper's great talent for suspense-writing appears almost in spite of itself in this novel. The plot of the title is involved and clouded, her own plot seems cluttered with wild complications and works out to a rather lame conclusion. Yet there's magic enough in the brooding Charleston background and in the story of Jamey Vaughn the aging genius." L. G. Offord
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ap 15 '51 60w

MOEHLMAN, CONRAD HENRY. Wall of separation between church and state. 239p $3 Beacon press

261.7 Church and state in the U.S. Church and education 51-3272

"An historical study of recent criticism of the religious clause of the first amendment." (Subtitle) Conrad Moehlman is Professor Emeritus of the History of Christianity at Colgate-Rochester Divinity School. He is the author of The Story of the Ten Commandments, The Catholic-Protestant Mind, The Story of Christianity. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 68:740 Je 20 '51 1150w

"The fact that Congress intended to ban preferential aid must mean that they did intend to permit equal aid. The Court's theory that they meant to ban any aid is patently false. A number of books on this subject have recently appeared and their purpose seems to be to conceal this one simple, hard fact. The means they use is typified by the breathless, creaking ersatz scholarship—a great pastiche of irrelevance—found here." H. H. Ashley
— Commonweal 54:269 Je 22 '51 850w

Reviewed by H. M. Gehr
Crozer Q 29:64 Ja '52 700w

"This is not a scholarly and balanced study of this moot question such as was given us a year ago by Anson Phelps Stokes. It is rather an ex parte argument on the question designed to refute the arguments advanced by the Roman Catholic Church for a 'liberal' interpretation of the First Amendment to the Constitution particularly as it affects education. . . This will be a controversial book. Catholics will not like it any more than they did Paul Blanshard's Catholic Power and American Freedom. But it is a question which should be discussed openly and frankly and this book will fan the discussion."
Kirkus 19:51 F 1 '51 300w

"Book will appeal to certain group of readers who enjoy refined theological pamphleteering, but naturally will annoy devout Roman Catholics. Only for libraries which aim at full coverage of religious literature." F. E. Hirsch
Library J 76:864 My 15 '51 140w

"Dr. Moehlman not only makes his case historically but presents an argument for its excellence in our own times. Thus he discusses the public-school question under the head, The Splendor of Public Education. He quotes the Christian Science Monitor with approval: '. . . the Christian conscience in society, not the Christian church in politics, holds the hope for the future.' He concludes that Roman Catholicism is not winning the cultural race here and that Protestantism is not defeated. In substance if not in form Dr. Moehlman's book is as controversial as Mr. Blanshard's, and the issue he raises is one which is likely to have a growing importance in American politics." Norman Thomas
+ Nation 172:590 Je 23 '51 650w

School & Society 74:272 O 27 '51 50w

Reviewed by M. J. Williams
Social Forces 30:243 D '51 320w

MOEN, PETTER. Diary; tr. from the Norwegian by Bjorn Koefoed. (Creative age Press bk) 176p il $3 Farrar, Straus

940.547243 World war, 1939-1945—Prisoners and prisons, German. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, Norwegian 51-2579

"Imprisoned at Oslo from Feb. 10 to Sept. 4, 1944, Moen was not even allowed to have a pencil. He used a pin, taken from the cell's blackout curtain, to prick his words into toilet paper. Guards often caught him and confiscated his work, whereupon the indefatigable Moen 'rewrote' his diaries from memory. He rolled the pages together like sausages and hid them underneath the floor. When, with other prisoners, he was taken on a German ship to be transferred to the Reich, he confided his secret to some of his fellow-prisoners. The ship struck a mine and Moen was among those who perished in the waters; luckily, one of his confidantes survived and after Norway's liberation notified the authorities of the hidden diary." N Y Times

Kirkus 19:145 Mr 1 '51 140w

"Book gives candid picture of conditions in prison and of his tormentors; and is well translated. Recommended for larger libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 76:596 Ap 1 '51 130w

Manchester Guardian p4 N 13 '51 200w

Reviewed by Stephen Spender

New Statesman & Nation 42:566 N 17 '51 600w

Reviewed by Virgilia Peterson

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 My 6 '51 700w

"Two years ago Odd Nansen's prison's diary, 'From Day to Day,' was widely acclaimed in this country. There are striking similarities between Mr. Nansen and his Norwegian compatriot, the late Peter Moen. . . Unlike Nansen, the great son of a great father, Peter Moen was an ordinary business man. Yet his diaries are an extraordinary and fascinating achievement. While the humanitarian Nansen was mainly concerned with recording the sufferings of his fellow-prisoners and the ferocity of his Fascist jailers, Moen used his confinement to purify and give direction to his soul. . . Never intended for publication, this self-purification of an average man will be welcomed by those who still believe in the forthcoming victory of the human spirit over the power of darkness." Alfred Werner

+ N Y Times p19 Ap 8 '51 750w

"Altogether, the book is a fragmentary but impressively candid and moving reconstruction of Moen's personality and of his 'test of patience,' which came to an end when he was drowned on a prison ship sunk en route to Germany."

+ New Yorker 27:126 Ap 21 '51 220w

"Written with merciless honesty, this is an important book. Mid-twentieth-century man in his loneliness emerges from its pages with far greater clarity than from between the covers of many an ambitious novel about mid-twentieth-century man's political dilemma." Robert Pick

+ Sat R of Lit 34:25 Ap 21 '51 750w

Reviewed by Goronwy Rees

Spec 187:746 N 30 '51 170w

MOFFATT, JAMES. Moffatt Bible concordance. See Gant, W. J.

MOHLER, J. B., and SEDUSKY, H. J. Electroplating for the metallurgist, engineer, and chemist. 257p il $5 Chemical pub. co.

671 Electroplating 51-3238

"Introduction to electroplating for readers interested in the subject from the practical viewpoint. The chapters are brief. . . The greater part of the book is designed to give information about the electroplating process to persons who are not platers, but the chapters on plating bath troubles, and analytical methods will be more useful to workers in electroplating plants." N Y New Tech Bks

"The text should prove very satisfactory to the group for whom it was written; the practical plater might have difficulty finding sufficient information to enable him to set up a complete cycle for plating a given product." A. H. Pope

+ — Chem Eng 58:268 Ag '51 130w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:36 My '51

MONCRIEFF, ROBERT WIGHTON. Artificial fibres. 313p il $4.50 Wiley

677.46 Fibers [51-926]

"In this compact book the artificial fibres of commercial importance, and some that are not yet in commercial production, are described in semitechnical language. For most fibres included, the following points are covered: history, chemical structure, method of manufacture, properties, reactions to dye, uses, and selected bibliography. The book will be most useful to persons with a practical but non-specialist's interest in textiles, such as machine operators in the textile manufacturing industries, and sales personnel associated with the wholesaling and retailing of textiles." N Y New Tech Bks

"The book appears to be written for the student, and the tone is frankly didactic. Most of it could be easily appreciated by a person with little chemical background. It would be particularly suitable for use in a course on artificial fibers, or as a broad general introduction to the subject. The typography and paper are excellent, and the illustrations are numerous and well chosen." A. M. Sookne

+ Chem & Eng N 29:3114 Jl 30 '51 160w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 76:709 Ap 15 '51 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:45 My '51

MONEY-KYRLE, ROGER ERNLE. Psychoanalysis and politics; a contribution to the psychology of politics and morals. 182p $3 Norton

320 Political science. Political ethics [51-13082]

"From experience in the postwar assessment of German leaders for their humanistic or authoritarian character, and from other work in psychology and psychoanalysis, the author explores the unconscious processes that influence political desires and beliefs." Publishers' Weekly

Reviewed by D. W. Fiske

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 O 21 '51 380w

"As defined, 'normal' man, like 'economic' man, is a useful scientific abstraction; that he is desirable is an unconfirmed value judgment. The author thinks so because he is himself a humanist, and he can show that normal man is likely also to be a humanist. Many will agree with him, but those who do not cannot be proved wrong. This apart, the book is a useful addition to our knowledge of political motives." J. E. Howard

Spec 187:222 Ag 17 '51 420w

"Even the unprejudiced student is apt to do less than justice to writers who appear to be making rather more than all that can be made of their alleged discoveries. Mr. Money-Kyrle's contribution to the psychoanalytic elucidation of political behaviour is, however, welcome because, in spite of its ambitious character, it is candid, moderate and free from gross over-simplification."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p511 Ag 17 '51 850w

MONSARRAT, NICHOLAS. Cruel sea. 509p $4 Knopf

51-11056

The story of two British ships, the Compass Rose, a corvette, and the frigate Saltash, and their crews in World war II.

"The story is a long stretch of powerful episodes, some of them almost more gruesome than one can bear, as when the skeletons are sighted lashed to the drifting raft. But the inner filling and dominant quality of this sturdy novel is compassion. You see the men in strength and in weakness, in laughter and in reverie, and facing death; and it is the manliness in them that makes you proud and stirs your pity as you read." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 188:79 S '51 500w

Booklist 48:13 S 1 '51

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 174:72 O '51 300w

" 'The Cruel Sea' is an impressive work of fiction, portraying the war at sea with great emotion and restraint, with drama, tenderness,

MONSARRAT, NICHOLAS—Continued
and terror, and with deep humanity. It is a somber and compassionate novel." Walter Havighurst

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 5 '51 480w

Reviewed by Francis Russell
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 16 '51 430w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '51

"The terror of rough weather, the fear and excitement of anti-submarine measures, the strain of deck watch, the complications of convoy procedures are described with certainty and interest. Nevertheless, this book does not succeed in being a realistic war story, or a convincing creation of human stress and endurance in time of war." George Miles

+ — Commonweal 54:485 Ag 24 '51 500w

Kirkus 19:277 Je 1 '51 340w

"Well told history and adventure. Recommended." H. L. Roth

+ Library J 76:705 Ap 15 '51 100w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Jenkins
Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 31 '51 240w

Reviewed by Stanley Cooperman
New Repub 125:20 D 31 '51 350w

New Statesman & Nation 42:510 N 3 '51 280w

"The story is a true story, the author assures us, and he conveys the conviction that these things, or these kinds of things happened. . . There is truth in the intolerable, exhausting ferocity of the great North Atlantic storms or the equally intolerable menace of a calm and beautiful night with a U-boat wolf pack on the flank, killing two or three great ships between each sunset and dawn. Monsarrat has remembered such things with a vivid immediacy. . . He can use a few four-letter words but he does not try to make them a substitute for realism. . . Yet the book falls something short of its evidently serious purpose. I think it is because the author understands ships better than he does men and the trials of sea warfare better than those of the heart." Walter Millis

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ag 5 '51 1300w

"When an author creates a story with the help of historical facts we can forgive him if he rearranges things to dowel neatly with his plot. But he must not diddle with human nature and its capabilities. . . Let there be no misunderstanding. 'The Cruel Sea' is a fascinating story and a compelling one. . . Its vivid action scenes, survival episodes and smooth writing sustain the book at a high level of excitement. But these good things, desirable as they may be, haven't the magic to transmute journalism into fiction." W. J. Lederer

+ — N Y Times p1 Ag 5 '51 850w

"A dismal tale of men at sea and on land in the last war. At his best, Mr. Monsarrat is a dull, often sentimental writer. At his worst—that is to say, when women enter the picture—he becomes possessed by a gamy, winking coyness that clogs his pen even when he tries to deal with a serious love scene."

— New Yorker 27:85 Ag 18 '51 100w

"'The Cruel Sea' is a whale of a story just as story, but it is also more than that—a solidly conceived and well executed novel, in which the reader may learn—in elementary terms, perhaps, since war reduces such things to their elements, but nevertheless truly and usefully—something about his fellow-men, their natures and their qualities." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 12 '51 1500w

"It would be hard to write a book about the Royal Navy in World War II, or in any war for that matter, that would be genuinely dull. . . Yet Mr. Monsarrat's novel nearly achieves dullness. The book is not a novel at all, yet it contains most of the clichés we are accustomed to in war novels. . . The characters are at best perfunctory and at worst too dim to be more than the vaguest of types, for the author's chief interest lies not in creating 'the world in a man of war' but in attempting to give us the feel of the six-year battle against U-boats in the North Atlantic. . . The scenes of action are the best." L. O. Coxe

Sat R of Lit 34:14 Ag 11 '51 650w

Reviewed by Mark Arnold-Forster
Spec 187:274 Ag 31 '51 800w

Springf'd Republican p5C S 23 '51 480w

Time 58:84 Ag 6 '51 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p593 S 21 '51 320w

MONTAGU, ASHLEY. See Ashley-Montagu, M. F.

MONTAGUE, WILLIAM PEPPERELL. Great visions of philosophy; varieties of speculative thought in the west from the Greeks to Bergson. 484p $4.50 Open ct.

109 Philosophy—History 50-4615

"A reinterpretation of the history of philosophy, this work is based on the thesis that the vision of a great philosopher is more important than the arguments by which it is supported. Professor Montague offers here a comprehensive and evaluative survey of the colossi of the life of reason. Among them are Socrates, . . . Epicurus and Lucretius, . . . Hume, and . . . Bergson." U S Quarterly Bkl

---

"This cannot fail to be a good book to use for either an introduction to or a review of the history of philosophy. The author's remarkable ability to make philosophy the subject of good conversation is cleverly illustrated in the long Epilogue, which is a lively imaginary dialogue between Prof. Montague and an imaginary critic, covering the whole range of the lectures." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 67:974 Ag 16 '50 240w

"The author's treatment of the historical material is admirable. The treatment is selective, to be sure, but the emphasis is in the right place. It is also rigorously objective. Few volumes are better fitted to give the uninitiated trustworthy information concerning the major contributions of the speculative adventure of the West." G. W. Cunningham

+ Ethics 61:157 Ja '51 1350w

"Though Montague speaks of certainty with a fervor which may shock some of his readers, he would probably agree that what is certain within the limits of one man's information would be uncertain within those of another's. . . Once one has put aside one's historical squeamishness, Great Visions of Philosophy will be found to be stimulating to the imagination and delightful. The former students of its author will recognize on every page that vivacity of style which never descends to vulgarity and that deep warmth of human sympathy which characterized his courses at Columbia." George Boas

+ — J Philos 48:143 Mr 1 '51 1350w

"Mr. Montague is a truly speculative mind and a learned man. But these chapters are to be read not as contributions to learning so much as presentations by a sympathetic critic of what each of the great thinkers has contributed to the perspectives of human understanding. . . This is a book, in the best sense, of a speculative mind, it is itself an act of enkindling vision." Irwin Edman

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 Ap 22 '51 1050w

"This is no ordinary textbook in the history of philosophies. It is rather an exercise in constructive philosophy itself, but one which makes use of the best efforts of earlier thinkers." Paul Ramsey

+ N Y Times p12 Ag 27 '50 270w

School & Society 72:31 Jl 8 '50 40w

"This is a history of philosophy, but with a vision of its own. Independent in his judgments, Professor Montague writes from a liberal point of view, antiecclesiastical, hostile to the asceticism of Christianity yet warmly appreciative of it as a doctrine of love."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:421 D '50 200w

MONTGOMERY, HORACE. Cracker parties. 278p $4 La. state univ. press

975.8 Georgia—Politics and government. Political parties—Georgia 50-9562

"Traces the history of ante bellum politics in Georgia and the development of its political parties. Beginning with the events of the late eighteen-forties, Mr. Montgomery studies the succession of maneuvers that transformed the state just prior to secession from a community where the two parties, Whig and Democratic, were almost evenly matched to a body politic increasingly dominated by States' rights Democrats." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Bibliography. Index.

"It is well written (though sometimes repetitious) and fills a gap in knowledge. The study is based upon manuscripts, newspapers, printed sources, as well as secondary materials. There is a heavy emphasis upon the partisan journalism of the fifties which reminds one of that encountered by Mr. Pickwick at Eatanswill. These sources are valuable but must be used with caution. Unfortunately the author sometimes becomes involved in a maze of second-hand and even third-hand quotations; and he has limited himself to several unbroken files of Georgia newspapers for his main thread. Indeed the focus is too exclusively on Georgia; events outside are seen through the myopic eyes of partisan state editors." Ollinger Crenshaw

+ — Am Hist R 56:1000 Jl '51 380w

"Uncommonly interesting. . . Writing with clarity in the midst of much historical confusion, Mr. Montgomery spins a monographic tale that enjoys a strangely contemporary quality. Like a true historian, he declines to point out several obvious parallels to our own partisan battles." P. R. Levin

+ Sat R of Lit 34:57 Ja 20 '51 300w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:452 D '50 280w

MONTGOMERY, JOHN CHALMERS, and SUYDAM, MARGARET JANE. America's baby book; prepared under the auspices of the New York herald tribune home institute. 457p il $3.50 Scribner

649.1 Infants—Care and hygiene. Children—Care and hygiene 51-1081

"Sensible, comprehensive guide to all phases of child care, from infancy through the sixth year. Material on play, food and home management in appendixes, reading list, index. Attractive full-page photographs." Kirkus

Booklist 47:248 Mr 15 '51

+ Bookmark 10:107 F '51 30w

Kirkus 19:20 Ja 1 '51 120w

MONTGOMERY, ROBERT BRUCE (EDMUND CRISPIN, pseud). Long divorce. 237p $2.50 Dodd

51-12094

Detective story.

"Cleverly developed puzzle entertaining for its characterization and scholarly vein of humor." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 S 9 '51 60w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 42:291 S 15 '51 150w

"Each one of Edmund Crispin's charming and witty adventures of an Oxford Don has been increasingly delightful and this is the most polished performance of all."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 S 2 '51 140w

"The solution . . . is far from water-tight and clings too closely to the anything-for-a-surprise, rabbit-out-of-the-hat school; but at least it does no violence to the excellent novel which has been established up to that point. . . The civilized wit and charm are all one has come to expect of Crispin; the people are a little stronger, the deduction a little weaker than in previous books." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p31 S 9 '51 140w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p18 S 2 '51 90w

"Genial and adroit." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R of Lit 34:39 O 27 '51 40w

"Murder following anonymous letters in a village community is, admittedly, a usual pattern, but treated at Mr. Crispin's level it is a real pleasure." Esther Howard

+ Spec 187:168 Ag 3 '51 280w

"This is detection in the best British tradition, with a neat and unusual twist of plot and splendidly written." D. F. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p10D O 7 '51 120w

Times [London] Lit Sup p545 Ag 31 '51 90w

MONTGOMERY, RUTHERFORD GEORGE. Capture of the golden stallion; il. by George Giguère. 243p $2.50 Little

Horses—Legends and stories 51-4810

Story of sixteen-year old Charlie Carter and the wild horse, Golden Boy, he captures and trains.

Booklist 48:37 S 15 '51

"Will be popular with young male adolescents, in spite of girl element, but it is not so distinctive as Montgomery's books for intermediates because of surfeit of books on same theme. For all collections where more such stories are needed." M. K. Walraven

+ — Library J 76:1716 O 15 '51 90w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p38 O 14 '51 50w

MONTGOMERY, RUTHERFORD GEORGE. Hill ranch; il. by Barbara Cooney. 200p $2.50 Doubleday

51-12891

"A teen-age girl and boy set out to prove that Hill Ranch, in California, can be made a paying proposition. Their determination and willingness to work, their successes and their failures, make the main thread of a story greatly enhanced by the presence of the animal characters Mr. Montgomery is such an expert at picturing. From Stumpy, the tough yet lovable cat, to B-29, the fighting rooster, each has a personality all his own." Horn Bk

Booklist 48:109 N 15 '51

"A satisfying story." A. B. Mc G.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 N 11 '51 170w

Reviewed by E. C. Ince

Christian Science Monitor p13 S 27 '51 120w

"Boys and girls from eight to fourteen will enjoy this." J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews

+ Horn Bk 27:330 S '51 80w

"A friendly, sunny story, with some deep breaths of country air."

+ Kirkus 19:396 Ag 1 '51 130w

"Good characterization and pace. Recommended for ages 12-16." H. M. Brogan

+ Library J 76:2017 D 1 '51 90w

"Its appeal lies in its light touch, its entertaining conversations, its picture of the outdoors. And there is the fearless Stumpy, the most delightful kitten to be found anywhere. It is refreshing to find a story about young people which shows the problems of farming but concentrates upon entertainment." M. C. Scoggin

+ N Y Times p20 D 16 '51 170w

MONTHERLANT, HENRY DE. Master of Santiago; and four other plays [tr. with a pref. by Jonathan Griffin]. 339p $3.95 Knopf

842 51-11054

Five plays translated from the French. Two of them: No man's son, and Tomorrow the dawn, are plays of France during the Occupation. The others concern Spain, Portugal, and Italy in the 15th and 16th centuries.

Booklist 48:168 Ja 15 '52

MONTHERLANT, HENRY DE—Continued
Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht
Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Ag 5 '51 440w
Kirkus 19:287 Je 1 '51 160w

"These plays are essential to all drama and theatre collections. Highly recommended." George Freedley
+ Library J 76:1228 Ag '51 30w

Reviewed by Anthony Curtis
New Statesman & Nation 42:596 N 24 '51 900w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ag 12 '51 850w

"Montherlant is a well nigh infallible writer of French prose, and one of the very few who never descend to coarseness or profanity. He seeks greatness, proclaims it without fear of ridicule; and he forces one to confess that he reaches it." Henri Peyre
+ Sat R of Lit 34:29 S 29 '51 900w
Times [London] Lit Sup p715 N 9 '51 240w

MONTULE, EDOUARD DE. Travels in America, 1816-1817; tr. from the original French edition of 1821 by Edward D. Seeber. 197p 18pl $5 Indiana univ. press, Bloomington, Ind.

917.3 U.S.—Description and travel. West Indies—Description and travel 51-62005

"Even out on the frontier where men were supposed to be men in 1816 Edouard de Montulé concluded that the Americans 'are gentle in their ways.' . . The youthful veteran of the Russian campaign of 1812 was content to take the United States as he found it. . . Everywhere the high level of intelligence and accomplishment of the average American impressed him. Journeying from New Orleans up the Mississippi aboard the Vesuvius, he penned an intimate description of the first years of steamboat travel, for his vessel was the third to go up the river. Curiously, he thought much of the great valley more inhabited than parts of Europe he had visited. And he found time to admire the grandeur of the Ohio Valley." N Y Times

---

Kirkus 19:91 F 1 '51 190w

"Curious, observant, and appreciative, de Montulé deserves wider acquaintance." Scott Adams
+ Library J 76:774 My 1 '51 140w

"Everywhere De Montulé noticed not only places but people, the plants, animals and sights in general. Everywhere he was thoughtful. His dissertation on race relations is balanced, his account of steamboats is admirably concise and clear." E. H. Smith
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Jl 1 '51 550w

"His observations about the denizens of the Mississippi Valley and of such urban centers as New York and Philadelphia, written with a Gallic gaiety and lightness of touch seldom found in the accounts of British visitors, are a welcome relief and useful addition to the literature of travel in America. . . The author made excellent sketches of places and things he saw, and included eighteen in his book. They are valuable as historical sources today. Mr. Seeber's translation is correct and lucid, although lacking something of the sprightly quality of the original." Carl Bridenbaugh
+ N Y Times p10 Ap 15 '51 400w
San Francisco Chronicle p12 Je 3 '51 250w

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich
Sat R of Lit 35:35 Ja 12 '52 230w

MOODY, RALPH. Man of the family; il. by Edward Shenton. 272p $3 Norton

B or 92 Ranch life 51-13312

Continues the author's life story begun in Little Britches (Book Review Digest 1950). It describes the boy's brave struggle to help his mother in her efforts to support herself and her children after the death of the head of the family. It begins when "Little Britches" was eleven and ends when he was thirteen.

Booklist 48:21; 82 S 15 '51; N 1 '51
Bookmark 11:32 N '51 20w
Cath World 174:320 Ja '52 100w

Reviewed by V. P. Hass
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 4 '51 450w

"Innocence makes this a heart-warming book; innocence and deep mutual affection. The townspeople seen through the eyes of the boy seem to breathe the same clean air as he, free of cant and ugliness. As for affection, Little Britches' fierce loyalty to his mother is matched only by his practical consideration for his brothers and sisters." Ruth Chapin
+ Christian Science Monitor p15 N 8 '51 400w
Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '51
Kirkus 19:519 S 1 '51 200w

"This is a quiet, homely and inspirational story, told in a simple manner, illustrating that much goodness and greatness still exist among the common people of the world. A story which will be highly rewarding to adults and young people alike." L. R. Etzkorn
+ Library J 76:1329 S 1 '51 120w

Reviewed by M. D. Read
Library J 76:2127 D 15 '51 50w

" 'Man of the Family' is a story you will not forget. To read it will bring a healing, homely philosophy to your winter evenings." Lisle Bell
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 D 9 '51 550w

"There were no really 'bad guys' in young Moody's West—or if there were, he seems to have lost them in the mists of fond recollection. His book is an affectionate portrait of ranch-town folk who knew how to help without humiliating, and a warm but ungushing tribute to a remarkable woman who deplored her inability to give her children everything, yet gave them much." G. Y. Wells
+ N Y Times p20 N 4 '51 360w

"Sequels are all too frequently not up to their predecessors; everyone knows how that is. But in this case the rule fails. 'Man of the Family' is everything that 'Little Britches' was—a heart-warming, frank, completely delightful narrative. Some readers may even like it better." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle N 1 '51 750w

"This book is not so good as its predecessor, but for reasons beyond the author's control. The moving theme of a family about to be bereft of its breadwinner is necessarily lacking; here the family closes ranks to win its own bread. But if it is not so good a book, it is none the less a good book. And it is a thoroughly honest one." J. T.Winterich
+ Sat R of Lit 34:59 D 1 '51 320w

MOORE, ANNIE CARROLL, and MILLER, BERTHA MAHONY, eds. Writing and criticism; a book for Margery Bianco; decorated by Valenti Angelo. 93p $3 Horn bk.

B or 92 Bianco, Margery (Williams). Children's literature 51-5594

"From 1921 to 1944, Margery Bianco lived in New York, or near it, and made a remarkable contribution to the world of children's reading. . . Now the Horn Book honors Mrs. Bianco's memory in a very handsome volume. Mrs. Miller and Miss Moore tell her life story and review the books; her daughter, Pamela, writes on 'Her Children Long Ago'; Mr. Angeli, the designer of the book, offers a moving description of her help to him when he began to write. Of her own work, there are essays on 'Our Youngest Critics,' on Andersen's stories, and on De La Mare's poetry, also the review of Rachel Field's 'Hitty,' and her short story, 'The Apple Tree.' " N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 48:10 S 1 '51

Reviewed by E. C. Ince
Christian Science Monitor p11 S 6 '51 800w

"This book has meaning for this moment and for years to come. . . The book is a complete work of art in every aspect and as a whole. This is a book to put into the hands of anxious parents, concerned about the task of raising children in a troubled world. This is a book for the writer, the critic and the hopeful young people entering the professions of teaching or librarianship. This is a book for the publisher and the editor hounded by 'directives' from the socially conscious groups who want each book addressed to children to yield up its specific remedy for a specific evil. This is a book for anyone searching anew for the everlasting waters of sanity and hope and aspiration." F. C. Sayers

+ Horn Bk 27:157 My '51 1700w

"This book should appeal to all interested in children's reading, and especially to authors, for whom it has many important messages. Its stress on the nature and importance of the imagination come at an opportune time, as do the comments on style for children." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Je 24 '51 250w

"The reminiscences of Mrs. Bianco by the editors, by the writer and illustrator Valenti Angelo, and by her daughter, Pamela Bianco, do not add up to a full-length portrait, nor are they intended to. Rather they give us illuminating insight to her personality and talent." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p12 Jl 29 '51 160w

"For the young author writing for children I cannot imagine a more suggestive and helpful approach than to study Margery Bianco's essays and books for children. Here is a memorial which is alive, a book which points the way and opens the door for parents, publishers, children's librarians, and teachers, but especially for the authors of children's books." H. A. Masten

+ Sat R of Lit 34:46 N 10 '51 600w

School & Society 73:367 Je 9 '51 40w

MOORE, BARRINGTON. Soviet politics—the dilemma of power; the role of ideas in social change. 503p $6; text ed $4.50 Harvard univ. press

947.08 Russia—Politics and government. Communism—Russia 50-9233

For descriptive note see Annual for 1950.

"The author marshals a great deal of information and writes with ease and skill. The tone of the book is scholarly and objective throughout. In fact the author strives so hard to be objective that in the process he falls into a curious sort of amoralism. . . I must dissent at many points from the author's interpretation of Soviet foreign policy in which he overstresses the balance of power doctrine. But any disagreement is tempered by a grateful feeling that it was not a dull book to review." Lazar Volin

+ — Am Hist R 56:563 Ap '51 800w

"Despite differences on points of interpretation, this reviewer would highly recommend the book as a rich addition to the literature on the most baffling and crucial problem of our day." Julian Towster

+ — Am J Soc 57:288 N '51 1200w

Reviewed by A. N. Dragnich

Am Pol Sci R 45:555 Je '51 800w

"Dr. Moore concerns himself with the problem of the role of ideas in action. With artless and deceptive ease the author draws the connections between Communist theory and the nature of Russian and international society. With an almost complete absence of the jargon either of the Marxist or of the latter-day social scientists, Dr. Moore analyzes his problem in what might be called a total situation. In particular, he sees the relation between the international and the domestic determinants of political behavior. The author is as modest as he is original. He makes years of painstaking work, great attention to detail, and high theoretical analysis seem no more than common sense." G. E. Taylor

+ Am Soc R 15:805 D '50 1700w

"This calm and clear description of the development and direction given to ideas under the necessities of operating political power in Soviet Russia is an admirable contribution to understanding of the current crisis." M. W. Davis

+ Ann Am Acad 274:263 Mr '51 550w

Reviewed by F. H. Soward

Canadian Hist R 32:267 S '51 280w

"An important contribution to Soviet studies."

+ Foreign Affairs 29:326 Ja '51 50w

Reviewed by S. Dobrin

Manchester Guardian p4 Je 12 '51 300w

"In this book Dr. Moore, an associate of the Russian Research Center at Harvard University, has made a basic contribution not only to the study of Soviet politics in particular but also to the understanding of the 'dilemma of power' in general." Ronald Thompson

+ New Repub 124:19 Mr 5 '51 1850w

"The expectations aroused by Mr. Moore's occasional articles over the past few years have been more than abundantly satisfied in this study. It is a work of permanent value. Its purpose is explicit, its structure clear, and the contents solid and well organised." Jane Degras

+ Pacific Affairs 24:221 Je '51 380w

Reviewed by B. D. Wolfe

Sat R of Lit 34:12 F 3 '51 1050w

Times [London] Lit Sup p384 Je 22 '51 1150w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:465 D '50 240w

"Admirably arranged and fully documented, Mr. Moore's book will go on the shelf of indispensable works for all those desirous of discussing the problem of Russia with a proper knowledge of fundamentals." Max Beloff

+ Yale R n s 40:358 winter '51 220w

MOORE, EDWARD ROBERTS. Roman collar. 251p $3 Macmillan

253 Roman Catholic church—Clergy 50-11067

In answer to the question, "What does a priest do?" Monsignor Moore has written these chapters about his own life. It is an account of his priestly work in the Archdiocese of New York during the last thirty years.

"Msgr. Moore, in an easy and gracious narrative (about his own priestly life but not meant to be autobiographical), has written a story of daily priestly routine that is highly instructive and informative." James Finley

+ Cath World 172:476 Mr '51 300w

"A cheerful and readable book, one whose attractiveness is increased by the fact that it is so unpretentious." Theodore Maynard

+ Commonweal 53:357 Ja 12 '51 450w

"Presumably this book would interest Catholics especially, but Protestants and especially Protestant ministers would gain through this book a better understanding of the Catholic Church in operation than through a dozen theological works."

+ Kirkus 18:598 O 1 '50 370w

"Highly recommended." R. P. Breaden

+ Library J 75:1402 S 1 '50 140w

"A revealing account of the many-sided activities of the modern priest in a complex, urban community." Julian Pierce

+ N Y Times p16 Ap 8 '51 140w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Mr 11 '51 240w

"It is both a general and a particular story, instructive in one way, informative and charming in another. Unfortunately, the good monsignor's style is a lamentable mixture of clichés on three levels—the ecclesiastical, the literary, and the idiomatic. But what can you expect of a man who was packed off to St. Peter's when he wanted to be a scholar and who since then has been so busy doing for others that he has never had time for himself?" Thomas Sugrue

+ Sat R of Lit 34:36 F 10 '51 800w

MOORE, FRANKLIN G. Production control. 455p il $5.50 McGraw

658.5 Industrial management 51-3264

"Procedures used in several companies explain the line of authority used in releasing an order and completing it. The author discusses production control as the job of several administrators who must have a flexible communication plan to keep the work progressing thru interrelated departments. Forms, graphs, statistical methods are included." (Chicago Sunday Tribune) "Included in the book are (70) cases illustrating common production control problems which have been taken from the author's experience in many companies and which offer the student opportunity to apply the principles set forth in the body of the text." (Management R)

Reviewed by Winifred Baum
Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 S 23 '51 50w

"Designed primarily as a text for the student, Production Control offers a well-delineated study of established procedures and brief commentary on their application to production problems." R. F. Goodwin
+ Management R 40:591 S '51 360w

MOORE, HARRY THORNTON. Life and works of D. H. Lawrence. 400p il $4.50 Twayne

B or 92 Lawrence, David Herbert 51-1826

A critical and biographical study of Lawrence, based on new research. Contains photographs. Index.

"There have been many books about D. H. Lawrence, and a good many of them are bad. Mr. Moore has given us the book for which we have been waiting. 'The book on D. H. Lawrence' he called it facetiously one day when he first told me that he had written it. He was quite right." Edward Wagenknecht
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 1 '51 350w

"It is a pity that Mr Moore's study should have come out here so soon after Mr Aldington's 'Portrait of a Genius, But . . .' That was widely accepted as the standard work on Lawrence, and a good many general readers will not seek to go beyond it. Yet Mr Moore's is a far more useful book, using biography as it ought to be used, to illuminate the writing. Mr Moore avoids the apparently incurable English habit of regarding Lawrence as a prophet rather than a writer, which throws away the baby and religiously keeps the bath-water." Norman Shrapnel
+ Manchester Guardian p4 N 27 '51 390w

Reviewed by C. H. Grattan
New Repub 125:27 O 29 '51 270w

"Despite his ambitious title, Mr. Moore has said the last word on neither the life nor the works of Lawrence. As compared with Catherine Carswell, Middleton Murry, and the other writers of the first wave of commentaries, Mr. Moore is admirably objective and judicious. Though he warmly admires Lawrence, he has not taken sides in too partisan a spirit, and has tried to make sure of his facts before writing. But too much of his writing is pedestrian and repetitious." DeLancey Ferguson
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 My 6 '51 700w

"Mr. Moore's study is an admirably thorough and clear-sighted job, the most consistently sound book-length appraisal of Lawrence. Perhaps its outstanding merit is that it places such steady emphasis on Lawrence's language; on the quality which, in the last resort, makes his work endure—the simple fact that there is so much beauty, so much vitality, in his writing." Charles Rolo
+ N Y Times p3 Ja 21 '51 800w

"The present effort to assign Lawrence's uneasy ghost a place in the hierarchy of English letters, assay his genius, untangle the twists in his nature, and straighten out the elusive facts of his life is a commendably serious one. . . [The book] stays this side of idolatry."
+ New Yorker 27:113 Mr 3 '51 160w

"By all odds the most judicial and well-rounded biography and criticism of the man that has appeared since its subject's death." George Snell
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Mr 13 '51 700w

"As a critic of Lawrence's work Mr. Moore is adequate but not remarkable. . . Mr. Moore's happiest insight as critic and literary historian are to be found in the sections dealing with Lawrence's use of symbols. . . The approach to Lawrence which Mr. Moore has admirably attempted is the one which must be made by critics if Lawrence is to be recognized as something more than a minor prophet." W. Y. Tindall
+ — Sat R of Lit 34:16 Mr 17 '51 700w

"The most useful, informed and the least opinionated book I have seen on Lawrence." Stephen Spender
+ Spec 185:284 Mr 2 '51 100w

MOORE, JAMES WILLIAM. Football techniques illustrated; designed and il. by Tyler Micoleau. 96p $1.50 Barnes, A.S.

796.33 Football 51-12237

"Every phase of offensive and defensive football, from the method of playing individual positions to the broader aspects of the game, is covered in this work by Jim Moore, former playing coach of the Providence Steamrollers, and illustrated with easy-to-understand drawings by Tyler Micoleau. Topics include proper ball handling, how to run, passing and punting, place kicking, single-wing and T formation, strategy and tactics." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Booklist 48:147 D 15 '51

"Aimed primarily at the beginning player, this should be a bull's-eye." Robert Cromie
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 O 14 '51 70w

"Most boys will be highly interested." M. D. Read
+ Library J 76:1717 O 15 '51 40w
Wis Lib Bul 47:211 S '51

MOORE, MARGARET, and MOORE, JOHN TRAVERS. Sing-along Sary; il. by John Moment. 150p $2 Harcourt

51-9996

A story of a western Pennsylvania farming community a hundred years ago. Ten-year-old Sary's adventures that fall began with the flood that swept away nearly all the country's pumpkins, and reached their climax in a wonderful surprise on Christmas morning.

Booklist 47:298 Ap 15 '51

"The book is not without its high point of humor. Not only will adults enjoy reading it to the very young, but children will enjoy reading it themselves and be glad when, much to Sary's surprise, her unselfish devotion to her greatuncle and to her brother is rewarded at the end of the book." Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Jl 15 '51 190w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '51

Reviewed by J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews
Horn Bk 27:183 My '51 90w

"A warm-hearted, appealing story."
+ Kirkus 19:126 Mr 1 '51 90w

"A pleasant tale of friendly people who mixed their fun with their daily chores. Recommended for ages 9-12." D. M. Blasco
+ Library J 76:782 My 1 '51 70w

"This very well written little book gives a lively, honest picture of the hard-working settlers in western Pennsylvania in the fifties. The time and place will not be too important to children of eight to eleven who will love Sary and Zeke for themselves." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 My 13 '51 190w

Reviewed by S. C. Gross
+ N Y Times p16 Jl 22 '51 140w

"A poignant, skillfully integrated little book of real quality, nicely illustrated and designed." K. T. Kinkead

+ New Yorker 27:177 D 1 '51 70w

"There are freshness and an underlying humor in this tale of a little girl in Pennsylvania in 1850. . . Sary is a real pioneer and, incidentally, a very attractive young person. Black-and-white drawings highlight this excellent tale."

+ Sat R of Lit 34:42 My 12 '51 150w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:248 S '51 60w

Wis Lib Bul 47:93 Ap '51

MOORE, MAVIS (GAREY). Pony for a prize; il. by William Moyers. 210p $2.50 Macmillan

51-12892

"It was when Henry Terhune was in the fourth grade that he won a pony as a prize for collecting the greatest number of Pony Tablet Covers. Almost immediately, however, the pony was stolen and all sorts of exciting adventures followed." Horn Bk

Reviewed by A. B. McGuire

Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 N 25 '51 170w

"The chief value of the book lies, I think, not in the action, though that is well handled and will appeal to both boys and girls, but in the good characterization. Henry and his friends in the little Southern town are real people." J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews

+ Horn Bk 27:330 S '51 80w

Kirkus 19:393 Ag 1 '51 180w

"Unusual background. Recommended for boys and girls 9-12." D. M. Blasco

+ Library J 76:2123 D 15 '51 50w

"An outstanding story—funny, touching, suspenseful." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p38 O 14 '51 90w

"This is a good story. Henry is one of the most appealing boy characters in this year's books for younger boys and girls."

+ Sat R Lit 34:66 N 10 '51 160w

MOORE, MERRILL. Illegitimate sonnets. 125p $2.75 Twayne

811 51-225

"The Boston psychiatrist-poet whose 'Clinical Sonnets' appeared a year ago now issues a new series. . . These poems consist largely of vivid impressions of scenes and 'imagist' situations presented without comment or judgment. They are like notes for a private journal set to verse. When they do deal with character, his subjects are the pathetic, the old, poor, malajusted or unfulfilled." N Y Times

"The Doctor's interests are amazingly varied, his viewpoint original, and he preserves a nice balance of genuine insight and wit—whether he writes of Chicago on a winter morning, chemistry and photography, old men and women going home on the streetcar. . . It may be said, too, that Dr. Moore writes with equal validity of the factual and of those matters wholly of the spirit which elude laboratory analysis. Since this collection contains also reprints of some very good poems from his earlier volumes, it seems to me Merrill Moore's best book to date." Ruth Lechlitner

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 F 25 '51 250w

Reviewed by M. H. Irvine

N Y Times p17 Jl 8 '51 230w

Springf'd Republican p8D Mr 11 '51 70w

MOORE, ROBERT E. Human side of selling; il. by I. K. Anderson. 302p $3.95 Harper

658.8 Salesmanship 51-11676

"This work emphasizes the importance of 'the human side' of the distribution and selling process. Its three main sections, which reveal the nature of the subject matter, are: 'Customers Are Human Beings'; 'Salesmen Are Human, Too—What to Do About It'; and 'Even the Boss Is Human.'" Management R

"In cartoons that enliven this refreshing book, the illustrator captures the fun of selling. While you are laughing at selling 'scarecrows' in action you are absorbing reminders that can make you a selling star." Winifred Baum

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 19 '51 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p25 N '51

"It is my strong belief that many an executive will decide that The Human Side of Selling will not only give his sales organization a valuable mental and spiritual lift but also will prove a profitable aid to his company's customer-relations and employer-salesman relations programs." M. I. Schultz

+ Management R 40:650 O '51 600w

MOORE, RUTH. Candlemas bay. 341p $3 Morrow

50-10637

Novel of family life in a Maine coast town during 1947 and 1948. The Ellis family had lived at Candlemas Bay for almost two hundred years. The head of the family, Grampie, was trying to take care of his three grown daughters as well as his daughter-in-law and her six children, after Jen's husband was drowned. The story is of Jen's valiant struggle to help Grampie.

Booklist 47:86; 115 N 1 '50; N 15 '50

Bookmark 10:157 Ap '51 130w

"[A certain] slickness is redeemed by Miss Moore's lyric celebration of the ordinary days and ways of life and by her gift for capturing common (sometimes a bit too common) speech." Riley Hughes

+ — Cath World 173:234 Je '51 240w

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 25 '51 450w

"The book is honest. It shows good and ill, some tragedy, much fun. Perhaps only a State-of-Mainer, preferably one from Miss Moore's own Spoonhandle country, is qualified to pass judgment on its last-iota authenticity. Some have already done that for her other novels and given them a high rating. The important thing is that outsiders have agreed." W. K. Rugg

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Mr 30 '51 420w

"The characters are three-dimensional and the salt air is refreshing. Some of the language is rough but it is part of the setting." M. C. Scoggin

+ Horn Bk 27:196 My '51 120w

+ Kirkus 18:569 S 15 '50 150w

"A regional novel with universal appeal; a fine example of man's (and woman's!) indomitable spirit when faced by almost insuperable difficulties. Recommended for general reading—by no means limited to Maine-ophiles." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 75:1824 O 15 '50 130w

"This is a full adult book, the plot is lusty and the language rough and salty. But older young people will be interested in the issues presented here." M. D. Read

Library J 76:1036 Je 15 '51 80w

"'Candlemas Bay' is a good story in the outward sense of excitement, suspense and humour. It is more than that in giving you, with beautiful explicitness of time and place and individuals, a quickened awareness of the importance of human beings." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Mr 25 '51 550w

"The down-coast people who give Ruth Moore her life and living, who surround her, are as real in her books as they are in rubber boots at town meeting. There isn't a person in Ruth's books that I haven't met personally, many times, some of them close relatives—and now produced again with photographic analysis." John Gould

+ N Y Times p28 Ap 1 '51 500w

MOORE, RUTH—Continued
New Yorker 27:90 Mr 31 '51 80w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 25 '51 800w

"It seems quite safe to say that no mere layman can know more about fishing than Ruth Moore knows. . . As a description of this life 'Candlemas Bay,' like the others, leaves nothing to be desired. It affords excellent, even superb photography. But as a novel it seems to this reviewer, at least, to lack those qualities which mark the best novels as forms of art rather than as mere stories." M. E. Chase
+ — Sat R of Lit 34:16 Mr 24 '51 550w
Springf'd Republican p5D Mr 25 '51 210w
Wis Lib Bul 47:62 Mr '51

MOORE, MRS VARDINE, and CONKLING, FLEUR. Billy between; with il. by Roger Crumling. 175p $2.50 Westminster press
51-10032

Story of present-day family life for young readers. Billy was twelve, and the only boy in a family of four girls. The story shows what happened when Billy decided to buy a pony.

Booklist 47:349 Je 1 '51

"Eight to 12 year olds will love this book. Boys will like to identify themselves with Billy and girls will wish they had a brother like him. Almost 100 words more to the page than most books of this age level make it a good buy, but larger type would make it easier reading." Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ag 12 '51 150w

"Good, wholesome story portraying excellent family relationships and fine standards of morals and conduct without being preachy. Recommended especially for 11-12-year-old boys, but girls will also enjoy it." M. A. Herr
+ Library J 76:528 Mr 15 '51 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ap 8 '51 70w

"The authors have written a lively and entertaining story, but it is to be hoped young readers will not follow Billy's example and acquire a pony without definite parental consent." Marjorie Burger
+ N Y Times p24 Ap 8 '51 160w

MOOREHEAD, ALAN. Villa Diana; il. by Osbert Lancaster. 150p $2.50 Scribner
914.5 Italy—Description and travel 51-10033

A series of articles about Italy, all but one of which have appeared in the New Yorker. The last chapter is a biographical sketch of Agnolo Ambrogini, called Poliziano, poet and humanist, who once lived in the Villa Diana, where Moorehead lived outside Florence.

Booklist 47:309 My 1 '51

"Osbert Lancaster's illustrations are an ideal pictorial accompaniment to this glowingly good natured, genuinely charming book." J. M. Flynn
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 15 '51 450w

"Surely one of the pleasantest and most penetrating little volumes to appear on Italy for some time." J. G. Harrison
+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Jl 5 '51 550w

"Alan Moorehead has described the Italy of the Holy Year in a way that is as casual and deft as a New Yorker Profile. . . The articles come out in a smooth, polished pattern. A situation is elongated into a narrative, the narrative broken by what appears to be almost gossipy rambling, and both narrative and asides are gradually and neatly intertwined. The whole thing has an informal, chatty tone, like that of a college instructor studiously avoiding all pedantic earnestness, discussing in close succession the merits of girls in general and the meaning of Kirkegaard's 'angst.'" Serge Hughes
Commonweal 54:18 Ap 13 '51 800w
Kirkus 19:142 Mr 1 '51 140w

Reviewed by Frances Keene
Nation 172:474 My 19 '51 950w

"Unlike the Irish poet Sean O'Faolain, whose A Summer in Italy views and judges much of the same material 'in depth' and with controversial passion, Moorehead takes everything lightly, with a Newyorkerish version of traditional British detachment. An Australian writing for an American (or rather a New York) public he prefers to skate surfaces; the result is probably closer to what a cultivated, but not profoundly interested, American tourist could absorb for himself on a trip to Italy. The Villa Diana can be recommended for enjoyment; the sketches should be enjoyable not only to readers who know Italy little or not at all, but also to those who know it well." Percy Winner
+ New Repub 124:19 My 21 '51 850w

"Mr. Moorehead is obviously on the side of the angels, obviously efficient, obviously well-intentioned. And in his last essay, a study of Politian, who once lived in the Villa Diana, he has tried to achieve something of permanent value. Unfortunately, Politian, like Wilde, was one of those characters whose impact is almost entirely spent on its own generation. It would need a long holiday from the dentist's waiting-room, a long training in literary first aid before one could hope to bring to life the exhausted and slightly pretentious skeleton which is all of Politian that had come down to us." Simon Harcourt-Smith
+ — New Statesman & Nation 41:456 Ap 21 '51 800w

"Extremely pleasant reading. Osbert Lancaster, whose line drawing, satirical yet descriptive, is very much the vogue in England, has provided charming illustrations for 'Villa Diana.' The only trouble is that one keeps hoping that some day a contemporary writer writing about Italy will succeed in being something more than pleasant, kind and condescending about Italians." Gouverneur Paulding
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ap 1 '51 800w

"The sketches are extremely varied. . . The final piece is a first-rate capsule biography." Robert Knittel
+ N Y Times p15 Ap 15 '51 550w
San Francisco Chronicle p21 Je 17 '51 180w
Spec 185:425 Mr 30 '51 360w

"Mr. Moorehead is a superb journalist, the possessor of a spare and excellent prose style, curiosity and a ceaselessly observing eye; but he wisely does not attempt to do what the artist-journalist does—expand the observation by uniting it with other, simultaneous, observations of the inward eye."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p159 Mr 16 '51 600w

MOORMAN, LEWIS JEFFERSON. Pioneer doctor. 252p $3.75 Univ. of Okla. press
B or 92 Physicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 51-10218

"In this somewhat rambling autobiography which is replete with first hand personal anecdotes [Dr Moorman] recounts his experiences, first as a country and small town general practitioner in Kentucky, Tennessee, and the Territory of Oklahoma, and later as a prominent tuberculosis specialist in the State of Oklahoma." (Survey) Index.

Reviewed by S. J. Crumbine
Am J Pub Health 41:870 Jl '51 330w
Booklist 47:400 Jl 15 '51
Bookmark 10:206 Je '51 30w

Reviewed by Al Chase
Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Jl 1 '51 240w
Kirkus 19:227 Ap 15 '51 110w

"It seems next to impossible for an experienced medical man, even though he may be an inexpert writer, to concoct an unreadable book, Spotty, perhaps, but full of a certain fascination. Dr. Moorman is in the best tradition: he has a lively story to tell, he is of a contemplative turn of mind and his reputation in the profession is high." Stanley Walker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Ap 29 '51 500w

" 'Pioneer Doctor' is the story of a full and dedicated life, a life which has witnessed great changes in medical science and in recent years a harkening back to the art of medicine, to which the author has always dedicated himself, whether on the plains of Oklahoma or the rostrum of an international conference on medical problems." F. G. Slaughter

+ Sat R of Lit 34:13 Ag 18 '51 700w

Reviewed by E. G. Eastman

Springf'd Republican p5C S 23 '51 350w

"It is a lively, informative, and historically significant story." H. W. Hintz

+ Survey 87:232 My '51 140w

Wis Lib Bul 47:120 My '51

MORANTE, ELSA (MRS ALBERTO PINCHERLE). House of liars [tr. from the Italian by Adrienne Foulke; with the editorial assistance of Andrew Chiappe]. 565p $4 Harcourt

51-12849

"Study of family disintegration told in flashback fashion by neurotic Elisa, who after the death of her prostitute benefactress, Rosaria, mulls over the history of her grandmother, mother, and father. The grandmother married for position and reaped poverty; the mother, after an abortive affair with a sadistic cousin, married a socialist though still in love with the cousin; and the father found solace in the arms of Rosaria." Library J

"At the start, House of Liars struck me as contrived and over-extravagant. But the characterizations turn out to be rich, vivid, and arresting, and Anna's obsession is made sufficiently persuasive. My feelings about the book are very tidily summed up in the endorsement of it vouchsafed by Robert Penn Warren: 'Elsa Morante has the real fictional magic, and once you step inside her orbit you might as well submit.' " C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 188:94 N '51 260w

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 7 '51 360w

Kirkus 19:450 Ag 15 '51 160w

"The detailed descriptive meanderings dissipate what action there is, and mar passages possessing trenchant insight. Book won an Italian prize. Author is the wife of Alberto Moravia." W. K. Harrison

Library J 76:1563 O 1 '51 100w

Reviewed by Frances Keene

Nation 173:357 O 27 '51 850w

Reviewed by Alfred Hayes

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 N 4 '51 310w

"The felicity of such a novel rests, of course, chiefly on the writing. Miss Morante has chosen to clothe her perceptions, which are very modern, in a nineteenth-century dress; the effect of this contrast is as persuasive as it is delicate. There are dull pages and monotonous patterns; yet the impact of the novel grows continuously upon the reader and remains memorable. The translation is accurate and readable. Still, only an unfailing taste for the original Italian and a creative mastery of English could have done full justice to 'House of Liars'; and these are qualities which even good translators do not often possess." Paolo Milano

N Y Times p5 O 7 '51 500w

"Regrettably, the tautness of the narrative is not matched by the plot, which becomes too involved, and one central character, the rich, aristocratic hero, who is oddly reminiscent of a Thomas Wolfe hero, remains hollow throughout. But if the reader will overlook these shortcomings, together with some lumpy translating, he will have gained a sobering insight into a process of slow human disintegration. It makes Zola jovial by comparison." Serge Hughes

+ — Sat R of Lit 34:19 O 20 '51 600w

MORAVIA, ALBERTO, pseud. See Pincherle, A.

MOREY, LLOYD, and HACKETT, ROBERT PHILLIP. Fundamentals of governmental accounting. 2d ed 518p $5.50 Wiley

336.73 Government accounting 51-868

"First edition was published 1942. . . In this edition the authors have laid particular stress on the special character of governmental accounting as distinguished from accounting in private business. The various kinds of government funds are separately treated, and the special needs of each indicated and discussed. Problems for class or private study. Selected references." Library J

Booklist 47:257 Mr 15 '51

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 76:412 Mr 1 '51 90w

MORGAN, ALFRED POWELL. First chemistry book for boys and girls; il. by Bradford Babbitt and Terry Smith. 179p $2.75 Scribner

540 Chemistry—Juvenile literature 50-10930

"For older children. Twenty-five introductory pages are followed by sixty-four easy-to-perform experiments, all of them using only easily-obtained materials; and 'all of them, handled properly, perfectly safe.' Many pictures in black and white supplement the explanations and directions in the text." (Horn Bk) Index.

Booklist 47:225 F 15 '51

Christian Science Monitor p10 Mr 10 '51 80w

"A book full of interesting information and practical entertainment for boys and girls. Well indexed."

+ Horn Bk 27:42 Ja '51 90w

Reviewed by M. I. Ross

Library J 76:186 F 1 '51 80w

"Mr. Morgan's suggestion of forming young chemists clubs will appeal to older boys and girls, and the materials needed for the experiments are simple and easy to procure. This is one of the best of the year's hobby books."

+ Sat R of Lit 34:48 F 17 '51 100w

MORGAN, ALFRED POWELL. First electrical book for boys; il. by the author. rev ed 263p $3 Scribner

537 Electricity—Juvenile literature 51-11114

"An added chapter on radio, television, radar, and electronics, and considerable revision in text and illustrations bring this book up to date." (Booklist) For earlier edition see Book Review Digest 1935.

Booklist 47:370 Je 15 '51

Reviewed by J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews

Horn Bk 27:257 Jl '51 60w

"Recommended." M. I. Ross

+ Library J 76:1237 Ag '51 120w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Jl 8 '51 40w

"A work that has been standard in its field for 16 years now benefits by the revision of much of its material and inclusion of the latest developments—electronics, radar and television."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 N 11 '51 250w

Sat R of Lit 34:46 Jl 21 '51 30w

Wis Lib Bul 47:195 Jl '51

MORGAN, CHARLES. Breeze of morning. 211p $3.50 Macmillan
51-13837

A novel told in retrospect. David Harbrook, the narrator, recalls a chapter in his life: his fourteenth year when he fell in love with beautiful Rose Letterby, who at nineteen was mistress of a much-mortaged manor. David was studying for an Eton scholarship and Rose's father helped him with his classics. David recalls the love of his quiet sister Ann for their cousin Howard, and Howard's love for the more beautiful, but flighty Rose. An epilog rounds out the story.

"The author's prose, as always, is elegant and chaste; but his novel steers a faltering course between the ludicrous and sublime."
Atlantic 188:98 D '51 130w

Booklist 48:102 N 15 '51

Bookmark 11:60 D '51 40w

"A Breeze of Morning is a quiet book, without sensation beyond that of sheer style. It would be a great misfortune if, because of grosser, more boisterous claimants for attention, it should be overlooked."
+ Cath World 174:313 Ja '52 250w

"One cannot help feeling, when comparison becomes insistent, that Charles Morgan has not only done but is capable of doing much richer and more effective writing than this. 'A Breeze of Morning' seems, at the end, simply a very nice piece: the competent work of a fine writer on a small subject: a minor job, easy to read, and full of bright touches and charm." Richard Sullivan
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 O 21 '51 300w

Reviewed by Harold Hobson
Christian Science Monitor p14 D 6 '51 60w

"This may be the most decent love story to come by in a long time. A romance of the early, English 1900's, of Ann Harbrook, Howard Treladdin and Rose Letterby (even the names suggest propriety), the book is practically charged with decorum. There is not a blasphemy in it, nor a moment of forthright lust. Temptations regularly give way to common sense. But this is not to say that the book is passionless, that love is an easy thing. . . The book is neither stuffy, nor a bore, nor does young David see the world through merely juvenile eyes, not yet understanding." J. A. Lynch
+ Commonweal 55:203 N 30 '51 430w

"Charming, slight, and rather unexpected from Charles Morgan, whose novels prior to this one, have been esoteric, symbolic and at times obscure."
+ Kirkus 19:452 Ag 15 '51 160w

"Whenever a reader wants a beautiful and penetrating novel of human emotions, he may be sure of good reading from CM's pen. This novel is in the manner of The Judge's Story and The River Line—not one word too many. . . For general purchase." K. T. Willis
Library J 76:1333 S 1 '51 100w

"The style is measured, and nothing and nobody gets out of hand, out of the control of this skilful prosaist." Paul Bloomfield
+ Manchester Guardian p4 S 21 '51 50w

Reviewed by Jocelyn Brooke
New Statesman & Nation 42:440 O 20 '51 470w

"'A Breeze of Morning' is a quiet, little novel, civilized and enjoyable, and its serenity and lucidity are likely to keep it in one's memory." Mary Ross
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 O 28 '51 500w

"His appealing story is told with compassion, with exquisite economy, and with a sense of comedy as relieving as it is true." Charles Lee
+ N Y Times p34 O 21 '51 330w

New Yorker 27:152 N 3 '51 120w

"It is, I think, [the] very tranquility that mitigates against the book's effectiveness. Mr Morgan likes to be in the company of decently reticent people, a choice which he has every right to make for himself but one which it is, perhaps, injudicious to make for readers less refined." James Gray
Sat R of Lit 34:16 N 17 '51 450w

"A Breeze of Morning is a book of great professional competence which asserts its position on the wall a little too emphatically for our comfort." Tangye Lean
Spec 187:376 S 21 '51 400w

Springf'd Republican p14C N 4 '51 220w

"Mr. Morgan has never been much interested in character and should not perhaps be blamed for intentional abstractness of theme. Yet since his subject is the true nature of Rose, more human data and less classical literature would have been in order. There is too much elegant prose eminently suitable, the reader disrespectfully feels, for translation into French."
Times [London] Lit Sup p609 S 28 '51 650w

MORGAN, CHARLES. Liberties of the mind. 252p $2.75 Macmillan
323.44 Liberty 51-4511

A collection of essays and addresss, some previously published elsewhere, several in the London Times Literary Supplement. The theme of the essays is what the author sees as the imminent danger of the loss of freedom of mind and moral choice by the majority of mankind.

Booklist 47:396 Jl 15 '51

"This is a profound work: urbane, finished and sparkling with Morgan's virtuoso touch." Clorinda Clarke
+ Cath World 174:80 O '51 280w

"Not only Marxists but other materialists may quarrel with Morgan. The believer in freedom, however, will find this book both sobering and quickening, by its own example of a human mind's power to comprehend spiritual dangers intuitively and to strike imaginatively toward positive and vital solutions." Warren Beck
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Je 24 '51 360w

Christian Century 68:869 Jl 25 '51 190w

"This is a book to be read and pondered." Harold Hobson
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 5 '51 130w

Reviewed by Neil Martin
Christian Science Monitor p11 S 6 '51 1100w

Reviewed by C. E. Karsten
Churchman 165:17 O 15 '51 170w

Reviewed by G. S. Spinks
Hibbert J 49:401 Jl '51 1600w

Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 17 '51 150w

Reviewed by David Goldknopf
New Repub 125:20 O 8 '51 410w

"The book remains a coherent statement of deep conviction, growing out of mental doubt and despair and hope. It reflects on the dangers of the modern world, but on the good things as well. . . If its central position is criticized, let us hope the criticism may come from someone who holds a better positive answer. Reinhold Niebuhr, perhaps? Or Maritain himself? Or some of the four or five good poets, the even smaller number of good novelists, of this century?" D. A. Stauffer
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ag 12 '51 750w

Reviewed by Gerald Sykes
N Y Times p4 Je 3 '51 750w

Reviewed by George Woodcock
Sat R of Lit 34:12 S 22 '51 850w

"Mr Morgan's theme is that of 1984. But Orwell's precise and microscopic imagination and his ironic vision are replaced by a soft anxiety about incompletely imagined possibilities and a mannered rhetoric too nicely tuned to be effective. Nowhere have the last days of mankind been more urbanely contemplated." Michael Oakeshott
Spec 185:419 Mr 30 '51 1150w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn
Springf'd Republican p4C Ag 5 '51 490w

"Mr. Morgan is sensitive to the tyranny of fashion and his book is mercifully free from current jargon. It commands a general assent, while leaving room for particular disagreements."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p240 Ap 20 '51 1150w

MORGAN, MURRAY CROMWELL. Skid road; an informal portrait of Seattle. 280p $3.75 Viking 979.7771 Seattle 51-14111

History of the first hundred years of the city of Seattle. The author discusses the pioneers, Indians, the lumber industry, railroads, the great fire of 1889, the Gold rush, the newspapers, and politics, with stress on the labor situation. Index.

Booklist 48:57; 98 O 15 '51; N 15 '51
Kirkus 19:553 S 15 '51 230w

"Well-written and accurate. . . While this is a popular treatment and fascinating, as is the history of any American city, there is rather too much emphasis on the details of the political scene, which is of only slight interest to the majority of readers. Choice of title, which represents red-light district, is unfortunate, and undeserving of a great American city." L. R. Etzkorn
+ — Library J 76:1926 N 15 '51 120w

"Mr. Morgan's delightful book is the sort of corrective history that all communities should welcome." S. H. Holbrook
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 D 9 '51 1050w

"One of the most engrossing accounts of Seattle yet to appear." R. L. Neuberger
+ N Y Times p20 N 18 '51 450w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 20 '51 750w

MORGENTHAU, HANS JOACHIM, ed. Germany and the future of Europe [by] Reinhold Niebuhr [and others]. 179p $3.50 Univ. of Chicago press
943.086 Germany—Economic conditions. Germany—Politics and government. Germany—Social conditions. Europe—Politics 51-3607

"Can Western Germany be reintegrated with the Western world on mutually livable terms? This is the basic question which has been asked, and answered diversely and thoughtfully, by fourteen students of German problems represented in the volume of Harris Foundation lectures for 1950." Nation

Am Pol Sci R 45:914 S '51 20w

Reviewed by R. H. Lutz
Ann Am Acad 278:242 N '51 650w

"There is a wealth of well-presented information in the volume. Its only shortcoming is that none of the contributors has gone deeply enough into the youth problem and that neither the conditions in Germany's intellectual sphere nor its spiritual forces have been considered. But even though it is heavily weighted on the economic and political side it should do much good if it is read by all those who have to shape American foreign policy and by as many as possible of those who have to bear the consequences." Ernest Pisko
+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 7 '51 650w

Current Hist 21:227 O '51 70w

"Although a year has elapsed since the discussions held at the Harris Foundation, the statement of basic issues is fully valid today, for it draws upon an unusual range of expertness and of first-hand concern with post-war German developments." P. E. Mosely
+ Nation 173:95 Ag 4 '51 750w

"The other lectures, some of which are rather brief statements, maintain on the whole the high level set by Mr. Niebuhr's introduction. They are remarkably free from those emotions and utopian notions which have so often influenced United States policy with regard to Germany in the recent past." Hans Kohn
+ N Y Times p31 S 23 '51 320w

School & Society 74:416 D 22 '51 20w

"Any symposium necessarily falls short of the coherence and systematic development of thought possible in a book of single authorship. The present volume, nevertheless, has a special merit in that it presents within short compass the matured views of students whose analyses and judgments about Germany cannot be ignored. These papers honestly consider real problems."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:276 S '51 180w

MORGENTHAU, HANS JOACHIM. In defense of the national interest; a critical examination of American foreign policy. 283p $3.50 Knopf
327.73 U.S.—Foreign policy 51-11217

"Hans J. Morgenthau, Professor of Political Science at the University of Chicago, is an American scholar and citizen whom Hitler's tyranny drove to the United States in 1937. . . His book is a swiftly written, eleventh-hour plea to his countrymen to throw off the four intellectual errors of post-war diplomacy—Wilsonian Utopianism, Dumbartian Legalism, Trumanian Sentimentalism, and Neo-Isolationism. He urges us to analyze the national interest unemotionally in terms of power and its use." N Y Times

Booklist 47:376 Jl 1 '51

Reviewed by Walter Trohan
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Je 24 '51 380w

Foreign Affairs 30:152 O '51 50w

"There are said in this book many things that needed to be said, but they are so buried and concealed in verbiage that only the most persistent will succeed in getting at these kernels of truth. It is a grim and disturbing book. . . The author is a professor of political science at the University of Chicago. Unfortunately his style bears too many of the earmarks of the pedagogue."
Kirkus 19:204 Ap 1 '51 340w

"Recommended for all libraries." A. J. Gaines
+ Library J 76:1027 Je 15 '51 130w

Reviewed by A. J. P. Taylor
Nation 173:196 S 8 '51 1150w

Reviewed by J. R. Newman
New Repub 125:18 Ag 13 '51 1950w

"This book should be widely debated. Its substance is one of the most useful contributions to the understanding of our problems to appear in a long time; it is clearly and forcefully written. And yet it may well offend unnecessarily a good many intelligent and well-meaning people who ought to be able to learn a lot from it. The fault may be with these people. . . Yet the fault may also be in part Professor Morgenthau's, for he has not quite lived up in the practice of this book to the realism he preaches." Crane Brinton
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Jl 1 '51 750w

"The President should read Mr. Morgenthau's book. It may anger him, but he should read it. The Secretary of State should read it; he will find a lot of things in common with the author. And every American citizen interested in surviving as a free man should read it, too." S. F. Bemis
+ N Y Times p6 Je 10 '51 850w

Reviewed by Dexter Perkins
Sat R of Lit 34:19 Jl 14 '51 1000w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:288 S '51 200w

MORGENTHAU, HANS JOACHIM, and THOMPSON, KENNETH W., eds. Principles and problems of international politics; selected readings. 468p $5 Knopf
327 International relations 50-12950

"In compiling this volume of readings in international politics, we have been guided by

MORGENTHAU, H. J.—Continued
three basic considerations. We have tried to include only selections relevant to the subject matter. We have tried to select only writings not easily accessible to the average student. We have made it a point to give selections in full, cutting as little as possible. . . In concentrating upon the problems which are at the core of the subject matter we have had two primary purposes in mind. We have tried to illuminate the nature of a problem by giving selections from authors representing opposing points of view. . . Our other purpose has been to show in the continuity of international problems and of the policies dealing with them the objectivity of what might well be called the laws of international politics." (Pref) Index.

Am Pol Sci R 45:268 Mr '51 30w
Current Hist 21:96 Ag '51 40w
Harvard Law R 64:1231 My '51 450w

"Material chosen is of somewhat uneven value and appeal; much more intriguing items could have been gathered on many topics. Volume may be useful in small libraries with limited coverage of world affairs." F. E. Hirsch
Library J 75:2148 D 15 '50 150w
Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 26 '51 120w

MORISON, SAMUEL ELIOT. History of United States naval operations in World war II; v7, Aleutians, Gilberts and Marshalls, June 1942-April 1944; with an introd. on fast carrier operations, 1943-1945 by James C. Shaw. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 369p il maps $6 Little

940.545973 World war, 1939-1945—Naval operations. U.S. Navy (47-1571)

"This, the 7th volume in History of United States Naval Operations in World War II, is an account of amphibious operations in the northern and western Pacific." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 48:82 N 1 '51

"Adm. Morison has made his account absorbing and dramatic and at the same time has held firmly to documented fact. This reviewer served in U. S. S. Tennessee, which participated as a fire support battleship in the campaigns covered, and, from the viewpoint of a participant and eyewitness to much of the action described, the clear and realistic telling of the story of these operations is noteworthy." Chapin Litten
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 N 18 '51 360w
Kirkus 19:471 Ag 15 '51 180w

"The record it gives is valuable and is presented with distinction and more than a little humor." G. D. McDonald
+ Library J 76:1330 S 1 '51 100w
Nation 173:360 O 27 '51 40w

"Here, in Morison's thorough but tautly sailor-like detail, are some of the greatest epics of the Pacific war." Walter Millis
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 O 14 '51 950w

"Morison's book is history rather than reporting. If it lacks 'color' in that overworked and journalistic sense of the term, it is nevertheless written with an appreciation of the non sequiturs of war and the dramatic moments that win or lose battles. It is a scenario which every participant can fill in with details from his own experience." David Dempsey
+ N Y Times p3 O 7 '51 1000w

Reviewed by Scott Newhall
San Francisco Chronicle p26 N 4 '51 450w

Reviewed by C. V. Woodward
Sat R of Lit 34:14 N 24 '51 750w

Reviewed by Donald Derby
Springf'd Republican p30A N 11 '51 300w
Time 58:126 O 15 '51 800w

MORLAND, NIGEL. Outline of scientific criminology; with 12 pages of photographs. 287p $4.75 Philosophical lib.

351.74 Crime and criminals. Criminal investigation 50-58150

"The title might be misleading to the usual American reader since it is not concerned . . . with such topics as the causes of crime or the characteristics of the criminal, but rather with criminal identification and detection—the field sometimes known as criminalistics. Within this restricted field, the author recounts in an easy and informal manner the techniques, procedures, and principles that have proved most fruitful in such areas as finger printing, Bertillonage, ballistics, forensic medicine and chemistry, graphology, cryptography, microscopy, and photography." Social Studies

"As a popular treatise on criminal identification by scientific methods this book ranks among the very best if not the best. As a textbook for the training of experts it would be quite inadequate. It is a book about crime detection rather than of crime detection, though in many places it attempts to be the latter. The author, obviously not trained in scientific methods, has nevertheless read very extensively." J. H. Mathews
+ — Chem & Eng N 29:954 Mr 5 '51 220w

"For the most part, in his exposition, [the author] steers a pretty good middle course betweeen the Scylla of over-generality and superficiality, and the Charybdis of overburdening the non-specialist with too much technical detail. Since the topics treated here are usually either omitted entirely or dismissed in a cursory fashion in the usual college course in criminology, this work should prove of value both to instructor and student as collateral reading. A dozen very clear photographs add to the interest of the work." J. A. Neprash
+ Social Studies 42:227 My '51 220w

MORLEY, FELIX. Foreign policy of the United States. 175p $2.50 Knopf

327.73 U.S.—Foreign policy 51-12070

"This book, which is based on a series of lectures given by the author at Wesleyan University, could stand as the credo of enlightened conservatism in regard to American foreign policy. Mr. Morley is censorious of most of the major international acts of the present administration and its predecessor, and of both President Roosevelt's and President Truman's reliance on the idea of the United Nations as a means of achieving and keeping a permanent peace, a concept he condemns as unrealistic." New Yorker

Booklist 48:116 D 1 '51

"This is a book of utmost importance. It should be read by everyone—even if he reads no more than newspaper headlines—so that he can understand what is going on in the world and so that he may spur his own thinking and the thinking of others." Walter Trohan
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 N 25 '51 500w
Current Hist 21:297 N '51 230w
Kirkus 19:551 S 15 '51 270w

"Morley repeats the legend that the Monroe Doctrine was proclaimed in concert with Great Britain and that throughout the nineteenth century we had a continuous working agreement with Downing Street. Morley even states that the present Atlantic Treaty can be traced back to the Monroe Doctrine. I doubt very much if any responsible historian on either side of the Atlantic would subscribe to such views. When it comes to the origin and history of the Open Door and the integrity of China . . . he is on sounder historical ground." S. F. Bemis
N Y Times p12 N 11 '51 440w

"On the whole, a constructive piece of criticism, although somewhat weakened by hindsight reasoning. Mr. Morley's style shows its customary forcefulness and clarity."
+ New Yorker 27:166 N 24 '51 150w

Reviewed by Lewis Galantiere
Sat R of Lit 34:13 N 17 '51 500w

"Mr. Morley has produced a confused and a disappointing book." Frank Altschul
Sat R of Lit 34:10 D 22 '51 850w

MORRIS, ALTON CHESTER, ed. Folksongs of Florida; musical transcriptions by Leonhard Deutsch [foreword by Arthur Palmer Hudson]. 464p $7.50 Univ. of Fla. press

784.4 Folk songs, American 50-9048

"Mr. Morris's collection is large and inclusive. It contains play-party songs, work songs, nursery songs, fiddle songs, sea songs, religious songs, as well as songs of outlawry, disaster and tragedy, love and domestic relations. He prints Florida variants of thirty-four of the so-called Child ballads. In a gratifying large proportion of cases he prints tune as well as words." (Christian Science Monitor) Bibliography. Index.

"This is a collection in which the student of American balladry can find much of value and interest." Horace Reynolds
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 N 29 '50 460w

"Without question, the notations of the Florida colection make [a good] impression upon the reader, in spite of the fact that a distressingly large number of texts are without music. . . Morris's head-notes occasionally state that a song was 'learned from a Negro.' He speaks of the 'two racial groups' and pointedly remarks that many Negro songs are sung by White people. . . It is not a nice thing to have to say 'Jim Crow,' but that is exactly what it seems to be." Charles Seeger
+ — Music Lib Assn Notes 8:523 Je '51 500w
Nation 173:138 Ag 18 '51 110w

"Collecting folksongs by state inadequately serves popular literature or cultural history. The pieces which deal or are somehow connected with Floridian subjects such as hurricanes and the turpentine camps are surprisingly few and mediocre." Shields McElwaine
N Y Times p20 N 26 '50 380w
Sat R of Lit 33:34 S 2 '50 260w

"The book not only represents Florida, but it also contains a number of songs which are, to date, unique in the United States, one of them being the extremely rare Lord Derwentwater. Notes on the sources and variants of each song and a bibliography help make this the valuable addition that it is to the increasing number of state and regional collections of folksongs."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:472 D '50 250w

MORRIS, DONALD R. China station. 276p $3 Farrar, Straus

51-10297

The love story of a United States sailor in post-war China. The time is 1948. Robert Goslin, stationed on a destroyer, finds his casual affair with a White Russian girl growing into a real love. But with the approach of the Communist forces, and the departure of the U. S. navy, the brief love affair is ended.

Booklist 47:311 My 1 '51

"This has an awareness and a simplicity that are effective."
+ Kirkus 19:158 Mr 15 '51 190w

"The entire panorama is covered with the savoir faire of the expert. Recommended." H. L. Roth
+ Library J 76:597 Ap 1 '51 80w

"'China Station' is a tribute to a woman's understanding. And it is a love story in which emotions are translated into warm and moving narrative." Lisle Bell
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 5 '51 390w

Reviewed by William McFee
N Y Times p23 Ap 8 '51 100w

"Donald Morris knows his Navy well, and his novel is not without touches of tenderness and promise. It is unfortunate he selected a plot-vehicle to which only great talent could lend freshness and originality." M. L. Mueller
San Francisco Chronicle p24 Jl 1 '51 110w
Springf'd Republican p9B My 20 '51 60w

MORRIS, LLOYD R. Incredible New York; high life and low life of the last hundred years. 370p il $5 Random house

974.71 New York (city)—History. New York (city)—Social life and customs 51-14524

History of New York city covering the last hundred years. The many illustrations are from contemporary prints, paintings, photographs, etc. Index.

Booklist 48:142 D 15 '51

Reviewed by Harry Hansen
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 D 9 '51 300w
+ Kirkus 19:525 S 1 '51 130w

"Recommended for local history and sociology collections. Good for paid circulating libraries." George Freedley
+ Library J 76:2112 D 15 '51 100w
Nation 173:553 D 22 '51 90w

"There is so much to tell that a reviewer cannot quarrel over omissions or slights. This is no sensitive confession like 'A Threshold in the Sun'; it is entertainment in which the author recognizes the significance of trifles. . . Mr. Morris is at his best when he describes the far-flung social warfare that came with the quick accumulation of riches, from the days when Mrs. William W. Astor and her major domo, Ward McAllister, separated the elect from the ineligibles." Harry Hansen
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 N 25 '51 1250w

"I don't believe a more entertaining book about New York has ever been written than this account, by one of our ablest social historians. It is a truly magnificent job of selection, organization and writing. I can recall no other author, with the exception of O. Henry, who has so completely captured the feeling and flavor of the world's greatest metropolis. . . I recommend the Morris book unreservedly to anyone who wants to know how New York became what it is." Herbert Asbury
+ N Y Times p3 N 25 '51 1000w
New Yorker 27:67 D 29 '51 100w

"It is a very good job of its kind. One special point, somebody is to be congratulated for refusing to use any of the worn-out newspaper photographs of the 1920s, instead of decorating the pages with the work of the best contemporary painters—John Sloan, Glackens and many more. That was an inspiration." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 D 4 '51 650w

"One of the most complete anthologies of sensational, real-life stories ever to be compiled. Certainly, it is one of the most readable; and there is no getting away from it: these retold scandals are great human-interest stories, much more fascinating than fiction. . . After expending so much effort ravishing musty files, Mr. Morris might have improved his book if he had spent a little more time exploring the modern city and contemplating its significance and new status in the larger scheme of things. It is getting less mean all the time." Cleveland Rodgers
+ Sat R of Lit 34:15 D 8 '51 950w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin
Theatre Arts 36:3 Ja '52 340w

MORRIS, PERCY AMOS. Field guide to the shells of our Atlantic and Gulf coasts. (Peterson field guide ser) rev & enl 2d ed 236p il $3.75 Houghton

594 Shells 51-12030

"Nomenclature of the first edition [Book Review Digest 1947] is brought up to date and part of the text is rewritten." (Booklist) "One hundred and twelve species of mollusks not covered in the first edition are described and illustrated. There are six new plates of photographs, and in addition several of the earlier plates have been rebuilt, with new photographs." (Preface)

MORRIS, P. A.—Continued

Booklist 48:68 O 15 '51

Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 O 14 '51 30w

Reviewed by H. B. Ellis
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 16 '51 130w

"Perfect for identification, valuable for research." N. S. Chasteen
+ Library J 76:1947 N 15 '51 80w
Wis Lib Bul 47:210 S '51

MORRIS, WILLIAM. Letters to his family and friends; ed. with introd. and notes by Philip Henderson. 406p il $4.25 Longmans

B or 92

"This is not a complete, definitive edition of William Morris's letters but a liberal and representative selection from those already in print, together with a large number here published for the first time. Comparatively few letters survive from his earlier period, and the years up to 1870, by which time Morris had written most of his poetry, occupy only thirty-seven pages of this large volume." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Indexes.

"I don't say Mr. Henderson is imperceptive, or exactly unfair; but I should rather like to say it. I confess his introduction is admirable, but that again requires an effort. For, to tell the truth, I can't like its tone. In any other case it would be right enough, but not for Morris in his 'loneliness and fixedness,' in his pathetic distance, on his glass mountain. Where Morris is concerned I am intensely squeamish, and demand chivalry—not merely justice and appreciation, but a kind of deference. And then I am an addict of The Earthly Paradise, which Mr. Henderson finds rather dull." K. John
New Statesman & Nation 41:70 Ja 20 '51 1400w

"Mr. Henderson's elaborate introduction is altogether admirable as a summary of Morris's character and career. The editorial annotation is, however, somewhat confused, part of it being inserted in brackets in the text and part in footnotes. It is, moreover, somewhat too meager, a good many allusions, more especially to individuals whom posterity has forgotten though they were important to Morris, being left unexplained. The illustrations, though few, are delightful." S. C. Chew
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 F 11 '51 1100w

Reviewed by Carlos Baker
N Y Times p14 My 4 '51 450w
Sat R of Lit 34:29 Je 30 '51 500w

Reviewed by Joanna Richardson
Spec 185:24 Ja 5 '51 1000w
Times [London] Lit Sup p19 Ja 12 '51 1700w

MORRIS, WRIGHT. Man and boy. 212p $3 Knopf

51-2263

A satirical character study of Mrs Violet Ames Ormsby, noted lecturer on bird lore and ruler of lives, known to her browbeaten husband as Mother. The events of the day on which Mother was to christen a ship named after Boy, her son, killed on Guadalcanal. Father almost had his day. But as usual it ended in victory for Mother.

Booklist 47:381 Jl 1 '51

"An original, delicious, somewhat underwritten satire."
+ Bookmark 10:232 Jl '51 40w

"A diabolically clever slashing by the knife of satire of the portrait of a self-satisfied selfish woman. I could tell you that it is as casual as the routine report of the christening of a ship in honor of a dead hero and as coldly recorded. I could call it high farce. I could label it tragedy—of the unfulfillment of human dreams. I could tell you that it is written with tenderness. And I could say that acid drips from its pages. If I told any one of those things, I would be stating the truth but not the whole truth—only individual partial truths." Fanny Butcher
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 27 '51 550w

"Let the story penetrate, and the more moving you will find it. Here is humanity in a few of its predicaments, with the way out implied; but, in or out, we have a real fondness for these people—and that is an achievement for Mr. Morris." T. M. Longstreth
Christian Science Monitor p15 Je 14 '51 750w

"Delicious humor and sly comment."
+ Kirkus 19:163 Mr 15 '51 180w

"Story, in bad taste, is pointless, unless intended to indicate that life is futile, and in general ridiculous, a philosophy we do not recommend." R. W. Henderson
— Library J 76:862 My 15 '51 80w

Reviewed by Harvey Swados
Nation 172:571 Je 16 '51 270w

Reviewed by Robert Phelps
New Repub 125:21 Jl 23 '51 300w

"It is an intolerably quiet, aching, pathetic story which Mr. Morris tells, murderously meticulous in the details which build it up, poisoned in every phrase by the conspiracy which marriage partners employ to protect their weaknesses from the eyes of others. . . Mother, Mr. Morris seems to say, is unbeatable. Well, so, in a way, is Mr. Morris. He writes with the skill of a master satirist; his eye is sharp and his vision clairvoyant. In 'Man and Boy' he stops just where one would expect the rising action of his plot to pick up, but perhaps he felt that, knowing mother and knowing Mr. Ormsby, the reader could dramatize the climax for himself." Thomas Sugrue
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 My 20 '51 650w

"Mr. Morris writes in an easy freehand style and with a degree of control, simplicity and originality that leaves no doubt as to his talent. . . The unpleasant freakishness of the novel's people (a sense persists that for all their homely habits and attributes they are not men but monsters), and a curious flatness that weights the prose make reading 'Man and Boy' a claustrophobic, even while it is an engrossing experience." A. S. Morris
N Y Times p5 My 20 '51 550w

Reviewed by Anthony West
New Yorker 27:111 Je 16 '51 320w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 12 '51 750w

"Wright Morris knows Mother, the archetype who could only happen in—and to—America. His portrait in this novel is often cruel, howbeit poisonously accurate. Mother Ormsby comes to life here so belligerently, making such a pipsqueak of Husband Warren Ormsby, that author Morris all but incites you to violence against Mother. . . Mr. Morris writes a crisp, simple prose. His is almost basic English, but he doesn't get affected about it and uses two- or three-syllable words on occasions when needed." C. V. Little
Sat R of Lit 34:13 Je 2 '51 700w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn
Springf'd Republican p5D Jl 29 '51 250w

"Man and Boy has some important faults: it is sometimes slickly sentimental, and the coarse humor does not always make the reader smile, as it is intended to. It nonetheless belongs among the best novels this spring."
Time 57:110 My 28 '51 500w

"The writing is alive throughout. If at the end, the whole thing seems to have been kept up a little too long, if Mr. Morris seems a little too intent on being a deft man with a narrative, the reader will nevertheless remember the book with pleasure." Paul Pickrel
+ — Yale R n s 40:767 summer '51 120w

MORRISON, HELEN (BARBER), ed. Golden age of travel. 550p $5 Twayne

914 Europe—Description and travel. Travel. Literature—Collections 51-12238

"Drawing upon the experiences of men and women of the 18th and 19th centuries, the author has compiled an admirable selection of impressions of Europe. Excerpts from the writings of such luminaries as Franklin, Goethe, Lamb, Irving, Heine, Goldsmith, Berlioz, Chopin, Shelley, Audubon, Madame de Stael and many others form richly varied portraits of Austria, Bohemia, Belgium, England, Scotland, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, and Switzerland." Library J

"This anthology has humor in abundance and masterly descriptions, originality, insight, and learning—all the qualities that make good travel writing durable however much travel may change." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 188:86 Jl '51 330w

Reviewed by Russell MacFall

Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 O 14 '51 240w

Christian Century 69:19 Ja 2 '52 300w

"Superb, a book to treasure. Highly recommended." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 76:1216 Ag '51 70w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p25 N 25 '51 130w

"Armchair travelers should welcome this book. Those who combine the love of reading with the act of moving from place to place will find it better than Baedeker as an antidote to what Mrs. Morrison calls 'the creeping paralysis of museum fatigue.'" Carlos Baker

+ N Y Times p18 S 23 '51 450w

"An innovation in travel books, and an extremely pleasant one, too."

+ New Yorker 27:164 N 10 '51 180w

Sat R of Lit 34:34 N 10 '51 220w

Springf'd Republican p10B S 30 '51 130w

MORRISS, MACK. The proving ground. 373p $3 Duell

51-9607

A war novel by a former Yank correspondent. This takes its hero, John Allen, a nineteen year-old Tennessee lad, thru training and furlough, then overseas and into the fighting in Germany.

Kirkus 19:190 Ap 1 '51 140w

"One must conclude that perhaps Mr. Morriss has chosen too broad a subject for his first novel. There is much that is powerful and true here, but action and theme are not well enough coordinated to make this the truly challenging book that it might have been." J. J. Maloney

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Je 17 '51 600w

Reviewed by Herbert Mitgang

N Y Times p15 Jl 22 '51 100w

"The writing is sensible and lighthearted, except under stress, when it becomes either laboriously funny or laboriously emotional, and the writer's attitude is cheerful and unpretentious, as though he had never heard the term 'war novel.'"

+ — New Yorker 27:85 Je 23 '51 180w

"We have had a few novels out of this war with the marks of a larger vision upon them, and it is that particularly which has distinguished them from the other war novels. In this sense 'The Proving Ground' is undistinguished." N. L. Rothman

Sat R of Lit 34:27 Je 30 '51 350w

"Mr. Morriss's style is a bit verbose and his pace is slow. He writes with sensitiveness and understanding, however, and his account of John Allen has the ring of experience and truth in it. Even though Army men were notoriously skeptical about orientation lectures and other efforts to alert them to the broad political meanings of the war, 'The Proving Ground' is a reminder that the average soldier had a very earthy and human appreciation of what the struggle meant to himself and to those about him." Donald Derby

+ — Springf'd Republican p5D Jl 22 '51 310w

MORSE, HORACE TAYLOR, ed. General education in transition; a look ahead. 310p $3.50 Univ. of Minn. press

370 Education 51-3544

"This book presents the proceedings of a conference held at the University of Minnesota, which had as its theme the question, 'What should be the next steps in experimentation and research in general education?' The 27 contributors represent 13 different agencies and institutions of higher learning." School & Society

Reviewed by H. M. Jones

Sat R of Lit 34:17 S 8 '51 600w

School & Society 73:302 My 12 '51 30w

MORTON, ANTHONY, pseud. See Creasey, J.

MORTON, CHARLES W. How to protect yourself against women and other vicissitudes; drawings by Carl Rose. 232p $3 Lippincott

817 51-11190

"Mr. Morton is a Nebraskan whose natural Western irreverence has been stepped up by life in New England. He seems not to fear wives, man, Thomas Mann, headmasters, sociologists or the Atlantic tradition (he's an associate editor there). He likes good food and good writing; dislikes roadhogs, fraternities, and obedience tests for dogs." Library J

Booklist 48:27 S 15 '51

Kirkus 19:377 Jl 15 '51 120w

"Everything in this amusing book is fine except the title. 'How to . . .' is practically the trademark of Will Cuppy's books." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 76:1330 S 1 '51 130w

"100 light essays make a pretty heavy dose when swallowed all at once, and Mr. Morton's reflections upon women, newspapering, opera and unallied subjects are best taken in small installments. Thus assimilated, these writings turn out to be always entertaining and frequently instructive." Herbert Kupferberg

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 S 30 '51 270w

Reviewed by John Lardner

+ N Y Times p7 S 23 '51 600w

New Yorker 27:151 O 13 '51 100w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 S 27 '51 700w

Reviewed by Bergen Evans

Sat R of Lit 34:21 N 24 '51 500w

"Mr. Morton is a clever writer and a close observer of the world and its people. A few of the pieces in this book fall rather flat, but many of them are genuinely mirthful and others are witty, if not hilariously so. A good book to have on the reading table for occasional dipping-into in moments when things seem bleak and an emotional bracer-up is needed." H. H.

+ — Springf'd Republican p8C Ag 12 '51 220w

Wis Lib Bul 47:212 S '51

MORTON, HENRY CANOVA VOLLAM. In search of London. 392p $4 Dodd

914.21 London—Description 51-11041

A mixture of history, description, anecdote, and travel guide, about the city of London before, during, and since World war II. Index.

"Here is an admirably written book full of fascinating lore—an item for the armchair traveler no less than for visitors to the Festival of Britain." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 188:85 Jl '51 80w

Booklist 47:361 Je 15 '51

MORTON, H. C. V.—Continued
Reviewed by A. C. Ames
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Je 24 '51 130w

Reviewed by Margaret Williamson
Christian Science Monitor p7 Je 28 '51 120w

"This author of earlier admirable travel books has done it again. Utilizing the same chatty style, he takes you right into the highways and byways of London, and makes you feel almost as if the city is your home town. Highly recommended." W. K. Harrison
+ Library J 76:967 Je 1 '51 50w

"This is the kind of book on London one can recommend to the Festival visitors."
+ Manchester Guardian p4 Je 5 '51 130w

"H. V. Morton's 'In Search of London' is sound and accurate and, at the same time, the most diverting and refreshing book on London that has come this reader's way in years." E. C. Dunn
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Jl 22 '51 700w

"Mr. Morton never risks boring even the most inattentive reader by stopping long anywhere. . . He will conduct a dialogue between himself and his 'still, small voice,' which commands him to climb up a monument and report the view for the reader. Such fast changes give a primarily descriptive book the illusion of racy narrative." Wilmott Ragsdale
+ N Y Times p7 Je 10 '51 600w

"A pleasantly meandering guide and travel book, another in this author's distinguished 'In Search of . . .' series."
+ New Yorker 27:119 Je 9 '51 160w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p8 Je 2 '51 150w

"He re-creates history with a remarkable sense of narrative and imagination. There is no avoiding being gripped by the executions of Anne Boleyn, Catherine Howard, and young Lady Jane Grey. . . Mr. Morton catches cockney talk well, and he speaks descriptively of 'a great gash of blitz damage' and of taking a motorboat and 'exploding over to the opposite shore.' There are a number of photographs of the usual tourist-bureau caliber." H. S.
+ Sat R of Lit 34:37 My 26 '51 260w

Reviewed by Warren Postbridge
Spec 185:794 Je 15 '51 440w

Times [London] Lit Sup p354 Je 8 '51 400w

Wis Lib Bul 47:213 S '51

MOSES, GRAHAM LEE. Electrical insulation; its application to shipboard electrical equipment. 259p il $5.50 McGraw

623.85 Insulation (electric) 51-11376

"Although it is slanted for U. S. Navy personnel and deals particularly with insulation and methods of maintaining insulation that are especially applicable to shipboard electrical equipment, the discussions apply also to the insulation of any electrical machinery operating under high humidity and temperature. There is a preliminary chapter on insulation theory, then succeeding chapters deal with classes of insulation, a selection of insulating materials, winding problems, apparatus assembly, varnish-treating processes, the testing of coils and windings, and preventive maintenance. Official descriptions of the insulating materials used in the U. S. Navy are given in an appendix." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 76:1430 S 15 '51 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:54 Jl '51

MOSHER, WILLIAM EUGENE, and others. Public personnel administration. 3d ed 652p $6.50; college ed $5 Harper

351.1 U.S.—Officials and employees. Civil service—U.S. 50-12401

"The emphasis is 'less on the need for basic reform and for elimination of the spoils system (although much still remains to be accomplished in many state and small local governments) and more on the development of policy and techniques of administration that contribute to the selection, retention, and productivity of the best available talent for the public service.' Introd." (Booklist) For earlier edition see Book Review Digest 1941.

Am Pol Sci R 44:1043 D '50 40w

Booklist 47:117 N 15 '50

"The book applies equally well to those interested in administration at the state and municipal levels. Very good selective bibliography. Merits a place in all libraries above the high school level." Nathaniel Stewart
+ Library J 75:2003 N 15 '50 150w

Management R 40:104 F '51 40w

"This new edition is a thorough revision of a book already a standby with personnel workers—federal, state, and local." J. F. S.
+ Springf'd Republican p30A D 17 '50 240w

MOSK, SANFORD ALEXANDER. Industrial revolution in Mexico. 368p $3.75 Univ. of Calif. press

330.972 Mexico—Industries and resources 50-4219

For descriptive note see Annual for 1950.

"The book is a real contribution to the available literature on the economy of Mexico. It emphasizes both the possibilities of industrialization and the problems likely to impede it. In only a few instances does the treatment appear to be altogether too sketchy to be adequate." N. L. Whetten
+ — Am Soc R 16:421 Je '51 390w

"The work displays a fine combination of analytical power, institutional insight, and historical learning, a combination which has become rare among the pure economists of our generation. It is warmly recommended to all students of economic development in the Western Hemisphere and elsewhere." H. W. Spiegel
+ Ann Am Acad 273:298 Ja '51 450w

"Mosk realizes the strong motive forces behind the drive to industrialize. His account is factual and balanced and his appraisal expert and unbiased. Most important, the wealth of material he accumulated is closely knit into a picture of a growing economy from which the dynamic elements emerge with rare clarity. His approach could serve as a model for future studies of underdeveloped countries." H. G. Aubrey
+ J Pol Econ 59:82 F '51 850w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:435 D '50 270w

MOSKOWITZ, SIDNEY, and RACKER, JOSEPH. Pulse techniques. 300p il $6.65; to schools $5 Prentice-Hall

621.38 Electronics 51-10859

"The term 'pulse techniques' designates systems of radio communication in which signals are broadcast in pulses or 'bursts' of radiated energy rather than in modulated continuous waves. Continuous waves are the basis of standard radio, but pulses, the basis of radar, are finding more and more uses in other systems of communication, such as television and the microwave radio relays in telegraph and telephone circuits. This short book is designed as an introduction to the field for readers possessing knowledge of basic communication engineering and standard radio. The main viewpoint is practical." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 76:1032 Je 15 '51 110w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:43 My '51

MOSSE, GEORGE LACHMANN. Struggle for sovereignty in England. 191p $2.50 Mich. state college press

320.157 Great Britain—Politics and government. Sovereignty 51-507

"Mr. Mosse's book traces the evolution of constitutional ideas from the reign of Elizabeth to the Petition of Right. Chapters dealing with 'the king as sovereign,' 'the sovereignty of parliament,' 'common law and sovereignty' follow a preliminary examination of 'the Tudor tradition' and the English reception of Bodin's idea of sovereignty. Unlike many historians of political theory, Mr. Mosse utilizes sermons, pamphlets, parliamentary speeches, and judicial opinions, as well as formal political treatises. His theme is the breakdown of the medieval concept of limited government and the emergence of the modern idea of sovereignty during the reign of James I." Am Hist R

"Perhaps Mr. Mosse's account is a little one-sided. . . In the discussion of the Elizabethan period, I think he might have considered Thomas Cartwright and the Presbyterians, whose two-kingdom theory definitely rejected the sort of sovereignty described in Sir Thomas Smith's De Republica Anglorum. But Mr. Mosse tells an important story, and he tells it well. It is the story of the emergence of the modern state. Implicit in this story is the gradual secularization of political thought." F. L. Baumer

+ — Am Hist R 56:868 Jl '51 500w

"A timely essay for the serious reader." R. E. Rabb

+ Pol Sci Q 66:312 Je '51 550w

Reviewed by R. G. Cowherd

Social Studies 42:325 N '51 450w

MOTLEY, WILLARD. We fished all night. 560p $3.75 Appleton

51-14180

Story of three young men in Chicago politics and labor circles, before and after the second World war.

Reviewed by Robert Cromie

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 25 '51 800w

"Caution to Public Libraries. It is not for the thin skinned."

Kirkus 19:586 O 1 '51 290w

"Most readers will feel that this particular group of characters would have come out about the same, war or no war. The book moves against a background of class hatred, and machine politics. It's a dim view of life, indeed, with the writing far ahead of the content. Recommended only where popular demand is met or where attention must be given to fiction of serious intent, competently written." R. E. Kingery

Library J 76:2006 D 1 '51 150w

Reviewed by Harvey Swados

Nation 173:572 D 29 '51 420w

Reviewed by J. S. Redding

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 N 25 '51 700w

"Willard Motley has a magic with words and, to the extent that words make the result, lays you under a spell. He has an ear for speech, and his dialogue, while often gross, is speech as people speak it. It would be pleasant, certainly, if I could now go the whole hog and say his book is good. I regret I cannot. To me it is bad, one of the most tormentingly bad books I have any memory of, for it could so easily have been better, might perhaps have been great." J. M. Cain

— + N Y Times p4 N 18 '51 650w

"Mr. Motley's heavy, wearisome irony, his rhapsodizing, and his frequent deviations into faraway lives and faraway places make one wish that he had cooled off long enough to allow his story, which could have been a strong one, to speak for itself."

— + New Yorker 27:165 N 24 '51 120w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 29 '51 800w

"A very long novel which one respects for its earnestness and conscientiousness but which nonetheless seems to fail through its inability to reach the mind or the heart. Every prophet in the wilderness must be inspired by the belief that there is a way out of bewilderment and wickedness; otherwise he could not go through the arduous process of setting himself up as leader. But Mr. Motley is unable in this book to light any spark of confidence." James Gray

Sat R of Lit 34:20 D 8 '51 460w

"If sincerity were enough to make a good novel, We Fished All Night might be a minor masterpiece. It has a few vivid moments: a comic meeting of ward heelers, a warm glimpse of a Polish family. But for the most part its political sermonizing stirs unhappy memories of the 'proletarian fiction' of the 1930s. In 560 closely printed pages, that is too much of a bad thing."

— + Time 58:120 N 26 '51 400w

MOULTON, HAROLD GLENN, and PALMER, FRANK. Dynamic economy; a dialogue in play form. 238p $2 Brookings

330.973 U.S.—Economic conditions

50-9400

"A dialogue in play form, written for the express purpose of setting forth in a simple and realistic way the factors and forces which have been responsible for America's extraordinary economic development. . . The dialogue offers a unique method of education. The scenes are staged as New Year's Eve discussions, once each decade beginning in 1850. Participants in the discussion represent the various economic groups in society. The topics for discussion are concerned with fundamental economic issues recurrent throughout America's history. The characters are seeking an answer to the age-old question, whether there can be progressive improvement in the living standards of the masses." Management R

"To incorporate history and analysis in some play-form could be a great contribution to the informing of the general public. Credit must be given to the Brookings Institution and Mr. Moulton for a step in the right direction. But it is not enough to break up the facts, theories, and prophecies into a series of speeches by different individuals. To educate, one must hold the attention and it is highly doubtful if the present work would manage to do this." W. L. Mezger

Christian Science Monitor p14 S 26 '50 310w

"Not only does the volume lack a coherent theme for an analytical scheme of interpretation, but the conventional emphasis on inventions seems to me quite misleading. It is misleading causally: inventions are described in the Patent office Gazette and offer a flimsy basis for the sustained rise of the United States relative to the world; and inventions are not chance events. It is also misleading quantitatively, for dramatic inventions have probably played a modest role in our economic growth." G. J. Stigler

— J Pol Econ 59:75 F '51 800w

"The theme of the play is non-partisan. It will hold equal interests for persons in all segments of society, whether it be business, labor, agriculture, government, or the professions. Many people who buy this little book of Platonic style will find it so interesting that they will read it through before laying it down." C. W. McKee

+ Management R 39:729 D '50 900w

Reviewed by Saul Colin

N Y Times p39 O 15 '50 220w

MOUNTEVANS, EDWARD RATCLIFFE GARTH RUSSELL EVANS, 1st baron. Man against the desolate Antarctic [Eng title: Desolate Antarctic]. 172p il $3 Funk, W.

919.9 Antarctic regions 51-10946

"Volume of sketches of Antarctic expeditions by an old sailor-explorer himself, the last man (living) to speak to Scott as the latter prepared for his dash to the South Pole in January, 1912. As second in command, the author almost perished in the blizzard which took the lives of the commander and his men. Lord Mountevans briefly surveys the history of South Pole exploration from the time of Captain James Cook in 1773 to Admiral Byrd's 'Operation High Jump' in

MOUNTEVANS, E. R. G. R. E.—Continued
1946-47." (San Francisco Chronicle) Bibliography. Index.

Manchester Guardian p4 Ap 18 '50 100w

"The book has good maps which is always a pleasant surprise, and good photographs, and some interesting personal reminiscences of Amundsen and other great polar figures of pre-war years, dating from the time when the author embarked on his long and distinguished career as Lieutenant Evans, second in command of Scott's last expedition." L. P. Kirwan

+ New Statesman & Nation 40:235 Ag 26 '50 120w

"Of course, Mountevans' book was obviously written in haste and to order, which probably explains its confusion. He has attempted to cover so many events in a limited space that nothing is adequately outlined. Yet he includes some interesting anecdotes, and he knows the Antarctic as one who has lived there and traveled over many miles of it on foot." Russell Owen

N Y Times p16 Jl 29 '51 220w

San Francisco Chronicle p26 S 30 '51 200w

"Here is a distinguished man of action, an old master of the Antarctic, who knows all about its desolation and yet finds, in his memories of what he did there and in his generous appreciation of the achievements of others, a strong simple thread of glory, the glory of adventure. He breezily admits that he accepted an invitation to write yet another small history of Antarctic discovery without much leisure to compass it, and that its completion was a race against time. The Desolate Antarctic is therefore one of his minor adventures. It is jerkily and hastily written. . . But in covering old ground and re-telling old stories for popular consumption it makes all the difference if the author's own feet have been over some of the ground, and if some of the heroes of the old tales were his friends. The Desolate Antarctic has this authority."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p559 S 8 '50 340w

MOUSSET, ALBERT. World of the Slavs [rev. by the author and tr. by Margaret Lavenu]. (London inst. of world affairs. Lib. of world affairs) 204p $3 Praeger

940.5 Panslavism 51-2405

"This work reviews the Slavophile movement from the nineteenth century, when Russia appears as the champion of the Slavs, until the end of World War II, when the liberation of Eastern Europe by the Red army enables Russia to establish Slav solidarity through the 'popular democracies.' The author's chief thesis is that Pan-Slavism was a myth until World War II." Current Hist

Am Pol Sci R 45:598 Je '51 30w

"This small publication is the best readable introduction to the whole history of the chimera of Pan-Slavism from its origins as a pre-World War I legend to its development as a powerful ideology during World War II. . . Within the framework of the historical genesis of the idea, Mousset pays particular attention to the evolution of domestic and foreign policies of the Slav states as Soviet satellites. Here he is rather weak in his treatment. . . Many facts are presented but are not related to this theme; many of them, furthermore, are meaningless because they are passed over too glibly, without their evolutionary background. Although the book has an excellent index, there is no bibliography. Obviously translated from the French, the work should have been more carefully proofread." J. S. Roucek

+ — Ann Am Acad 275:217 My '51 500w

Current Hist 20:229 Ap '51 170w

Foreign Affairs 29:501 Ap '51 30w

"Recommended for larger libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 76:777 My 1 '51 120w

"Mr. Mousset's book is clear, precise and analytical. Without solving any great problems or following any theoretical pattern of historical interpretation it helps the reader get rid of widely spread illusions and gives a truthful picture of the actual configuration of forces among the Slav nations." Marc Slonim

+ N Y Times p16 Mr 18 '51 360w

Times [London] Lit Sup p317 My 25 '51 2800w

MOWRER, ORVAL HOBART. Learning theory and personality dynamics; selected papers. 776p il $7.50 Ronald

154.4 Learning, Psychology of. Personality 50-11151

"This volume of 794 pages, 74 figures, 10 tables, 20-page bibliography, with footnotes, summaries, indexes is a contribution to contemporary development of a comprehensive science of human personality; it covers insight, anxiety, neurosis, fear, behavior, learning, culture, education, Poe's life, 'talking birds,' Freudian criticism, etc. Author intends book as reference work; textbook or text-supplement in graduate courses on learning theory, language, personality, or psychotherapy, and possible guide to students in neighboring sciences." (Library J) Bibliography. Indexes.

"Best value is for advanced students." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 76:181 F 1 '51 140w

School & Society 72:432 D 23 '50 60w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 74:202 S 29 '51 130w

"Although some of the chapters appear in print for the first time in this book, most of them are reprinted. In order to integrate his material, the author has furnished prefatory remarks at the beginning of each chapter, and has contrived ingenious bracketed inserts, footnotes, and cross references. The volume will be of interest to general psychologists, and of special interest to scientifically-minded clinical psychologists."

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:73 Mr '51 200w

MOZLEY, EDWARD NEWMAN. Theology of Albert Schweitzer, for Christian inquirers; with an epilogue by Albert Schweitzer. 117p $2 Macmillan

232 Schweitzer, Albert. Jesus Christ—Messiahship. Theology [51-1710]

"The main part of the book is a catena of passages from Schweitzer's N.T. studies, with connecting links supplied. . . In [the epilog by Schweitzer] he traces the influence upon the development of doctrine of the enforced abandonment of any hope of a speedy coming of the Kingdom." Hibbert J

Reviewed by R. C. Miller

Churchman 165:17 Je '51 150w

"There is something ingenuous about Colonel Mozley's assumption that scholars who differ from Schweitzer must be evading the evidence. The book is made important by the epilogue contributed by Schweitzer himself." E. L. Allen

+ Hibbert J 49:186 Ja '51 200w

Kirkus 18:701 D 1 '50 150w

Manchester Guardian p3 D 18 '50 600w

Reviewed by Richard Henchey

Springf'd Republican p6D Ap 8 '51 110w

MUELLER, JOHN HENRY. American symphony orchestra; a social history of musical taste. 437p il $6 Ind. univ. press

785 Orchestras. Music—History and criticism 51-13728

"This is a history of what has been termed the 'nomumental orchestra' in America. . . It traces the growth of the symphony orchestra to its roots in European traditions, recounts the crises which it has overcome, the musical repertoires with which it has regaled its audiences during the past century, the social setting in which it has had its being, and finally offers a discussion of the elusive problems of aesthetic taste in terms of which the historical trends can be understood and evaluated." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 48:119 D 1 '51

Bookmark 11:32 N '51 20w

Reviewed by Seymour Raven
Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 N 25 '51 500w

Kirkus 19:424 Ag 1 '51 110w

"There are many other interesting aspects of orchestras described, the invasion of women and unionization of the personnel, the changing program note, behavior of audiences (Americans rarely show active displeasure), the tendency of some conductors to lecture the audience, the disappearance of the Pop Concert, and the growth of the programs for children. Professor Mueller is interested in all of it and his book is delightful." Douglas Moore
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 D 9 '51 1200w

Reviewed by Moses Smith
N Y Times p4 D 9 '51 550w

Reviewed by Hans Rosenwald
Sat R of Lit 34:29 D 15 '51 600w

MUELLER, ROBERT KIRK. Effective management through probability controls; how to calculate managerial risks [pub] in assn. with Modern ind. magazine. 310p il $5 Funk

658.01 Business management. Statistics. Probabilities 50-11138

"The assistant manager of Monsanto Chemical Company's Plastic Division writes this book to prove to business executives, by describing typical cases in business experience, that statistical control utilizing the law of probability is a valid technique for management. It can be employed successfully by executives without technical training in mathematics or statistics, not in manufacturing alone, but all along the line, including research, sales and service departments, in large and small businesses, as a time and money saver." (Library J) Index.

"It would seem that the book tries in a single volume to accomplish objectives worthy of two. One volume could well have been devoted to a clear, even terse, statement of the nature and characteristics of probability controls and their consequent place in the management function. This book would have been valuable to management. The second volume could well have contained the wealth of varied examples of applications, with more technical detail and with less effort to sell their merits. Such a volume would appropriately be directed to and welcomed by technical workers in this growing field. Consciously and unconsciously, the author seems to have tried to combine these two ideas, with the result that he presents neither as effectively as could be wished." E. V. Lewis
+ — Chem & Eng N 29:4016 S 24 '51 270w

"A readable and valuable orientation for management." J. E. Cross
+ Library J 76:45 Ja 1 '51 100w

"Mr. Mueller has produced a volume which can be very rewarding to all executives receptive to a new technique for gaining higher efficiency levels in activities under their control and who will welcome a further aid in getting the right answers to today's difficult production problems." R. J. Hanwell
+ Management R 40:246 Ap '51 600w

"A lively, even entertaining, book." J. M. Juran
+ N Y Times p6 F 11 '51 100w

Springf'd Republican p5D Je 17 '51 160w

MULAC, MARGARET ELIZABETH, and HOLMES, MARIAN SUSAN. Party game book; il. by George E. Mathews. 309p $3 Harper

793 Entertaining. Games 51-4280

Contains suggestions and directions for games, stunts, and programs for parties of every size and age group. One chapter is devoted to menus, recipes and ways of serving party refreshments.

Booklist 48:69 O 15 '51

"A good combination of family games, games for children's parties, adult games, games for semi-formal affairs like banquets, and games for picnics, large and small."
+ Kirkus 19:205 Ap 1 '51 100w

Wis Lib Bul 47:211 S '51

MUMFORD, LEWIS. Conduct of life. 342p $5 Harcourt

901 Civilization—Philosophy. Life 51-12387

"[This is] the final volume of a series that includes Technics and Civilization (1934), The Culture of Cities (1938), and The Condition of Man (1944). . . Skeptical of individual philosophies, Mumford proposes an eclectic system (to which he gives no name) to counteract the current social breakdown. The new philosophy is intensely human. Its starting point is human life; its goal the restoration of the complete human personality." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"The average reader will find passages that vaguely move him because of their eloquent rhythms, even though they convey no thought he can tangibly grasp and intelligently articulate. Every reader will find paragraphs that convey no understanding; many will find some that puzzle them; and no one will attain a clear comprehension of just what the author is trying to say." F. H. Hankins
Am Soc R 16:881 D '51 1200w

Booklist 48:22; 29 S 15 '51

Bookmark 11:32 N '51 20w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 68:1253 O 31 '51 1550w

"With 'The Conduct of Life' the last in his series of four books on the civilization of our time written over a period of two decades, Mr. Lewis Mumford takes top rank among living philosophers." Neil Martin
+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 O 11 '51 1300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p25 N '51

+ Kirkus 19:461 Ag 15 '51 360w

"Highly recommended." A. D. Osborn
+ Library J 76:1418 S 15 '51 110w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley
New Repub 125:17 N 19 '51 1800w

"Mr. Mumford hopes to change the course of history by a whole series of individual, but very resolute, actions. At least one reader who respects Mr. Mumford's wide learning and admires his moral robustness can find little in past history to warrant the hope that the course of history can be changed as simply as he supposes, or by actions as unconcerted as he suggests." Reinhold Niebuhr
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 N 11 '51 1450w

Reviewed by Peter Blake
N Y Times p3 S 23 '51 1050w

"From the first, his work has been animated by an awareness of crisis and by the certainty of what must be done, and done without delay, if mankind is to live properly, or at all. The passing years, expectably, have made his sense of crisis ever more urgent. Now, in 'The Conduct of Life,' he sums up and makes fully explicit his recommendations for that 'transformation of the self and of all organizations' which can save us from chaos or extinction. . . It is Mr. Mumford's impulse to synthetic perfection that makes his book intellectually unsatisfying. And what is perhaps worse, this impulse is politically confusing. . . Morality and politics do indeed have their vital connection with each other, but they are not the same thing, nor will they be until that day of perfection when we will have no need of either of them." Lionel Trilling
+ — New Yorker 27:157 N 24 '51 2200w

MUMFORD, LEWIS—Continued

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 17 '51 700w

"Lewis Mumford, I feel, is another Moses who leads to and sees the promised land, and cannot reach it. But as a diagnosis and intelligent pointing of the way, his book has great value. And passion makes it eloquent good reading." Waldo Frank
+ Sat R of Lit 34:11 S 22 '51 1050w
School & Society 74:208 S 29 '51 30w

"That [the] image of the balanced man in a balanced society is far-reaching, idealistic, and even visionary, no one can deny. This is not to say, however, that it is far-fetched, impracticable, and unrealistic. That many will dismiss the argument on these grounds is inevitable. But it may well be that the purest idealism in this instance will turn out to be the soundest realism. Certainly Mumford's conclusions, in this as in the earlier books, are arrived at on the basis of close reasoning, careful adherence to historical data, and painstaking analysis and appraisal of divergent schools of thought." H. W. Hintz
Survey 87:489 N '51 1250w
Time 58:104 O 1 '51 500w
Wis Lib Bul 47:209 S '51

MUMFORD, LEWIS, and others. The arts in renewal. See Arts in renewal.

MUNSON, AMELIA H. An ample field; books and young people. 122p $3 A.L.A.

028.5 Libraries, Young people's. Books and reading 50-10983

"Primarily for beginners in public library work with young people. . . Gives practical advice on resources and techniques that will interest all concerned with youth and reading. Lists of books and aids at chapter ends, index." Bookmark

Booklist 47:150 D 15 '50

"Richly stimulating handbook."
+ Bookmark 10:107 F '51 40w

"Love of reading is implicit in what I consider the best book yet published on the reading of adolescent boys and girls. That one hears the author speaking as one turns the pages is a tribute to her absorption of memorable words in the English language." A. C. Moore
+ Horn Bk 27:92 Mr '51 240w

"The first informal guide to book selection for young people in public libraries is not only a fine introduction for beginners in that field but good reading for parents, teachers, and others working with young people in any capacity. It is based on Miss Munson's own experience with young readers, not on academic theory." S. M. A.
+ Horn Bk 27:115 Mr '51 200w

"The author really knows and likes young people and their books! To this reviewer, and perhaps to teachers in general, the most valuable section is that on 'Resources' in which books of adventure, romance, how-to-do-it, and others are enthusiastically and specifically discussed along with interests of young people and standards for choosing such books. These chapters alone make it almost as important on the subject of books for older boys and girls as Arbuthnot's Children and Books is on books for younger ages." M. B. Snow
+ Library J 76:784 My 1 '51 140w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Mr 4 '51 270w

"An informal guide to young people's books and reading, this should encourage and stimulate every adult who knows teen agers. It's also a good book for the teen agers themselves." M. C. Scoggin
+ N Y Times p22 My 6 '51 310w
Wis Lib Bul 47:33 Ja '51

MURDOCK, MYRTLE M. (CHENEY). Constantino Brumidi, Michelangelo of the United States capitol. 111p il col il $10 Monumental press, 32d st & Elm av, Baltimore 11

B or 92 Brumidi, Constantino 51-72

Brumidi was the Italian artist who became an American citizen in middle age, and who spent the years 1855-1880 painting the frescos which decorate the United States capitol. The book consists of letters, official records, and newspaper articles, as well as reproductions of his paintings.

Booklist 47:204 F 1 '51

"Excellent color reproductions of allegorical and historical paintings and portraits which Constantino Brumidi executed on the interior walls and ceilings of the capitol at Washington have been printed on fine stock and constitute the most attractive feature of this book." Edward Barry
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ja 14 '51 150w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut
Library J 76:411 Mr 1 '51 120w

"The author admits in the preface that she is neither an artist nor an art critic. This is only too obvious. The book needs rewriting, re-editing and a good deal more understatement. It is a long, syrupy obituary, enlivened by fascinating comments on esthetics by ill-educated Congressmen. . . This book offers a cluttered but affecting picture of an artist at work, undisturbed by the adulations of Congressmen or the ill-natured abuse of his fellow-artists." George Biddle
N Y Times p21 Ap 1 '51 420w

MURIE, OLAUS JOHN. Elk of North America. 376p il map $6.50 Stackpole co; Wildlife management inst.

599.73574 Elk

"This book is an attempt to assemble the principal facts in the distribution and life of the elk of North America and to offer suggestions, based on the studies made, for future elk management. Chief reliance has been placed on original field studies; but supplemental information has been derived from perusal of the voluminous literature on the subject." (Introd) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 47:377 Jl 1 '51

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 76:1128 Jl '51 40w
U S Quarterly Bk R 7:303 S '51 160w

MURPHY, MRS FRANCES SALOMON. Nickel for Alice; il. by Mabel Jones Woodbury. 184p $2.50 Crowell

51-9836

Alice was an orphan, and a ward of the state. Her main difficulties were a desire to be wanted, and a tendency to run away. The understanding social worker, who really understood Alice, finally found the home she had needed so long, with a farmer and his wife who had wanted to adopt a boy!

Booklist 47:277 Ap 1 '51
Bookmark 10:185 My '51

Reviewed by J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews
Horn Bk 27:183 My '51 90w

"Intelligent perspective on modern State homes and a sensitive appreciation of happy family relationships."
+ Kirkus 19:25 Ja 15 '51 150w

"Recommended." Virginia Russell
+ Library J 76:1140 Jl '51 70w

"The case work methods used in finding a home for Alice are according to modern practices very questionable, and for this reason the book is not recommended." N. L. Rathbun
— Library J 76:1140 Jl '51 70w

"This author used to be a social worker who placed children and supervised them in foster homes. She really knows! Children will read with some surprise the very realistic opening discussion of grown-up officials about Alice who always runs away wherever she is 'placed,' and always runs back to Mrs. Baker who doesn't want her. It is a key to the rest of the book, which is clear-cut and humorous, and also very honest about the sort of things lucky little girls say to unlucky ones." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ap 15 '51 240w

"The author's own experiences in placing and supervising children in foster homes provide an authentic background to an unsentimental, true-to-life story with a direct and vital appeal." C. E. Van Norman
+ N Y Times p26 My 20 '51 150w

"Here is an exceptionally good tale."
+ Sat R of Lit 34:42 My 12 '51 180w

Wis Lib Bul 47:125 My '51

MURPHY, GLENN. Similitude in engineering. 302p il $7 Ronald

620.1 Mechanical models 50-11152

"Many advances in ship design and airplane design have sprung from tests made on small models. The use of models to predict the properties and performance of larger structures, even such structures as dams and pipe lines, is a technique of growing importance in many branches of engineering. This book is concerned with the use of models for such tests and the interpretation of results which are obtained." (Library J) Indexes.

"It is addressed to upperclass students in engineering college and is generously equipped with problems to be solved. It holds potential interest also for graduate engineers whose formal education did not include a course in the subject." R. R. Hawkins
Library J 76:334 F 15 '51 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:11 Ja '51

MURPHY, GRACE E. (BARSTOW) (MRS ROBERT CUSHMAN MURPHY). There's always adventure; the story of a naturalist's wife. 299p il $4 Harper

B or 92 Voyages and travels. Zoologists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Murphy, Robert Cushman 51-10034

Biography of a naturalist's wife which follows Logbook for Grace, by the naturalist himself (Book Review Digest 1947). The journeys they took in South America, Europe, and the subantarctic, were sometimes complicated by their three children, but all their travels brought them adventure, and the narrative about them is related with humor.

Booklist 47:293 Ap 15 '51

Bookmark 10:181 My '51 50w

Reviewed by T. M. Longstreth
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 5 '51 700w

"There is a tenderness of relationships, an exuberance of living, and depth of understanding that takes this far beyond just a travel book—it is rather a very special family portrait."
+ Kirkus 19:87 F 1 '51 280w

"Highly recommended." H. S. Taylor
+ Library J 76:512 Mr 15 '51 130w

"Mrs. Murphy's book is less written than spilled out. She throws all sorts of things into her narrative and many different kinds of readers will find chapters and paragraphs that stick to the ribs and the heart." Ernestine Evans
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ap 1 '51 950w

New Yorker 27:119 Ap 28 '51 130w

"The Murphy family continually planned and juggled their clan economy in order to make trips together. As a result, her book is not only a lush record of adventure; but it is a journal rich in reflective wisdom bearing upon marriage to a man utterly lost in his scientific domain yet as devoted as any man can be to his wife and children." C. E. M.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Je 10 '51 270w

Wis Lib Bul 47:119 My '51

MURPHY, HOWARD ANSLEY, and STRINGHAM, EDWIN JOHN. Creative harmony and musicianship; an introduction to the structure of music. 618p $6.65; to schools $5 Prentice-Hall

781.3 Harmony. Music—Theory 51-2530

"This is experimental in concept and method. The authors have brought out the general principles of the structure of music through examples of composition in the classical and romantic periods and through suggested problems and projects." School & Society

"Two aspects of this book that mildly disturb are the haphazard music appreciation tidbits and a certain looseness of treatment... But all such details may be forgotten in the bigger achievements of this book. Theory teachers, will look a long time before finding another text as profusely illustrated, as carefully planned, as comprehensive and as assured of success in the classroom." W. S. Newman
+ — Music Lib Assn Notes 8:701 S '51 900w

School & Society 73:335 My 26 '51 30w

MURRAY, GILBERT. Stoic, Christian, and humanist. 189p $2 Beacon press

204 Philosophy and religion 51-4096

Four essays on religious and philosophical subjects, which appeared at different times from 1915 to 1939. Contents: Pagan religion and philosophy at the time of Christ; The stoic philosophy; The conception of another life; What is permanent in positivism. No index.

"Dr. Murray is an internationally famous Hellenistic scholar... His mastery of Greek and Roman literature enables him to interpret the well-known themes of Plato, Aristotle, and the Stoics, with such luminous phrases as to make good reading even for the initiated Greek scholar. The general reader will also find these pages fascinating as a report of Murray's own views shining through the verbiage of ancient writers." L. W. Norris
+ Ann Am Acad 275:209 My '51 700w

"Professor Gilbert Murray is one of the most honored men of our times. He is best known for his translations of Euripides and his interpretation of the ancient classical culture. We have felt even more indebted to him for his courageous and tireless support of the many humanitarian causes of our day to which men of good will are pledged. He was England's most zealous advocate of the League of Nations during its hopeful years. The depth of his feelings, the candor of his mind, the catholicity of his sympathies are a precious possession which we all value... He admits that what he has here written may alienate or pain some of his friends with whom he has worked so happily in the service of great causes. This may well be so. But those who have known him in past years, through his writings, will have no cause for surprise in these pages." W. L. Sperry
Crozer Q 28:70 Ja '51 1000w

MURRAY, MARY F. Skygirl; a career handbook for the airline stewardess; introd. by Ellen E. Church. 256p il $3 Duell

387.7 Air lines—Stewardesses 51-11378

Information on the training of air stewardesses. Also contains information about all the major airlines. Glossary. No index.

Booklist 48:147 D 15 '51

Bookmark 11:61 D '51

Reviewed by Marge Lyon
Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 N 25 '51 150w

+ Kirkus 19:547 S 15 '51 160w

"A fine book for all girls who would like to be air stewardesses, and for all vocational counselors. It is all inclusive, and answers every possible question that any one might have in connection with the job. . . Highly recommended for all vocational and teen age collections." M. D. Read
+ Library J 76:1719 O 15 '51 80w

MURRAY, M. F.—Continued

"The best career book for girls to appear for a long time." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ja 13 '52 90w

MURRAY, MAX. Good luck to the corpse. 252p $2.50 Farrar, Straus

51-13729

Detective story.

Bookmark 11:61 D '51

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 N 4 '51 140w

"Better as a light novel with touches of murder and blackmail than a mystery tale."

Kirkus 19:501 S 1 '51 150w

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 N 11 '51 90w

"Would be a highly attractive book in any setting, for its articulate and amusing dialogue, its smooth, well-motivated characterization, its plausible romance." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p32 N 4 '51 40w

"Mr. Murray's book has a certain amount of atmosphere and charm, but the plot is not to be taken seriously."

New Yorker 27:144 O 27 '51 90w

"The writing's pleasant and the people are fairly real, with the possible exception of the criminal. B minus." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 18 '51 100w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff

Sat R of Lit 34:76 N 17 '51 30w

MURRAY, MAX. Right honorable corpse. 252p $2.50 Farrar, Straus

51-9933

Detective story.

Booklist 47:313 My 1 '51

Bookmark 10:185 My '51

"Remarkably fascinating characterization of clever young secret agent in smoothly plotted, brightly written episode in vivid Australian setting." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 My 6 '51 70w

Kirkus 19:37 Ja 15 '51 70w

"Max Murray has a talent for giving melodrama an amiable twist with lively and amusing dialogue. . . Conventional drama but with an enjoyable sophistication."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Ap 29 '51 110w

"Well constructed and motivated, warmly and wittily written, this best of Murray's books to date is recommended to all who are wearying of the standardized product." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p18 My 27 '51 140w

"It may be that Mr. Murray points out the culprit too early and too unmistakably, but altogether this is a lively and ingratiating book."

+ New Yorker 27:124 Ap 7 '51 160w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ap 8 '51 70w

"Dont miss."

+ Sat R of Lit 34:32 Je 30 '51 50w

MURRAY, NORA (KORZHENKO). I spied for Stalin; with a foreword by Sir Noel Mason-Macfarlane. 256p $3 Funk, W.

B or 92 Russia—Social conditions 51-3453

The author is a Russian who married an Englishman. Her father had an important role in the OGPU, and later in the NKVD, but when Molotov took over Mrs Murray's father was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment and she herself was reduced almost to starvation. She tells the story of her experiences as a person permitted to speak to foreigners, so she could spy on them, and her eventual escape to England.

"As thrilling reading as any whodunit." Frances Witherspoon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Je 10 '51 370w

"A striking contribution to the understanding of the dreadful phenomenon of our time: the Communist police state." D. A. Schmidt

+ N Y Times p3 My 6 '51 240w

"She stays away from generalizations and does not moralize, analyze, or interpret. That is all to the good. Here is a straight narrative devoid of flashbacks and selfconscious interpolations; it is a factual account that contains the elements of good fiction writing. The horrors and terrors of Stalinist society are by now widely known and understood. But a book such as this, written by a young woman who matured after the Bolshevik Revolution, helps sharpen our insight into the less-known crevices of Soviet life." Martin Ebon

+ Sat R of Lit 34:27 Je 23 '51 480w

"The style of the narrative is direct, candid, unpretentious. Some of Mrs. Murray's stories reflect all that is strange and incomprehensible to the western mind in 'Soviet reality,' but most have a ring of absolute truth."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p504 Ag 11 '50 550w

MUSGRAVE, FLORENCE. Mary Lizzie; il. by Robert Candy. 187p $2.25 Houghton

50-9375

Story of Mary Lizzie Williams, a little Welsh girl, who came to America with her parents, where they settled in an Ohio industrial town. Mary Lizzie had her troubles adjusting to her new home, but in time she was helping other children new to America. Grades four to six.

Booklist 47:81 O 15 '50

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 F 25 '51 180w

"An endearing story of the acclimation of a new American from Wales."

+ Kirkus 18:513 S 1 '50 80w

"Recommended for ages 8-12." Virginia Russell

+ Library J 75:2082 D 1 '50 80w

"Children will probably like this warm, sentimental, frankly American story, and many a youngster will envy Mary Lizzie for her Dada, a gay and wise companion." A. N. Fedder

+ N Y Times p22 F 11 '51 180w

Wis Lib Bul 47:30 Ja '51

MUSIC index, 1949; annual cumulation [Florence Kretzschmar, editor]. (V 1) 308p $25 Information service, inc, 10 W. Warren, Detroit 1

780.5 Music—Periodicals—Indexes

"The Music Index was begun in January 1949 to fill the need recognized by librarians, musicians and music educators for a key to the vast amount of material published in the current music literature of this as well as foreign countries. . . The periodicals indexed represent many 'different aspects of the music fields . . . ranging from musicology to the retailing of music'—Preface. Only three of the eighty periodicals indexed in the 1949 Annual Cumulation duplicate those indexed in the Readers' Guide to Periodical Literature. In addition to the general music periodicals there are listed such specialized ones as Choir Guide, Instrumentalist, The Piano Technician, Tuners' Journal, and Orgue. . . The dictionary arrangement has been adopted with subjects and composers in one alphabetical file. There is no separate entry for authors of articles, but the author's name is given in the subject entry." Subcription Bks Bul

"On the whole, The Music Index meets very well the specifications drawn up by its editor. Some inconsistencies, however, no doubt attributable to the problems involved in launching such a publication, have become evident through daily use of the Index during the past year. . . The Music Index is without question a valuable first-aid for libraries; it can easily become invaluable by meeting fully the level of performance outlined by its editor." Irene Millen

+ — Music Lib Assn Notes 7:570 S '50 1100w

"Made with the guidance of many librarians and musicians, the choice of subject headings gives evidence of a consistent effort to provide a practical index which will serve a number of different types of users. Very generous attention is given to people and subjects of current interest; subheadings and 'see' and 'see also' cross references are numerous; and use of the popular or professional form of personal name for subject headings appears to be the policy. . . Both monthly issues and cumulated volumes of The Music Index are recommended for public, college, university, and all other libraries in which there is a heavy demand for music material."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 22:3 Ja '51 2450w

MUZZEY, DAVID SAVILLE. Ethics as a religion. 273p $2.75 Simon & Schuster

170 Ethical culture movement. Ethics

51-10298

A statement of the position of the ethical culturist as opposed to the adherent of traditional religion. "Professor Muzzey (now in his 81st year), as leader emeritus of the Ethical Society, has put together a valedictory which poses the issues neatly and succinctly." (Churchman)

Reviewed by Ephraim Fischoff

Ann Am Acad 278:228 N '51 500w

Booklist 47:302 My 1 '51

"This is an important book for orthodox Christians, particularly for preachers and teachers. It represents the best and most lucid statement of humanistic idealism as a substitute for supernaturalistic theology to appear in recent times. . . It ought to be read, marked, learned and inwardly digested in every mullion-windowed study in the land." Joseph Fletcher

+ Churchman 165:16 Je '51 200w

J Philos 48:815 D 20 '51 250w

"Religionists who are broad-minded enough to take criticism and profit by it might well read this book. It is well written, and its arguments clearly and forcibly presented."

+ Kirkus 19:56 F 1 '51 270w

"One often feels that Mr. Muzzey's offering is more properly addressed to religious and social conditions at the turn of the century than to those of 1950. The young people mentioned in its pages are still reading Henty and the Elsie books. Its view of human nature is strickly pre-Freudian. Its social idealism has apparently never felt the anguish of the Communist débâcle. 'The growing spirit of humanity,' we read in one place, 'forbids men any longer to torture and kill their fellows.' What growing spirit? Whose humanity?" H. Q. Shafer

N Y Times p4 S 2 '51 450w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 20 '51 70w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:252 S '51 230w

MYERS, CHARLES ANDREW. Industrial relations in Sweden; some comparisons with American experience. 112p $2; pa $1.65 Mass. inst. of technology

331.1 Industrial relations 51-3463

"An informative study of developments, attitudes and practices in the field of human relations in industry. Based on only a two month's visit to Sweden in the fall of 1950 but the author is obviously so well acquainted with the subject that he was able to gather some informative data and draw some interesting conclusions." Library J

Reviewed by J. J. Robbins

Ann Am Acad 278:217 N '51 400w

"This book will interest union and management executives who are looking for new techniques, or for confirmation of their own, in the light of the experience of others. Recommended for general collections." D. K. Oko

+ Library J 76:1570 O 1 '51 100w

"The reader will be disappointed if he is looking for a panacea to solve American labor troubles. . . However, the summary conclusion provides much food for thought." R. R. Manley

Management R 40:514 Ag '51 700w

MYERS, HENRY. Utmost island. 216p $3 Crown

51-6679

"A novel of Lief Ericson and of Iceland around the year 975. The clash of mythology, the ancient Norse gods with the new Christian religion brought by Theobrand the priest, from Norway, throws off many sparks and gives impetus to the expedition to 'Vinland' across the Western sea." Library J

"The story compresses a great deal of narrative in short compass, and it does so in a style that is like patting you on the head and saying lie back while mother reads aloud." Edward Weeks

Atlantic 188:86 N '51 240w

Booklist 47:354; 48:126 Je 15 '51; D 1 '51

Bookmark 11:84 Ja '52 20w

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst

Chicago Sunday Tribune p19 O 21 '51 340w

"A thoroughly absorbing tale for hammock Vikings, and the battle between Christianity and the tough muscled gods, with Odin out in front by several lengths, is a heady reconstruction."

+ Kirkus 19:250 My 15 '51 170w

"An unusual book which calls for strong Viking interest and sympathy on the part of the reader." H. A. Wooster

Library J 76:1333 S 1 '51 60w

"Aside from the trace of philosophic speciousness in Mr. Myers' book, 'The Utmost Island' gives us an account both moving and innately dignified of that tribe of sailing farmers, masters of the sea yet landlubbers at heart, from whom many of us here in America are directly or indirectly descended." Virgilia Peterson

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 O 14 '51 600w

"Presented against a rich tapestry of folklore, classical mythology, and history, the people of 'The Utmost Island' are as vivid as the figures in a fairy tale. Imagine 'The Golden Bough' with plot and one has the approximate effect. As a novel, the chief criticism must be that it reads like a compendium of interesting tales held loosely together by the central romance and adventure. However, most readers—lost in dreams of Viking ships, men, maidens—will not mind at all." James Kelly

+ N Y Times p4 O 7 '51 650w

"One of those sincere, sonorous, half-whimsical retellings of an old saga—Icelandic, in this case—in which the writer's desire to mirror his own personality or point of view while trying to imagine how the ancients must have told it makes for a lot of tangled emotions and very long sentences."

New Yorker 27:149 O 20 '51 170w

"'The Utmost Island' is not a long book, yet it is hard to celebrate its rarities briefly. It must be read, for it bristles with delights." Edmund Fuller

+ Sat R of Lit 34:21 O 20 '51 700w

Time 58:128 N 5 '51 130w

MYERS, VIRGINIA. This land I hold. 382p $3 Bobbs

50-10146

A historical novel about California at the time when the Americans were beginning to take over. The heroine is Magdalena Estrada, educated in a Mexican convent, who was horrified at the conditions she found when she returned home. She turned down the man she loved to marry wealth, in order to establish herself and her position, but eventually she found her way back to her first love.

MYERS, VIRGINIA—Continued

"As a picture of the times, 'This Land I Hold' is rich in color and detail, but it is over-long."
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 F 4 '51 140w

"The story has been designed to please the average reader, but Magdalena is by no means an attractive heroine." John Cournos
N Y Times p13 D 31 '50 150w

"Miss Myers's unpretentious narrative is the more effective because she does not overestimate her powers. It is a book that will have real interest for Southern Californians." M. S. Douglas
+ Sat R of Lit 33:19 N 25 '50 230w

MYKLEBUST, HELMER R. Your deaf child; a guide for parents. 132p 17il $2.50 Thomas, C.C.

362.4 Children, Abnormal and backward. Deaf 50-12819

"An entirely nontechnical guide to help parents in recognizing deafness or hearing difficulties in their children and in developing the proper attitudes and treatment to effect their proper social adjustment." Booklist

Booklist 47:232 Mr 1 '51
Time 56:77 D 11 '50 750w
Wis Lib Bul 47:84 Ap '51

MYRER, ANTON OLMSTEAD. Evil under the sun. 373p $3.50 Random house
51-13135

A story of a colony of artists and writers and no-goods in a Cape Cod summer resort, whose love affairs, quarrels, and perversions are viewed with troubled eyes and heart by Paul Kittering, a wounded war veteran who is trying to do good in the world.

Reviewed by Ruth Chapin
Christian Science Monitor p13 Ja 3 '52 500w

"Anton Myrer, the author of this fine first novel, stands in one serious danger: of letting his ear and his heart rush him past the opportunity to write a really first-class novel. He observes it brilliantly, recalls it, but settles for an emotional response that is thought out only so far as emotion carries along his intelligence." William Pfaff
+ Commonweal 55:235 D 7 '51 1350w
Kirkus 19:455 Ag 15 '51 90w

"Sometimes brilliant, but more frequently addled. Small libraries can live without it." E. F. Walbridge
— + Library J 76:1334 S 1 '51 70w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley
New Repub 125:20 N 26 '51 600w

Reviewed by James Hilton
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 O 21 '51 800w
N Y Times p17 D 16 '51 120w

"Though I'd hesitate to say that Mr. Myrer bit off more than he could chew—because in the end he does chew it—the novel occasionally falters, simply because of the large task he set himself. Yet such lapses are always minor. To repeat, Mr. Myrer has written an extraordinarily interesting first novel, and in so doing has tabbed himself a man to watch." J. H. Jackson
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 18 '51 850w

"Somewhere along in the book a great teacher of painting says to one of his pupils: 'Mr. Jaures, the parts . . . yes, this is good . . . but it is not an entity.' This is how I feel about Mr. Myrer's book. Its parts are very good, its writing is fine, its people are alive with passion and agony. All this, and therefore I ask too for entity, for the unifying dramatic structure which will make everything move toward fulfillment. The stage is set, and the characters are primed, for a greater drama than any that appears in the story. It is only by this lack that the book falls short of splendor." N. L. Rothman
+ — Sat R of Lit 34:15 N 10 '51 500w

N

NABOKOV, NICOLAS. Old friends and new music. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 294p $3.50 Little

B or 92 Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 51-176

"The composer-author, who is now in this country, reminisces about his fortunate Russian childhood, his experiences with music and leading figures in the world of art." (Bookmark) Index.

"Nabokov's material is at bottom on the slender side; what sustains Old Friends and New Music so engagingly is the author's civilized and attractive personality. Warmly interested in people and deeply devoted to music, he is also a keen-eyed observer with a lively sense of humor, and a critic who voices his dislikes con brio." C. J. Rolo
+ Atlantic 187:85 Mr '51 420w
Booklist 47:235 Mr 1 '51
Bookmark 10:107 F '51 40w

"Frankly, this book demands reading, not reading about. It so abounds in wit, felicitous and often poetic description, in musical observation more astute than profound, in shrewd and biting characterization that one could quote ad infinitum." K. G. Roy
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 F 8 '51 750w

"The people and places of his childhood . . . are described with brilliance, and often with a delightful, heart-warming humor. Only a man with a sense of the tragic can have such humor." Karl Stern
+ Commonweal 53:476 F 16 '51 750w
Kirkus 18:749 D 15 '50 90w

Reviewed by C. K. Miller
Library J 76:707 Ap 15 '51 150w
Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 21 '51 300w

"An enchanting and diverting book, a volume full of animation and genuinely rich in wisdom." J. S. Harrison
+ Music Lib Assn Notes 8:347 Mr '51 750w

"The accounts of personal experiences with Diaghilev, Prokofiev, Stravinsky, Balanchine, Koussevitzky, also are as interesting and entertaining as they were [when first published in the Atlantic monthly] the products of a highly observant and effective raconteur. This time however I have been aware of the raconteur straining for color and humor in language and metaphor; and I have detected inaccurate details and formulations at certain points which have created uncertainty whether the stories are reliable at other points." B. H. Haggin
Nation 173:431 N 17 '51 750w

"A gracious and modest book. It is almost too modest, for in leaning over backward to keep his profile from obscuring the reader's view of the celebrated figures he evokes, Nabokov is overly reticent about himself. But he can always write another book about his own music and his own musical convictions." Cecil Smith
+ New Repub 124:21 Ap 2 '51 400w

Reviewed by Anthony Curtis
New Statesman & Nation 42:262 S 8 '51 500w

"Only occasionally does Nabokov show a cavalier disregard for history. . . Such minor blemishes aside, here is a civilized, opinionated, smoothly finished omnibus of serious and comic episodes, memories, and opinions from the first forty-eight years of a vital and talented man.

No one interested in twentieth-century musical life and few interested in the more ludicrous aspects of our somber world will find it anything but continuous pleasure." Herbert Weinstock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ja 28 '51 1150w

"Everyone who is friendly disposed toward contemporary art but dissatisfied with its products and every young person considering an artistic career should read Mr. Nabokov's book. Upon finishing it, the former, instead of grumbling because music, literature, and painting today are not better than they are, will, I think, be left wondering that any exists at all." W. H. Auden

+ N Y Times p3 F 4 '51 1250w

New Yorker 27:130 Mr 17 '51 280w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 F 18 '51 550w

"Altogether a delightful book, though the index is somewhat carelessly made. . . To read 'Old Friends and New Music' is like having an invigorating conversation with a friend over an aperitif." C. S. Smith

+ Sat R of Lit 34:22 F 24 '51 650w

Reviewed by Martin Cooper

Spec 187:338 S 14 '51 600w

"Undoubtedly this musical autobiography will have a wide appeal to those primarily interested in the development of modern music and classical ballet. More broadly interesting, however, is Nicolas Nabokov's own story and his telling of it, and it's these aspects that make this one of the notable autobiographies of the season." Arthur Todd

+ Theatre Arts 35:10 My '51 330w

"In some ways this is an oddly impersonal record; Mr. Nabokov hardly writes about himself. But he does write a lively, literate prose, and the matter is always richly interesting."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p686 N 2 '51 440w

"Mr. Nabokov's memoirs make absorbing reading not merely for the information they convey, nor for their critical evaluations and witty comments, penetrating as these are, but especially for the skillful plays upon contrasts."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:129 Je '51 250w

Wis Lib Bul 47:87 Ap '51

NABOKOV, VLADIMIR VLADIMIROVICH. Conclusive evidence; a memoir [Eng title: Speak, memory]. 240p $3 Harper

B or 92 Russia—Social life and customs. Authors — Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 51-9454

A group of autobiographical sketches which recreate the life of Imperial Russia. The book "has no unity of plot or narration; it presents episodes, characters and scenery in a succession of kaleidoscopic flashes, and the unity it does achieve is that of a poetic whole." (N Y Times)

Bookmark 10:132 Mr '51 50w

Reviewed by Milton Crane

Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Mr 11 '51 470w

Kirkus 18:721 D 1 '50 100w

"An unusually interesting volume of reminiscences." G. L. Arnold

+ Manchester Guardian p4 D 4 '51 400w

Nation 172:572 Je 16 '51 110w

Reviewed by Margaret Lane

New Statesman & Nation 42:634 D 1 '51 550w

"This short volume of precise and imaged prose immediately calls to mind the greatest memorialists and among them particularly Rousseau, Chateaubriand and Proust." Gouverneur Paulding

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 F 25 '51 950w

"Scintillating book of autobiographical sketches. . . One finds here amazing glimpses into the life of a world that has vanished forever. Certain character sketches, such as those of the author's uncle, his tutors and the old French mademoiselle, his governess, are not only highly entertaining but witty, pathetic and striking. Entertaining, too, are various descriptions of Russian customs, of landscapes, and of family scenes. Yet the anecdotal and narrative qualities of 'Conclusive Evidence' are marginal, whereas its artistry and craftsmanship are basic." Marc Slonim

+ N Y Times p7 F 18 '51 800w

"Occasionally it happens that a writer trained in one language becomes a master in another. Joseph Conrad is the pre-eminent example. Now, on the basis of 'Conclusive Evidence' and other books, Vladimir Nabokov joins that company. Certainly this delightful memoir is one of the most accomplished stylistic achievements of any emigre writer; in fact it would be difficult to think of two or three writers to whom English is native who could match it in any degree." George Snell

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Mr 18 '51 700w

"Written in exquisite prose, the book is a delight to read. Indeed, not since Joseph Conrad has a writer of Slav origin shown such a brilliant mastery of the subtleties and beauties of the English language." Maurice Hindus

+ Sat R of Lit 34:29 Ap 14 '51 450w

Reviewed by Maurice Cranston

+ Spec 187:859 D 21 '51 900w

NACHTRIEB, NORMAN HARRY. Principles and practice of spectrochemical analysis. 324p il $4.50 McGraw

544.6 Spectrum analysis 50-9462

"This book, which deals with emission spectroscopy in the ultraviolet and visual regions, should be particularly useful to graduate chemists who are just beginning to use industrial techniques. General principles and types of instruments are covered in the first part. In the second part, specific applications to analytical problems in chemistry are discussed. In both parts the exposition is compact, practical and replete with the information needed by working chemists." (Library J) Index.

"The author's logical development and presentation of his subject makes this book outstanding as a textbook for students and new workers in the field, as well as a ready reference book for experienced spectroscopists who will find many valuable ideas throughout its pages." E. K. Jaycox

+ Chem Eng 58:270 Ja '51 650w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 75:1831 O 15 '50 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 35:84 N '50

"The academic level of the book is that of third-year undergraduate work for students majoring in physics, chemistry, or engineering. Some defects are evident; notably, several weak or partly correct statements resulting from the author's lack of familiarity with fields outside his own specialities."

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:507 D '50 200w

NADEL, SIEGFRIED FERDINAND. Foundations of social anthropology. 426p $4.75 Free press

301.8 Sociology—Methodology 51-1654

"This book, its author says, might better be entitled 'Prolegomena to the Study of Society: being an Enquiry into the Nature of Sociological Knowledge.' For it is neither a textbook nor a summary; rather, a statement of 'the logical premises that underlie our knowledge of societies . . . and with the prerequisites, conceptual and technical, or any enquiry meant to lead to this knowledge.' " Am Soc R

"Nadel has brought great erudition to the task of understanding human society, and if he has failed to offer a cogent and satisfactory theory, he has nevertheless shed light on many knotty problems and cleared away some of the tangle of false conceptualization. For this, he will be read by every student of social theory." W. R. Goldschmidt

+ — Am Soc R 16:569 Ag '51 1100w

NADEL, S. F.—Continued

"That Nadel is curiously unfamiliar with contemporary psychology and its place in anthropological theory is witnessed by his lack of consideration for scholars like Murdock, Whiting, and Holmberg, and by his whipping resoundingly the dead horse of Watsonianism while equating it quite erroneously with the behaviorism of Hull and Tolman. . . This is one of the first volumes to explore the problems of scientific method applied to societal study, and a pioneer can be forgiven much, especially when he writes with the grace, wit, and intelligent challenge of this professor at the Australian National University." E. J. Shoben

+ — Ann Am Acad 277:250 S '51 380w

"There is little agreement either as to whether social evolution is an idea that can legitimately or profitably be used in the comparative study of institutions. On these and related topics Professor Nadel writes learnedly and at considerable length. When he is holding the balance between rival schools of thought he is admirable. When he embarks on theories of his own, he is less cogent."

+ — New Statesman & Nation 41:488 Ap 28 '51 190w

"The erudition of the book is formidable and when one has finished reading it the waves of continental thoroughness seem to have washed away almost everything that would have been helpful in reaching the haven of a cool consideration and reflection. The reader is left with the impression that the author has scrupulously avoided saying anything simply if it was possible to express it in a difficult and involved manner."

Times [London] Lit Sup p199 Mr 30 '51 450w

NAETHER, CARL ALBERT. Book of the racing pigeon. 244p pl $3.50 McKay

636.59635 Pigeon racing. Pigeons Agr50-478

"A professor of English, with life-time hobby in pigeons, gives 'fact and theory from many sources,' including the author's experiences on the racing homer, care, breeding, training." Library J

Booklist 47:130 D 1 '50

Bookmark 10:167 Ap '51

"An excellent, all inclusive guide." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 76:51 Ja 1 '51 30w

NAGAI, TAKASHI. We of Nagasaki; the story of survivors in an atomic wasteland; tr. by Ichiro Shirato and Herbert B. L. Silverman. 189p $2.75 Duell

940.544 Atomic bomb. World war, 1939-1945 —Japan—Nagasaki 51-9174

Eight personal narratives, by both children and grown-ups, relating their experiences and reactions to the atom bombing of their homes. All of the narratives are by relatives or neighbors of Dr Nagai, a Japanese-Christian physician whose wife was killed in the raid.

Booklist 47:125; 204 D 1 '50; F 1 '51

Bookmark 10:107 F '51 70w

"'We of Nagasaki' needs reading even tho the reading of it is a shocking experience." V. P. Hass

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 28 '51 320w

"The account is almost unbearable in its hideous description of human suffering." Henry Sowerby

Christian Science Monitor p9 F 6 '51 450w

"It is not all-important, of course, that these people were Catholics. No matter what they were, their story would be as significant. But when he learns of their devotion to Our Lady, the plans they were making to celebrate the feast of the Assumption, and of the novenas they were making for peace, an American Catholic feels that much closer to them. . . Reading [this book] might have been like getting a glimpse of Hell, except that there is love in this story. Though the simple authors didn't set out to do so, they have given proof, if any be needed, that the human spirit is stronger, tougher, superior to any power on earth." John Cogley

+ Commonweal 53:452 F 9 '51 1350w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 27:198 My '51 90w

"Lacking the timeliness, or the more professional gifts of Hersey's classic Hiroshima, this in its unstudied, spoken transcript is also unfailingly affecting."

Kirkus 18:717 D 1 '50 180w

"Terribly moving, thought-provoking. Recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 75:2149 D 15 '50 110w

Nation 172:304 Mr 31 '51 180w

Reviewed by C. H. Rolph

New Statesman & Nation 42:314 S 22 '51 350w

"Though these stories have been edited, they are handled with such skill that the impact of the separate personalities remains and the reality of the terrors they lived through. . . But Dr. Nagai is more concerned with the moral aftermath than with the immediate physical agony, the horrible dyings and the even more horrible lingerings. He is concerned with the effect upon the survivors, and his conclusions are as shocking as they are understandable. With the exception of some who were just lucky, it was too often the selfish who survived." Bradford Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ja 28 '51 950w

N Y Times p26 F 18 '51 180w

New Yorker 27:120 Mr 10 '51 210w

"It is because we easily lose our sense of human values in considering a possible atomic war . . . that I think that everybody with an adult mind, everywhere in the world where it can penetrate, ought to read this beautiful and terrible little book. Nothing, it seems, but a general resurgence of human ideas can halt the world now on the ever-more-precipitous slope." Henry Dale

+ Spec 187:54 Jl 13 '51 1550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p463 Jl 27 '51 1050w

Wis Lib Bul 47:120 My '51

NAGLE, URBAN. Behind the masque. 309p $3.50 McMullen

792 Blackfriars' guild. Theater—Production and direction 51-6664

"Father Nagle, whose basic existence is that of a scholarly Dominican preacher and teacher with a doctor's degree in psychology, and whose normal habitat is Washington, D.C., founded the theatrical organization known as the Blackfriars Guild in 1932, but it wasn't until 1940 that they acquired a theater of sorts in New York City which they could call their own. . . [This is a] chronicle of its ups and downs; of the housing problems, the union difficulties, and the constant search for suitable scripts; of perpetual insolvency, and a thousand minor woes." Cath World

---

"While Behind the Masque is of primary interest to theater-lovers, Father Nagle's lively wit and felicitous style make it vastly entertaining to the general reader." B. J. Thompson

+ Cath World 174:239 D '51 270w

"Some books are a joy to read and a joy to review. A few are even a joy to write. This one fits all three categories with grace and distinction. . . Everyone who ever painted a flat or wrestled with a licensing commissioner will love this book. The joy of living is here on a grand scale. These are truly the good companions of the contemporary theatre." Emmet Lavery

+ Commonweal 54:531 S 7 '51 650w

NAIMY, MIKHAIL. Kahlil Gibran: a biography; with a pref. by Martin L. Wolf. 267p il $3.75 Philosophical lib.

B or 92 Gibran, Kahlil

For descriptive note see Annual for 1950.

"To those who have highly regarded Gibran's The Prophet (a generation ago sometimes referred to as the 'Smith College Bible') and other of his poetic effusions, this biography will be sadly disillusioning. It scarcely makes an attractive person of this Lebanese immigrant. The pretentious style of the book is at times pathetic: adulation does not make for even sympathetic reporting—especially when combined with too transparent self-adulation." J. F. Davidson

— Churchman 165:15 My 15 '51 80w

"This small volume, written by his closest personal friend, gives us a vivid picture of the background, the life and the spirit of the Lebanese poet widely known in America through sixteen volumes of poetry in English." I. G. Matthews

+ Crozer Q 28:184 Ap '51 300w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 Mr 4 '51 160w

"The story begins with a slightly hysterical scene at a hospital in New York City in 1931. . . The writing here has the quality of a schoolboy's composition. This is followed by a series of impressionistic reminiscences about Gibran, all in that sentimentalized poetic manner of the Near East. Now and then, however, the reader is pulled up sharp by a startlingly realistic passage." Thomas Sugrue

N Y Times p19 F 18 '51 450w

"One regrets that Mr. Naimy, who is a good writer, did not succeed in picturing more realistically and deeply the environment of the Maronite sect to which the family of Kahlil Gibran belonged and also the intellectual circles in America where these two friends lived and acted. If he had done so he would have had a more complete and interesting sketch of his hero and the book would have had more value. Instead, we have only some fairly effective fragments of the prophet's life." Antoni Gronowicz

Sat R of Lit 34:44 F 17 '51 400w

NAMIER, LEWIS BERNSTEIN. Europe in decay; a study in disintegration, 1936-1940. 329p $3 Macmillan

940.52 Europe—History. World war, 1939-1945—Causes [A50-7098]

A collection of essays, reprinted in whole or in part, from English periodicals, London Times Literary Supplement, The Listener, the National Review, and the United Nations World. The essays are fundamentally reviews and summaries of volumes, documents, memoirs and monographs which are important to an understanding of European diplomacy in the years 1936-1940. Partial contents: Memoirs born of defeat: Flandin; Reynaud; Bonnet; Baudouin; The end of Vichy; Ciano's early diary; Hitler's foreign policy; The Anglo-French-Russian negotiations of 1939; Nazi-Soviet relations, 1939-1941. Index.

"These essays and reviews will inevitably be compared with G. P. Gooch's Recent Revelations in European Diplomacy, which proved so useful to students of the origins of the First World War. They are less comprehensive from the bibliographical point of view; their special value lies in Professor Namier's appreciation that the structure of diplomacy, like the structure of politics, is made of men. He illuminates his study of documents and books with an understanding of the ambitions and the limitations, the interests and the insights of particular persons, and he relates them to the general pattern of the European tragedy with the incisive clarity which characterizes all his work." F. H. Herrick

+ Am Hist R 56:628 Ap '51 320w

"Of all the many, many books in the postwar area, this one is more specific in information and teaching insight than most better-advertised and verbose volumes of post-mortems." B. E. Nelson

+ Ann Am Acad 277:270 S '51 450w

Reviewed by Melchior Palyi

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 D 31 '50 150w

Current Hist 20:41 Ja '51 80w

Foreign Affairs 29:315 Ja '51 50w

"It is of course highly desirable that Mr. Namier should review these volumes as they appear, and it is convenient to have his summaries of foreign books brought together. . . [But] however much we may admire Mr. Namier as a journalist and contemporary historian, we cannot forget that these activities distract him from the great work on the history of eighteenth-century England which he alone is qualified to write. So long as his Ford Lectures of fifteen years ago remain unpublished we shall resent his preoccupation with Stalin and Hitler and such small fry." A. J. P. Taylor

Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 7 '50 650w

"It would be captious to complain of the reprinting of occasional pieces in a journal half of which is devoted to reviews of books; and after all, Mr. Namier is in the front rank of historical reviewers. All the same, this is an unreliable method for either author or reader to keep up to date with the evidence on recent history."

— + New Statesman & Nation 39:496 Ap 29 '50 240w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Wiskemann

Spec 184:388 Mr 24 '50 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p147 Mr 10 '50 1550w

NARAMORE, ELISABETH, ed. Farm on Fifth avenue. 32p il $2 Pantheon bks.

704 Art objects. Animals in art 51-10123

"A collection of figures from the Metropolitan museum of art, depicting farm folk, barnyard animals, and wild creatures of field and stream." Subtitle

Booklist 47:277 Ap 1 '51

Reviewed by A. L. Shea

Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Ap 29 '51 90w

Reviewed by J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews

Horn Bk 27:178 My '51 110w

"Everything stirs the imagination and much may happily affect the fresh creative mind of young people. They will laugh at some figures, wonder at others, and long to see the originals, or others like them at a museum nearer home. All are now on display in the Junior Museum, for an indefinite time." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Mr 18 '51 280w

"It is a wonderful experience for a child when art is presented in direct relationship to everyday life, and with the imagination and taste used here. This book will probably have an even greater appeal than the author's 'William and His Friends' because the objects selected are bound together by a central theme." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 4 '51 200w

"One can easily imagine that in schools and in homes children will feel a very real affection for these little figures. New York children are lucky in that they may see the originals. This is a book to own and to cherish well."

+ Sat R of Lit 34:40 Ap 21 '51 220w

"Recommended as a reference book for art appreciation at the grade school level."

+ School Arts 51:8-a D '51 90w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:248 S '51 110w

NASH, ARNOLD SAMUEL, ed. Protestant thought in the twentieth century; whence and whither? 296p $3.75 Macmillan

200 Protestantism. Religious thought. Theology 51-11218

"Twelve eminent Protestant scholars, under the editorship of Professor Nash of the University of North Carolina, discuss the development of Protestant thought in the twentieth century, with emphasis on the American contribution, using the following headings: Study of the Old Testament; Study of the New Testament; Philosophy of Religion; Systematic Theology; Christian Ethics; Church history; Pastoral Theology and Psychology; Preaching;

NASH, A. S.—Continued
Christian Education; Reunion and the Ecumenical Movement; Christianity and Other Religions." (Library J) Brief biographical notes. Bibliographies.

"In this remarkable book a dozen leaders prominent in American theological education have joined with Dr. Nash in a valuable symposium, each writing on his field of special interest and competence. The result is a useful and timely survey of Protestant thought in America during the last 50 years." R. T. Handy
+ Christian Century 68:1048 S 12 '51 950w

Reviewed by J. F. Davidson
Churchman 165:16 O 15 '51 190w

"For the reader, regardless of theological bent, this makes interesting and profitable reading. . . The surveys and forecasts are richly informative. The over-all impression is conservative, almost neoörthodox; certainly evangelical. The bibliographies are one of the best features of the book." H. T. Houf
+ Crozer Q 28:365 O '51 550w

Kirkus 19:180 Mr 15 '51 250w

"Articles are scholarly but readable, and the book as a whole is a valuable contribution to the subject. Public and college libraries will want to purchase." G. W. Wakefield
+ Library J 76:1225 Ag '51 100w

Reviewed by J. A. Pike
N Y Times p15 Ag 5 '51 320w

NASH, OGDEN. Family reunion. 146p $2.50 Little 811 50-10762
For descriptive note see Annual for 1950.

Bookmark 10:84 Ja '51 20w
Cleveland Open Shelf p3 Ja '51
Kirkus 18:585 S 15 '50 70w

"His rhymes, if unusual, are always considered; the diversities of form match the diversities of family life and with enjoyable absurdity of language he makes us recognise once again how much of ordinary life is comic." M. B.-W.
+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 18 '51 100w

"Mr. Nash, in addition to his expert foolery with words, is both a poet and a philosopher. And when he ruminates on the American family, as he does in this selection from his verse on that topic over the years, he has much to say that will strike an all-too-familiar chord in most American breasts." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 9 '51 500w

"The animal and nature verses, apart from the three or four dog poems, are a little book in themselves. I hope some day that Mr. Nash's publisher will find his collective self in the mood to put all these and more together under one cover, with plenty of appropriate illustrations. No one save Belloc on a much smaller scale has ever approached them." David McCord
+ Sat R of Lit 34:18 F 10 '51 800w
+ Time 57:62 Ja 1 '51 700w
Times [London] Lit Sup p735 N 16 '51 250w
Wis Lib Bul 46:33 D '50

NATHAN, GEORGE JEAN. Theatre book of the year, 1950-51; a record and an interpretation. (V9) 294p $4 Knopf
792 Theater—U.S. Drama—History and criticism (43-51298)
"Ninth volume in the series of highly personal critiques of the Dean of American drama critics." Library J

Booklist 48:46 O 1 '51

Reviewed by John Beaufort
Christian Science Monitor p15 D 6 '51 200w
Kirkus 19:374 Jl 15 '51 100w

"Recommended for criticism and theatre collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 76:1706 O 15 '51 30w

"Much of this is as entertaining as always, but I am not sure all of it is. Less than most of those who practice his profession, but still unavoidably, Mr. Nathan needs places from which to take off." Richard Lockridge
N Y Herald Tribune R p22 O 14 '51 330w

"Spirited, the Dean is, once again as always, with a style that has defeated thousands of imitators down the decades, and with an insistence on factual accuracy worthy a copyreader on a law review." Lewis Nichols
+ N Y Times p10 S 16 '51 470w

"Mr. Nathan, who is as quick as ever to spot a fresh talent or a stale idea, again turns in a performance that is much livelier than all but a handful of those in the shows he covered for this ninth annual survey of a Broadway season."
+ New Yorker 27:151 O 13 '51 110w

NATHAN, ROBERT. Innocent Eve. 184p $2.50 Knopf
51-10299
A fantasy in which Lucifer and his personable female secretary Samantha crash a Halloween party at a swank New York city hotel in 1948. Lucifer had a private project which required a talk with a U.S. senator, and there was one at the party. But the scheme was sabbotaged by a lovely innocent girl, and Samantha, who was the opposite of innocent.

Booklist 47:311 My 1 '51
Bookmark 10:232 Jl '51 30w

"Another fascinating Nathan story." Kelsey Guilfoil
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ap 15 '51 370w
Kirkus 19:78 F 1 '51 120w

"Highly stimulating comment on modern life and literature. Recommended." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 76:705 Ap 15 '51 100w

"Mr. Nathan is at his urbanely witty best in this brief fantasy; his first chapter, a dialogue between Lucifer and Samantha, is classic humor in a minor key. The rest of the book, though it does not live up to this introduction, comes along ably in Mr. Nathan's discriminating and subtly satiric style, and leaves almost nothing to be desired for a moral tale in a costume of mirth." Thomas Sugrue
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ap 15 '51 440w

Reviewed by Harry Gilroy
N Y Times p5 Ap 15 '51 380w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 18 '51 850w

"'The Innocent Eve' says more than meets the eye at first perusal, as [Mr Nathan] tosses and turns over the assorted heap of humanity's preoccupations, dreams, hopes, despairs, and disapprovals on his poet's two-pronged fork of pitying wit." Evelyn Eaton
+ Sat R of Lit 34:44 Je 9 '51 300w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn
Springf'd Republican p8C Ap 29 '51 300w
Wis Lib Bul 47:166 Je '51

NATHANSON, JEROME. John Dewey: the reconstruction of the democratic life. (Twentieth century lib) 127p $2 Scribner
191.9 Dewey, John 51-6859
A resumé of the principal ideas of John Dewey as philosopher, psychologist and educator, showing also his influence upon American thought during the last fifty years. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:172 Ja 15 '52
Kirkus 19:461 Ag 15 '51 160w

"In keeping with the general purpose of the Twentieth Century Library, in which this book appears, Mr. Nathanson has done an excellent job in bringing to light the facets of Dewey's thought which best serve to explain his influence on the intellectual currents of our time." J. L. Blau

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 N 11 '51 700w

"In reading his book I am carried back to an impression formed in Dewey's classroom long ago. The ideas that came from the rostrum made their way out haltingly and, it seemed, disjointedly, but one found on going back over one's notes that they made a surprisingly continuous and orderly whole. In going over the widely scattered fragments of Dewey's philosophical writing Mr. Nathanson finds a similar coherence and order." Brand Blanshard

+ Sat R of Lit 35:16 Ja 5 '52 700w

School & Society 74:319 N 17 '51 40w

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF EVANGELICALS FOR UNITED ACTION. Christian education in a democracy. See Gaebelein, F. E.

NATIONAL BUREAU OF ECONOMIC RESEARCH, incorporated. What happens during business cycles. See Mitchell, W. C.

NAUDE, GABRIEL. Advice on establishing a library; with an introd. by Archer Taylor. 110p $3 Univ. of Calif.

020 Library science. Books 50-8393

"Naudé's Avis pour Dresser une Bibliothèque, one of the earliest works on librarianship, was published at Paris in 1627 and in 1661 was first translated into English by John Evelyn. The Evelyn translation, which forms the basis for the present edition, has long been a rare book since Evelyn, alarmed by the number of printer's errors, sought to buy up and destroy copies of his edition. . . Naudé discusses what a library should consist of, how the books should be collected and arranged, the location of the library, its furnishings and orientation." (Library J) Bibliography. Index of names.

Booklist 46:327 Jl 1 '50

"Scholars will find considerable of interest for the study of contemporary scholarship in the authors and titles that Naudé mentioned." D. A. Jonah

+ Library J 76:401 Mr 1 '51 390w

"Naudé's Avis pour dresser une bibliothèque has become a collector's piece rather than a recognized classic in the development of the literature on libraries, and few efforts have been made to weave its general purpose and tenor into the tissue of seventeenth-century thought. Yet it has deserved a better fate, for in its brevity and scope it is something of a masterpiece, fully worthy of the care and artistry devoted to it in this charming edition." Harcourt Brown

+ Library Q 21:44 Ja '51 850w

NAVIN, THOMAS RANDALL. Whitin machine works since 1831; a textile machinery company in an industrial village. 654p il $6.50 Harvard univ. press

677.215 Whitin machine works. Whitinsville, Massachusetts 50-9451

"A full-scale study of the development, experiences and policies of one of the leading U.S.A. manufacturers of textile machinery. . . Though some attention is paid to technical matters, most of the space is given to economic and labor aspects of the company's activities. The study is especially interesting for two reasons: (1) The firm was owned and managed by one family for more than 100 years. (2) It established a miniature welfare state in its community whose services included low-cost housing and job security long before these things were common." Library J

Revised by J. B. Hedges
Am Hist R 56:599 Ap '51 220w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 75:1831 O 15 '50 180w

Reviewed by I. D. Neu
New Eng Q 24:258 Je '51 600w

"Aware of the lack of drama and romance in the uneventful history of this conservatively managed company, he eschews artificial 'color' and does a lucid, workmanlike job of writing. The mixture of narrative and analysis is not for the general reader, but social scientists in all fields can gain from reading in it."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:453 D '50 240w

NEEDHAM, CECIL HUGH LATIMER. Refuelling in flight; a treatise based substantially upon a lecture delivered before the Society of automotive engineers, Detroit, 13 Jan, 1949; with a foreword by Sir Alan J. Cobham. 191p il maps $4 Pitman

629.134 Airplanes

"The transfer of fuel from one airplane to another during flight originated as a stunt at air shows. . . Now the potentialities of refuelling in flight are recognized as being considerable both in commercial and military uses of aircraft. This book, the first full length treatment of the subject, is written by the Chief Engineer of the British firm, Flight Refueling, ltd., which has carried flight refueling equipment to a high state of development. Most of the space is given to economic and commercial aspects of refueling in flight. However, the chapter on military aspects contains an adequate appraisal of this phase. The equipment used in flight refueling is so simple that adequate descriptions are contained in two relatively brief appendices." (N Y New Tech Bks) References and bibliography.

Booklist 47:215 F 15 '51

N Y New Tech Bks 36:2 Ja '51

NEEL, LOUIS BOYD. Story of an orchestra; with an introd. by Benjamin Britten. 133p $2.50 Ravin

785 Orchestras [A51-8263]

"In 1932 Dr. Boyd Neel was a general practitioner in South London; in June, 1933, his string orchestra gave its first public concert; and four years later it achieved a world-wide reputation at the Salzburg Festival. More than half the book is devoted to the orchestra's visit to Australia and New Zealand in 1947, the most spectacular and heart-warming, but by no means intrinsically the most important, evidence of its musical quality. . . The author tells us nothing at all about himself beyond the barest minimum of facts necessary to describe or explain his relationship with the orchestra." Spec

"Too many pages are devoted to a rather tedious recording of concert engagements, but the account is lightened at times by amusing anecdotes. The fact that Boyd Neel fully believes in the new music chosen for performance is proved by what we read here. He is, for instance, as well aware as any composer could be of the injustice of allowing only one or two hearings of an important work, however coolly it may have been received. His view has had an inspiring effect on other conductors." G. A. H.

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 My 2 '51 180w

"Recommended for music libraries with browsing collections or specializing in music literature with a general appeal." Armine Dikijian

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 8:360 Mr '51 100w

"No one is in a better position than Mr. Neel to take us behind the scenes in English music and show how near the fringe of musical civilization the English are. This little book, which Mr. Neel may or may not have intended for his admirers as a history of the uphill fight of his orchestra during the first seventeen years of its existence, turns out to be a quiet but firm lashing out at the deplorable state of music in England and a plea that somebody do something about it." R. O. Singer

+ Sat R of Lit 34:30 F 24 '51 300w

NEEL, L. B.—Continued

"This is a remarkable success story, but told with such personal modesty and such exclusively communal self-congratulation that only those accustomed to the English habit of understatement will realise just how remarkable that success has been." Martin Cooper

+ Spec 184:660 My 12 '50 300w

"Behind the easy narrative there lie several matters of musical politics which deserve attention, and Mr. Boyd Neel's venture into still a third profession, that of authorship, has been worth while for that as well as for his story of triumph over difficulties."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p224 Ap 14 '50 320w

NEF, JOHN ULRIC. War and human progress; an essay on the rise of industrial civilization. 464p $6.50 Harvard univ. press

901 War and civilization. Industry—History. Civilization 50-10527

For descriptive note see Annual for 1950.

"This is an important book. No one can read it carefully without being stimulated to think constructively about the problems of modern civilization, especially that of war." Quincy Wright

+ Am J Soc 56:613 My '51 1150w

Reviewed by L. L. Snyder

Ann Am Acad 275:170 My '51 750w

Booklist 47:204 F 1 '51

Reviewed by H. N. Fieldhouse

Canadian Hist R 32:164 Je '51 950w

"The book should be quickly rated as one of the most valuable discussions of war ever to have been written. It is certain to be of particular value to students of military, economic, scientific, cultural, and social history." G. J. Scharschug

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 14 '51 150w

"If nine years of systematic annihilation and the new technology of doom have revealed Professor Nef's thesis as a commonplace, it is not the scholar but the politicians and generals who must answer for this degradation. Once this allowance for the intervention of time and history is made, Professor Nef's book stands as a monument to skilled and careful research in the history of culture and to creative historiography."

+ Current Hist 20:101 F '51 1350w

Foreign Affairs 29:666 Jl '51 60w

Reviewed by John Freeman

New Statesman & Nation 42:186 Ag 18 '51 800w

"One has to read deeply into this long and tightly packed book before one discovers that it is really two books—first a detailed history of industrialism and its relation to armaments and battles, and then an essay on war and how to restrain it. In the first book, Professor Nef's fine scholarship is impressively displayed. . . Professor Nef gives little attention to the recent advances that have been made in the understanding of group behavior and the ways of influencing men's attitudes. He ignores the efforts that undertake to develop a more systematic theory of international politics. He takes no account of the persistent work of statesmen to develop means for settling disputes without war." F. S. Dunn

+ — Pol Sci Q 66:302 Je '51 800w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ja 28 '51 270w

"It would be fruitless to try to summarize this recent work of the chairman of the Committee on Social Thought at the University of Chicago. One must read and meditate on the great book itself. Its power comes precisely from its extraordinary richness and from the complexity of the perspectives which are brought together. The scholar will find in it a treasure house of information to enchant his curiosity; the moralist and the political scientist, disciplined and highly unified reflections to stimulate and to inspire them." Jacques Maritain

+ Sat R of Lit 35:19 Ja 5 '52 650w

"Professor Nef's book is timely, important, and profound."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p351 Je 8 '51 850w

"A remarkably fine piece of work."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:57 Mr '51 320w

NEFF, JOHN C. Maria. 201p $2.50 Washburn 51-13025

"The preface to this first novel is Henry James' observation that 'in country places, incidents do duty as events.' John Neff does full justice to the Master's comment: in this carefully sympathetic story of a single day in the life of a drought-stricken New Mexican village, the absence of rain is the presence of incident, a worried planning of a wedding is the shy music to which incident marches triumphantly into event. And, dominant over both is the ancient, knowing figure of Maria." N Y Times

Booklist 48:86 N 1 '51

"The author, who worked several summers as a cowhand in the locale of his story, reveals a genuine feeling for the slow pace and earthy, natural kind of living he depicts. He has done well to keep this first novel so uninvolved; I hope that, if he has another in mind, he will keep the simplicity and at the same time strengthen his plot development." Betty Swords

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 D 9 '51 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p28 N '51

Kirkus 19:538 S 15 '51 120w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 D 16 '51 290w

"The heat and the sky-watch of rainless days in New Mexico are convincingly present in this book. Present too—and here Neff reveals sure, intimate knowledge of his material—is a quiet, glowingly alive translation of incident into event, of humdrum into happening, of blankness into color." M. H. Ley

+ N Y Times p35 O 21 '51 250w

New Yorker 27:152 N 3 '51 80w

"No major work, perhaps, just an honestly told little story, yet worth reading." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 23 '51 650w

NEHRU, JAWAHARLAL. Story of the world; a brief account of the early days of the earth as told in letters to his daughter; with sketches by Richard Albany. 128p il $2.50 Day

909 Civilization—History—Juvenile literature 51-9815

Letters written by the author to his daughter when she was ten, in which he describes the early days of our world. The book has been thru many printings in India.

Bookmark 10:208 Je '51

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 26 '51 130w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 27:198 My '51 120w

Horn Bk 27:340 S '51 80w

Kirkus 19:127 Mr 1 '51 120w

Reviewed by N. S. Chasteen

Library J 76:717 Ap 15 '51 100w

"His style is very easy, and, while colorful details are chosen, still there is little concession, in ideas, to the fact his reader is so young. The result is more like H. G. Wells than like Van Loon." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ap 15 '51 250w

Reviewed by Santha Rama Rau

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 25 '51 400w

"Although the treatment must of necessity be brief there is enough substance to stimulate curiosity and to provide a sound basis for future reading." R. A. Brown

+ Sat R of Lit 34:50 My 12 '51 170w

Springf'd Republican p8C F 18 '51 120w

Wis Lib Bul 47:259 N '51

NEHRU, JAWAHARLAL, and COUSINS, NORMAN. Talks with Nehru; India's prime minister speaks out on the crisis of our time; a discussion. 64p $2 Day

954 World politics. India—Politics and government 51-11638

This volume contains the "two tape-recorded conversations that Norman Cousins held with Pandit Nehru last March [which] appeared in the issues of April 14 and 21 of The Saturday Review of Literature. They are reproduced here with an introduction by Mr. Cousins. . . Mr. Cousins' questions were designed to lead Nehru politely on, not to search, or probe, or embarrass him. They are calculated to display him in a good light which, again, is fair enough, although one cannot help feeling that Mr. Nehru is being let off too easily. The questions are strictly impersonal—about Korea, China, relations with the United States, communism." N Y Times

"This meaty little book is continuously intelligent and frequently illuminating." + Atlantic 188:86 S '51 220w
Booklist 47:396 Jl 15 '51

Reviewed by Carlyle King
Canadian Forum 31:185 N '51 350w

"The philosopher-statesman, in an exchange of views with one of America's keenest intellects, discourses on political philosophy and world affairs in a calm, unhurried tête-à-tête that the intrusion of a tape recorder appears to have failed to disturb. The conversation reveals little that the Premier has not said on various occasions before. Its interest, in fact, lies largely in the revelation that four years of arduous political responsibility have left those views practically unchanged." Henry Sowerby
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Jl 28 '51 600w

Reviewed by R. M. Weaver
Commonweal 54:432 Ag 10 '51 1350w
Foreign Affairs 30:167 O '51 20w

Reviewed by W. N. Brown
Nation 173:455 N 24 '51 1050w

Reviewed by A. T. Steele
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Jl 15 '51 1300w

Reviewed by Lionel Crosse
N Y Times p3 Jl 1 '51 380w
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 12 '51 280w

"An extremely enlightening and provocative interplay of ideas. In view of its brevity 'Talks with Nehru' can be read in a single evening; but it will provide readers with material for thought for months to come." L. K. Rosinger
+ Sat R of Lit 34:9 Jl 21 '51 750w
Times [London] Lit Sup p787 D 7 '51 230w

NEIHARDT, JOHN GNEISENAU. When the tree flowered; an authentic tale of the old Sioux world. 248p $3.50 Macmillan 51-6974

A fictional autobiography of an old-time Sioux Indian called Eagle Voice.

Booklist 48:86 N 1 '51

"Here is a supple and solid prose. . . Over all the book there is the sense that there was on this continent, in spite of their apparent savagery, a people who had a defined way of living and a grasp of human values. Mr. Neihardt wonderfully increases our understanding of that life." Paul Engle
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 O 7 '51 320w
Kirkus 19:365 Jl 15 '51 180w

"His collaboration with Eagle Voice, viewed as literary art or as ethnology, calls for high recommendation." G. D. McDonald
+ Library J 76:1334 S 1 '51 270w

"The narrative of Eagle Voice per se is warm, human, and humorous, and without over-writing contains many passages of the really fine writing one hopes for in the prose work of a good poet." Oliver La Farge
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 O 21 '51 650w

"Mr. Neihardt's Indians are deeply felt characters in their own right, projected against the vivid backdrop of their times. They are never explained in terms of the present-day—or examined through alien eyes." John Nerber
+ N Y Times p38 O 7 '51 370w

NEILL, THOMAS PATRICK. They lived the faith [great lay leaders of modern times]. (Science and culture ser) 388p $4 Bruce pub.

922.2 Roman Catholic church—Biography 51-2741

"By way of balance to the ordinary writing of ecclesiastical history, with its emphasis upon the role played by the clergy and its neglect of what laymen have done, Mr. Neill has told the story of twelve [Catholic] laymen and of one woman, Pauline Jaricot, the foundress of the Society for the Propagation of the Faith." Commonweal

"The portraits are balanced, pointing out not only the virtues and abilities of the subjects, but also their faults. The choice of leaders is excellent and representative, though some might find fault with its omissions. In short, a thoroughly interesting and very important volume for an age that cries out for Catholic lay leadership." J. P. Flynn
+ Cath World 173:397 Ag '51 280w

"Though the chapters vary somewhat in weight, taken as a whole They Lived The Faith is the best book of its kind that has so far appeared. If 'Orestes Brownson' shows slight understanding of Brownson's thought, and no deep reading in the voluminous works of that master, the author on the other hand, seems to me to have done well with Windthorst and García Moreno and Joseph Görres and Donoso Cortés, though this may be because I do not know very much about them myself. But whatever strictures have to be made, Mr. Neill must be admitted to have given us an able performance and an additional encouragement to Catholic Action." Theodore Maynard
+ — Commonweal 54:45 Ap 20 '51 500w

NEILSON, WINTHROP, and NEILSON, MRS FRANCES FULLERTON (JONES). Edge of greatness. 248p $3 Putnam

Franklin, Benjamin—Fiction 51-9837

A historical novel based on one day in the life of Benjamin Franklin. The day is July 18, 1755, the day of Braddock's defeat. Before that news Franklin is pictured as about to abandon his family for another love. But the news saves the hero for his country and posterity.

"The buildup of local and historical background, streets, buildings, actual persons, and weather on that day is done with fidelity. The style is sincere, with ever so faint a grain of Rabelaisian spice. Cutbacks to previous events do not spoil the unity of time and the urgency of that one day. If Franklin as a possible but far from impatient lover, at 49, is less convincing than Franklin the leader on whom Pennsylvania depended, that does not too greatly impair the novel." W. K. Rugg
+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Jl 30 '51 450w

"The only trouble is that the authors don't pull it off. The drama is not there. A cross between a juvenile and a work for adults in style, the book not only fails to bring a single character to life, but its tidbits of realism are dragged in, and even the coarseness so necessary to a successful historical novel is extremely selfconscious. Then, of course, there is the libel on Franklin's honor, which is implied throughout. He is too much an essential part of the American ethos to be toyed with so casually and incompetently." Carl Bridenbaugh
— N Y Times p17 My 6 '51 400w

"We get a pleasant and frequently moving account of a thoughtful man of matured and modern wisdom handling with integrity complicated domestic and public problems. Though

NEILSON, WINTHROP—Continued
occasionally the approach is a little too respectful, the stress is on his humanity and he emerges from these pages as a very likable person." E. J. Fitzgerald
+ Sat R of Lit 34:30 My 19 '51 450w

NELSON, DENNIS DENMARK. Integration of the Negro in the U.S. navy. 256p il $4 Farrar, Straus
325.26 U.S. Navy. Negroes 51-12820

"Beginning with the historical picture of the unsegregated Negro in the Navy, the author shows the growth of discrimination after World War I and the attendant strain on Navy facilities during World War II which forced the Navy to acknowledge that integration provided for a more efficient use of its Negro and white manpower." (Library J) Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 48:43 O 1 '51

"A study of sociological significance which may have a wider application."
+ Kirkus 19:417 Ag 1 '51 160w

"A panegyric to the Navy's racial policies which is both a solid contribution to scholarship on the Negro, and a detailed refutation of calamity howlers who say prejudices can't be legislated." M. S. Byam
+ Library J 76:1565 O 1 '51 80w

"Lt. Nelson's work bears every mark of care and thoughtfulness; while not an 'official' study, it is well described by Rear Admiral T. L. Sprague, Chief of Naval Personnel, as 'a fair and valid appraisal of the Navy's attitude toward and interest in its Negro personnel.' "
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Ja 13 '52 320w

NELSON, HUGH LAWRENCE. Gold in every grave. 213p $2.50 Rinehart 51-11617

Detective story.

Reviewed by Drexel Drake
Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 S 2 '51 60w

Kirkus 19:281 Je 1 '51 60w

"In this full-dress whodunit, the private eyes have more than their share of slam-bang adventure and excitement; and both writing and structure are so much more competent than in his recent effort that it begins to look as though Nelson, in his ninth book, is at last starting to live up to the hitherto unfulfilled promise of his first novel." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p20 Ag 19 '51 110w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 5 '51 80w

"Authentic mountain West; some good characterizations—especially three wine-bibbing exminers. Dunn convincing FBI type but shadowy references to Washington no help. Readable." Kathleen Sproul
+ Sat R of Lit 34:52 S 8 '51 50w

Springf'd Republican p8C Ag 12 '51 110w

NELSON, LOWRY. Rural Cuba. 285p $3.50 Univ. of Minn.
309.17291 Cuba—Social conditions 50-11677

The author, professor of sociology at the University of Minnesota, studied the problems of rural Cuba for a year spent as rural sociologist for the United States department of state. In this volume he reports his findings on population, social caste, family relations, education, recreation, and means of livelihood. Glossary. Bibliography. Index.

"Professor Nelson's book stands as a fine example of the value of applying social research to the practical problems of a nation—an example which, it is hoped, the Cuban government has taken cognizance of. As anthropologists, moreover, unaccustomed to using survey methods as a research tool, we should welcome more works like this from sociologists who, it is encouraging to see, are increasingly applying their special skills to the foreign field." A. R. Holmberg
+ Am Anthropol 53:399 Jl '51 800w

Reviewed by T. R. Ford
Am J Soc 57:299 N '51 500w

" 'The first systematic study ever attempted of rural life in Cuba' (p.vii) has not in fact materialized. Nevertheless this is in several ways a substantial contribution both to Cuban and American understanding of Cuban affairs. . . The book as a whole might be classed broadly as a 'scientific survey' rather than a work of sociological analysis." L. H. Jenks
Am Soc R 16:125 F '51 850w

"This well written volume is a valuable contribution to the literature of the island—a keen analysis of the raison d'être of the adjustments which the Cuban has made to his physical environment and to his cultural milieu." R. E. Crist
+ Ann Am Acad 274:270 Mr '51 750w

Booklist 47:199 F 1 '51

Foreign Affairs 29:334 Ja '51 10w

"The volume is a valuable contribution, which reveals important factors in the rural situation in Cuba as it is today. . . The author and the University of Minnesota Press have rendered a real service by producing this interesting volume." R. R. Hill
+ J Pol Econ 59:173 Ap '51 550w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Mr 11 '51 50w

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:80 Mr '51 210w

NESBITT, MRS VICTORIA HENRIETTA (KUGLER). Presidential cookbook; feeding the Roosevelts and their guests. 246p $2.75 Doubleday
641.5 Cookery 51-9695

The author of White House Diary (Book Review Digest 1948) continues her story of her twelve years in the White House with this cookbook composed of recipes of foods she served to the Roosevelts and their guests. Index.

"Good recipes, clearly presented, with quantity service indicated."
+ Kirkus 18:748 D 15 '50 170w

"Good suggestions for quantity cookery." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 76:966 Je 1 '51 30w

"Those who think of the presiding family as living on caviar and baked alaska will be surprised at the comparative simplicity of the delicious recipes which Mrs Nesbitt used. This useful book is not without documentary value." Charlotte Turgeon
+ N Y Times p14 My 13 '51 100w

"Mrs. Nesbitt's book is fascinating not only for telling about the culinary secrets of the White House but for the chatty introductions to each chapter, which relate anecdotes about the Roosevelts and their friends." M. A. Gram
+ Sat R of Lit 34:46 Mr 10 '51 280w

NETTELS, CURTIS PUTNAM. George Washington, and American independence. 338p il maps $5 Little
B or 92 Washington, George 51-6375

"Study of George Washington and his times, showing how the Virginian bestrode the Revolution like a Colossus, the very mainspring of the movement that sought for the triumph of liberty against the reactionary plutocracy of the Hanoverian Court." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:48 O 1 '51

"Prof. Nettels presents a revisionist picture of Anglo-American relations during this period, a picture which some historians feel is overdue. This is on the grounds that much of our Revolutionary history was written under the influence of the Anglo-American alliance of the 20th century, and was overly sympathetic toward the motives of the king and the actions of his ministers. Certainly this volume should go a long way toward redressing the balance, if the historical scales have been askew." R. J. Graf

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 S 30 '51 450w

Current Hist 21:228 O '51 100w

"This is excellent text book material and so well written as to be of interest to the general public, even if the Revolution does not have quite the sales appeal of the Civil War. . . Fully annotated, this should be a good school and library choice."

+ Kirkus 19:374 Jl 15 '51 160w

"Professor Nettels has wedded his own style of writing very happily with the contemporary accounts of the period: this results in easy reading although the book is a scholarly one, with no attempt to win readers by 'make-up' talk or action." W. B. Ready

+ Library J 76:1330 S 1 '51 110w

"It is a pity that such an excellent and readable volume as this should be marred by two weaknesses. By discussing the state of England for sixty pages before he introduces the subject suggested by his title, Mr. Nettels substantially lessens the artistry of his conception and may lose readers who have not the patience to wade through a long introduction. Much more serious is the author's treatment of the England of George III. . . Nevertheless, this is otherwise a first-rate book. It will prove of real use and interest, especially if readers omit the first two chapters which are not essential to this very perceptive study of the revolutionary career of George Washington." Carl Bridenbaugh

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 N 4 '51 950w

"Though vivid, and, on the whole, just, this survey is at points misleading. . . However, flaws or no flaws, the volume emerges as an exceptionally well-written, interesting and important book, deserving the wide audience it is likely to attract." Bernhard Knollenberg

+ — N Y Times p7 S 30 '51 550w

"One may reasonably question some of the author's interpretations, but 'George Washington and American Independence' is a genuinely interesting and stimulating book." J. R. Alden

+ — Sat R of Lit 34:14 O 20 '51 700w

Wis Lib Bul 47:253 N '51

NEUSCHEL, RICHARD F. Streamlining business procedures. 334p il $5 McGraw

658 Industrial management 50-14899

"Concerned with the development of a logical, organized approach to the systematic ordering of operations, treating procedures as one of the basic administrative techniques, to be understood and carried out with full cooperation by top operating management, line supervisors and staff specialists. A practical body of techniques is developed for planning, fact gathering, selling the plan to the organization throughout, installing and maintaining." Library J

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 75:2005 N 15 '50 100w

"This book is an excellent introduction to the field of procedures research." H. J. Roth

+ Management R 40:312 My '51 380w

NEVILLE, LESLIE E. Aircraft designers' data book. 534p il $10 McGraw

629.1341 Airplanes—Design and construction. Helicopters 51-80

"Contains many hundreds of drawings, together with a smaller number of photographs, of the mechanical details of the structures and mechanisms of a wide range of modern airplanes. Compact discussions of structures are also included. Condensed specifications of United States military, personal and transport aircraft and of leading Canadian, British and French planes are tabulated in the appendix. Most of the material has been compiled from Aviation and Wings." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 47:215 F 15 '51

"The book is of interest to students of aircraft structure, to beginning designers, and to draftsmen." R. R. Hawkins

Library J 76:524 Mr 15 '51 100w

"A valuable reference book for both engineers and draftsmen employed in the design of airplanes."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 36:1 Ja '51

NEVILLE, MARGOT, pseud. of MARGOT GOYDER, and NEVILLE (GOYDER) JOSKE. Murder before marriage; pub. for the Crime club. 218p $2.50 Doubleday

51-9268

Detective story.

Kirkus 18:685 N 15 '50 70w

"Intelligent and properly mystifying."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 F 18 '51 190w

"On the whole, this is a cheerful, well-constructed mystery melodrama, a blend of good Australian horse sense and fluttery femininity." Nancie Matthews

+ N Y Times p15 F 11 '51 140w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p24 F 11 '51 100w

Sat R of Lit 34:40 Mr 24 '51 50w

NEVINS, ALBERT J. Adventures of Wu Han of Korea; il. by Kurt Wiese. 244p $2.50 Dodd

Children in Korea 51-9642

"A twelve-year-old orphan boy, bound to wicked old One Eye, sells chestnuts on the streets of Pyongyang. An accident frees him from this bondage, and, instead of becoming a beggar, he is adopted into a Christian family far off in the country." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 47:277 Ap 1 '51

"It is not stated whether the author, a Maryknoll missioner, has been to Korea, but only the most thoro knowledge and research could have produced such an understanding picture of these so little known people and their country. Their characteristics and family relationships, their legends and customs, their activities from the sailing of kites to the hunting of tigers make fascinating reading, apart from the lively story." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Mr 11 '51 220w

"Recommended for intermediate and junior high ages."

+ Library J 76:417 Mr 1 '51 100w

"Into an exciting story is woven a great deal of information about pre-war Korea, all most interesting." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 25 '51 190w

"Although this is a contrived story, weighted with facts, its subject compels one's interest." Irene Smith

N Y Times p22 My 27 '51 130w

Sat R of Lit 34:47 Je 9 '51 200w

Wis Lib Bul 47:93 Ap '51

NEW standard encyclopedia; systematized information, clear, concise, complete. 10v il maps charts $69.50 de luxe ed $79.50 Standard educ. soc, 130 North Wells st, Chicago 6

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries 51-4584

"New Standard Encyclopedia should not be confused with Funk & Wagnalls New Standard Encyclopedia of Universal Knowledge, reviewed in the Subscription Books Bulletin of January 1945. Reviews of the present work appeared in the January 1931, April 1934, and April 1940 issues of the Bulletin. Since it was last evaluated, notes about the set have appeared in

NEW standard encyclopedia—Continued
October 1946 and October 1948 issues. World Progress, the quarterly supplement, was reviewed in January 1950 and has not been reexamined in connection with this review. . . Material is arranged alphabetically by subject. Most of the articles are brief, averaging three or four topics to a two-column page with, occasionally, articles of several pages. There is no index to the set but there are numerous cross references in the form of main entries and which see references within the body of articles, and as guides to additional information at their close." Subscription Bks Bul

"The Subscription Books Committee has examined three consecutive printings of the New Standard Encyclopedia and has observed some improvement from issue to issue. However, the set needs extensive revision and rewriting in a style that more nearly approaches that of standard works. It does not attain the literary quality claimed for it in its Foreword and much of its material is out of date. Though lack of timeliness in some fields is not uncommon in continuously revised works, this encyclopedia also lacks the over-all authority and accuracy which can sometimes compensate in part for some out-of-date material. Because of its combined deficiencies in style, authority, accuracy, and timeliness, New Standard Encyclopedia is not recommended."
— Subscription Bks Bul 22:52 Jl '51 2500w

NEW YORK TIMES. One hundred years of famous pages from the New York times, 1851-1951; with an introd. by Henry Steele Commager. 100p pa $1 Simon & Schuster
071.47 51-7349

"Here is the way history has hit the breakfast-table since the first issue of The New York Times appeared on September 18, 1851. Most of the 'famous pages' facsimiled are, inevitably, pages one—the Dred Scott decision, the Harper's Ferry raid, Fort Sumter (which the Times called 'Sumpter' throughout the story), Gettysburg, and so on down to the recall of MacArthur." Sat R of Lit

"It is a fascinating, colorful, often thrilling story, and though similar stories can be told, mutatis mutandis, about every other big newspaper in the country, certainly 'The Times' had its local variations not duplicated elsewhere." G. W. Johnson
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 S 23 '51 600w

"It is an admirable selection, well reproduced—the heads are easily legible, and the smallest reading-glass will pick up the text. This detail is here noted because, while a lot of people will merely look through the book, a lot more will want to read it. They should." J. T. Winterich
+ Sat R of Lit 34:25 O 6 '51 330w

Springf'd Republican p5C S 23 '51 90w

NEWBY, PERCY HOWARD. Young May moon. 320p $3 Knopf
51-9089

Character study of an adolescent boy, showing the effects upon him of the death of his stepmother, whom he had supposed to be his mother. He is sent to an uncle in Wales while his father is trying to readjust to his loss. The story ends with the return of his father, and the boy's awakening to a real appreciation of him.

Booklist 47:237 Mr 1 '51

Reviewed by Henry Cavendish
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 28 '51 600w

Reviewed by Ruth Chapin
Christian Science Monitor p13 Ja 25 '51 600w

"With an opening chapter setting a scene that is never fulfilled, this does not coalesce into a well-contrived whole, although there are some incidents, scenes and sections that have force and fascination."
+ — Kirkus 18:680 N 15 '50 190w

"Recommended." Donald Wasson
+ Library J 76:40 Ja 1 '51 80w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel
Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 20 '50 120w

"The framework is here for a moving book but Newby's concentration is less on the boy's emotion and development than on descriptions of objects and minor characters. . . The novel has the look of a surrealist landscape, the objects charged and vivid, the figures dim and standing alone in a bright and arid world."
New Repub 124:20 Ap 9 '51 270w

Reviewed by Antonia White
New Statesman & Nation 39:75 Ja 21 '50 480w

"Mr. Newby is a skillful writer and a keen observer. His prose is excellent, but his characters are less successful. In 'The Young May Moon' he has told two stories, one about Philip, the other about his father. The former conveys a real, deep sense of tragedy, while the latter remains thin and unconvincing. It is well to keep in mind, also, that two stories are one too many for any one book." Louis Falstein
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ja 14 '51 500w

"There is a good deal of humor in these pages. There is also a fulsome lot of symbolism and allegory. These embellishments give unusual lights and shadows to the endless revelations Philip has to face." Charles Poore
+ — N Y Times p4 Ja 7 '51 470w

"It is unlikely that any other writer will succeed in wringing so much lyrical beauty out of descriptions of the ordinary. D. H. Lawrence had this same gift for wringing beauty out of descriptions of people doing such things as washing dishes in a farm sink, making bread, or walking down a road at night to catch a bus. But where Lawrence was warm, rich, and alive, wholeheartedly a partisan, Newby is still, cold, and detached, very much the spectator. This book, with its suggestions of exhaustion and resignation to the petty, is disturbing as the latest work of the only English writer with anything approaching genius to be produced by his generation so far." Anthony West
New Yorker 26:88 Ja 27 '51 410w

San Francisco Chronicle p23 F 18 '51 350w

"The baker, his wife and his young Welsh assistant are well drawn, the father is real, but I was not always happy about the boy, whose mental age seemed to vary from eight to Mr. Newby's." L. A. G. Strong
Spec 184:160 F 3 '50 200w

"The best thing about The Young May Moon is that Novelist Newby writes about his people with fraternal warmth and no condescension. Unlike those 'proletarian' and naturalist novelists who are so shaken with mission that they make their workers or sharecroppers into faceless morons, Newby knows that a truck driver can be a man of sensitivity and a baker a man of imagination."
+ Time 57:82 Ja 15 '51 550w

"If The Young May Moon is regarded as a piece of symbolism, it is obscure; if regarded upon the plane of realism it is unhappy. And yet there are excellent scenes, there is much sharp observation; it is in a sense a tribute to Mr. Newby that at the end of the book the reader should feel so discontented."
Times [London] Lit Sup p53 Ja 27 '50 360w

Reviewed by Paul Pickrel
Yale R n s 40:576 spring '51 200w

NEWCOMB, THEODORE MEAD. Social psychology; with the assistance of W. W. Charters, junior. 690p il $4.50 Dryden
301.15 Social psychology 50-8039

"There are two introductory chapters on the nature and scope of social psychology, followed by five chapters on motives and attitudes. Two chapters discuss social norms, and role behavior and the self. There are four chapters devoted to the topics of individual personality and group membership. Beginning with the motivation of social behavior in the individual, Newcomb's analysis implicates the individual in progressively more complex group relations." (Ann Am Acad) Bibliography. Indexes.

"There are many fine flashes of analysis sprinkled through Newcomb's pages, where he seems to be on his own as a scientist and not striving to make Sherif lie down with Freud. . . Moreover, Newcomb's own formal research, of which he happily makes full use in this book, is of the best. Social Psychology is the first of a series on interpersonal relations to issue from Dryden Press under his editorship. If that series gives scope to more of Newcomb himself than does its first item, we can be sure of some substantial contributions to our field." N. N. Foote

+ Am Soc R 15:681 O '50 900w

"The work as a whole is well-written and should be stimulating as a textbook. . . Newcomb's Social Psychology [is inadequate] from the position of a symbolic interactionist. Aside from this, the work is excellent; it can be said without further qualification to be the best in its field, and likely to remain so for some time." F. E. Hartung

+ — Ann Am Acad 273:248 Ja '51 450w

Reviewed by W. L. Kolb

Social Forces 29:217 D '50 250w

NEWHOUSE, EDWARD. Many are called; forty-two short stories. 384p $3.75 Sloane

51-12159

"These forty-two are about half the stories published by the writer during the years between 1939 and 1950. Thirty-nine first appeared in The New Yorker. The other three were originally printed in previous collections, one in Anything Can Happen and two in The Iron Chain. Dates of publication are given on the first page of each story." Verso of dedication page

"Incredibly, Edward Newhouse has gathered together another volume of short stories as good as his first collection. I say 'incredibly' because to me it seemed altogether improbable that he could duplicate that amazing initial volume." V. P. Hass

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 S 9 '51 300w

"There is nothing fuzzy-wuzzy about Mr. Edward Newhouse, who has a nice sense of direct narrative prose, the meaning of which is perfectly clear and does not demand of the reader a talent for guessing or a penchant for novelty." John Cournos

+ Commonweal 54:531 S 7 '51 280w

"A hefty dose for one sitting, but a sure bargain in sustained entertainment."

Kirkus 19:328 Jl 1 '51 250w

Reviewed by Robert Payne

New Repub 125:20 D 3 '51 350w

"Whether the author is writing about men without women or the distaff side as he does with sureness and insight in several of these tales he always displays an accurate ear, an infallibility of character and a discerning eye for telling incident. 'Many Are Called' is a whale of a book in which Mr. Newhouse piles up abundant proof that he is one of America's finest short story writers." Richard Harrity

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 N 4 '51 700w

"Mastery of the form has kept pace with the growth of insight and knowledge. Always entertaining, Mr. Newhouse has become more and more resourceful, so that he now stands high in the ranks of contemporary stort-story writers." Granville Hicks

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 26 '51 290w

"Mr. Newhouse has a talent for portraiture and storytelling. If he could just once pause long enough to examine the implications of his subject matter, he would certainly write fewer stories, but the chances are they would be really good." R. B. West

Sat R of Lit 34:14 S 15 '51 460w

NEWMAN, BERNARD (DON BETTERIDGE, pseud). Epics of espionage. 270p $4.50 Philosophical lib.

351.74 Spies 51-12061

"From Moses to Dr. Fuchs, the outstanding espionage cases of history are presented foreshadowing the intense spy activity of two world wars. The most important part of the book deals with modern espionage." (Publisher's note)

Reviewed by Edward Barry

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 S 23 '51 270w

"Mr. Newman's own experiences in intelligence work during the two world wars, his familiarity with the people of central and eastern Europe, and his grasp of historical trends make him an ideal interpreter of all the aspects of undercover work—its techniques, dangers, glamour, and drudgery. He deals with a topic in which practically everyone is interested, and as a good raconteur he knows how to make the most of it." E. S. Pisko

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 O 31 '51 600w

Kirkus 19:474 Ag 15 '51 130w

NEWMAN, DAISY. Diligence in love. 253p $2.75 Doubleday

51-9696

The story of the spiritual regeneration of a New York city advertising woman. Vaughan Hill goes to a Rhode Island Quaker community in search of historical material for some advertising copy. Her kindly reception by the Quakers touches her deeply and in time she brings her whole family to the little New England town.

Booklist 47:254 Mr 15 '51

Bookmark 10:157 Ap '51 60w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 173:154 My '51 180w

"This is a book that may be read quickly for its entertaining quality; but it will be pondered at length for its wisdom; and it is a book to be cherished." Elizabeth Yates

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 22 '51 650w

"Welcome both for content and handling."

+ Kirkus 18:735 D 15 '50 190w

Library J 76:719 Ap 15 '51 60w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 F 25 '51 140w

"Although the details of the plot are as elementary as the alphabet, Miss Newman's exegesis of the Quakers' faith and their meditative process of 'centering down' is well done and offers much to the reader in these confused times." Florence Crowther

N Y Times p20 F 25 '51 270w

Reviewed by Jessamyn West

Sat R of Lit 34:14 Mr 24 '51 800w

NEWMARK, MAXIM, comp. Dictionary of foreign words and phrases. 245p $6 Philosophical lib.

422.4 English language—Foreign words and phrases 51-9186

"Compiled from English sources and containing foreign words, phrases, mottos, proverbs, place names, titles, allusions and abbreviations from the Latin, Greek, French, Italian, Spanish, German, Russian, Hebrew and other foreign languages, together with English equivalents and definitions and a Greek orthography." Subtitle

Bookmark 10:107 F '51 30w

"All of those bothersome foreign words and phrases that bob up in newspapers, magazines, and books are cataloged in dictionary form in this handy book." Gilbert Twiss

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ap 1 '51 100w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 F 11 '51 220w

NIALL, IAN, pseud. See McNeillie, J.

NIBBELINK, DON D. Complete book of lighting, for color and black-and-white photography. 256p il $2.95 Midland pubs, 1025 Beloit av, Forest Park, Ill.

770 Photography—Lighting

Practical study on the different types of lighting for both indoor and outdoor photography. Includes photographic studies and diagrams. Index.

Booklist 47:307 My 1 '51

"If there is a better use—in the field of photo books—for $2.95 than buying a copy of this second in a projected series by the fledgling Midland Publishers of Forest Park, Ill., we have yet to come across it. Nibbelink, a writer and editor for the Eastman Kodak company, knows his subject thoroly and expresses himself clearly and well. Result: An invaluable reference or textbook for both amateur and professional photografers." Robert Cromie

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 F 18 '51 270w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '51

Wis Lib Bul 47:186 Jl '51

NICHOLS, JAMES HASTINGS. Democracy and the churches. 298p $4.50 Westminster press

261.7 Democracy. Christianity and politics 51-10765

"Survey of the relationship of Catholicism and Protestantism in Europe and America, to the development of democracy. Author finds that 'democracy owes more to nonconformity than to any other single movement' (Tawney)." Library J

"All the trivial errors one might normally point out in so comprehensive a book fade away into insignificance when weighed against the seriousness of the contents of this book and the magnificent courage of the author, his publishers, and the sponsorship of the Committee on Religious Tolerance of the Federal Council, which compares so favorably with the appeasement practiced by some of the local Federation secretaries." C. H. Moehlman

+ Ann Am Acad 278:231 N '51 550w

Reviewed by L. T. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 S 16 '51 400w

"This work of Dr. Nichols is monumental—in its calm treatment of an exciting subject, in its scholarly marshaling of historical facts and events, in its meticulous analysis of the complex and confusing interplay of forces, in its penetrating insight into the meaning of the great story that it tells, and in the fascinating manner of its telling." C. C. Morrison

+ Christian Century 68:661 My 30 '51 1550w

"Remarkable book. . . On points of history Professor Nichols is very clear. . . On some points a reservation is necessary: I believe Professor Nichols accepts inadequate authority and exaggerates the extent of domination of the American press and radio on behalf of the Spanish Fascists in the 'thirties. I believe, too, that he goes to extremes in accepting the inevitability or the necessity of new social controls. . . Professor Nichols' book is on solid ground so long as it sticks to its parallel stories: the development of free government under the force of free religion and the continuous effort of totalitarian government to curb and destroy representative institutions." E. D. Canham

+ — Christian Science Monitor p15 Je 14 '51 1100w

"The author brings a wealth of learning as a historian to this study of the relationship of both Protestantism and Catholicism to the development of democracy during the last three centuries. So far as the impact of Catholic policy on democracy is concerned, it seems to me that Nichols makes his case—and an extremely negative case it is. I think that the book would be more persuasive if the author did not write as a prosecutor who never gives Roman Catholic policy-makers the benefit of any doubt. . . But Protestants—and also Catholics—do need to be warned by the mass of evidence Nichols has gathered that there is nothing in the history of the Vatican's dealing with democracy to give encouragement to such a hope." J. C. Bennett

+ — J Religion 31:282 O '51 1200w

Kirkus 19:275 Je 1 '51 270w

"A scholarly, carefully documented historical survey. . . A provocative, important book." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 76:772 My 1 '51 140w

Time 57:74 Je 25 '51 550w

NICHOLSON, NORMAN. H. G. Wells. (English novelists ser) 98p $2 Swallow, A.

823 Wells, Herbert George [50-13792]

"Following a brief biography and background come two chapters on 'The Scientific Romances.' Next considered are 'The Comedies'—'Kipps,' 'Tono-Bungay' and 'Mr. Polly'. Two chapters on 'The Discussion Novels'—'Ann Veronica,' 'The New Machiavelli,' 'Mr. Britling Sees It Through' and 'The World of William Clissold'—and one on 'The Later Works,' such as 'The Outline of History' conclude the short critical study." Springf'd Republican

Booklist 48:103 N 15 '51

"A thoughtful and sympathetic examination of a writer who never professed to be an artist yet who found such telling fictional forms to express the thrust of his mind that the word is nonsense if it excludes him." N. S.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 S 12 '50 200w

"Mr. Nicholson's little book, the latest addition to 'The English Novelists Series,' is a very good essay indeed. It cannot have been easy to write." Walter Allen

+ New Statesman & Nation 40:328 S 30 '50 850w

Reviewed by Delancey Ferguson

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 12 '51 360w

"An excellent and succinct study."

+ New Yorker 27:66 Jl 7 '51 150w

Sat R of Lit 34:11 Ag 18 '51 140w

"Mr. Nicholson is continually pleasant to read; his language is fresh all the time, and though never strained, keeps you on the alert. He manages to keep balanced his criticism of Wells as a creative writer and as a social thinker, and has produced an admirable piece of introductory criticism." Bonamy Dobree

+ Spec 184:277 S 8 '50 400w

Springf'd Republican p11D Je 24 '51 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p116 F 23 '51 1650w

NICOLE'S guide to Paris; il. by Pierre Berger; wood engraved by Armanelli; prefaces by Louis Bromfield and Jean Cocteau. 203p $4.25 Editions A. De Milly, 119 W. 57th st, N.Y. 19

914.436 Paris—Description [51-3674]

"A colorful, if somewhat commercial guide. The editors have worked out a system of symbols whereby any traveller can map out his Parisian itinerary and still keep within his budget. Rampant with color and black and white drawings, the guide comes complete with a separate booklet listing useful addresses. Indexed." Library J

Reviewed by W. K. Harrison

Library J 76:968 Je 1 '51 50w

"The 'Nicole Guide' approaches the subject in a completely businesslike way, covering the city from the Louvre to Fontainebleau in a series of subsections in which historical background is combined with today's facts in a sharply condensed form which, to my mind, is well on the dull side, due to the boiling-down that is evident. Indeed, I shouldn't be surprised if the editors of the volume came to exactly that conclusion and decided to spark up the book with the colorful illustrations in order to give it some life." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ap 30 '51 420w

"A potpourri of Parisian tidbits, including color plates, sketches, text, advertisements, and an appendix of useful addresses separately bound. Berger's water colors are by far the most impressive thing in the book, and you will get the feeling that you would like to detach and frame them." H. S.
Sat R of Lit 34:39 Ap 21 '51 180w

NICOLL, MAURICE. The new man. 235p $3 Hermitage

226.7 Jesus Christ—Teachings. Parables. Miracles 51-11662

"An interpretation of some parables and miracles of Christ." (Subtitle) The author was for many years a London specialist in psychological therapy. He believes "that the parables of the gospel record have particular reference to the evolution of a new type of man out of present human nature now involved in repeated folly and mass catastrophe." Chicago Sunday Tribune

---

"Here is a mature and unusual approach, both to the study of the New Testament and to the study of the development of a new type of man, the prototype of whom was found in Jesus. In the field of religion, at least, it is one of the most exciting books of the year." Clarence Seidenspinner
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 26 '51 360w

"Our thumbs are definitely down on this psychiatric treatment of the Gospels." F. J. Moore
— Churchman 165:16 N 1 '51 200w

NIEBUHR, HELMUT RICHARD. Christ and culture. 259p $3.50 Harper

261.6 Culture. Christianity 51-11010

"The problem: In what way, or degree is Christ relevant to the situation in which the Christian must live? Or, put in another way, how far can a Christian's life, as a member of society, be made to accord with his loyalty to Christ? Niebuhr's answer: Just as far as the Christian's faith carries him." (N Y Times) Index.

"This book by the Niebuhr of Yale is bound to become a much discussed volume, not only because it is written by a Niebuhr, but because of its highly original analysis of what is perhaps the world's most important theme: how are Christ and culture interrelated? K. B. Cully
+ Christian Century 68:895 Ag 1 '51 850w

"Dr. Niebuhr has worked out a 'topology' of solutions and discussed them (pro and con) with great brilliance, learning and intellectual generosity." Joseph Fletcher
+ Churchman 165:15 Jl '51 220w

Reviewed by C. H. Voss
+ Churchman 165:17 S '51 200w
Cleveland Open Shelf p26 N '51

Reviewed by G. W. Davis
Crozer Q 29:69 Ja '52 600w

"Niebuhr's liberal use of illustrative material saves his book from being abstract and difficult and makes it significant not only to theologians but to a much wider group."
+ Kirkus 19:271 Je 1 '51 130w

"A superb piece of analytical writing in tackling what is just about the toughest problem faced by Christians." Paul Hutchinson
+ N Y Times p10 Jl 1 '51 470w
U S Quarterly Bk R 7:252 S '51 180w

NIELSEN, HELEN. Gold coast nocturne. 203p $2.50 Washburn

51-12802

Mystery story.

"Technically squeaky but well enough written for moderate diversion." Drexel Drake
Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 O 14 '51 30w
Kirkus 19:413 Ag 1 '51 60w

Reviewed by James Sandoe
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p31 O 7 '51 120w

"More a thriller in the Cornell Woolrich manner and less of a detective story than her first and markedly stronger in writing and atmosphere. She's constructed a neat surprise twist and filled in her story with warm detail on Chicago life, from the wealthy suburbs to the Polish slums. Everything should be fine if next time she pays more attention to the plausible development and motivation of her protagonists." Anthony Boucher
N Y Times p44 O 21 '51 40w

"Miss Nielsen works it out with logic, good writing and an astonishingly tough-fibered approach. Few women writers depart so far from the Had-I-But-Known school." L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 7 '51 50w

"Don't miss." Kathleen Sproul
+ Sat R of Lit 34:39 S 29 '51 40w

NIELSEN, HELEN. Kind man. 223p $2.50 Washburn

51-9560

Detective story.

Kirkus 19:36 Ja 15 '51 70w

"Marty's psychological problems are not sufficiently developed in this new novel to make up for a somewhat obvious plot."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 Mr 25 '51 110w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 4 '51 80w

"Top first performance—more please."
+ Sat R of Lit 34:40 F 24 '51 50w
Times [London] Lit Sup p777 D 7 '51 50w

NILES, BLAIR (RICE) (MRS ROBERT NILES). Martha's husband; an informal portrait of George Washington; il: contemporary portraits and prints with photos. of localities by Robert Niles. 307p $4 McGraw

B or 92 Washington, George

An informal biography of George Washington which views him as "the man behind the myth." Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by R. J. Graf
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 18 '51 550w

Reviewed by W. K. Rugg
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 26 '51 550w

Reviewed by Wayne Andrews
Commonweal 54:97 My 4 '51 220w

"Correcting his spelling, calling him by his first name, and treating him throughout like a normal human being that he was for all his greatness, Mrs. Niles gives average American readers a Washington they can appreciate and enjoy." E. H. Smith
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Mr 4 '51 1050w
— New Yorker 27:121 Mr 10 '51 60w

"Too intelligent and honest to engage in a deliberate debunking campaign as some professional historical iconoclasts have done, the author has stuck to her sources and strives to picture the man as he was, without gilt and without tarnish." R. H. Dillon
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 F 25 '51 1500w

NILES, B. R.—Continued

"As a result of her abstraction from political issues Mrs. Niles cannot take the full measure of 'the man behind the myth.' But she does succeed in presenting an informal portrait of George Washington, a boy without a cherry tree and a man more affectionate than one finds in the Houdon marble bust." Adrienne Koch

+ — Sat R of Lit 34:28 Ap 14 '51 800w

Wis Lib Bul 47:187 Jl '51

NIVEN, DAVID. Once over lightly [Eng title: Round the rugged rocks]. 276p $2.75 Prentice-Hall

51-7575

The adventures of a handsome British ex-soldier on his way to Hollywood, and after his arrival.

"David Niven evidently couldn't decide whether his story was to be farce or a serious tale, and the story suffers from this indecision. The farcical parts are very funny. The Hollywood portion of the story is presumably authentic as to background. I think you may enjoy it. But never again will I be able to accept David Niven in the role of a bishop in a movie. Not after those love affairs!" A. F. Otis

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 18 '51 190w

Kirkus 19:539 S 15 '51 160w

"The target is diversion, and it is well hit. Not a work of autobiography, the English actor assures you."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 D 16 '51 110w

"Mr. Niven (to put the matter bluntly) has forgotten that the novel, no matter how light-hearted, must be a two-way collaboration, with the reader admitted to the partnership on equal terms. For this reason alone, his first venture seems unlikely to earn a literary Oscar." A. H. Weiler

N Y Times p46 N 18 '51 360w

"Mr. Niven, who is industrious and good-tempered but not a writer, has produced a novel about an Englishman in Hollywood, and has included in it an enormous number of jokes, anecdotes, and quips, as well as a great deal of light conversation."

New Yorker 27:182 N 17 '51 40w

Sat R of Lit 34:37 D 22 '51 160w

Reviewed by Tangye Lean

Spec 187:832 D 14 '51 80w

Springf'd Republican p6D D 30 '51 130w

NOBEL FOUNDATION. Nobel, the man and his prizes, by H. Schuck [and others]. 620p $6 Univ. of Okla. press

B or 92 Nobel, Alfred Bernhard. Nobel prizes 51-12693

"A fiftieth anniversary commemorative volume contains a summary of Nobel's life and work and the operation of the Nobel Foundation, and reviews all the prize-winning achievements in literature, physics, chemistry, medicine, and peace. More useful for reference than for general reading." Booklist

Booklist 48:64 O 15 '51

Bookmark 11:82 Ja '52 30w

Reviewed by Leila Flower

Christian Science Monitor p11 O 4 '51 750w

Reviewed by J. N. Leonard

N Y Times p6 S 9 '51 600w

NOBLE, BARBARA. Another man's life. 252p $3 Doubleday

51-4408

A young Englishman, at loose ends and unhappy, tries to commit suicide by throwing himself into the Thames. A stranger, in rescuing Simon Chart, loses his own life. The story from there on deals with Simon's remorse and his relationships with the dead man's family.

"The handful of characters are sharply drawn and the plot is passably suspenseful." Pat Patten

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 9 '51 120w

"A consistent and intelligent treatment which, although it does not attain distinction, offers credible, readable entertainment."

Kirkus 19:191 Ap 1 '51 160w

"There is not a false note in this novel. Barbara Noble has faced up to its theme without evasion, sentimentality or distortion. 'Another Man's Life' is balanced in its sympathy and temperate in judgment." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Jl 1 '51 400w

"In a sensitive and intelligent novel, Barbara Noble combines a hopeful theme—the resurrection of a lost soul—with an almost hopeless protagonist. . . As a short story, this might have kept its delicate wistful tones, and had its vitality too. As it is, it achieves the stature for a full-length novel only as the story ends." Isabelle Mallet

+ — N Y Times p17 My 27 '51 280w

"Their story is told with care and thought, but with too many words and too much humorless conjecture."

New Yorker 27:117 My 26 '51 70w

Reviewed by Ray Pierre

Sat R of Lit 34:37 S 1 '51 270w

NOBLE, PETER. Ivor Novello, man of the theatre; with a foreword by Noël Coward. 306p il $3 British bk. centre

B or 92 Novello, Ivor [51-5279]

"Ivor Novello's death, though it could not, like Garrick's, be said to have eclipsed the gaiety of nations, affected a large section of the British public. From being a West End star, Novello had become a legend, an institution as national as Gilbert and Sullivan. . . If Olivier was the British Drama, Novello was the British Theatre. . . He belonged to the West End and the great Northern 'dates.' . . The young man from Cardiff titillated his public with plays about dope fiends and apaches before going on, via Lord George Hell and Henry V, to charm the heart out of them with his Balkan royal exiles. The story of this development is to be found in Mr. Peter Noble's book." New Statesman & Nation

"Like most theatrical success stories, the book contains a lot of superlatives, some amusing photographs and a great deal too many Christian names. It also seems to include all Novello's press cuttings. But it is there for the record." John Raymond

New Statesman & Nation 41:542 My 12 '51 650w

Reviewed by William Hogan

San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 25 '51 140w

Reviewed by Russell Rhodes

Sat R of Lit 34:36 O 20 '51 360w

"Ivor Novello, a biography by Peter Noble, British theater historian, does full, sometimes fulsome, credit to its flamboyant subject, and tells a success story as pat as any Novello melodrama."

Time 58:108 S 10 '51 800w

"It is useful now to have a record of his career, even though this book—finished in Novello's lifetime—is wholly the tribute of a faithful 'fan' and has value principally as a catalogue of parts and plays. The best pages in it are those of the foreword by Mr. Noel Coward, which—at Mr. Coward's request—will not appear in reprints. It will be a pity to lose it, for it is affectionate and just."

Times [London] Lit Sup p304 My 18 '51 500w

NOEL, STERLING. I killed Stalin. 281p $3 Farrar, Straus

51-12054

A story of international adventure dealing with an episode in the war of the near future.

Reviewed by Milton Crane
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 S 2 '51 360w

Kirkus 19:357 Jl 15 '51 100w

"An exciting secret service story. . . Plenty of suspense. Recommended." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 76:1222 Ag '51 90w

"Mr. Noel can't resist a few diatribes about present-day Washington follies, which are somewhat tedious, but on the whole he tells an exciting and quite convincing story."
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 S 16 '51 150w

"This fantastic tale would represent the final descent of the E. Phillips Oppenheim-Geoffrey Household school into the cops-n-robbers classification were it not for one thing. That is the successful way Mr. Noel has mingled fact and narrative episode—to create a reversal of the old saw about truth being stranger than fiction." H. C.
N Y Times p19 Ag 19 '51 230w

"Mr. Noel has set up a labyrinthine world of intrigue and violence so convincing in the half that we can recognize from our own limited newspaper knowledge that we are led to concede the rest. It moves at high speed, and quite apart from its political appeal it will hold the thriller addict to the bitter end." N. L. Rothman
+ Sat R of Lit 34:14 O 27 '51 300w

NOLAN, BRIAN (FLANN O'BRIEN, pseud). At Swim-Two-Birds. 315p $3 Pantheon bks. 51-1498

"A story, or series of stories, told in neo-Joycean manner on several alternating levels. The surface level concerns the 'I' of the book, a young man living with his uncle in Dublin, attending college in a desultory fashion, and indulging in what he calls 'spare-time literary activities.'. . The rest of the book is pieced out with the young man's attempts to write a book." N Y Times

---

Atlantic 187:87 My '51 120w

"The author has a fine flair for detecting and deflating sententious discourse, particularly that cloaked in understatement. E.g., the Emperor Nero 'was certainly not everything you look for in a man.' The oddest note of all is that the first chapter is 316 pages; there is no chapter two. Reviewer's reaction to all this: mixed." Riley Hughes
+ — Cath World 173:151 My '51 250w

"A mad book? Yes, definitely, but on the whole a pleasant and, at times, delightful excursion into lunacy at its bright best." J. M. Flynn
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Ap 1 '51 350w

Reviewed by Vivian Mercier
Commonweal 54:68 Ap 27 '51 700w

"A very funny book, but special."
Kirkus 19:69 F 1 '51 140w

"This is a comic masterpiece of modern Irish literature that is as dazzling as the aurora borealis and twice as difficult to describe. . . Flann O'Brien takes [his] conflicting story elements and [his] odd assortment of characters and skilfully combines them into a whole that comes very close to being a work of genius." Richard Harrity
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Mr 11 '51 900w

"He draws consistently on only one humorous device, a giganticism which, with all due respect to Gargantua and Paul Bunyan, can grow exceedingly tiresome. . . 'At Swim-Two-Birds' is a translation of the Gaelic place name at which Sweeny rested during one of his flights. This suggests that Mr. O'Brien may have begun by translating the saga of 'Bhuile Shuibne'; a beautiful and poetic rendition indeed, before he tried to mingle it with the other strands of this preposterous pastiche." Lloyd Frankenberg
N Y Times p4 Mr 11 '51 700w

"There are passages in the book that are great fun, and the author's ear for Dublin talk is unerring, but the physical atmosphere of soiled, stale linen is unpleasant."
New Yorker 27:137 Ap 14 '51 70w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Mr 11 '51 100w

NOLAN, JAMES BENNETT. The Schuylkill. 310p il $3.50 Rutgers univ. press

917.481 Schuylkill river and valley 51-10621

"The modest Schuylkill—its name is Dutch for 'Hidden Creek'—has been hidden too long. Along its meandering 125-mile course are dozens of points to stay the curious traveler in time or on foot. Mr. Nolan, professor emeritus at Albright College and the author of nine regional books about Pennsylvania, here provides a Baedeker for both the wanderer in history and the summer explorer." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 47:343 Je 1 '51

Current Hist 21:168 S '51 80w

"There are several reasons why Bennett Nolan's 'The Schuylkill' belongs in the front rank of recent works on the American scene. His familiarity with the Hidden River from source to mouth, as well as with its history, and his steadfast determination not to sentimentalize his account are as refreshing as they are rare. To one who knows this stream intimately comes a realization that the author could have doubled the size of his book had he chosen. In a sprightly, though dignified, manner, he not only narrates the Schuylkill's story but also leads his reader to share his deep love for its beauties and his sorrow for what men have permitted it to become." Carl Bridenbaugh
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 My 20 '51 850w

"Mr. Nolan's book has the merit of staying close to the banks of the river. Philadelphia, for example, does not overwhelm matters despite its size, commerce and large place in history. Mr. Nolan confines himself to the watershed, the result being a book which, despite its abundance of fact, remains orderly, clear and perfectly balanced." Charles Lee
+ N Y Times p6 Je 3 '51 500w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 O 7 '51 280w

NOLAN, JEANNETTE (COVERT). La Salle and the grand enterprise. 178p $2.75 Messner

La Salle, Robert Cavelier, sieur de—Juvenile literature 51-12789

Fictionized biography of La Salle for grades seven to nine. Index.

Booklist 48:131 D 1 '51

Kirkus 19:487 S 1 '51 140w

"Aside from its biographical and historical value, this is a definite contribution to the promotion of interracial tolerance and understanding. The high regard and sympathy of LaSalle for the Red Man was no small factor in his success; this is admirably and sincerely presented. Recommended." E. J. Bowland
+ Library J 76:1717 O 15 '51 90w

"A capably written, easy-reading, exciting story of this great explorer." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p26 N 11 '51 80w

"Interesting in style, with swift action and colorful description. As in her earlier books, however, she has not hesitated to invent conversation and interpret events and personalities with the freedom of a novelist. This is, in short, readable historical fiction that is centered around historical characters." R. A. B.
+ Sat R of Lit 34:50 N 10 '51 180w

NOLAN, MRS JEANNETTE (COVERT), and others. Poet of the people; an evaluation of James Whitcomb Riley. 106p $2 Indiana univ. press

B or 92 Riley, James Whitcomb 51-3048

"Three essays, originally presented as a symposium at Indiana University, give three views of the poet; as a creator of the typical Hoosier

NOLAN, J. C.—Continued
character, as a Victorian who was a master of light verse, and as a product of the frontier. Contents: Riley as a children's poet, by Jeannette Covert Nolan; James Whitcomb Riley: A Victorian American, by Horace Gregory; The frontier and James Whitcomb Riley, by James T. Farrell." Booklist

Booklist 47:327 My 15 '51

"By its nature, this rambling, but analytical little book will be of interest primarily to students of Riley. Lack of cohesion will make it difficult for others to absorb." J. T. McCutcheon
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Jl 1 '51 200w

Reviewed by Siegfried Mandel
Sat R of Lit 34:59 Je 16 '51 330w

NOLAN, WILLIAM A. Communism versus the Negro. 276p $3.50 Regnery
325.26 Negroes. Communism 51-13806

"This book is a case study of one area of communist propaganda in the United States. It describes the attempt of the Communist party to exploit the miseries and misfortunes of . . . the Negro people. It does not make startling revelations about individual persons and organizations. Rather, its emphasis is upon trends and techniques, strategies and tactics. People and groups of people are dealt with only in so far as they exemplify these trends and techniques." (Pref) Index.

Kirkus 19:424 Ag 1 '51 120w

"There is little in the book that a careful reading of newspapers over the years would not have given. This is not an exposé. However, there is a value in having all of the information gathered in one place—superficial though it is." Milton Byam
Library J 76:1330 S 1 '51 190w

"The book is easy, informative reading and covers scores of techniques, incidents and major and minor operations on a wide variety of fronts. The persistence and the detailed action will amaze most American whites who have not realized what a strategic prize the allegiance of several millions of Negroes would be to the Soviet dictatorship." Roy Wilkins
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 N 25 '51 600w

Reviewed by J. S. Redding
N Y Times p9 D 16 '51 330w

NOLL, EDWARD M., and MANDL, MATTHEW. Television and FM antenna guide. 311p il $5.50 Macmillan
621.38835 Television antennas. Radio antennas 51-1082

"A fairly thorough presentation of antenna theory and practice for men engaged in the installation or troubleshooting of FM and other VHF equipment. It is arranged in two parts. The first part contains the exposition of theory and of antenna characteristics and general antenna types. The second part is more specific and covers such subjects as the antenna site survey, antenna erection, booster amplifiers, and the general characteristics, physical dimensions, etc. of specific varieties of antenna, such as the dipole and the conical." Library J

Booklist 47:268 Ap 1 '51

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 76:524 Mr 15 '51 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:18 Mr '51

NORDELL, ESKEL. Water treatment for industrial and other uses. 526p il $10 Reinhold
628.1 Water—Purification 51-2074

"The treatment of natural waters in order to render them more suitable for industrial and domestic uses is a subject of wide interest. Most waters must be treated in order to make them suitable for use in steam boilers. At the other end of the scale many waters must be treated in order to make them fit for washing clothes. This is a comprehensive work on the subject with 120 tables of reference data, approximately the same number of illustrations and long bibliographies. It is written on a professional level, and it is of interest to chemists, process engineers and many others whose work involves the use of water in industry. The author is associated with the Permutit Company." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. B. Pope
Chem Eng 58:291 My '51 800w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:46 My '51

"Comprehensive and authoritative, this book contains a mine of information on modern developments in water treatment. . . This bibliography is well selected, and there is a good index. The work provides an excellent handbook for the practitioner, the teacher, and the advanced student."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:324 S '51 140w

NORMAN, ALBERT. Our German policy; propaganda and culture. 85p $2.50 Vantage
943.086 Germany—History—Allied occupation, 1945- . Germany—Intellectual life. Germany—Politics and government 51-11563

"Albert Norman was with the historical section of the Information Control Division of the United States occupation forces in Germany. He has written an impartial study of the policies and practices of our re-education program in Germany. He treats our efforts to use the various media—press, radio, book publication, motion pictures, the theatre and music—to disseminate democratic ideas." Current Hist

Reviewed by A. A. Shea
Canadian Forum 31:164 O '51 290w

Current Hist 21:166 S '51 60w

Springf'd Republican p11D Je 10 '51 80w

NORMAN, CHARLES. Crumb that walked; more about Jane Jonquil; pictures by M. B. Graham. 52p $1.75 Harper
51-9816

More adventures of Jane Jonquil and her father and mother, this time at their summer house in Connecticut. For ages five to eight.

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 15 '51 150w

"Prime for a father to read to his own little girl at bedtime, there is a freshness about them and a literary quality that is a rare delight."
+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Je 16 '51 80w

Reviewed by J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews
Horn Bk 27:100 Mr '51 40w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore
Horn Bk 27:237 Jl '51 70w

"We are still very fond of Jane and her lyrical father who first appeared in Mr. Upstairs and Mr. Downstairs, but we are sorry that in this sequel there seems to be a dearth of 'made-up' stories."
Kirkus 19:24 Ja 15 '51 130w

"Rather sophisticated juvenile humor, but will be well liked by children who are ripe for it. Recommended." M. R. Martignoni
+ Library J 76:528 Mr 15 '51 70w

"This is for fathers especially to read aloud to girls aged five to seven, and also for those eight year olds who appreciate a special sort of 'different' everyday story. It is slight but has definite quality. The naive pen pictures sometimes have charm, sometimes not, the sort that might have been done by a clever child." L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Jl 1 '51 170w

"The Jonquils like each other, they like the world; this reviewer, waxing lyrical, cannot imagine any reader who wouldn't like the Jonquils." Marjorie Fischer
+ N Y Times p22 Mr 25 '51 170w

Sat R of Lit 34:48 Mr 17 '51 180w

NORMAN, CHARLES. Dominick Dragon; or, The happy fellow. 187p $2.50 Bell pub.
51-10005

A fantasy about some poverty-stricken people of the Greenwich Village type, who live a carefree existence, in which worry about poverty is an unknown quantity.

"Fine for 'summer' reading."
+ Kirkus 19:31 Ja 15 '51 100w

"Mr. Norman's fictional confection is about as sustaining as a tearoom tart and should be read outdoors on a park bench in the early spring."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 Ap 22 '51 150w

"A shameless whimsey, pleasant enough except when the writing becomes just too artless."
New Yorker 27:119 Ap 7 '51 40w

"By the end of the first page of this book the reader knows it will be enchantingly written, and by the end of the tenth he has begun to suspect that, unfortunately, it isn't going to matter much." Vance Bourjaily
Sat R of Lit 34:55 Ap 14 '51 300w

NORMAN, CHARLES. Mr. Oddity, Samuel Johnson, LL.D 348p $4 Bell pub.
B or 92 Johnson, Samuel 51-12372

A biography of Samuel Johnson. "Mr. Norman's biography is a chronological profile of Johnson's life, embracing some of the best of the conversations recorded by Boswell, but presenting, for the most part factually, its subject from the third person perspective, and not in any compellingly intimate Boswellian manner." (Christian Science Monitor)

Booklist 48:100 N 15 '51

"A loose, rambling account, pegged chiefly on quotations from the great man obtained from Mrs. Thrale, Baretti, Murphy—and, of necessity, chiefly from Boswell, whom he treats with scant courtesy. Surely the ethics of the biografer's profession might have gained Boswell a kinder word. The effect created by the abrupt passage from bon mot to anecdote to withering reply is unpleasantly jerky." Milton Crane
— Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 23 '51 450w

"It is regrettable that there are few pieces of fat in this reheated dish. But on the subject of Samuel Johnson, who has probably been written about in more books, monographs, and articles than any other English literary figure except Shakespeare, the paucity of new material or fresh appreciation is understandable. It is a fortunate circumstance that Johnson can be warmed over again and again and still be stimulating. One almost suspects, so much does this book quote the best Johnsonian conversations, that the author wrote it out of the joy of living vicariously with his 'Mr. Oddity,' and other famous men who comprised The Club." Roland Sawyer
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 S 18 '51 800w

New Repub 125:28 O 29 '51 30w

"Mr. Norman has a gift for bringing out the drama, comic or tragic, implicit in a situation. Anyone who wishes to begin an acquaintance with Johnson will find this book a good introduction." J. W. Krutch
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 N 4 '51 850w

"As a popular initiation into the mystery of the personality of Dr. Samuel Johnson this book could scarcely be improved. Charles Norman has obviously a sympathy with his subject and a knack for simplification. If there is nothing startlingly new in his portraits he happily keeps clear of the use of Freudian terminology so tempting to modern biographers where enigmatic elements creep in and make the task of explication difficult." John Cournos
+ N Y Times p42 O 14 '51 260w

"Mr. Norman has presented Dr. Johnson skillfully and to the life, and has given a fine sampler of the conversation of 'the greatest talker who ever lived.' But he has also tried to bring the reader to an understanding of Johnson's peculiar religiosity, his peculiar sexuality, and his peculiar peculiarness without allotting himself enough space for these large and vexed questions. . . A very entertaining book, however."
New Yorker 27:127 O 6 '51 100w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p10 S 15 '51 300w

"Mr. Norman's book is not at all satisfactory, although it has some virtues. Except for the title it is intelligent; it uses reliable sources without distorting them, and it is written in a style that is clean and expressive. It sketches in the facts of Johnson's life with brief clear strokes, and includes many long extracts of conversations and letters. Its minor faults are not important. . . Its great and overwhelming fault is that it does not encompass its subject, and does not deepen our understanding of any important aspect of that subject. Without disparagement one may say that the book reads like a superior book for superior juveniles, and it would be useful as an introductory study before entering Boswell's biography." Robert Halsband
— + Sat R of Lit 34:38 O 13 '51 750w

Springf'd Republican p14C O 14 '51 370w

NORMAN, CHARLES. Pundit and the player; Dr Johnson and Mr Garrick; a biography for young people; il. by Bruno Frost. 148p $2.75 McKay
B or 92 Johnson, Samuel—Juvenile literature. Garrick, David—Juvenile literature 51-13347

The pundit of the title is Samuel Johnson, the player David Garrick. This biography for young people traces the friendship and careers of these two men from their Litchfield days to the ends of their lives.

Booklist 48:128 D 1 '51

"A shorter and more superficial book than Enter David Garrick, it will appeal to less serious readers." S. M. A.
+ Horn Bk 27:420 D '51 60w

Kirkus 19:620 O 15 '51 240w

"For large public library collections, some public high schools, and more private schools." Eleanor Kidder
Library J 76:2126 D 15 '51 80w

"A charming, brief biographical sketch. . . Readers of high school age and adults could not ask for a more delightful brief introduction to the great of the great century." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p26 N 11 '51 360w

"Though no greater contrast can be imagined than in the personalities of the ponderous Johnson and the volatile Garrick, their lives ran parallel from beginning to end. Their many relationships made them long-standing friends and occasional antagonists. The men and their brilliant friends are brought to life against a faithful re-creation of London society of the Seventeen Hundreds." Elizabeth Hodges
+ N Y Times p16 N 11 '51 200w

"Of great value as it might be used in a course on eighteenth-century literature, this is too readable, too absorbing to be left entirely to a classroom. It is an attractive looking book with black-and-white drawings that give a good picture of the period. We have an idea that young people will find it for themselves, and will thoroughly enjoy it."
+ Sat R of Lit 34:50 N 10 '51 140w

NORTON, ALICE MARY (ANDRE NORTON, pseud). Huon of the horn; being a tale of that Duke of Bordeaux who came to sorrow at the hands of Charlemagne and yet won the favor of Oberon, the elf king, to his lasting fame and great glory; il. by Joe Krush. 208p $2.75 Harcourt
398.22 Huon de Bordeaux 51-13839

"It is a later part of the Charlemagne saga, coming after the death of Roland at Roncevaux.

NORTON, A. M.—Continued
André Norton has adapted the story from a translation made in 1534 by Lord Berners. . . In it Huon, Duke of Bordeaux, is betrayed by the knight Amaury. . . To redeem himself in the eyes of the emperor Huon is sent on a difficult, a practically impossible, mission to Babylon, which is in the hands of the Saracens—Charlemagne's bitter enemies. Oberon gives him the magic horn and through it he is able to accomplish the mission 'to his lasting fame and great glory.' " Sat R of Lit

---

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '51

Kirkus 19:632 N 1 '51 170w

Reviewed by L. R. Markey
Library J 76:2126 D 15 '51 70w

"Remarkable, exciting old tale made new. . . [Miss Norton] has cut and adapted from an English translation made in 1534. I would call it a slip when she writes 'all men knoweth,' but there are few similar errors." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 N 11 '51 240w

"In an engaging style appropriate to the period, André Norton carefully retains the mood of the tale. Lacking the breadth of Howard Pyle's 'The Story of King Arthur and His Knights,' this adaptation suffers from an overabundance of incident." S. G. Shaw
N Y Times p26 N 11 '51 180w

"This is a book that belongs with the great company of the hero tales. . . The story is stirring and inspiring. Huon has something of Roland's qualities: charm, courage, a romantic appeal, and the fiery spirit of youth. It is an important addition to the hero stories. We owe a debt of gratitude to adapter and publisher."
+ Sat R of Lit 34:70 N 10 '51 230w

"The book is delightfully written in the old-style English commonly associated with fairy stories." H. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p8C D 16 '51 110w

NORTON, ANDRE, pseud. See Norton, A. M.

NORTON, THOMAS JAMES. Undermining the Constitution; a history of lawless government. 351p $3 Devin-Adair

342.739 U.S.—Politics and government. U.S.—Constitutional law 51-9697

"The author, who in the twenties published a standard commentary on the constitution, calls his new commentary a 'history of lawless government' and cites case after case to support his charge that 'clever, irresponsible men' have been doing their best to demolish the Constitution and popular government along with it. As examples of how the intent of the writers of the Constitution has been 'demolished,' Mr. Norton discusses such matters as the TVA, the agricultural adjustment act, the national labor relations act, the child labor law, the assumption by Washington of much police power originally held by the several states, the influence of the Supreme Court in creating new laws, and the loss of congressional power to the executive." (Springf'd Republican) Index.

"I cannot recommend for the inquiring college student or the thoughtful young people of the time a better book to enable them to understand the social phenomenon which puzzles and disturbs all thoughtful men today than this clear, thoughtful and sound study of the devices and legal stratagems and fictions by which our Constitution has been far advanced toward becoming a hollow shell." J. T. Flynn
+ Cath World 173:477 S '51 380w

Reviewed by Walter Trohan
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 1 '51 500w

"It is an interesting book, quite clearly and forcibly written, and might be read with profit even by those who disagree with Mr. Norton's views. Something obviously is wrong in Washington, and Mr. Norton at least provides a seriously considered and documented diagnosis." R. F. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p6D Ap 8 '51 340w

NORWAY, NEVIL SHUTE (NEVIL SHUTE, pseud). Round the bend. 341p $3.50 Morrow 51-9629

"Story of a skilled Asiatic aeroplane mechanic, who by his unconscious example, set a pattern of 'a way of life that brings men to worship through work.' " Library J

"In many respects the best novel Nevil Shute has written." Edward Weeks
+ Atlantic 187:79 Mr '51 450w

Booklist 47:254 Mr 15 '51

Bookmark 10:158 Ap '51 50w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Cath World 173:153 My '51 240w

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Mr 4 '51 600w

"Nevil Shute has written a provocative and exciting novel about the effectiveness of practical religion. 'Round the bend' is Middle Eastern slang for slightly mad; and in context with the book the title urges the question, Is it mad to start one's work with prayer to do the job right? Or, is it mad to believe that putting into one's work the very best of which one is capable is a form of worshiping God?" Ruth Chapin
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 22 '51 680w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '51

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 27:196 My '51 110w

"Perhaps this is Shute's most important book, though not on the level of straight story. At times difficult, at times technical, at times distasteful to those who pigeonhole religion as apart from daily life, there is nonetheless that emphasis on seeking spiritual values which is a trend in modern fiction not to be overlooked."
Kirkus 18:678 N 15 '50 360w

"Inter-racial and religious overtones fresh, powerful, suggestive. . . Heartily recommended." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 76:407 Mr 1 '51 90w

" 'Round the Bend' is as simple as a neighbor's tale told over a back fence, but it lifts and swirls and gradually takes off on a flight of fictional magic that is lovely to witness and enchanting to experience." Thomas Sugrue
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Mr 4 '51 1150w

" 'Round the Bend,' one regrets to report, generates but little warmth or light. The East is mapped, not penetrated. Connie Shaklin, mystic, immune to fleshly joy or pain, embodies an ideal of detachment too inhuman, perhaps for us. Less oriental than a synthetic blend of East and West, he fails to ring true." Frances Gaither
N Y Times p20 Mr 4 '51 290w

— New Yorker 27:111 Mr 3 '51 60w

"What Mr. Shute attempts to say in this novel (which is, unquestionably, one of the best he has written) is that every religion requires to be refreshed from time to time by a new teacher." Jane Voiles
+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Mr 11 '51 650w

"Anglo-Saxon writers, I'm afraid, don't have much luck with saints. . . In 'Round the Bend' Nevil Shute has explored holy ground in a way that can be described only as brash. His affinity with otherworldliness is quite as feeble and faltering as was Maugham's. . . In Mr. Shute's language to go round the bend is to depart voluntarily from the realm of reality to go wooing the wonders and beauties of mysticism. But to tell the truth Mr. Shute hasn't gone round the bend: he hasn't even got a single peep around it." James Gray
Sat R of Lit 34:28 Mr 17 '51 650w

Reviewed by Tangye Lean
Spec 185:792 Je 15 '51 260w

Reviewed by Richard Henchey
Springf'd Republican p16A Ap 1 '51 360w

"Mr. Shute's flat characterization and romantic approach are well adapted to narrative of a semi-documentary kind; but his disregard of so many of the complications of human life prevent Round the Bend from being an effective vehicle for discussing the many religious and social questions which it sets out to ventilate."
Times [London] Lit Sup p369 Je 15 '51 450w

NOTRE DAME UNIVERSITY. Committee on international relations. The Soviet union. See Gurian, W., ed.

NOURSE, EDWIN GRISWOLD. 1950's come first. 184p $2 Holt

338.973 U.S.—Economic policy 51-498

"The former chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers makes a broad appeal in this short book for patriotic action and self-restraint. He thinks primarily in terms of the nation's three principal economic groups: farmers, workers and business men. Mr. Nourse recognizes the claims of each to government solicitude; he also calls upon each to re-examine its group demands in the light of the common interest." Commonweal

---

"In this little book, the former chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers presents what to many readers will seem an oft-told tale, and to others a provocative discussion of our basic socio-economic problem. Yet others, when they have finished the book, will feel that the tale is still untold. . . He writes well, urbanely and smoothly. He is something of a phrasemaker; on almost every page he turns a phrase or coins a term, which even if a little forced, livens the narrative and carries the reader along." E. E. Hagen
Am Econ R 41:710 S '51 1000w

Reviewed by B. M. Gross
Am Pol Sci R 45:867 S '51 4200w
Booklist 47:246 Mr 15 '51
Bookmark 10:132 Mr '51 40w

Reviewed by D. C. Corbett
Canadian Forum 31:138 S '51 320w
Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '51
Commonweal 53:478 F 16 '51 210w
Current Hist 20:291 My '51 70w
Foreign Affairs 30:158 O '51 20w

Reviewed by M. Bronfenbrenner
J Pol Econ 59:363 Ag '51 950w

Reviewed by C. E. Noyes
Nation 172:186 F 24 '51 900w

Reviewed by George Soule
New Repub 124:19 My 14 '51 650w

"This book deserves a wide audience. Avoiding the sensationalism and partisanship that detracts from the usefulness of many popular books on economic problems, it describes with courage and fairness some of the imminent domestic dangers to our economic system and analyzes the sources of these dangers." L. V. Chandler
+ N Y Times p6 F 4 '51 800w

Reviewed by W. N. Loucks
Pol Sci Q 66:300 Je '51 800w
San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 1 '51 400w

Reviewed by C. E. Ayres
Sat R of Lit 34:15 Ap 7 '51 700w

Reviewed by Sylvia Stone
Survey 87:233 My '51 650w
U S Quarterly Bk R 7:154 Je '51 250w

NOYCE, WILFRID. Scholar mountaineers: pioneers of Parnassus; with wood-engravings by R. Taylor. 164p $3.50 Roy pubs.

804 Mountaineering 51-1692

A group of essays about twelve personalities, chosen for "their interpretation of mountains" in their writings. The twelve are: Dante; Petrarch; Rousseau; De Saussure; Goethe; Wordsworth; John Keats; John Ruskin; Leslie Stephen; Nietzsche; Pope Pius XI; Robert Falcon Scott. Short bibliography.

Kirkus 18:501 Ag 15 '50 90w
School & Society 72:432 D 23 '50 40w

"Thoughtful and lively essays. . . Written with humour and aptly illustrated." G. W. Young
+ Spec 184:350 S 29 '50 800w

NUMELIN, RAGNAR JULIUS. Beginnings of diplomacy; a sociological study of intertribal and international relations. 372p $12 Philosophical lib.

572 Society, Primitive. Diplomacy. International relations 51-5004

"This work, completed while Numelin was serving in the Finnish legation at Brussels, is the result of a long period of research, largely in the libraries of London and Paris. The volume carries not only the bookish flavor resulting from the method of research but also the strong imprint of Numelin's academic training under Westermarck. . . The chapters deal with such subjects as strangers and guests; messengers, heralds, and envoys; envoys and their credentials; peace negotiators and war emissaries." Am J Soc

---

"This volume displays a high degree of erudition and gives evidence of a very extensive reading program on the part of the author. . . Except for some occasional and almost incidental passages—such as the section on the silent trade—the book will be of little interest to most sociologists." Joseph Rosenstein
Am J Soc 56:502 Mr '51 250w
Am Pol Sci R 45:923 S '51 30w

"Dr. Numelin casts his net wide (approximately seventeen hundred titles are cited), but he deals wholly in fragments and splinters. The result is that although he proves the existence of primitive diplomacy and reveals something of its forms, we are still left quite ignorant of its content, its functional processes, the nuances of negotiation, the psychology of motivation in diplomacy, and its cultural setting and interrelationships. The essence of diplomacy is subtle behavioral interaction—not external form." E. A. Hoebel
Am Soc R 15:810 D '50 600w

Reviewed by L. A. Mander
Ann Am Acad 278:194 N '51 410w

"This scholarly author is not reviving the romantic concept of the 'noble savage,' but is basing his conclusions on observed facts." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 68:943 Ag 15 '51 140w

"The volume is well organized and clearly written except for occasional lapses attributable to the author's use of an acquired language. More careful editing might have corrected this, as well as the phenomenally large number of typographical errors. . . Beyond treating an area of anthropological research which the author claims has hitherto been neglected, the study is valuable (and this is the author's basic purpose) for the light it sheds on an internationally troubled age by investigation of diplomacy in its fundamental and unencumbered forms." William Sacksteder
+ — Ethics 62:73 O '51 450w
Manchester Guardian p4 O 13 '50 160w

NUSSBAUM, ARTHUR. Money in the law, national and international; a comparative study in the borderline of law and economics. 2d ed 618p $8 Foundation press

332.4 Money 50-8684

"A much revised and considerably enlarged edition of an earlier book, Money in the Law [Book Review Digest 1939]. It is concerned primarily with the legal aspects of money. Book I deals with the law of money in general. Drawing upon the monetary experiences, laws and large numbers of judicial decisions in the United States, Great Britain, Germany, France and several other countries, it offers a comprehensive treatment of many legal aspects of money. . . Book II deals with

NUSSBAUM, ARTHUR—Continued
money in international law, covering such subjects as modern laws relating to foreign money, the discharge of foreign currency debts in local money, international aspects of gold clauses, exchange control, international coöperation on monetary matters, and the International Monetary Fund. An annex of about twenty pages presents a brief legal history of American currency." Pol Sci Q

"A remarkably concise, yet accurate and inclusive, monetary history of the United States. In addition students of economic doctrine will find throughout the book references to many interesting laws, customs, and theories on the subject of money." G. W. McKinley
+ Am Econ R 41:716 S '51 800w

"If a reviewer may report an incidental reaction, the treatment at times has an apodictic flavor. Unfortunately, this is not always warranted, as may be illustrated by a few points that deserve query, if not criticism. . . Notwithstanding, this is a useful work, the most comprehensive analysis in English of many current questions arising in connection with money and currency. As such, it is a definite and valuable contribution." H. E. Yntema
+ — Harvard Law R 64:1045 Ap '51 950w

"This reviewer knows of no other volume which treats the law of money in such a comprehensive and thorough way. Professor Nussbaum is to be congratulated on his painstaking scholarship and industry, and for his contribution to our understanding of legislative and judicial theories of money." L. V. Chandler
+ Pol Sci Q 66:308 Je '51 500w

NUTTALL, MRS MADELEINE. The gift. 250p $2.50 Wyn
51-9698

Character sketch of a modern town, with roots stretching back a hundred years, and of Pidgey, a loveable old gentleman who was a link between past and present.

Booklist 47:238 Mr 1 '51
Kirkus 19:12 Ja 1 '51 120w

"A simple, quiet story sincerely written and reassuring for anyone who reads it." E. P. Nichols
+ Library J 76:705 Ap 15 '51 90w

"This is a pretty tale, almost an allegory. There is just enough reality in it to make one wish that it were true, just enough of dreaming to offer escape from reality. There is need for whimsicality and truth so gently combined. Pidgey will find friends wherever he goes, bearing his rare selflessness." C. N. Govan
+ Sat R of Lit 34:56 Ap 14 '51 200w

NYE, RUSSEL BLAINE. Midwestern progressive politics; a historical study of its origins and development, 1870-1950. 422p il $5 Mich. state college press
977 West—Politics. U.S.—Politics and government—1865- 51-11144

"The author traces the rise and fall of Midwestern progressivism from the days of the Grangers through the age of William Jennings Bryan and the insurgency of Fighting Bob La Follette to the present. These he presents in an interrelationship, all aspects of a Middlewestern phenomenon, the later movements based upon the traditions of earlier 'radicalism.'" (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

Am Pol Sci R 45:908 S '51 40w
Booklist 48:63 O 15 '51
Reviewed by J. A. Clark
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 10 '51 320w

"Mr. Nye writes of his progressives with sympathy. A Midwesterner himself, the author of a biography of George Bancroft and a study of abolitionism, he has a flair for broad synthesis and for readable narrative. He executes with unusual success an exceptionally difficult and important assignment. Because of the breadth of his task, few aspects are explored in detail and neither his research nor his interpretation is remarkable for originality." Richard Hofstadter
+ N Y Times p3 Jl 15 '51 600w

"The advanced scholar will find little that is new in Dr. Nye's treatment. Even his main thesis . . . is well established. Students and teachers of American history, however, will be grateful for a book that covers so important a subject so thoroughly."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:276 S '51 200w

O

O. HENRY MEMORIAL AWARD. Prize stories of 1951; sel. and ed. by Herschel Brickell. 325p $3.75 Doubleday
Short stories—Collections (21-9372)

Contents: The hunters, by Harris Downey; The burning, by Eudora Welty; The house of flowers, by Truman Capote; Sense of direction, by Leonard Casper; The pot of gold, by John Cheever; I came from yonder mountain, by E. S. Connell; Black water blues, by Monty Culver; A name for the city, by William Faulkner; In the time of demonstrations, by J. B. Hall; Peggety's parcel of shortcomings, by John Hersey; A sense of destination, by F. R. Kensinger; Old century's river, by Oliver La Farge; The Jersey heifer, by P. H. Love; The invaders, by Robie Macauley; The sojourner, by Carson McCullers; Monte Saint Angelo, by Arthur Miller; The butcherbirds, by Esther Patt; Homecoming, by E. G. Patterson; The shadow of an arm, by T. H. Phillips; Cyclists' raid, by Frank Rooney; Slow journey, by Sylvia Shirley; Who too was a soldier, by J. C. Smith; A country love story, by Jean Stafford; It's a nice day—Sunday, by R. E. Thompson.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic 188:72 O '51 360w
Booklist 48:32 S 15 '51
Reviewed by Horace Reynolds
Christian Science Monitor p13 S 13 '51 550w

"A surprisingly large number of excellent short story collections have been published in the last year or so; perhaps it is partly by contrast that the 1951 O. Henry group seems so poor." Frank Getlein
Commonweal 54:555 S 14 '51 490w
Kirkus 19:329 Jl 1 '51 240w

"These twenty-four stories are both technically and imaginatively top grade. There isn't a mean—i. e. small-minded—story in the lot, nor one written to a formula." F. H. Bullock
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ag 26 '51 400w

"The thirty-third annual O. Henry Award collection makes generally very good and sometimes exciting reading." John Brooks
+ N Y Times p4 Ag 26 '51 550w

"Mr. Brickell, in the winnowing he and his staff did to get the collection down to 24 titles, found plenty of first-rate stories. As far as I'm concerned—and I've been reading this collection for two decades and have helped to judge it twice before—this is without question the best 'O. Henry Prize' collection I've read." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 28 '51 850w
Reviewed by William Peden
Sat R of Lit 34:21 S 8 '51 700w
Springf'd Republican p22A S 9 '51 400w

OAKES, MAUD VAN CORTLANDT. Beyond the Windy Place, life in the Guatemalan highlands. 338p $3.50 Farrar, Straus
917.281 Guatemala—Description and travel. Mayas. Indians of Central America—Rites and ceremonies 51-11042

"For more than a year and a half Maud Oakes lived without a companion of her own race in the Indian village of Todos Santos high in a remote section of the mountains of Guatemala. Her purpose was to study local survivals of the ancient Mayan religion. . . By her tact, her kindness, and above all by her deep sense of true democracy, Miss Oakes not only came through unscathed, she wound up as a trusted and accepted member of their community. The story of achieving such a status is inevitably one of many small human incidents, of the unfolding of characters and development of friendships day by day and of the writer's constant learning." N Y Times

Booklist 47:379 Jl 1 '51

Bookmark 10:230 Jl '51 50w

"'Beyond the Windy Place' is neither top-flight anthropological science nor is it great literature. Its charm resides in its simplicity and its characterizations." W. M. Krogman

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Je 17 '51 450w

Kirkus 19:147 Mr 1 '51 220w

"Highly recommended." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 76:968 Je 1 '51 50w

"Written simply, understated throughout, it has the pace, suspense and shapeliness of a well made novel." Dan Wickenden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Je 3 '51 700w

"It is the kind of story that moves gently, carrying the reader along by its continuous revelation of human nature. Miss Oakes has used a happy treatment. Her style is simple, narrative, free of tricks, at moments slightly naïve. . . A protest must be made against the common vice, demonstrated in extreme form here, of blandly misspelling Spanish. Inevitably Miss Oakes has used many Spanish words, while her people's names are in that language. At least 50 per cent of both are misspelled, sometimes fantastically." Oliver La Farge

+ — N Y Times p20 My 27 '51 480w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p12 My 29 '51 700w

"Miss Oakes evidently came to Todos Santos uncluttered by concepts or historical problems, hence without genuine questions. Her work is better read as a personal document, therefore, than as a contribution to anthropological knowledge." Sol Tax

Sat R of Lit 34:24 D 8 '51 500w

Springf'd Republican p5D Jl 15 '51 320w

OAKES, MAUD VAN CORTLANDT. Two crosses of Todos Santos; survivals of Mayan religious ritual [phot. by Hans Namuth and others]. 274p $5 Pantheon bks.

970.62 Mayas. Indians of Central America—Rites and ceremonies 51-9561

"A first-hand account of survivals of Mayan religious ritual and practice in Guatamala today. The author lived on a friendly footing for two years in the remote mountain village of All Souls, gathering data which afford new insight into the psychology of one of the earliest peoples of the western hemisphere. Paul Radin contributes a valuable introduction. The volume includes many original photographs, reproductions of ancient Mayan manuscripts, a glossary, a map and an index." Springf'd Republican

Am Anthropol 53:574 O '51 170w

"The author apparently was very successful in gaining access to the intricacies of the ceremonial life of the village and her results are described in a most interesting style. Instead of statistical tables and charts she presents vivid pictures of what happens to residents of the village with whom she was intimately associated. Not only does she describe the religious life of the people completely; she also provides a great deal of valuable information regarding the social, economic, and recreational life as well. The work is illustrated by excellent photographs and contains an Introduction by Paul Radin." N. L. Whetten

+ Am Soc R 16:900 D '51 300w

"Nonscientists will find the broad, human picture fascinating while scientists will rejoice at the rich context. The genuineness of Miss Oakes' human relationships gives her information a rare, third dimension. A scientist cannot but deplore the leads that she did not follow because she did not recognize them, details she overlooked and occasional naïve interpretations. He may think with regret on the marvelous results a woman with Miss Oakes' natural gifts could have obtained had she also a thorough technical training—and then pause to ask himself, can anyone with technical training still capture that third dimension?" Oliver La Farge

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 15 '51 500w

"'Two Crosses' is a very beautiful book, luxuriously printed and illustrated, and tastefully written. But for a monograph in a scholarly series, there is a great deal of white space; as I first read the book I wondered what had happened to the seventeen months in Todos Santos. The book is almost exclusively source material, and yet by quick count only 70,000 words. The reason is that Miss Oakes's 'method' was caution carried to its ultimate." Sol Tax

Sat R of Lit 34:24 D 8 '51 500w

Springf'd Republican p5D Mr 25 '51 110w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:254 S '51 240w

OAKES, VANYA. See Oakes, V. A.

OAKES, VIRGINIA ARMSTRONG. Willy Wong, American; il. by Weda Yap. 174p $2.50 Messner

51-9838

Willy Wong lived in San Francisco's Chinatown. It was Willy's ambition to play baseball and be considered a one hundred per cent American. But there was his grandfather with his pride in his Chinese heritage. This story for ages eight to twelve describes Willy's dilemma and its outcome.

Booklist 47:316 My 1 '51

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 My 6 '51 180w

Reviewed by J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews

Horn Bk 27:248 Jl '51 80w

"Good, sound ethics, excellent format, easy-flowing style, and illustrations by Weda Yap that add to the atmosphere make this a book that should prove valuable for creating international understanding as well as being a good red-blooded story of family life. Recommended for all libraries." Harriet Morrison

+ Library J 76:713 Ap 15 '51 90w

"We have many of these stories of racial adjustment, all very purposeful, some very dull. This is one of the best, full of spunk, written from Willy's own point of view." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ap 15 '51 230w

"Curiously, we have very few stories of Chinese-American life. This is a good one, lacking something in suspense, but truly engaging. Its special importance lies in Willy's new-found pride in his heritage, which enables readers to see the contributions which his people have made to America." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p18 Ap 15 '51 180w

Wis Lib Bul 47:125 My '51

O'BRIEN, FLANN, pseud. See Nolan, B.

O'BRIEN, JOHN SHERMAN. Royal Red; il. by Kurt Wiese. 215p $2.50 Winston

51-12319

An adventure-mystery story of the Canadian northwest for boys of twelve and older.

"My husband, a native of British Columbia who has spent nine years in and about Prince George, was eager to read this book. Altho he found some deviations from his own knowledge of life in that region, he pronounced it an A-1 adventure tale, guaranteed to be popular with young readers." A. B. McG.

O'BRIEN, J. S.—Continued
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 N 11 '51 150w
Kirkus 19:230 My 1 '51 150w

"Unfortunately, the author is not always accurate in his statements about the Mounties nor skillful in his portrayal of the Athabascan Indians." E. S. Mitchell
Library J 76:1435 S 15 '51 70w

"The story is the last one by the late creator of the Silver Chief series, long popular with young readers, and although completed by others is a worthy successor to the yarns about the husky who helped the Mounties."
+ Springf'd Republican p14C O 14 '51 50w

O'CALLAGHAN, SHEILA MARY. Cinderella of Europe; Spain explained. 199p il $3.75 Philosophical lib.
946.08 Spain—History. Spain—Social conditions 51-11768

"Defense of the present regime in Spain, in an effort to prove it more representative than the government it displaced. The author describes family life, state nurseries, state aid, the devoutness of General Franco, and seems motivated by fear of Russia on the one side, and determination to show how Spain is misunderstood on the other." Kirkus

Am Pol Sci R 45:1218 D '51 10w
Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 68:1512 D 26 '51 800w

"Before one gets halfway through the book he is wondering whether Miss O'Callaghan really was as much absorbed in defending Franco Spain as she was in castigating the British socialist experiment. Every Spanish subject seems to lead to a caustic paragraph on Bevin et al. She snaps back to Spain quickly but before long is back again in England, almost as if she were being pushed violently back and forth. . . The only things that save her introduction, factual as it might be, though almost pointedly undocumented, is her humor and ability to concoct pungent phrases utilizing that humor." W. M. Callahan
Commonweal 54:581 S 21 '51 360w
Foreign Affairs 30:162 O '51 10w

"Not very penetrating."
Kirkus 19:470 Ag 15 '51 70w

"In 'Cinderella of Europe' Sheila O'Callaghan offers a panegyric of the Franco regime in Spain. Unfortunately she does little to prove that the 'focal inspiration of the laws in contemporary Spain is the Christian doctrine that man is the bearer of eternal values.' This is a pity, for she has traveled much in Spain, since first she went there in 1931. . . She has some interesting observations to make on conditions today." Anne Fremantle
N Y Times p16 O 21 '51 320w

"Miss O'Callaghan comes to praise General Franco, and finds it quite impossible to do so without blackguarding the leaders of the last Republic. The first third of the book reads like Nationalist propaganda of fourteen years ago, and when one sees from the very odd foreword the sort of book the author consulted, one understands the reason why. . . The blatant partisanship destroys confidence, and the facetious triviality of much of the writing is very trying." E. D. Gannon
Spec 185:221 F 16 '51 420w

O'CONNOR, EDWIN. The oracle. 216p $2.75 Harper
51-10534

Portrait of a bombastic radio broadcaster. After phenomenal success, and mountains of fan mail, Christopher suffers a drastic defeat. For a little over a day he is deflated, but presently he is again riding the crest of the wave—his belief in himself renewed.

"Like Saki, Mr. O'Connor has produced a caricature which comes outrageously close to reality."
Atlantic 187:79 My '51 190w

"Mr. O'Connor, whose first novel this is, has made good use of his apprenticeship in radio writing and in the short story. He has a good sense of form and of the humorous and character-revealing detail. And, agreeable to note, he writes rather well." Robert Wichert
+ Commonweal 54:386 Jl 27 '51 390w
Reviewed by Al Capp
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Jl 15 '51 550w
Reviewed by Robert Phelps
N Y Times p22 Je 10 '51 120w
New Yorker 27:125 My 12 '51 40w

"Mr. O'Connor knows exactly how to do this kind of job and he does it to perfection. His story is enormously entertaining, and first-rate satire to boot." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Je 29 '51 650w

"Mr. O'Connor's 'Oracle' is thin stuff, an approximation of all the popular jokes on commentators." N. L. Rothman
Sat R of Lit 34:34 My 26 '51 230w

O'CONNOR, FRANK, originally MICHAEL O'DONOVAN. Traveller's samples; stories and tales. 238p $2.75 Knopf 51-10860

Collection of short stories about Irish life, some of which have appeared in the New Yorker.

"Though perhaps a bit slighter than those in The Common Chord, these tales are, to my taste, close to perfection." C. J. Rolo
+ Atlantic 188:87 Jl '51 280w
Booklist 47:381 Jl 1 '51
Reviewed by Joyce Marshall
Canadian Forum 31:117 Ag '51 250w
Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Cath World 173:391 Ag '51 220w

"O'Connor's stories are to be commended most for their sense of completeness and entirety, for his careful art requires him not only to set forth a situation and explore it, but to round it off at the end. That explains why his stories are so satisfying to read, and why he is acclaimed as one of the best short story writers of the day." Kelsey Guilfoil
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 27 '51 230w

"If you've read O'Connor, read him again. If you haven't here's your chance to tell your grandchildren later that you were alive when he was alive." Joe Dever
+ Commonweal 54:290 Je 29 '51 1000w
Kirkus 19:161 Mr 15 '51 100w

"While sharp and brittle humor points up one story, the next will be so poignantly full of pathos and perception as to almost bring tears. Recommended." M. H. Zipprich
+ Library J 76:862 My 15 '51 90w
Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel
Manchester Guardian p3 F 23 '51 50w
Reviewed by John Richardson
New Statesman & Nation 41:431 Ap 14 '51 300w

"In 'Traveller's Samples' Mr. Frank O'Connor again reveals a deep respect for people and a rare gift for wringing rich laughter from character and situation without ever straining for comic effect. His humor which bubbles gently along in every story in this collection is never spiteful or mean but arises, as Voltaire maintained laughter always must, from a gayety of disposition absolutely incompatible with contempt or indignation." Richard Harrity
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 My 27 '51 480w

"Out of slender situations Mr. O'Connor fashions not only impregnable, winning and enormously funny stories, but a monumental affirmation of the essential goodness that makes living possible at all, and that makes mortal man, for all in him that is idiotic and even villainous, lovable and shriven." A. S. Morris

+ N Y Times p4 My 13 '51 420w

"His are people rich in frailty and wit—a trifle worn, sometimes, in their long-losing struggle with sin; a little baffled, often enough, by the unaccountable English, but on the whole, irrepressible, and possibly very much like the author himself. Early sin, young love and old grudges—here is a fine collection of crises, delightfully related and mostly resolved." Lewis Vogler

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Je 10 '51 950w

"Frank O'Connor is the sort of man whose real name is Michael O'Donovan, which makes him the sort of writer who tells a dozen tales in the first person and uses a different character and background for the 'I' in each. Were he not one of the very best short-story writers practising in English this might be an annoying trait; as it is, such whimsical eccentricity only adds to the charm of the tales he sets down." Thomas Sugrue

+ Sat R of Lit 34:18 Je 23 '51 550w

"I do not think that Ireland has produced a better short-story-writer than Mr. Frank O'Connor. From the first he has shown that subtlety of perception can be combined with narrative energy, and that a good story is the better for being artfully told; told, that is, with care for the reader's pleasure. This essential consideration, which is the whole art of telling a story, has nothing to do with 'writing down' or altering the writer's vision in hopes of meeting readers half-way. That is the error of the magazines. Mr. O'Connor's virtue is that he tells a story to a listener." L. A. G. Strong

+ Spec 185:292 Mr 2 '51 360w

Time 58:94 Jl 16 '51 380w

"Mr. Frank O'Connor needs no introduction as a short-story writer, and his latest collection is well up to the exacting standard he has set himself. . . 'The Idealist'—the tale of a boy nourished on school-stories of the Billy Bunter type, and his inability to reconcile the grim reality of his own school with the fantasy world of his reading—remains one of the funniest stories published at a time when our most admired practitioners in this difficult art are those wofully lacking in a sense of humour."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p113 F 23 '51 200w

Reviewed by Paul Pickrel

Yale R n s 40:767 summer '51 140w

ODETS, CLIFFORD. Country girl; a play in three acts. 124p $2.50 Viking

812 51-1860

A play about a stage star whose excessive drinking would have ruined his career if it had not been for his loyal wife.

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '51

Kirkus 19:93 F 1 '51 40w

"Recommended for all drama collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 76:867 My 15 '51 40w

"Always a poet, Odets invests distinguished dialogue with a fine mounting intensity; and the bare bones of two familiar character types are given living flesh by close attention to those complexities of human behavior which only the perceptive artist seems able to point up." Frank Jones

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ap 8 '51 100w

O'DONOVAN, MICHAEL. See O'Connor, F.

O'FAOLAIN, SEAN. Short story. 370p $3.75 Devin-Adair

808.3 Short story. Short stories—Collections 51-9370

"Stimulating discussion of the craft of short-story writing which analyzes the work of Daudet, Chekov and Maupassant, describes usable techniques and illustrates with eight 'masterly stories.'" Bookmark

Atlantic 187:81 Ap '51 130w

Bookmark 10:132 Mr '51 30w

"Mr. O'Faolain takes his art and his craft seriously, a practice that is probably looked on with some suspicion by the 'write-for-profit' school. . . But Mr. O'Faolain, as one might imagine, has the stronger and the better tradition behind him. And if the present volume seems in any way to be an attack on the short story, it must be remembered that it is an attack only on its vulgarization. The short story, as an art form, is ably defended." J. A. Lynch

+ Commonweal 54:19 Ap 13 '51 550w

"Not one of the eight examples is by an English man or woman, though five were written in the English language. How is this? . . Would it not have been fair to Thomas Hardy—as well as the English—to use one of his admirable short stories. . . Let no one be put off by these mild carpings: even in spite of the occasional suggestion that 'The Short Story' is somehow meant to give young aspirants help in becoming successful writers it is a lively, scholarly, and substantial book." Paul Bloomfield

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 N 9 '48 290w

Reviewed by P. H. Newby

New Statesman & Nation 36:575 D 25 '48 850w

Reviewed by James Stern

N Y Times p5 Ja 28 '51 450w

"Most valuable chapter, to my way of thinking, is the chapter on 'Construction,' . . . Here is where Mr. O'Faolain works most with the stories he has at the back of his book as examples. . . In this section, let me suggest that you first read the Elizabeth Bowen story and then follow Mr. O'Faolain's notes closely. It's quite possible, of course, that this procedure will cause most writer-students to throw up their hands in despair and say: 'I couldn't do it like that in a million years.' Well, maybe not. Few can. But Mr. O'Faolain's comment on the Bowen story and others from the angle of construction is solidly good, the kind of thing that can be valuable to any writer." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 F 15 '51 1000w

Reviewed by Stevie Smith

Spec 181:610 N 5 '48 1000w

Springf'd Republican p6D Ap 8 '51 90w

"One-third of the book consists of representative short stories, by Alphonse Daudet, Maupassant, Robert Louis Stevenson, Henry James, Mr. Frank O'Connor, Miss Elizabeth Bowen, and Mr. Ernest Hemingway. . . There is no disputing tastes, but some may feel that none of these writers is shown at his most effective in the example chosen, and it is not always easy to follow Mr. O'Faolain's critical account of them, which is emphatic rather than coherent. The book would have been improved by containing an index."

Times [London] Lit Sup p5 Ja 1 '49 700w

O'FARACHAIN, ROIBEARD. See Farren, R.

O'FARRELL, WILLIAM. These arrows point to death. 222p $2.50 Duell

51-2019

Detective story.

Kirkus 18:739 D 15 '50 90w

"Blood and thunder of a commonplace sort."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 Ap 22 '51 100w

Reviewed by Nancie Matthews

N Y Times p17 Je 3 '51 130w

"Almost too much mystery and violence, as is usual with Mr. O'Farrell."

New Yorker 27:116 F 17 '51 100w

Reviewed by Kathleen Sproul

Sat R of Lit 34:40 Mr 31 '51 50w

O'FLAHERTY, LIAM. Insurrection. 248p $3 Little 51-10300

Novel about the 1916 Easter uprising in Ireland. The central figure is Bartly Madden who had returned from working in England, with money to buy a farm. In the pubs he lost his money, and was rescued from his drunken stupor by a widowed slum woman who sobered him up with the idea that he could save her son. Madden eventually gets into the fighting; the widow's son is proved a coward; but Madden is killed.

"O'Flaherty's story brings to life, with unblinking honesty, all the disparate strains in the Irish spirit manifested in the foredoomed rebellion. His taut, humorous, tragic little novel is, within its modest compass, completely successful."

+ Atlantic 187:87 Je '51 110w

Booklist 47:347 Je 1 '51

Bookmark 10:208 Je '51 20w

"The poetry, the pathos, and the brutality of the unequal war between handfuls of men and the 'imperial soldiers' become a kind of music in these pages. 'They always fought and they always fell,' it was said of the Irish heroes of old. Seldom has such heroism in all its centuries of record, been celebrated with such force, such understanding, and such poetry as it is here." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 173:310 Jl '51 250w

"This is easily O'Flaherty's best work since 'The Informer,' a book of similar background." J. M. Flynn

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 3 '51 440w

"I think you will find the book good reading. My most serious complaint cannot be lodged against O'Flaherty directly, only against the truncated form of the modern novel generally. Insurrection seems to me to be a piece of a novel—honestly observed, sharply written, entirely alive, but, in final effect, oblique and fragmentary. There is a big book to be made out of the materials, a book which will organize and relate every side of the experience." Walter Kerr

— — Commonweal 54:171 My 25 '51 400w

"There is plenty of violence and gore but for those who would miss no word from the pen of Liam O'Flaherty, it is recommended." M. H. Zipprich

Library J 76:704 Ap 15 '51 130w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield

Manchester Guardian p4 N 3 '50 100w

"A most impressive and convincing book." Frank Hauser

+ New Statesman & Nation 40:480 N 18 '50 390w

"It would have been a masterpiece indeed had characterization and background been entirely worthy of such a grand conception. Unfortunately, Madden and the others are not much more than heroic stereotypes; Sean O'Casey in a few lines of dialogue can make his rebels live; Mr. O'Flaherty merely makes the rebellion live. But this is no mean achievement, and 'Insurrection' remains a notable novel, its tale of violence curbed by an austere spirit." James Hilton

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ap 29 '51 750w

"A vivid and fast moving narrative." J. J. Sweeney

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 29 '51 700w

"It is an extraordinarily moving piece of writing, with an intensity that has real value. It is not just a matter of strength of emotion or violence of feeling but a matter of concentration and refinement. . . The only reason for regret is that so gifted an artist can, after twenty-five years, make full use of his powers only within the narrow field of the Irish civil war." Anthony West

+ New Yorker 27:113 My 26 '51 500w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ag 19 '51 440w

"Like the rebellion itself the book is brief, sharp, blazing with action, and lit by a radiance of idealism which softens the ugly reality with which it deals while at the same time illuminating and magnifying the ugliest of its details. It may very well be the best thing O'Flaherty has done; he has used all his tricks and he has used them well." Thomas Sugrue

+ Sat R of Lit 34:10 My 5 '51 850w

"Much of it is done with considerable power—there are scenes of mob violence and hysteria that carry a specially brutal emphasis—but the description as a whole is somewhat rhetorical." R. D. Charques

Spec 184:524 N 17 '50 110w

Time 57:114 My 7 '51 480w

"Technically the book is an interesting feat; it presents a fine example of the unity of action. Curiously enough, it is entirely lacking in direct, emotional appeal. The stage is set, the characters are marshalled, but some necessary dimension has been forgotten; the voices are without resonance, the actions have no depth."

Times [London] Lit Sup p781 D 8 '50 160w

Wis Lib Bul 47:166 Je '51

OGBURN, WILLIAM FIELDING. Social change; with respect to culture and original nature; new 1950 ed, with supplementary chapter. 393p $2.50 Viking

301.1535 Sociology. Civilization 50-12620

"Thirty years ago William F. Ogburn published his now famous work Social Change [Book Review Digest 1922]. Recently the book has been reissued with a revision consisting of an additional chapter entitled 'Social Evolution Reconsidered,' in which he elucidates the four factors bound up in social evolution: invention, accumulation, diffusion, and adjustment." Am J Soc

"Social Change, thirty years after it made its first public appearance, still serves the student of sociology with fertile and challenging ideas of cultural dynamics. One predicts that Social Change still has many years of active life, which is a real tribute in these times when most works live scarcely beyond their date of publication." J. B. Gittler

+ Am J Soc 56:586 My '51 1100w

"One may agree with the general view that culture is a field for independent study; he may have great admiration for Social Change as a contribution thereto; but he may nevertheless, feel that the author has not taken advantage of this opportunity to clarify his position on some of the moot points that need clarification before the Darwinian revolution in this field can be said to be completed." F. H. Hankins

Am Soc R 16:122 F '51 950w

OGLE, MARBURY BLADEN, jr. Public opinion and political dynamics. 361p $3.50 Houghton

301.154 Public opinion 50-10408

"A study of the nature of public opinion and its role in democratic and other societies. There is an excellent analysis of the major forces which mold public opinion—social, psychological and ideological. The family, church and school are examined to show how these institutions contribute to the formation of ideological beliefs. An introduction to the techniques of opinion dissemination is included." (Current Hist) Bibliography. Index.

"Public Opinion and Political Dynamics is an introductory text of high quality and broad scope. . . It deserves the attention of social scientists generally." Morris Janowitz

+ Am J Soc 56:609 My '51 390w

"Professor Ogle has given us a valuable new analysis of the factors which determine public opinion. This substantial textbook may serve college courses in the three fields of psychology, sociology, and political science as they deal with subjects of popular government." Lincoln Harter

+ Am Pol Sci R 45:286 Mr '51 210w

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek

Am Soc R 16:426 Je '51 150w

"Emphasis is placed upon theory and generalization. There is a marked absence of illustration. The style is lucid, but so lacking in vividness and incisiveness as to blunt interest. Sources are for the most part secondary, and there is little that is new or arresting in the volume as a whole. For beginning students the much earlier volume of Odegard, The American Public Mind, which covers much the same ground, is far more exciting and challenging. For advanced students Ogle's presentation is too elementary." H. L. Childs
Ann Am Acad 274:222 Mr '51 340w

Current Hist 20:104 F '51 60w

OGLESBY, CATHARINE. French provincial decorative art. 214p il $8.50 Scribner
749.243 Furniture 51-13137

"Written from the collector's point of view, reflecting too, the author's association with magazine and advertising agency, this rather elaborate volume sketches delightfully the origin, design and use of furniture, textiles and accessories. Reproductions are attractive though somewhat grayish in tone." Library J

"The profuse illustrations in the book are photografs of pieces either privately owned or in museums and the author has created great interest in them. It is regrettable that she did not call attention to the fact that American manufacturers are reproducing beautiful copies of authentic French Provincial furniture which, when combined with early American or French fabrics, are ideally suited to both large and small American homes." Catherine Steele
Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 O 14 '51 120w

Cleveland Open Shelf p28 N '51

Kirkus 19:511 S 1 '51 130w

"A perfect volume for interior decorators to hand a waiting client." A. S. Plaut
+ Library J 76:1808 N 1 '51 50w

Times [London] Lit Sup p816 D 21 '51 500w

OGRIZEK, DORE, ed. Belgium and Luxemburg. (World in color ser) 308p il maps $6 McGraw 914.93 Belgium—Description and travel. Luxemburg—Description and travel 50-10861

Provides material on the history, customs, traditions, geography, and art of the region, with some study of the inhabitants. Includes multicolor maps, gay drawings, old prints, and coats-of-arms. Index.

Booklist 47:235 Mr 1 '51

"Travelers to the tiny countries of Belgium and Luxemburg will be fortunate indeed if this splendid companion finds a readily accessible place in their luggage. . . Even if you never expect to visit either country, you will find this book worth reading." Robert Cromie
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ja 7 '51 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '51

"Like the other volumes in the distinguished 'The World in Color' series, this book supplies excellent background material to the tourist planning to visit Belgium or Luxembourg. It also makes a beautiful gift for any one who enjoys traveling vicariously through books." Beach Conger
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 N 26 '50 230w

OGRIZEK, DORE, ed. Netherlands [text by Suzanne Chantal; il. by Beuville, and others; section on Dutch art by Jean Desternes]. (World in color ser) 253p maps $6.50 McGraw 914.92 Netherlands—Description and travel. Art, Dutch 51-9353

Following a general discussion of the most famous Dutch artists, there are descriptions of the country by political divisions. Illustrated with reproductions of famous paintings, and with drawings. Index.

Booklist 47:251 Mr 15 '51

"This latest volume lives up to the high standard set by its predecessors. Color is prodigally used once more, the text by Suzanne Chantal is both informative and palatable, and the illustrations, whether reproductions of old prints or modern work, are entrancing and often amusing. If you plan a trip to the Netherlands, don't fail to take this guide along." Robert Cromie
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 18 '51 170w

OGRIZEK, DORE, ed. Paris we love. (World in color ser) 511p il col il col maps $6.50 McGraw
914.436 Paris—Description 51-9452

Partial contents: Introduction, by Jean Cocteau; Art in Paris, by Jean Desternes; Paris in former times, by R. H. de Villefosse; The Palais-Royal, the Louvre and the Tuileries, by Jacques Wilhelm and Yvan Christ; The Faubourg Saint-Germain, by Jules Romains; The Latin quarter, by Léo Larguier; Montparnasse, by André Warnod; The Opera and the Centre, by Louis Chéronnet; The Bois de Boulogne and Neuilly, by André Maurois; Paris, the home of the epicure, by Jean Oberlé; Paris nights, by A.-M. Max.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 188:85 Jl '51 90w

Booklist 47:251 Mr 15 '51

Bookmark 10:181 My '51 30w

Reviewed by Edward Barry
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 4 '51 250w

"A book which is enticing and entrancing, for the prospective or retrospective visitor."
+ Kirkus 19:85 F 1 '51 90w

"The essays are discursive and atmospheric and lack detailed information. Chapters on Parisian art, and Paris in the Middle Ages are very good. The book is a joy to look at, but at the price too expensive for the value received." W. K. Harrison
+ — Library J 76:968 Je 1 '51 60w

Reviewed by Beach Conger
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 5 '51 150w

New Yorker 27:139 My 19 '51 110w

"A big, fat, colorful book, after the accepted fashion of the World in Color Series. . . I particularly liked the chapter called Paris in Former Times, by René Héron de Villefosse, and the straightforward prose of A. M. Max in The Nights of Paris, neither of which has seemed to suffer from the stilted effects of translation, an ill which has frequently dogged this series." Horace Sutton
+ Sat R of Lit 34:38 Mr 31 230w

"Recommended without reservation."
+ Wis Lib Bul 47:164 Je '51

OGRIZEK, DORE, ed. Provinces of France. (World in color ser) 508p col il $6.50 McGraw 914.4 France—Description and travel 51-12256

In two introductory chapters the history of France is sketched and its contributions to civilization discussed. The following chapters take up the country province by province giving local history, customs, famous personages, etc. Copiously illustrated in color. Index.

Booklist 48:47 O 1 '51

"It is a long step past the average travel guide. . . The provinces of France are covered by good writers who are specialists. . . Nowhere in it, excepting for the index, can you open to two facing pages without finding some color. From the cool water colors that illuminate the pages on the north, to the flashing brilliance that is characteristic of the sun-drenched southern regions, you will find France represented in the most remarkable use of color illustration you'll find in any book at a far larger price." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 S 14 '51 450w

OGRIZEK, DORE—Continued

"A series of separate essays which vary in flavor and style because they have been done by a long list of contributors. As usual it is profusely illustrated in full color, following the picture-a-page format of the series." H. S.
Sat R of Lit 34:35 S 1 '51 140w

O'HARA, FRANK HURBURT, and BRO, MRS MARGUERITTE (HARMON). Invitation to the theater. 211p $3 Harper
808.2 Drama 51-3116

An enlarged and revised edition of a book originally published under the title: Handbook of Drama (Book Review Digest 1938). In the first part of this book the authors present a discussion of the forms of the drama: tragedy, comedy, farce, etc; in the second they discuss structure—that is, how the play is made; and in part three they briefly relate the history of drama. A fourth part contains a dictionary of terms and indexes to titles, names, and subjects.

Booklist 47:403 Jl 15 '51

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 6 '51 310w

"Both authors are successful playwrights, and O'Hara has taught drama and produced plays at the University of Chicago for a good many years. Their 'invitation' is also an introduction. It will help the playgoer to understand what he sees and hears, the play-reader to understand what he reads, and both to be intelligently and appreciatively critical. Its more specialized value, which may be the one the authors had chiefly in mind, will be a guide to young playwrights and actors, whether professional or amateur." W. E. G.
Christian Century 68:741 Je 20 '51 150w

Kirkus 19:155 Mr 15 '51 70w

Reviewed by George Freedley
Library J 76:868 My 15 '51 30w

O'HARA, JOHN. Farmers hotel. 153p $2 Random house
51-14121

On the night of the re-opening of the Farmers Hotel in Rockbottom, Pa. there was a heavy snow storm. Several people reached the hotel and were snowbound for hours. The action of the novel and its tragic end are concerned with these people.

"The Farmers Hotel is a crisply written, pleasantly readable, and studiously pointless piece of fiction, which betrays the belief that a novelist's function is to emulate a camera wired for sound." C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 188:98 D '51 550w

Booklist 48:126 D 1 '51

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 18 '51 550w

Kirkus 19:491 S 1 '51 330w

"What appears to be offered is a little tragedy springing from a cast of characters suddenly thrown back on our common humanity. But what comes out is a little incident in Boccaccio rewritten for 'Esquire.' We are still here if you want us, Mr. O'Hara—your fans, that is—but we can't go on re-reading 'Appointment in Samarra' forever." Alistair Cooke
— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 N 18 '51 1250w

"O'Hara has certain great talents. One is a kind of richness and thickness of important detail: his books are embedded in the solidity and reality of life. Another, perhaps a development of the first, is his ability to fascinate us with ordinary people; or rather with people who, in O'Hara's hands, reveal beneath their ordinary exteriors a magnificent individuality. . . The fault, it seems to me, is one of structure. Prepared as we should be for the violent end, we are not prepared enough. Coincidence plays too large a part." Elizabeth Janeway
N Y Times p5 N 11 '51 750w

"John O'Hara is one of those writers for whom one gives thanks, because he never writes a line that isn't alive and talking. This new book of his is short, assured, and contrary. . . It's all wonderful, except for the odd, violent ending, which is where the contrariness comes in, and with which we will not quarrel, because, of course, it could easily have happened like that, and perhaps it did."
+ New Yorker 27:170 D 8 '51 90w

"Mr. O'Hara has elaborated on an incident, no more. The reader may look for some indication that there is meaning beyond accident here, but he is not likely to find it, I'm afraid. As I've tried to suggest above, Mr. O'Hara may be saying that today's world is too much like this, that brutalities are happening about us for equally little reason, and he may feel that his novelette reflects, this state of things. It doesn't and can't unless the reader is certain that this is the point, and there is not enough here to make the reader certain. Happenstance is not really enough." J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 21 '51 950w

"After a portentous, suspenseful beginning 'The Farmers Hotel' trickles downhill to the level of a relentless puppet show in which unrelated characters come on stage one at a time to make flippant little speeches. Even though served in country style it is as empty of real personality and warmth as a crowded railroad station." James Kelly
— Sat R of Lit 34:14 N 10 '51 800w

"The Farmers Hotel is not only as pointless as any other death on the highway, it is also something O'Hara has rarely been: dull."
— Time 58:118 N 19 '51 440w

OLDS, ELIZABETH. Feather mountain. 27p $2 Houghton
51-11769

A retelling of an Iroquois Indian folk-tale for ages four to eight. It tells in picture and story how the birds first got their feathers.

Booklist 48:16 S 1 '51

"The story and dialog are both subtle and funny and the final scramble of the birds to get the feathers they wished will edify as well as amuse. The illustrations, many of them hauntingly beautiful, verge on the Japanese."
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 11 '51 100w

"The story seems to me to lack sparkle at times but the pictures more than make up for the lack." J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews
+ — Horn Bk 27:321 S '51 70w

"An enchanting flurry of birds, stalking about or on the wing, illuminates the pages of this story. . . The sketches and full-color illustrations by the author are stunning and the soft brilliance of feathered creatures, the magnificence of the big ones, the delicacy of the tiny ones, will intensify the child's natural delight in birds."
+ Kirkus 19:385 Ag 1 '51 120w

"Recommended for large libraries only." Anne Izard
Library J 76:1572 O 1 '51 60w

"Elizabeth Olds pictures this Iroquois legend in vivid colors and lines. The text just misses that sonorous dignity of great legend-telling, but every illustration is in tune with its subject, whether sweeping, swirling feathers or quietly skittering sand-pipers." Miriam James
+ N Y Times p41 N 11 '51 140w

OLDS, MRS HELEN (DIEHL). Fisherman Jody; il. by Jules Gotlieb. 62p $1.50 Messner 51-13138

The experiences of ten-year-old Jody who went cod fishing to the Georges Banks with his brother, and then went to the New York Fulton Fish market. For grades 3 to 5.

Booklist 48:131 D 1 '51

"The thrill of life on the ocean and the exciting work of the fishermen who supply our large cities with fish, are realistically and entertainingly presented in this story."
+ Kirkus 19:483 S 1 '51 140w

"Dullish reading for 9-10-year-olds." E. W. Turpin
Library J 76:2014 D 1 '51 40w

"This is a good book for those social studies, for younger clases in New York that visit the docks and Fulton Market. Many good, big pictures add to the sense of an adventure worth having." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 N 18 '51 170w

Reviewed by C. E. Van Norman
N Y Times p40 N 11 '51 170w

OLIVER, DOUGLAS LLEWELLYN. Pacific islands [decorations and maps by Sheila Mitchell Oliver]. 313p $5 Harvard univ. press
990 Islands of the Pacific 51-9371

A summary of the history and the economic and social life of the peoples who have inhabited the Pacific Islands from pre-historic days to the present. In the discussion of recent periods emphasis is laid upon the influences of contacts with Europeans and Americans on the lives of the natives. The author is associate professor of anthropology in Harvard University. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by S. W. Reed
Am Soc R 16:411 Je '51 1000w

"All in all, here is a highly informative book about a little-known area. But more important it is a stimulating presentation of a series of challenging problems which will tax all our ingenuity to solve. Here is a book that the reader interested in Asiatic or global affairs will find rewarding." W. F. Christians
+ Ann Am Acad 276:181 Jl '51 420w
Booklist 47:234 Mr 1 '51
Bookmark 10:206 Je '51 30w

"In spite of its rich subject matter, this is rather a dry book with no maps except decorative ones, little exact information and a sketchy bibliography. Any one who tries to find out the latest distinction between a Micronesian and a Polynesian—except geographically —will be baffled. Mrs. Oliver's black and white drawings are the happiest feature." E. V. R. Wyatt
— + Commonweal 54:124 My 11 '51 600w
Current Hist 20:230 Ap '51 80w
Foreign Affairs 29:506 Ap '51 30w

Reviewed by H. L. Roth
Library J 76:178 F 1 '51 140w

"The author, associate professor of anthropology at Harvard, leaps from island to island and subject to subject with agility and grace, covering a vast territory in an unexpectedly readable volume."
+ Nation 172:257 Mr 17 '51 50w

Reviewed by C. H. Grattan
New Repub 124:18 My 14 '51 600w

"A very interesting and, in many (but disconnected) respects, a valuable introduction to the ethnology of Australia, New Guinea, the Solomons, New Zealand, Samoa and Hawaii, with some reference to the lesser islands of Micronesia." Walter Karig
+ N Y Times p13 Ag 5 '51 500w

"The book is a marvel of condensation, for the author deals not only with such matters as the varied cultures of the different island peoples but with the geography, geology, zoology, politics, economics, and history of the area. . . The only place where this otherwise excellent book falls down is in the index, which is very spotty."
+ — New Yorker 27:112 Mr 3 '51 210w

"Dr. Oliver writes with dry, sometimes ironic humor, which crops out in unexpected places. It is surprising to find how much is included in this book; the subject matter for entire volumes has been boiled down to chapters." J. W. H.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Mr 25 '51 250w

Reviewed by Henry Kelley
Sat R of Lit 34:57 Je 16 '51 270w
School & Society 73:128 F 24 '51 60w
Times [London] Lit Sup p680 O 26 '51 300w

"Here is one of the best general accounts of the Pacific Islands so far available."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:151 Je '51 240w

OLIVER, JANE, pseud. (MRS HELEN CHRISTINA EASSON REES RHYS). Morning for Mr Prothero. 242p $2.75 McKay
51-10163

"This novel of the fourth dimension, or the supernatural . . . [tells the] story of a skeptical physician who passes into the Beyond, and continues his spiritual existence in scenes more idealized but strangely like those of his life in the flesh. The gradual dawning of awareness leads at last to morning for Mr. Prothero, when the soul wakens and the shadows flee." Christian Century

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Cath World 173:476 S '51 110w

"If such arbitrary fantasy somewhat bewilders the reader, perhaps it could be said in extenuation that Prothero's own experience was confused and that the story offers a gradual approach like his to the light. However, the suggestion that there is no gulf between this world and another except in men's understanding and that the dead watch over and speak to the living goes beyond what any fictional art could make convincing to those who balk on rational grounds." Warren Beck
+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 27 '51 280w

Reviewed by L. E. Cannon
+ Christian Century 68:798 Jl 4 '51 190w

"For an audience which found enjoyment in Berkeley Square and The Snow Goose, this offers the hope that death does not finish everything and that potential crisis points are watched in another field. When not near-maudlin, this is sometimes affecting."
Kirkus 19:76 F 1 '51 230w

"Miss Oliver—although she has been unable altogether to escape the 'Outward Bound' tradition—has written a fresh, deeply felt novel of faith—and man—triumphant." J. W. Chase
+ N Y Times p11 Jl 8 '51 190w

OLSEN, D. B., pseud. See Hitchens, D. B.

O'MEARA, WALTER. Grand portage. 352p $3 Bobbs
51-9839

Daniel Harmon, a Vermonter, is the hero of this novel about the Northwest fur trade. Daniel's love for a wealthy Canadian girl who flouted him drove him into the Northwest in the early 1800's. His determination to keep free of an alliance with an Indian girl was a source of wonder to his friends at the Post. But in time he accepted the life of the rugged frontier, and married the beautiful half-breed daughter of a Frenchman.

Reviewed by L. J. Rogers
Canadian Forum 31:116 Ag '51 120w

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 1 '51 500w

"'The Grand Portage' carries the reader along readily enough, like a good chronicle. The detail is authentic, every item is smelted from the voluminous literature of the Canadian fur trade. Almost all the major characters and some of the minor ones are historical. . . The last quarter of 'The Grand Portage,' however, rises above mere dramatized documentation. In the sharpest scene in the book an Indian is executed in judicial revenge and presently Harmon makes his great decision, to marry his Lisette. From there on the story has warmth and human reality, and they promise well for Mr. O'Meara's future." Bernard De Voto
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ap 1 '51 700w

"Fine and moving novel. . . 'The Grand Portage' has its flaws as a full-bodied work of fiction: it does not quite belong on the shelf with 'The Way West.' But its author is to be congratulated for demonstrating how far a little dignity and sincerity will go to elevate the historical novel." Richard Match

O'MEARA, WALTER—Continued
+ — N Y Times p17 Ap 15 '51 300w
New Yorker 27:126 Ap 21 '51 80w

"The background of this story of the American Northwest at the beginning of the nineteenth century is set in with a sure hand. Walter O'Meara was born and raised in voyageur country. He certainly has the feel of it and a detailed knowledge of its history. . . But Mr. O'Meara does not express himself with his usual directness and significance when he writes of white man and Indian maid. Then his clear prose turns cloudy and turgid and his characters, cliché-ridden and static, are no longer distinctive personalities but contrived robots moving and talking to prove a thesis." Carl Carmer
+ — Sat R of Lit 34:24 Ap 7 '51 700w

O'NEILL, HERBERT CHARLES (STRATEGICUS, pseud). Short history of the second World war [and its social and political significance]. 345p maps $4 Praeger

940.53 World war, 1939-1945 [51-164]

"During the course of the war 'Strategicus' was responsible for a service of intelligent, quick interpretations of almost contemporary events. Now, with five years of uneasy peace between him and his subject, he stands back and tries to combine in a single volume, not merely a condensed history of the whole war in all its theatres, but an attempt to place the war, as a 'prolongation of policy by other means' in its social and political setting." (New Statesman & Nation) Chronology. Index.

Bookmark 10:155 Ap '51 30w
Current Hist 20:171 Mr '51 130w
Foreign Affairs 30:157 O '51 20w

"Recommended for general purchase to supplement American war literature." F. E. Hirsch
+ Library J 76:777 My 1 '51 110w
New Statesman & Nation 41:228 F 24 '51 170w

"The defects of this volume, the traces of bias, dogmatism, and confusion, are largely the results of an overconstricted style. . . But minor flaws must not be overemphasized in judging a book that is distinguished on the whole by broad understanding, sobriety, and an intimate grasp of modern technological warfare." Geoffrey Bruun
+ — Sat R of Lit 34:34 F 24 '51 600w

"Contains a concise account of the campaigns, but its most valuable feature is the discussion of the problems arising out of the conduct of the war. In particular, readers will be specially grateful for his reflections on strategic bombing, on 'unconditional surrender' and on the American opposition to Balkan intervention. The level of accuracy is, as we should expect, high." S. H. F. Johnston
+ Spec 185:118 Ja 26 '51 180w

"The narrative runs smoothly and such comment as is made is generally to the point and independent of preconceptions. . . The arrangement is satisfactory, but for those who may be inclined to lose their way in what must be, at the best, a complex story, a long and detailed chronology has been provided."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p72 F 2 '51 650w

O'NEILL, HESTER. Picture story of Alaska; pictures by Ursula Koering. $2.50 McKay

917.98 Alaska—Juvenile literature 51-4509

A book for young readers which tells how the inhabitants of Alaska, "Americans All," live and work, describing cities and towns farm lands and wilderness.

Booklist 47:385 Jl 1 '51
Bookmark 10:233 Jl '51
Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 28 '51 70w
Kirkus 19:184 Ap 1 '51 140w

"An excellent picture of this fascinating country. . . Fine illustrations and maps in color by Ursula Koering. Recommended for ages 9 and up." Sonja Wennerblad
+ Library J 76:1138 Jl '51 60w

"The purely informative text flows along easily, with intelligent connections for its various topics. It is serious, yet lively, like a very well written geography." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 17 '51 140w
San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 25 '51 70w
Sat R of Lit 34:48 Jl 21 '51 60w

OPDYCKE, JOHN BAKER. Lexicon of word selection [illustrative studies in dictional precision for speakers and writers]. 492p $5 Funk

428.3 English language—Glossaries, vocabularies, etc. English language—Words 51-379

"[The book's] primary purpose is 'to show a way, a method, a system, by means of which vocabulary may be "lubricated" '—made supple, even though the words upon which its studies are based may change almost overnight, as in our own lifetimes so often they do. Its plan is to introduce by an italicized sentence taken from current English, some 300 essays based on selected word groups. In each of these sentences are two or more words to which major treatment is given in the essay by way of definition and differentiation. Other words belonging to the same category, and growing out of these key words, are likewise discussed, their total number running close to 10,000." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

"A first aid for the writer or speaker or anyone who cares about exactness of meaning, vocabulary expansion, differentiation in word usage."
+ Kirkus 18:627 O 1 '50 120w

"It takes passionate interest in words, their history and connotation to read this closely printed work all the way through."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 Ap 29 '51 200w

"A group of word stories, which in turn form a dramatic thesaurus. Opdycke has grace and good scholarship. He splits horse up into jade, cob, pad and hack, and distinguishes each from the other, adding bronco, mustang and cayuse for Western American good measure. Opdycke does all this so entertainingly that the reader is unaware that he is being instructed; he thus acquires word lore without pain." Horace Reynolds
+ N Y Times p25 S 30 '51 400w
School & Society 73:111 F 17 '51 30w

OPIE, IONA (ARCHIBALD), and OPIE, PETER, eds. Oxford dictionary of nursery rhymes. 467p il $8 Oxford

398.8 Nursery rimes 51-14126

"This dictionary brings together more than 500 rhymes and songs traditionally handed on to young children, and studies their individual histories; their age, origins, first appearances in print or manuscript, oral and written development, literary associations, social uses, variations, and parallels in other languages. A general introduction describes the different types of rhymes, the earliest collections made of them, and the theories which have been advanced about their origin; and discusses such particular questions as the possibility that they originally portrayed real people, how they achieved their present-day popularity, and who was 'Mother Goose.' " (Publisher's note) Indexes.

Booklist 48:116 D 1 '51

"Here at last is a job which has long needed doing. . . It should be obvious that this is not a book for children. Children should get their rhymes without reason; in other words, straight, without notes and queries. This is a book for those adults of imagination who care for poetry and folklore. It is a volume of much interest and value." R. M. Hammond

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 D 6 '51 850w

"This is an admirable book, with a great deal more research and scholarship behind it than appears at a casual glance."

+ Manchester Guardian p4 N 9 '51 550w

"A work of great delight, careful in scholarship, and enlightening as a commentary on the history of children's book-publishing. And if the Opies, with charming and dry exactness, tap our pet theories on the head, they give us even more fantastic ideas to play with than those we must discard." Dorothy Baker

+ New Statesman & Nation 42:376 O 6 '51 800w

"It is hard to think of many editors who have compressed a whole tradition and the almost complete evidence of that tradition between the covers of one book. Yet the editors of 'The Oxford Dictionary of Nursery Rhymes' appear to have done it—and to have done it with simplicity, consummate taste, poetic justice and typographic skill. This is first of all an absorbing book: well illustrated, adequately indexed, and full of running notes as fascinating in their way as those of Professor Lowes in 'The Road to Xanadu.' It is easy to handle and easy to read." David McCord

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 D 23 '51 1100w

"Here is well assembled most of what is known about our nursery rhymes, and the appearance and use of this book will do much to draw out, and to it, what is not here. One thing it does not do. The American cannot find in it whence came the tunes he knows to 'Oh, have you seen the muffin man?' or 'Little Miss Muffet' often without knowing that he knows them. There is much useful bibliographical lore here on the music but no systematic discussion of the tunes of Mother Goose, and no music. That much remains to be done. What is done certainly constitutes one of this century's finest studies in British and American folklore." Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p7 D 9 '51 850w

Reviewed by A. A. Milne

Spec 187:440 O 5 '51 850w

Time 58:70 S 24 '51 600w

"That the editors have a proper appreciation of this strange, cosmopolitan little art is sufficiently demonstrated by the time and erudition that they have devoted to it. Would it be captious to suggest that some emendations might be made in future editions? There is, for instance, no complete bibliography, if you except a list of abbreviations at the beginning—a serious omission. . . Finally, the index is not above reproach; the name of Lena Eckenstein, for example, is not to be found therein, although her book is quoted more than once in the text. These are details, but a work of such meticulous scholarship invites, no less than it deserves, the sternest scrutiny."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p704 N 9 '51 1650w

ORGANIC reactions; editorial bd: Roger Adams, ed-in-chief [and others]. v5-6 446; 517p il v5 $6; v6 $8 Wiley

547 Chemical reactions. Chemistry, Organic (42-20265)

As in previous volumes in this series volumes five and six each start with nature of the reaction in question, then pass to its "scope and limitations. An experimental section follows and each chapter closes with a tabulation for the known examples. Complete literature references are included." (Chem & Eng N) For volume four see Book Review Digest 1949.

Reviewed by Marshall Gates

Am Chem Soc J 73:5517 N '51 150w (Review of v6)

"The volume is recommended to graduate students and to experienced organic chemists. Those in the latter group cannot help but gain fresh viewpoints for their problems after studying 'organic reactions.'" C. D. Hurd

Chem & Eng N 28:284 Ja 23 '50 330w (Review of v5)

"It seems almost superfluous to conclude with the statement that every practicing organic chemist will want this book on his own bookshelf or on one to which he has very ready access." Louis Schmerling

Chem & Eng N 29:4017 S 24 '51 400w (Review of v6)

"This volume should find itself on the shelves of the library of every chemist from the executive to the laboratory worker." E. I. Becker

+ Chem Eng 57:252 Ja '50 320w (Review of v5)

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 76:1131 Jl '51 80w (Review of v6)

+ N Y New Tech Bks 34:86 N '49 (Review of v5)

+ N Y New Tech Bks 36:52 Jl '51 (Review of v6)

"In accordance with the object of the series, each article provides the reader with an accurate concept of the scope and mechanism of the reaction, and a sound basis for the application of the method. Because of extensive bibliographies and critical discussions, the volume will appeal to academic students of the subject as well as to workers in synthetic organic chemistry."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:117 Mr '50 230w (Review of v5)

ORME, ALEXANDRA. By the waters of the Danube; tr. from the Polish by Norbert Guterman. 360p $3.50 Duell

B or 92 Budapest—Social conditions. Poland —Social conditions 51-10881

The author of Comes the Comrade (Book Review Digest 1950) continues the story of her adventures, beginning in April 1945, in Budapest. From the rigors of postwar Hungary she goes back to her native Poland, to visit her few surviving relatives. On her return to her husband in Hungary she tries to explain to herself and others the differences between the Poles and Hungarians.

Bookmark 11:82 Ja '52 30w

Kirkus 19:522 S 1 '51 210w

"A shocking, unforgettable, deeply thoughtful book, essential to all libraries." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 76:2112 D 15 '51 130w

"Warm, intimate, ridiculous and sometimes heroic story of the struggle for survival in chaotic times. You read it with amazement and with a sort of humility. For its central theme is sounded again and again, and effectively illustrated: people are people, and they are capable of the most astonishing feats, both bad and good." Lorine Pruette

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 N 11 '51 800w

"It is in the second part that Mme. Orme tells of her return to her native Poland. . . Here is fresh material, of deep meaning, written in the manner one has a right to expect of the author of 'Comes the Comrade!' . . After allowing for [the] legendary Polish patriotism, the reader stands in admiration of the writer's keen insight as she analyzes what is happening to her country under the 'People's Republic.' We grow more and more fascinated by her vivid phrasing and her apt conclusions." H. M. Clark

+ N Y Times p10 N 11 '51 600w

ORMSBEE, THOMAS HAMILTON. Field guide to early American furniture. 464p il $4 Little

749.211 Furniture 51-9372

Handbook designed for quick identification of early American furniture: chairs, tables, chests, desks, beds, etc. There are chapters on Pennsylvania Dutch furniture, and Shakers and primitive furniture. Glossary of cabinetmakers' language. Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 47:233 Mr 1 '51

ORMSBEE, T. H.—Continued
"Well-arranged, authoritative handbook. . . Of reference value."
+ Bookmark 10:132 Mr '51 50w
Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '51

"This should be a very useful handbook for the amateur on the prowl for coveted antiques."
+ Kirkus 18:747 D 15 '50 190w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut
Library J 76:1227 Ag '51 20w

"An infallible guide for the uncertain beginner and a sound refresher course for old hands."
+ New Yorker 27:124 Ap 7 '51 100w
Wis Lib Bul 47:85 Ap '51

ORNITZ, SAMUEL BADISCH. Bride of the Sabbath. 410p $3.75 Rinehart
51-6975

"Somewhat philosophical novel with plot based on antisemitism and history of the Jews in New York City from about 1900 to the period of the depression. Specifically it concerns the development of Saul Kramer from a bewildered small boy to a social worker equally bewildered by radicalism, socialism and an honest desire to discover the true relation of Jesus Christ to humanity." Library J

Reviewed by A. Andras
Canadian Forum 31:236 Ja '52 360w

"An intimate knowledge of the idiom, attitudes and rituals of this class gives this its veracity and interest, rather than the story per se."
Kirkus 19:412 Ag 1 '51 170w

"Recommended for large fiction collections only." E. S. Brown
Library J 76:1563 O 1 '51 130w

"In depicting Saul as the lover of women, Mr. Ornitz errs on the side of too much detail. He is inept and embarrassing rather than alive or moving in his word pictures of amorous scenes on roofs, in doorways, on stairs, under bridges. Saul never really comes off as a rounded or sympathetic character either as a child, student, worker or lover. He is always a symbol rather than a person. Strangely enough, it is several of the secondary characters which inspire in Mr. Ornitz some of the best writing in this sprawling, uneven book." Rose Feld
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 O 21 '51 750w

"The characters are drawn with compassion and the flowing exuberance of one in love with his people. His Hester Street is full of the juice and spontaneity of folklore. . . Ornitz editorializes too much and certain chapters need cutting. Yet despite faults, this book about a Jew 'insulated with Christian hostility as an Eskimo builds his igloo from the ice-blocks of the inhospitable world that would freeze him out of existence' is a triumphant achievement." Anzia Yezierska
+ — N Y Times p35 O 21 '51 400w

"'Bride of the Sabbath' is magnificent when it deals with the ghetto, its full and tragic life and its dignified humanity. That alone is well worth the price of admission." Louis Falstein
+ Sat R of Lit 34:19 N 3 '51 420w

ORR, MARY (ANNE CASWELL, pseud). All about Eve. See Mankiewicz, J. L.

ORTLOFF, HENRY STUART, and RAYMORE, HENRY BOND. Color and design for every garden. 301p $3.50 Barrows
712.62 Gardening Agr51-510

"A thorough treatment for the serious gardener or professional. Based on principles of careful planning it discusses foundation and display planting, color grouping, seasonal succession, and demands of special land contours and soils. One chapter is devoted to regional variations, especially of the South and Southwest. Lists most useful plants and provides designs and planting guides. Latin plant names used extensively. No planting of cultivating information included." Booklist

---

Booklist 47:305 My 1 '51
Cleveland Open Shelf p28 N '51

"It is a book for the layman's post-graduate course, so to speak, not for the rank amateur. The average gardener can however get a great deal of practical aid in planning for selection of garden material to achieve the goals."
Kirkus 19:226 Ap 15 '51 210w

"Clear, all-embracing and gratifyingly explicit." R. S. Lemmon
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 My 27 '51 220w

ORTON, MRS MILDRED ELLEN WILCOX, and ORTON, VREST. Cooking with wholegrains; introd. by Vrest Orton. 64p il $1.75 Farrar, Straus
641.631 Cookery (cereals). Baking 51-10732

"Whole grain cookery was the basis of good cookery until 100 years ago when we began the 'polishing' era. Now whole grain is being revived and two Vermonters have a buhrstone mill and offer this book of recipes to inspire one to be filled once more with health." Library J

Reviewed by K. T. Willis
Library J 76:966 Je 1 '51 40w

Reviewed by E. L. Tinker
N Y Times p13 Ag 26 '51 180w

OSGOOD, CORNELIUS BERRIEN. Koreans and their culture. 387p il maps $5 Ronald 915.19 Korea—Civilization 51-271

"The author, a professor at Yale, begins with a field study of a typical farming village on the Korean island of Kangwha, in the Yellow Sea. The survey then broadens to include a study of the ruling classes, a political history of the peninsula, and detailed discussions of Korean art, intellectual life, economy, and religion, and concludes with a résumé of events from the liberation, in 1945, to the Chinese Communist intervention, in November, 1950." (New Yorker) Bibliography. Index.

"Professor Osgood's book has been needed desperately. Had it been available for the makers of Occupation policy to digest, or could it have been required reading for key men in Army positions, the tragic brutality and incomprehension that cancels so much of the idealism of the U.N. in Korea might have been reduced or obviated. Perhaps it does not come altogether too late; the American people need this book as about the only guide for those who seek a solution. Its anthropological value is permanent. For national policy its potential value is beyond reckoning." D. G. Haring
+ Am Anthropol 53:389 Jl '51 1250w

"Representing scholarly and also sympathetic research into the present life as well as the origin and history of the Korean people and their culture, the book is undoubtedly one of the most up-to-date and comprehensive works on the subject." Channing Liem
+ Am Hist R 56:899 Jl '51 550w

Reviewed by J. C. Pelzel
Am Soc R 16:410 Je '51 600w

"The world is being flooded with books, articles, and news about Korea, but this volume will remain a standard reference book for a detailed description of a proud people with a glorious history, who for many years to come will be in need of moral and economic aid not only for overcoming the armed aggression, but also for building a more democratic nation." Morris Berzon
+ Ann Am Acad 277:275 S '51 450w
Booklist 47:218 F 15 '51
Current Hist 20:171 Mr '51 60w
Foreign Affairs 29:505 Ap '51 60w

"Recommended." Donald Wasson
+ Library J 76:327 F 15 '51 130w

'An illuminating study."
+ Nation 172:257 Mr 17 '51 80w

"This is an objective book, with its unspoken advice to practice self-alienation in the interests of knowledge. Its significance today is heightened by events for those who seek civilized tools in resolving world conflicts." Frances Keely
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p29 My 13 '51 650w

"An anthropological reconnaissance distinguished by serious scholarship, a sense of humanity, and an absence of academic fustiness."
+ New Yorker 27:102 F 24 '51 200w

"Mr. Osgood has produced a book that must be regarded as noteworthy on several counts: it is broad in scope, yet it probes deeply; it is unbiased and has perspective; it reflects first-hand investigation; and it is designed to attract and hold the attention of both scholars and non-scholars. The book is outstanding also because the personal bent of the author, an American anthropologist, has led him to study the influence of history and environment on the contemporary Korean individual." D. W. Allan
+ Pacific Affairs 24:325 S '51 350w

Reviewed by C. W. Weinberger
San Francisco Chronicle p15 F 4 '51 750w

"It is a vivid and often a delightful picture of another epoch and a culture radically unlike our own." M. S. Watson
+ Sat R of Lit 34:14 My 26 '51 700w
School & Society 73:31 Ja 13 '51 40w
U S Quarterly Bk R 7:152 Je '51 200w

Reviewed by Milton Sacks
Yale R n s 41:130 autumn '51 230w

OSLER, SIR WILLIAM, bart. Selected writings, 12 July 1849 to 29 December 1919; with an introd. by G. L. Keynes. 278p il $4 Oxford

610.4 Physicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. [51-3479]

"Sir William Osler, the Canadian physician who taught medicine at McGill, Pennsylvania, Johns Hopkins and Oxford, was a great human being before he was anything else, though he found time in a life of seventy years to become a distinguished clinician and pathologist, a voluminous writer on all sorts of subjects and a book collector. In honor of his centennial year a committee of the Osler Club of London has chosen 'Selected Writings of Sir William Osler' to make easily available the essays which best represent his many-sided character." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 S 16 '51 120w
San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 19 '51 80w

"Affords the reader glimpses of and stimulating contacts with an original, vigorous, polymathic mind." B. R. Redman
+ Sat R of Lit 34:32 S 22 '51 340w

OSUSKY, STEFAN. Way of the free. 320p $3.75 Dutton

901 National characteristics, Russian. Russia—Civilization. U.S.—Civilization 51-10733

"Former Czechoslovakian diplomat, American educated, attempts to shed light on world crisis. First part of volume deals with Soviet Russia, great stress being laid on historical development in explanation of character of people and leaders, and especially on Stalin's non-Russian, Georgian background. In second part he presents current American attitude towards Europe and European attitude towards America." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 47:379 Jl 1 '51

Reviewed by Melchior Palyi
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Jl 29 '51 230w
Current Hist 21:357 D '51 100w

"The informed will find little new; the uninformed will feel the treatment almost too glib for a topic demanding a more solid and scholarly base."
Kirkus 19:148 Mr 1 '51 210w

"Sketched in great sweeping strokes and written with a certain 'Spengler' touch, many fresh viewpoints will undoubtedly make book object of high praise and sharp criticism. Reviewer expects many to share his experience: to be alternately agreeing and disagreeing, but certainly always interested and stimulated. Generally recommended for educated reader." H. H. Bernt
+ Library J 76:772 My 1 '51 120w

Reviewed by Crane Brinton
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Je 17 '51 550w

Reviewed by H. C. Wolfe
N Y Times p6 My 13 '51 480w

" 'The Way of the Free' is a book that will stimulate the thoughtful reader to do some thinking on his own." Eva Putnam
+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 Je 8 '51 1000w

Reviewed by August Heckscher
Sat R of Lit 34:9 My 26 '51 1350w

"An exceptionally interesting analysis of many fundamental factors in the East-West international tension." H. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p11D Je 10 '51 400w

OTTLEY, ROI. No green pastures. 234p $3 Scribner

323.1 Negroes in Europe 51-7318

"It is the author's contention that, even though he enjoys a measure of self-respect and dignity unknown in the United States, life in Europe, for the Negro, is 'no green pastures,' Taking us on a jaunty guided tour of Europe, the Balkans and the near East, he measures the prejudice of each nation according to his own experiences and those of other Negroes living and travelling in the countries concerned." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:94 N 15 '51

Reviewed by Arna Bontemps
Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 N 4 '51 470w
Kirkus 19:511 S 1 '51 180w

"In lauding the progress of Negroes in America, as compared to those in Europe, he seems to be saying that dignity and self-respect are not important whereas economics are—a peculiar thesis for the author of Black Odyssey and New World A'Comin. It must be recommended, though, for its excellent discussion of discrimination in other countries." M. S. Byam
Library J 76:1562 O 1 '51 140w

"The book is interesting reading, with no forbidding profundity, moving along easily in the hands of a competent reporter and storyteller." Roy Wilkins
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 N 4 '51 950w

Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue
N Y Times p30 N 18 '51 700w

Reviewed by Howard Thurman
San Francisco Chronicle p15 D 23 '51 550w

OTTO, MRS MARGARET (GLOVER) HANSL, and OTTO, STUART. Boat and ship book. 62p il $1.75 Sloane

623.82 Boats. Ships 51-12821

"Starting with the simplest and most familiar, a rowboat and a canoe, the authors present in excellent photographs and clearly written text many different types of ships. There are descriptions of a tanker, a tugboat, a battleship, and many others. Less space is devoted to such special types as a racing shell and an iceboat. This book will answer questions of youngsters from four or five to ten years old." Library J

Kirkus 19:578 O 1 '51 100w

OTTO, M. G. H.—Continued
Reviewed by M. C. Skinner
Library J 76:1714 O 15 '51 60w

"The text is intelligent, the many photographs well printed." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 D 9 '51 50w

"Children who are interested in ships and have just learned to read will be delighted with the big, clear photographs and easy-to-read and informative text in this book by the authors of 'The Truck Book.'" Creighton Peet
+ N Y Times p38 N 11 '51 90w

OURSLER, FULTON. Child's life of Jesus; pictures by Elinore Blaisdell. [40p] $1.75 Watts, F.

232 Jesus Christ—Juvenile literature 51-9893

A retelling of the life of Jesus for children by the supervisor of the radio program The Greatest Story ever Told and author of the book by the same name. Illustrations are some in color, some in black and white.

Booklist 47:298 Ap 15 '51

"There is considerable emphasis on the miraculous and the author moralizes on Jesus' way of loving helpfulness as an example for people today. The language is grafic and the artist's illustrations, in black and white and in color, give the book an attractive appearance. It is available in both Catholic and Protestant editions." F. D. Heron
Chicago Sunday Tribune p17 Mr 18 '51 120w

"One of the best books of this type we have seen. . . The pictures, color and black and white, by Elinore Blaisdell are appropriately benign and peaceful, but the color is badly off register."
+ — Kirkus 19:152 Mr 15 '51 150w

"Recommended." M. M. Gantt
+ Library J 76:714 Ap 15 '51 90w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Mr 18 '51 50w
Springf'd Republican p5D Mr 25 '51 120w

OURSLER, FULTON. Greatest book ever written; the Old Testament story [maps by Rafael Palacios]. 489p $3.95 Doubleday

221.95 Bible. O.T.—History of biblical events 51-13841

A companion volume to The Greatest Story Ever Told (Book Review Digest 1949). This is the Old Testament rewritten in narrative form. Index.

Booklist 48:93 N 15 '51
Cath World 174:320 Ja '52 100w

Reviewed by Clarence Seidenspinner
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 25 '51 400w
Cleveland Open Shelf p25 N '51

"He makes of the stories about Adam and Eve, Abraham, Moses, David and all the rest human interest stories such as might be included in the Sunday paper or the Reader's Digest. There is no ecclesiastical or theological bias so that both Protestants and Catholics could find the book acceptable. Could be used by Sunday School teachers for supplementary material."
Kirkus 19:608 O 1 '51 150w

"The author is primarily interested in the story, which he tells with a fine imaginative sweep. He discusses no historical problems; he enters into no critical examination of the Biblical text. . . Even moral judgments are avoided. . . There still remains the question as to whether the Bible needs an intermediary of this sort. Meanwhile, we may be glad that one more door is opened into this field of sacred literature, and the Bible made easy and not difficult to read." J. H. Holmes
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 N 25 '51 450w

"'The Greatest Book Ever Written' has an appealing simplicity and lack of literary pretension; at times it evokes a deep tenderness and there are touches of unconscious poetry." Chad Walsh
+ N Y Times p22 D 2 '51 110w
Springf'd Republican p12C N 18 '51 360w
Time 58:91 N 12 '51 300w

OVERDYKE, WILLIAM DARRELL. Know-nothing party in the South. 328p il $4 La. state univ. press

329.6 South—Politics and government. American party 51-2341

"This is a study of nativism in the South just before the Civil War. The author describes the characteristics which distinguish the southern Know-Nothing Party from its counter-part in the North. He suggests that the popularity of the Party in the South might be partially explained in that it drew the attention of the people away from the sectional strife which was leading the way toward the Civil War. He vividly describes the Party's organization, propaganda and campaigns." Current Hist

Reviewed by G. W. McGinty
Am Hist R 56:999 Jl '51 400w

"Dr. Overdyke has produced the leading study of the American or Know-Nothing party. . . The book suffers from prosaic style and from disjointed organization within chapters." F. L. Burdette
Am Pol Sci R 45:237 Mr '51 110w

"A study of the Know-Nothing party in the South has long been needed, and Mr. Overdyke's study makes a valuable contribution to the history of the period." Clement Eaton
+ Ann Am Acad 275:189 My '51 420w

"Dr. Overdyke's research has been broad and thorough if not all-inclusive. He has contributed a valuable footnote to both the political and emotional history of a section of America." T. D. Clark
Christian Century 68:433 Ap 4 '51 750w
Current Hist 20:291 My '51 70w
Social Studies 42:232 My '51 10w

"The author's lack of precision in expression and his failure adequately to present the conflicts between southern and northern wings of the party prevent the book from realizing its full possibilities. It will be useful, nevertheless, as a reference work for students of political history and propaganda."
U S Quarterly Bk R 7:277 S '51 260w

OVERSTREET, BONARO (WILKINSON). See Wilkinson, B.

OWEN, JEAN Z. Widows can be happy. 207p $3 Greenberg

392.3 Widows 50-10763

"Though not a widow herself, the author has interviewed dozens of women whose husbands have died, and has linked their problem with counsel from medical, religious and psychological experts. The resulting book offers both comfort and a challenge to the widow." San Francisco Chronicle

Booklist 47:183 Ja 15 '51

"No easy road to mental peace is offered. The author stresses the need for placing the recent marriage in its proper perspective in the past, and for coming to grips with the reality of the present. There is concrete advice on avoiding those who prey on widows, and fairly realistic discussion of sexual frustration and the prospect of remarriage." M. S.
San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ja 14 '51 240w

OWEN, WILFRED, and DEARING, CHARLES LEE. Toll roads and the problem of highway modernization. 204p $2.50 Brookings

388.1 Tolls. Roads 51-10622

"A survey of the use of toll highways in easing the problems of maintenance and financing of existing free roads. Examines advantages and disadvantages, illustrating points by reference to practices in existing toll systems; gives modified approval of the building of toll roads under certain conditions." Booklist

"This volume should prove valuable as supplementary reading in transportation courses and should be required reading for those concerned with the formulation and administration of highway policy." R. W. Harbeson

+ Am Econ R 41:1001 D '51 1300w

Am Pol Sci R 45:909 S '51 30w

"The book is interesting; and the approach is scientific, as might be expected of a work sponsored by the Brookings Institution. Moreover, the authors are quite competent to deal with the problem; during the past decade they have written three books on highway transportation." Eliot Jones

+ Ann Am Acad 277:235 S '51 450w

Booklist 47:396 Jl 15 '51

"This little book should be read by all who are interested in financing highway construction. The authors have been intimately associated with highway-finance developments for a long time. Their discussion of the controversial question of toll roads as an element of the highway problem is factual and dispassionate."

+ Eng N 146:43 My 10 '51 250w

"The book, so far as it goes, has few weaknesses. A major omission is the lack of any substantial discussion of the effects of toll roads on intercity truck and bus transportation. It would also be interesting to know more about commercial toll rates. . . The competition of turnpikes with each other, a distant possibility, and with railroads is not treated. In short, the book does not explore all aspects of the problem, but it is an indispensable pioneer study." J. G. B. Hutchins

+ — J Pol Econ 59:551 D '51 1400w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchinson

Nation 172:422 My 5 '51 750w

"An informative and cogent account of present conditions." G. A. Panichas

+ Springf'd Republican p20A My 13 '51 420w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:262 S '51 240w

OWSLEY, JENNIFER. Handy guide to grownups, il. by Margaret Graham. [41p] $1 Random house

136.7 Children—Management 50-10246

"A candid view of the world of grownups, written by an 11 year old girl, this little book will give parents some new slants on the way children regard the treatment they receive at the hands of adults." Chicago Sunday Tribune

"Altho young Jennifer is quite serious and dead-panned in her observations, it is obvious that she has a sense of humor." Alden Powell

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ja 7 '51 140w

"A slight, gentle and pleasant reflecting of a young inquiry into a world, that, in spite of being incomprehensible, must be put up with."

+ Kirkus 18:503 Ag 15 '50 130w

"Addressed to children or not, it is easily conceivable that this little book may do a good bit toward opening adult eyes. Margaret Graham's pen-and-ink illustrations are just right, too." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 25 '50 700w

School & Society 73:15 Ja 6 '51 40w

OXENFELDT, ALFRED RICHARD. Industrial pricing and market practices. 602p $7.65; to schools $4.75 Prentice-Hall

338.52 Prices. Competition 51-1848

"Describes the environmental setting in a free-enterprise economy in terms of the characteristics of production and distribution. The author then proceeds to discuss the major influences on pricing that operate within firms; among firms in a single industry; then those influences external to the producing industry that are fundamental to an understanding of many specific prices—as vertical relations among sellers, substitute and complementary products; then the ways in which government regulation or intervention influences prices, not always in the direction intended." Library J

"Within the range and interest of the general reader." J. E. Cross

Library J 76:870 My 15 '51 120w

"This book is the best available means of attaining a broad understanding of the pricing process. . . Though the reviewer or the reader may not agree with all that is said, he will, with the exception of some minor points, highly respect it." E. C. Bratt

+ Management R 40:593 S '51 550w

OXFORD book of American verse; chosen and with an introd. by F. O. Matthiessen. 1132p $5 Oxford

811.08 American poetry—Collections 50-9826

For descriptive note see Annual for 1950.

Bookmark 10:86 Ja '51

Reviewed by Hilda Kirkwood

Canadian Forum 31:140 S '51 290w

"An anthology sampling the best of both the older and newer American poetry is still needed, for the present book is far from the answer." Katherine Brégy

Cath World 172:317 Ja '51 300w

"Any reader will have some objections to any anthology, and I have two to this one. First, I would say that the anthologist's principle of 'fewer poets, with more space for each' has been carried too far. . . My second objection is this: that although no poem would appear to have been chosen 'on merely historical grounds,' the anthologist seems in some cases to have over-prized a relevance to cultural history or a concern with 'major ideas.' . . But these are very slight criticisms of a splendid piece of work." Richard Wilbur

+ — New Eng Q 24:132 Mr '51 400w

Reviewed by Arthur Pumphrey

New Statesman & Nation 41:277 Mr 10 '51 1500w

"I want to begin by saying that this is probably the best one-volume collection of American poetry that has ever been made. It is not my selection. I should have made certain other choices; so doubtless any other editor would have done. A list of American poems that will please everybody is obviously impossible. But Matthiessen's selection, more nearly than any other that I know, is sensitive and intelligent and genuinely representative." Cleanth Brooks

+ Poetry 79:36 O '51 2150w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

Sat R of Lit 34:33 Jl 21 '51 90w

"It is with unexpected satisfaction that one lays down the book, having been given—partly through the introduction, but even more by the text—a sense of a tradition which is not just changing, or merely carrying on, but which is now on the verge of its maturity. In this anthology the great originals of American poetry stand out clearly." Richard Murphy

+ Spec 186:152 F 2 '51 950w

Times [London] Lit Sup p63 F 2 '51 1550w

OXNAM, GARFIELD BROMLEY, bp. Church and contemporary change. 132p $2.50 Macmillan

261 Church and social problems 50-10839

"This is a collection of lectures given by Bishop Oxnam at Chicago Theological Seminary

OXNAM, G. B.—Continued
and the Pacific School of Religion. The bishop confronts the new world in which we live and the new techniques which are necessary if the church is to fulfill its function and loyally accomplish its mission. There are chapters on The Nature of the Contemporary Crisis, The Minister in a New Environment, Religious Liberty and the changing World, The Social Service State and Serfdom, and Christian Strategy in the Light of the World Crisis." Churchman

Booklist 47:150 D 15 '50

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell
Churchman 165:17 Ja 1 '51 180w

"This is a small book, but it is packed with the results of wide experience, accurate observation, close reasoning, and dynamic expression. The bishop has traveled widely and wisely; he has lived at the centre of the church's life at home and abroad. When he speaks, there are no wasted moments; when he writes, he has something to say, and he says it memorably." R. S. Clements
+ Crozer Q 28:169 Ap '51 600w

Kirkus 18:598 O 1 '50 280w

Reviewed by J. E. Smith
N Y Times p15 Je 17 '51 80w

Springf'd Republican p8D N 26 '50 200w

OXNAM, GARFIELD BROMLEY, bp. On this rock; an appeal for Christian unity. 117p $1.50 Harper

280 Church unity 51-9375

The third series of lectures on the William Henry Hoover lectureship on Christian unity, given at the Disciples Divinity house of the University of Chicago by Bishop Oxnam. Contents: Conserving the values that lie in diversity; Reconciling the differences that lie in economic thought and practice; Confronting the divisions that lie in the conflict between the free mind and the authoritarian church; Discovering the blessings that lie in the united church.

"The main thesis of this lecture is precisely right, but its specific application is fraught with great difficulties." W. E. G.
Christian Century 68:271 F 28 '51 400w

Reviewed by F. J. Moore
+ Churchman 165:16 My 1 '51 300w

"Bishop Oxnam plunges into the subject in his usual forthright manner. He sees clearly the problems involved and the complexities to be resolved." R. S. Clements
+ Crozer Q 28:180 Ap '51 370w

"This is a vigorous, forthright plea for the organic unity of Protestant denominations."
+ Kirkus 19:54 F 1 '51 190w

Reviewed by J. E. Smith
N Y Times p15 Je 17 '51 160w

P

PACEY, LORENE M., ed. Readings in the development of settlement work. 343p $6 Assn. press

331.85 Social work 51-9376

"The papers collected in this volume were written by nearly 40 persons over a period of 40 years. Many great and familar names are here: Jane Addams, Vida D. Scudder, George Bellamy, Mary McDowell, Graham Taylor—to pick only a few at random. Together the papers give a picture of the principles and development of social settlement work." (Christian Century) Bibliography. Index.

Christian Century 68:210 F 14 '51 140w

"Lorene M. Pacey has done a real service in bringing together in chronological order some of the most vivid writings of the settlement leaders which have bearing today. . . This book is a 'must' for all students of social change as well as for social workers." L. M. Peck
+ Survey 87:142 Mr '51 600w

PACHTER, HENRY MAXIMILIAN. Paracelsus: magic into science. (Life of science lib) 360p il $4 Schuman

B or 92 Paracelsus 51-10192

"Paracelsus, whose real name was Theophrastus Bombastus von Hohenheim, was an alchemist, physician, and philosopher who flourished in the first half of the sixteenth century. He was a rough fellow who consorted with teamsters and did a good deal of drinking in taverns, and he was always scorned by the academic medical profession, which he openly and abusively defied. . . He left treatises that are mixtures of serious metallurgical, medical, and psychological research and medieval magic and theological speculations. . . Mr. Pachter has studied Paracelsus in terms of the ideas of his age and has tried to sift out what is valid from the fantastic and the obsolete." New Yorker

Booklist 47:327 My 15 '51

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 68:917 Ag 8 '51 650w

Reviewed by W. P. Sears
Churchman 165:17 O 15 '51 160w

"Mr. Pachter has performed an excellent and unusual service in writing a book which is both a contribution to learning and a fascinating story for the layman." J. A. Mazzeo
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Jl 8 '51 750w

Reviewed by T. C. Chubb
N Y Times p14 Ap 29 '51 340w

"A curious story and an interesting and worth-while book."
+ New Yorker 27:120 My 26 '51 240w

PACK, ELIZABETH. Saddle for Hoskie; il. by Manning de V. Lee. 127p $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

51-1856

Story about a Navajo Indian boy for grades three to five.

Booklist 47:298 Ap 15 '51

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Jl 29 '51 150w

Reviewed by E. C. Alexander
Library J 76:880 My 15 '51 70w

"Still another story about a Navajo boy and his horse is welcome, when, like this one, it is exactly right in length and style for boys the same age as its nine-year-old hero. Full of action, it also gives a fine picture of Navajo life today." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ap 8 '51 200w

"The author describes in interesting detail some of the Indians' dances and rituals. All this makes a good story in which Miss Pack's first-hand knowledge of the Southwest is revealed." Marjorie Burger
+ N Y Times p30 Ap 29 '51 180w

Sat R of Lit 34:44 My 12 '51 80w

PACKARD, AUBIGNE LERMOND. A town that went to sea. 416p $4.50 Falmouth

974.153 Thomaston, Maine. 51-550

A history of the town of Thomaston, Maine. "Gathered in this book are memories of Thomaston by a local historian. . . Much has happened since Capt. George Weymouth sailed into the mouth of the Georges River in 1605, and little that happened has been neglected by the author. The phases of Thomaston's progress from trading post to shipbuilding center; the men who built and manned the ships; the local capitalists who organized industries, lime-burning among them, and furnished cargoes—all are here. And we have a picture of small-town life, sprinkled with anecdotes of rugged individualists who lent character to Thomaston and the Georges Valley." N Y Times

"The absence of documentation in this book, or any list of source material, throws this reviewer into something of a dilemma—a state of mind that is further confounded by the use of the word 'saga' in the subtitle. In our opinion, local history is so important to the whole field of history that we would like to see local historians conform to the accepted practices of historianship. This book does not. Perhaps that is why it is so entertaining. . . Everyone who seeks to know Maine better should read this book." Elizabeth Ring

+ — New Eng Q 24:108 Mr '51 850w

"A list of Thomaston-built ships, running from 1787 to 1920, and a roster of the town's sea captains are valuable features of this book." W. B. Hayward
+ N Y Times p6 Jl 29 '51 420w

PACKARD, HAZEL, ed. Bedtime tales; a treasury of 36 favorite stories old and new; pictures by Corinne Malvern. (Big golden bk) 192p $1.50 Simon & Schuster
51-8265

"This collection includes 36 stories, a few poems, and many illustrations. . . Selections include many old standbys, such as 'Jack and the Beanstalk,' 'Rip Van Winkle,' 'The Emperor's New Clothes' and more recent ones, such as 'Gingham Lena' and 'Hook and Ladder Pepper.' " Library J

Reviewed by Marcia Winn
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 11 '51 70w

Kirkus 19:317 Jl 1 '51 70w

"Because of the variety, will be of value in homes for reading aloud and, therefore, a useful addition to some children's collections in public libraries." O. R. Way
+ Library J 76:1233 Ag '51 80w

"The 196 pages are crammed with wit, humor and more serious thoughts sometimes, poetry and prose." S. M. N.
+ Springf'd Republican p4C Ag 5 '51 60w

PADEN, DONALD WITT, and LINDQUIST, EVERET FRANKLIN. Statistics for economics and business. 276p $3.75 McGraw
311.2 Statistics 51-4512

"This book provides a survey of basic principles and applications of statistics to economic and business studies. Written for ready understanding and rapid reading, it should appeal to the engineer who feels a need for better appreciation and more intelligent use of statistics in everyday problems. The emphasis is upon the end result rather than method." Eng N

"Readers need little more than high school algebra to follow the theory, the authors having cut to the bone the mathematical proofs and development of formulas. These are readily available from other sources. A section of the book which could be stronger is that on index numbers. On the other hand, the chapters on correlation are excellent."
+ Eng N 147:43 Jl 12 '51 140w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 76:1229 Ag '51 50w

PADGETT, LEWIS, pseud. See Kuttner, H.

PAKINGTON, HUMPHREY. Farewell to Otterley. 256p $3 Norton
51-9699

"This brings the history of the Washbournes up to date, for the Admiral and his Lady lose the final battle from their feudal pinnacle and decide to sell their beloved Otterley, unless, of course, their son, Tom, should happen to marry money. . . But Tom, muddled and doubtful, comes a cropper and there is young Priscilla, with her love of the old estates and houses, to catch his fancy and head him to the altar. . . The seeming casualness of social interchange, the efforts to fight and prevail against impossible odds, the parties, tennis, that those on their beam ends pursue, reach their finale with the saddening sale of Otterley." Kirkus

Booklist 47:274 Ap 1 '51

Bookmark 10:208 Je '51 30w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 5 '51 280w

"A tougher, tenderer observer than Thirkell, Pakington offers his performers in a gently sly, affectionate and appreciative ave atque vale."
+ Kirkus 19:70 F 1 '51 240w

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge
Library J 76:516 Mr 15 '51 130w

" 'Farewell to Otterley' offers no solution to world problems, but many readers will find it a peaceful and highly diverting interlude in their private worlds. It is that rare find, a civilized and intelligent light novel." Mary Ross
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Mr 11 '51 550w

"Through it all, the Admiral's feeling for his land, his home, his heritage is muted to a civilized undertone. Yet even this well-bred murmur evokes so much beauty, such a sense of golden tranquillity and immortal peace that it sounds under all the irony and detachment like a moving requiem. If Mr. Pakington aimed at reporting a revolution without tears, his own compassion has betrayed him." Isabelle Mallet
+ N Y Times p5 Mr 11 '51 450w

"A cheerful and entertaining novel."
+ New Yorker 27:119 Mr 10 '51 70w

San Francisco Chronicle p26 Ap 22 '51 350w

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst
Sat R of Lit 34:17 Mr 24 '51 600w

"The good humor and merriment expected in a Pakington novel is not missing in this latest work and will make his audience eager for any forthcoming work, especially if it pertains to the present-day world." S. M. Neal
+ Springf'd Republican p30A Mr 18 '51 300w

Wis Lib Bul 47:190 Jl '51

PALAZZO, TONY. Federico, the flying squirrel. 54p il $2.50 Viking 51-10301

Picture story book for ages three to five. It is about a flying squirrel who was very fond of a little boy named Billy. When Billy's pet kitten got too far up in Federico's tree and was afraid to come down, the little squirrel helped in the rescue.

Booklist 47:316 My 1 '51

Bookmark 10:208 Je '51

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Ag 19 '51 160w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '51

Reviewed by J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews
Horn Bk 27:178 My '51 90w

"Gives a good bit on life and habitat of flying squirrels. Recommended." F. W. Butler
+ Library J 76:969 Je 1 '51 60w

"Mr. Palazzo is good at placing his action in relation to the big pages and the text. Sometimes Federico is as large as life and so he is in a cut-out page at the end. He is always his own brown, the backgrounds black and white. It is a story just for fun, yet each youngster who hears it never will forget the flying squirrel." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 My 13 '51 200w

"The story is slight, but the gaiety of the animals and some entertaining word-sounds easily hold the interest of nursery school children." Miriam James
+ N Y Times p30 Ap 22 '51 130w

Sat R of Lit 34:47 Je 9 '51 70w

PALESTRANT, SIMON S. Practical papercraft; over 400 useful and decorative projects for fun and profit. 120p il $2.50 Homecrafts
745.54 Paper work 50-10932

Divided into sections labeled How to work with (1) tissues and crepe papers, (2) light stock, (3) multi-ply cardboard, (4) corrugated,

PALESTRANT, S. S.—Continued
wall and fiber board, (5) pulp and mache. Included are directions for making costumes, flowers, dolls, boxes, baskets, stage scenery, puppets, masks, etc.

Booklist 47:171 Ja 1 '51

Bookmark 10:84 Ja '51 20w

"Information of the kind the harried librarian often seeks in vain, such as helpful hints on paper decoupage and paper montage, on flocking on paper, on making novelties and standbys, costumes and decorations. A list of sources of supplies is also valuable." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 76:778 My 1 '51 70w

PALFFY, ELEANOR (ROELKER) (COUNTESS PAUL PALFFY). The lady and the painter; an extravaganza. 263p il $3.50 Coward-McCann

Gardner, Isabella (Stewart) (Mrs Jack Gardner)—Fiction. Sargent, John Singer—Fiction 51-13732

"Chronicling (in the form of a novel) a renowned romance between John Singer Sargent and the dazzling Mrs. Jack Gardner, Countess Palffy draws in many 'name' celebrities with glimpses of enveloping customs, manners, ideas and fashionable doings on both side of the Atlantic." N Y Times

"The author has no great narrative skill, but if a reader can overlook it, he will receive some reward. The interest inherent in the principal characters and in the milieu has a way of coming thru even at the most unexpected moments and giving a certain glow to some pages of the book." Edward Barry

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 25 '51 350w

"The book is entertaining though not wholly satisfying. The difficulty, I think, is in its semi-fictional character. Mrs. Jack and and John Singer Sargent were extremely actual persons and her life, at least was itself an extravaganza. One is eager to know the actuality of real people as extraordinary as these and others who enter into the book; fact unadorned should be fascinating; fact-founded fiction leaves one perhaps too often incredulous." Mary Ross

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 N 4 '51 950w

"The author's torrential style with its well-turned phrases, conversational gambits and flow of superlatives pins down the proper Renaissance mood. The story would have been stronger with change of pace and less bewildering chronology among scenes. A flavorful confection it is, though the astounded reader may find the icing too rich for comfortable digestion." James Kelly

+ — N Y Times p59 N 25 '51 500w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal
Springf'd Republican p30A D 2 '51 350w

PALMER, BROOKS. Book of American clocks; with 312 illustrations. 318p $10 Macmillan

681.11 Clocks and watches 50-11068

"The book is based on Nutting's Furniture Treasury. New pictures have been added to make a total of 312 illustrations of examples of clocks and watches. The introductory section of 19 pages is followed by the photographs and a 183 page descriptive list of makers." (Booklist) Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 47:222 F 15 '51

"By far the most important purpose of the book is fulfilled by the extensive list of 6,000 American watch and clock makers, most complete list of its kind ever compiled, and by the 312 illustrations of clocks and watches. As has become customary recently with books about antiques, this one is handsomely and expensively produced." Russell MacFall

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 F 4 '51 220w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '51

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut
Library J 76:411 Mr 1 '51 120w

"That Mr. Palmer has devoted a vast amount of time and study to his subject is immediately evident. . . Possibly the feature section is the second, the remaining 186 pages, a compilation of some six thousand names of watch and clock makers who were active in the United States. . . The reviewer believes that this material has never before been included in any listing. The fine clear photographs should come in for a special mention." J. E. Coleman

+ New Eng Q 24:133 Mr '51 300w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 F 25 '51 270w

PALMER, EDWARD E., ed. Communist problem in America, a book of readings. 496p $3.50 Crowell

335.4 Communism—U.S. 51-6249

"Edward E. Palmer, who is assistant professor of citizenship in the Maxwell School of Public Affairs at Syracuse University, was rightly depressed by the feeling that all this talk about communism was not producing much illumination. He decided another book was needed—one that would serve the function of a seeing-eye dog, leading his students and others through the morass of literature on the causes and cure of communism. He set out to pick the most pertinent material out of the things that had been written so readers could find within a single volume a guide to what the Russians were up to and what we ought to do about it." N Y Times

Am Pol Sci R 45:1212 D '51 30w

Reviewed by O. K. Fraenkel
Nation 173:570 D 29 '51 220w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 N 11 '51 30w

"The book bears all the marks of having been put together in a hurry. There is little evidence that Palmer waded through all the books and other sources necessary for a fully selective job. Almost all his quotations from Marx, Lenin, Stalin and other Communist high priests are lifted out of a volume compiled by Congressional researchers three years ago. . . A more thorough search would have brought to light many more penetrating readings than some of those included here." A. H. Raskin

N Y Times p39 O 21 '51 300w

"The book promises to be of great value not only to college study groups grappling with this major problem of our time, but to all who seek to understand the phenomenon that has thrown the world into frightened confusion." E. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p29 O 28 '51 190w

School & Society 74:175 S 15 '51 40w

Wis Lib Bul 47:248 N '51

PALMER, STUART. Nipped in the bud; a Miss Withers mystery. 283p $2.50 Mill 51-13986

Detective story.

Bookmark 11:85 Ja '52

Kirkus 19:503 S 1 '51 70w

"The bud is, in fact, pretty well blown before it is nipped, but that's all to the good for this is the most satisfying tale about Miss Hildegarde Withers in a number of years. . . Stuart Palmer obviously had a good deal of fun in writing it and the fun is infectious so that it's probably churlish, if relevant, to add that he has invented one solution beyond the elasticity of my credibility and then put a revolver in its hand to lend it substance." James Sandoe

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 N 25 '51 180w

"No one knows better than Palmer how to produce an absurd and entertaining farce-comedy which is still a shrewdly plotted detective puzzle." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p54 N 25 '51 190w

"The mix-up in Tijuana shouldn't have happened to Talley, but Miss Withers could take it and emerge from some riotous situations with a surprising solution. She's never done better, bless her." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 23 '51 80w

"Trans-border mise-en-scène engagingly handled, dénouement a mite tricky." Sergeant Cuff
+ Sat R of Lit 34:38 D 22 '51 30w

"A little more cluttered than the usual Stuart Palmer mystery, but good stuff just the same." R. F. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p12C N 18 '51 70w

PALMER, MRS WINTHROP (BUSHNELL). New barbarian. 62p $2.50 Farrar, Straus 811 51-9377

In the Publisher's note the poet is quoted as saying: "I have tried honestly to regard the contemporary world without nostalgia to discover its heroes, its gods, its rites and games, its triumphs and its defeats." Some of the poems here collected have been previously published in such magazines as Spirit, The Poetry Chap-Book, The Lyric, The Saturday Review of Literature.

"Mrs. Palmer's work is honest, well-turned, unsentimental, scathing, and after a while, just a bit tedious; the symbols repeat themselves too often, so that the effect is one of a guarded tightness. Which, of course, is better than being all over the place." Rolfe Humphries
+ — Nation 172:256 Mr 17 '51 160w

"The diction seems conventional enough, the rhythms obvious and sometimes careless, but there is an individuality in the quality of her perception that sometimes impresses and sometimes puzzles. She gives us the world as she sees it—rather, we feel, because she wants to clarify what she sees than because she wants to write poetry. One might almost say that the poetry is accidental: the observation is the real thing. All this makes for considerable unevenness in the poems." David Daiches
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 S 16 '51 240w

N Y Times p24 O 14 '51 130w

PAPASHVILY, GEORGE, and PAPASHVILY, HELEN (WAITE). Thanks to Noah; il. by Jack Wilson. 166p $2.50 Harper
818 51-2297

The authors of Anything Can Happen (Book Review Digest 1941) have produced a book about their animal friends. Beginning with a bear named Kola which was George's boyhood friend in his native Georgia (Russia) they continue with their American animals—dogs, especially.

Booklist 47:307 My 1 '51

Bookmark 10:182 My '51 30w

+ Cath World 173:320 Jl '51 190w

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan
Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ap 8 '51 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '51

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 27:243 Jl '51 40w

Kirkus 19:92 F 1 '51 130w

"Once again, Helen and George Papashvily, the delightful wife and husband team, have collaborated on a book. As in their other works, Helen, the American, acts as scribe for George, the native of Russian Georgia, who is the narrator. And, as before, she captures the individual color, speech and philosophy of a man whose late flowering in America carries the flavor of his native roots. . . If you're an animal lover, this book is your meat; if you aren't, well, there's always George who can be guaranteed to warm your heart." Rose Feld
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ap 8 '51 550w

Reviewed by Harry Gilroy
N Y Times p14 Ap 8 '51 400w

New Yorker 27:142 Ap 11 '51 130w

"It's a small book, a matter of 167 pages only, with delightful drawings by Jack Wilson, and anyone who has ever owned and loved an animal will put it down with regret that it could have been twice as long." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ap 12 '51 800w

"Amusing and completely charming book.". R. F. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p20A My 13 '51 140w

Wis Lib Bul 47:86 Ap '51

PAPINI, GIOVANNI, and others. Florence, flower of the world; tr. by Adele Pina Vacchelli and Hilda M. R. Cox. 317p pl $6.50 Macmillan
914.55 Florence

"Four authorities on Florentine art, literature, history and religious history have written what amounts to a perfect guide to Florence. . . The book is divided into four—actually five chapters. Papini contributes the introduction and 'Literature in Florence.' Ardengo Soffici writes of Florentine art, Piero Bargellini of the religious contribution of Florence, and Giovanni Spadolini of Florentine political history." N Y Times

"The four authors of the present volume, all Florentines, go so far as to assert that the renaissance is a creation of Florence. This may come as a surprise but the book is written with such verve that the reader will accept, for the nonce, their premise, as one accepts the poet's statement that the moon has something to do with love. It is a beautiful book, and one of the most handsome in printing and binding of our time." John Randolph
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 12 '51 150w

"It is fascinating to observe how the authors of the chapters in this book have been able to show the close interrelation between the literature, art, religion and political history of Florence. To any tourist visiting Florence for the first time I would say: Take this book, your passport, and a street map of the city. That's all you will need." H. M. Clark
+ N Y Times p16 Jl 29 '51 420w

"Perhaps it is unjustified to complain because a single volume can't do everything. It seems to me, though, that a chapter on the Florence of today, written with dignity and without attempt to follow the guidebook line, would have rounded out this already impressive study of a city's culture. If the right Italian writer had been found and allowed to present a contemporary interpretation of his city and its people, it would have added much. And I believe it could have been done without in any way detracting from what is, as it stands, primarily a work of scholarship. Nevertheless, this is a fine and worthwhile piece of work." J. H. Jackson
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 30 '51 750w

PARK, JOSEPH HENDERSHOT. British prime ministers of the nineteenth century: policies and speeches. 377p $4.75 N.Y. univ. press
942.07 Prime ministers. Great Britain—Politics and government 50-9251

"Professor Park has presented selections from the speeches of Canning, Wellington, Peel, Palmerston, Disraeli, Gladstone, and Salisbury. These selections have been chosen to demonstrate the positions of the prime ministers on the most important issues of the period. Essays on each of the ministers introduce the excerpts from their speeches." Current Hist

Reviewed by Paul Knaplund
Am Hist R 56:556 Ap '51 420w

Reviewed by George Bennett
Canadian Hist R 32:88 Mr '51 300w

"Since it is difficult to obtain the texts of many of these speeches, the author has performed a valuable service for the researcher. In addition, through careful arrangement and choice of matter, he has produced a readable and extremely graphic history of the period."

PARK, J. H.—Continued
+ Current Hist 19:356 D '50 80w

"There is little in the book to which even the most fault-finding critic could properly object. The interpretive essay that precedes the section on each of the prime ministers . . . invariably reveals wide learning and insight; and the brief introductory comments that precede each of the speeches in the volume are helpful and unpretentious." Herman Ausubel
+ Pol Sci Q 65:638 D '50 350w

"In this admirable compilation Dr. Park brings home the contemporaneity of British nineteenth-century political debates for the American student today."
+ Sat R of Lit 34:38 Mr 17 '51 250w

PARK, RUTH (MRS DARCY NILAND). 12½ Plymouth street. 312p $3 Houghton 51-10

A sequel to Harp in the South (Book Review Digest 1948) which continues the story of the Darcy family, living in the slums of Sydney. The present book describes the adolescence of Dolour, the younger of the two Darcy sisters.

Booklist 47:166; 188 Ja 1 '51; Ja 15 '51

"Life in the slums can be urgent and appalling, but for the people of Plymouth Street, Irish and Catholic, there are always the Church and 'Saint Martin de Porridge.' Ramshackle as it is at times and a bit too contrived at its close, this is a book adult in its perceptions and engaging in its humor." Riley Hughes
+ — Cath World 173:73 Ap '51 350w

"This novel, tho a sequel, is in no sense dependent upon its forerunner. It stands up by itself, like a Darcy. And it is so good in itself, so rich and living and honest and forthright that I hope the wide reading it will surely get will revive interest in the book that went before it. Few writers of our time have the knowledge, compassion, humor, and skill to do this sort of thing. Ruth Park has done it twice, with increasing authority." Richard Sullivan
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 F 11 '51 450w

Reviewed by Ruth Chapin
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 12 '51 320w

"A vivid print of one section of the Australian metropolis, this, while realistic is not deeply penetrating."
Kirkus 18:730 D 15 '50 200w

"It's readable and humorous, characters are realistic, and the love interest is tender and unusual, but the squalor, poverty and filth are horrifying. The author shows understanding and compassion for the striving and suffering of the poor but she conceals none of their pleasures or sins. Not for young people. Recommended." Anne Whitmore
+ Library J 76:111 Ja 15 '51 70w

"Writing about the slums usually slips into easy sentimentality or gloomy naturalism. But Mrs. Park has found a way to write about the filth and the leaky, primitive living quarters while letting us see that hope and love and even happiness are as prevalent among the dwellers of Surry Hills." Bradford Smith
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ja 28 '51 700w

"Mrs. Park's insights are always sound. She likes her slum people because they are so human. Her bad people are never lacking in humanity; her good people are of humanity all compound. . . Casual readers will probably vote this novel and its predecessor 'good' on the ground that they express the heart. Dour critics will find them rather less powerful than more artfulness could have made them." C. H. Grattan
N Y Times p4 Ja 28 '51 600w
New Yorker 26:103 F 10 '51 70w

Reviewed by C. N. Govan
Sat R of Lit 34:14 F 24 '51 280w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn
Springf'd Republican 16A Ja 28 '51 360w

PARKE, JOHN. Scratchy; il. by Charles L. Ripper. 126p $2 Morrow
Cats—Legends and stories 51-1162

Scratchy was a black kitten, not too well behaved, and he just hated everybody in the family he lived with. Finally he made one last awful mistake and was thrown out and then he ran away. After a series of frightening adventures, Scratchy found a new home with an old fisherman and his wife, a home so perfect with love and understanding—and fish—that it seemed truly a cat's heaven.

Booklist 47:261 Mr 15 '51
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Je 24 '51 140w
Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '51

"Scratchy is a very convincing cat, a sturdy individual and a straight-tailed egocentric, very condescending toward humans. The lively sketches by Charles L. Ripper do all but give him a soul."
+ Kirkus 19:60 F 1 '51 110w

"This poignant little bit of feline psychology could have been thought up only by a genuine cat lover. No child who reads it will again be indifferent to the feelings of the species, stray or otherwise." Claire Nolte
+ Library J 76:714 Ap 15 '51 80w

"This short tale, written with feeling and imagination, well illustrated, belongs on the shelf with the few truly good cat stories. . . The pictures seem exactly right, not 'childish,' but truly and dramatically interpreting a cat's point of view, or what seems to us a cat's point of view, and the action of the tale." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Mr 25 '51 270w

Reviewed by Marjorie Fischer
N Y Times p14 Ag 5 '51 80w

"It is unusual to find in a story for younger boys and girls so complete an identification of an animal. Scratchy is a character. One could never forget him. The drawings of Scratchy and old Bert are just exactly right."
+ Sat R of Lit 34:47 My 12 '51 230w
+ Springf'd Republican p16A Ap 1 '51 60w

PARKER, ELINOR MILNOR, comp. 100 story poems; il. by Henry C. Pitz. 499p $3.50 Crowell 821.08 Children's poetry—Collections
51-6759

Selection of English and American narrative poems for grades six to nine. They are grouped under headings: Poems about history; Romantic poems; Poems about people; Poems about magic; Kings, knights, and heroes; Poems about the sea; Poems about animals; Humorous poems. Index.

Booklist 48:90 N 1 '51
Horn Bk 27:414 D '51 80w
Kirkus 19:580 O 1 '51 130w

"An excellent collection from the standpoint of reader appeal." S. J. Johnson
+ Library J 76:1946 N 15 '51 70w

"They are mostly old favorites, well tested in schools; we find few surprises. But there is always some one who has missed them, and a some one who will like them more when now seen in a new place. The title will lure both teachers and children of ten through junior high." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p35 N 11 '51 180w

"In this splendid new anthology, there is a generous sampling of the best of many kinds of poetry, including the old ballads of Robin Hood, some of the priceless nonsense verse of Edward Lear, Lewis Carroll and A. P. Herbert, and Robert Nathan's 'Dunkirk.'" S. V. Jacobsen
+ N Y Times p6 N 11 '51 80w

PARKER, GEORGE, pseud. See Stoker, G. P.

PARKER, HARRY EWING. Simplified mechanics and strength of materials. 275p $4 Wiley

620.1 Mechanics, Applied. Strength of materials 51-11713

"Technical libraries and engineers both are well acquainted with Professor Parker's 'simplified' books, of which this is the sixth. . . The book's purpose is to give engineers, engineering students, architects and others who need an understanding of mechanics and strength of materials a working knowledge that can be put to practical use. The topics have been carefully selected, and the exposition contains numerous worked examples. The mathematics employed includes only arithmetic and algebra." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 76:1430 S 15 '51 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:74 S '51

PARKER, JAMES REID. Open house; il. by Leonard Shorthall. 219p $2.75 Doubleday

51-11358

A collection of gently humorous short stories many reprinted from the New Yorker. Contents: Tenth Street idyll; Down from the mountains; The lower Mississippi is thicker than water; Katrina; Miss Ber; The judgment of Paris; The domino method; Monks revel at Winkton; The millennium; Once upon a time; The red carpet; The hard day; N.E.S.P.D.I.P.; Mission to Massachusetts; Intervention of Providence; Mr. Gregg and the occult; Robes et modes; The estate of Alice V. Gregg; The hounds of spring; Joy, joy, joy!

Booklist 47:401 Jl 15 '51

"In one of his early collections of essays Christopher Morley tells of watching a man on a street car read one of his newspaper pieces. There was no laugh, Mr. Morley wrote, nor even a full smile. But there was a quivering of the cheek muscles which telegrafed inward delight and with that Mr. Morley was completely content. That is the sort of response Mr. Parker can expect from most of these half-wry, half-satirical, and wholly delightful stories." V. P. Hass

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Jl 1 '51 420w

Kirkus 19:235 My 1 '51 110w

"These are the kinds of yarns that an unusually perspicacious friend might tell you before the fire, with the joke on himself, or might tell in a letter written in a leisurely mood. They provoke smiles and chuckles, rather than out-loud laughs, and kindle a pleasant awareness of one's own and one's friends' foibles." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Je 24 '51 450w

"With few exceptions the sketches are excellent. These few fail to measure up to standard because they are so obviously contrived. 'The Red Carpet' depends on too many coincidences; 'The Domino Method' is fantastic in its premise. But easy technical mastery is responsible for the fact that the majority of the stories in 'Open House' are credible and highly entertaining." F. G. Fellowes

+ — N Y Times p15 Jl 1 '51 290w

"It is Mr. Parker at his very best, and the kind of reading—fairly rare, too—at which you can chuckle all to yourself and have a fine time doing it." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Jl 11 '51 450w

PARKER, MAUDE (MRS EDMUND WILLIAM PAVENSTEDT). Which Mrs Torr? 247p $2.50 Rinehart

50-11096

Mystery story.

Bookmark 10:86 Ja '51 10w

Kirkus 18:667 N 1 '50 60w

"Maude Parker writes conventionally but she has achieved an excellent and unusual sort of suspense in this first mystery. By balancing one character against another, and constantly shifting the emphasis of events, she genuinely puzzles the reader who knows that one Mrs. Torr will die but can't guess which one it will be until the event itself takes place."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ja 28 '51 180w

"It's all done with such skill that the reader accepts it, and is properly thrilled—though incredibility dawns after the book is finished." E. B.

+ N Y Times p15 F 11 '51 160w

"Pleasant writing, but not much thrill." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ja 28 '51 80w

Sat R of Lit 34:24 F 3 '51 60w

PARKER, ROBERT B. Passport to peril. 249p $2.50 Rinehart

50-11153

A novel of suspense, the scene of which is Budapest.

Bookmark 10:86 Ja '51 10w

Kirkus 18:662 N 1 '50 80w

"Very competently written, but sounding a little like a scenario for a Hitchcock or Carol Reed picture, all this really needs is a zither." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 75:2075 D 1 '50 110w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 F 11 '51 190w

"If he could add to his skill in handling places and politics a little plausibility in the treatment of people and plot, Parker might do nicely." A. B.

N Y Times p29 Ja 14 '51 100w

"Strictly formula, but fast and exciting."

New Yorker 26:96 F 3 '51 110w

"The plot is from stock and the characters are cardboard, making this item conspicuously unconvincing." L. G. Offord

— San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ja 28 '51 90w

Sat R of Lit 34:38 F 17 '51 50w

PARKER, THOMAS MAYNARD. English Reformation to 1558. 200p $2 Oxford

274.2 Reformation—England 50-9769

"[The book's] explicit purpose is to assess the chief forces which molded the Reformation in England. The key to the understanding of the English Reformation, the author suggests, is the fact that 'an almost inevitable conflict between Renaissance absolutism in its characteristically English form and the autonomous medieval church' provided an opportunity for the religious revolutionaries to push forward their program. The significant and unique feature of the English Reformation was that 'the constitutional revolution came before the adoption of a new religion, instead of being accomplished, as elsewhere, by the very impetus of that new theology itself.'" J Religion

"A book on the English Reformation which does not include the 'Elizabethan Settlement' is probably predestined to at least partial failure. Yet Mr. Parker, even within these limitations, has managed a readable account, both compact and sound." S. R. Packard

+ Am Hist R 56:954 Jl '51 220w

"As an introductory handbook to the period, highly recommended."

+ Christian Century 67:1108 S 20 '50 180w

"It is, in your reviewer's opinion, the best introduction to the English Reformation that has yet appeared." F. W. Buckler

+ Crozer Q 28:181 Ap '51 210w

"This is a careful, balanced appraisal of an old story." W. S. Hudson

+ J Religion 31:231 Jl '51 240w

Reviewed by C. W. Dugmore
Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 14 '50 140w

"Mr. Parker's handling of the political aspect is skilful, well-informed and judicious."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p537 Ag 25 '50 600w

PARKHILL, FORBES. Wildest of the West. 310p il $3.50 Holt

978.883 Denver—Biography. Denver—History 51-10777

"An account of the sporting life of Denver's pioneer days which reconstructs scenes of the time: stories of Halloway and Market streets (the West's most wicked streets) the bawdy houses, madames and inmates; clip joints, opium dens of Hop Alley; gamblers, faro bank buckers, short-card artists, cappers, shills, and shell men." Library J

Booklist 48:8 S 1 '51

"The truth is that Mr. Parkhill, except for a rather useless listing of early day madams in Denver's history, has almost nothing new to offer." V. P. Hass

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Je 3 '51 180w

"Forbes Parkhill knows his stuff and knows how to tell it. . . There is a top-notch description of Oscar Wilde's visit to Denver. An excellent book which belongs on all Western book shelves." Sylvester Vigilante

+ Library J 76:596 Ap 1 '51 220w

Reviewed by Stewart Holbrook

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Je 3 '51 650w

"Parkhill has done a prodigious amount of research, but much of it remains in the form of research notes. The general reader will find, besides the story of Mattie Silks and Cort Thompson, scattered nuggets; but he will also find a great deal of sludge and gravel." Hal Borland

N Y Times p19 Jl 22 '51 380w

"In this book Mr. Parkhill hangs for exhibit a fine, full gallery of portraits, sketches and thumbnail vignettes of some hundreds of Coloradans and others of about three quarters of a century ago. . . He confines himself for the most part to notables, masculine and feminine, from his immediate region, though he gets in an occasional mention of some whose field was broader." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Je 3 '51 180w

PARKHURST, HELEN. Exploring the child's world; with an introduction by Aldous Huxley. 290p il $3.50 Appleton

136.7 Child study 51-10788

"To reveal and document the hidden fears and thoughts of children, Miss Parkhurst administered three thousand questionnaires and recorded hundreds of unrehearsed interviews with children of all classes and backgrounds. On her weekly, half-hour radio and television program, 'Child's World,' children spoke candidly on such topics as stealing and prejudice. These recorded interviews reveal the actual content of the child's mind and form the basis for the present book. In each chapter the author discusses a topic briefly, quotes directly from the children's uninhibited discussions and then draws conclusions and gives suggestions." N Y Times

Booklist 47:355 Je 15 '51

+ Bookmark 10:206 Je '51 20w

Kirkus 19:177 Mr 15 '51 130w

"Probably the professional psychologist and psychiatrist will find details to carp at, but to the non-professional reader the material will be fascinating." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 S 9 '51 270w

"Although many educators and psychologists have investigated children's feelings and problems, none has recorded findings as accurately and extensively as Miss Parkhurst." M. R. Brown

+ N Y Times p26 Je 3 '51 200w

"Although one may disagree with some of Miss Parkhurst's interpretations, the fact remains that her method has this important validity, that the children speak with a good deal of freedom." Dorothy Sargent

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Jl 15 '51 750w

"Unfortunately, although Miss Parkhurst graphically presents the urgent need for increased understanding between parents and children, she offers no workable program for the achievement of this goal. Her conclusions from these discussions are often confusing and oversimplified. Her chapter on punishment and discipline illustrates this confusion, for it overlooks entirely the concept of 'discipline' as a technique of helping the growing child achieve self-control." M. F. Langer

— + Survey 87:332 Jl '51 190w

PARKS, WALLACE JUDSON. United States administration of its international economic affairs [thesis]. 315p $5 Johns Hopkins press

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations. U.S.—Economic policy 51-11043

"Mr. Parks accepts unequivocally the fact that the United States is permanently involved in the affairs of other nations, both politically and economically, and here points out the need for reorganization, or at least a tightening of Government's administration of foreign affairs if American dealings abroad are to be efficient and effective." San Francisco Chronicle

"At times the author's style may seem to the reader to be unnecessarily heavy, but as a rule it is clear. Certainly the ideas which he presents are worth the attention of a wide public." Norman Hill

+ — Ann Am Acad 277:231 S '51 390w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 76:1130 Jl '51 50w

"His broad survey of the various Government agencies which direct our economic relationships abroad is at once comprehensive and critical, and calls upon the legislative as well as the executive branch to face squarely the increased foreign responsibilities of the Government in the postwar world." A. B. T.

San Francisco Chronicle p17 S 9 '51 90w

"A scholarly and timely contribution to the problem of national administration, this volume is strengthened by extensive footnote commentary which permits the reader to pursue the quest further if he desires. The book should prove of great value to both students and practitioners of government."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:288 S '51 250w

PARMELEE, CLAUDE. How to be a crack shot with rifle and shotgun; ed. by Charles R. Jacobs. 78p il $2.50 Greenberg

799.21 Shooting 50-11249

"Techniques for every type of aerial shooting. 'I describe and illustrate the actual methods I employed in shooting practice which enabled me to become an Exhibition Shooter . . . a combat demonstrator of service weapons to over three million troops . . . a professional trap champion, and a big game hunter of some reputation.' " Library J

Booklist 47:152 D 15 '50

"With the aid of scores of excellent illustrations the author of this book, considered one of the fastest and most skillful shots in the country, plays the role of instructor very well; so both novice and experienced gunners will profit by reading his tips on shooting." Bob Becker

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 7 '51 50w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 76:51 Ja 1 '51 60w

San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 4 '51 100w

PARRISH, ANNE (MRS JOSIAH TITZELL). Story of Appleby Capple; il. by [the author]. 184p $2.75 Harper

50-10673

For descriptive note see Annual for 1950.

Booklist 47:225 F 15 '51

Bookmark 10:87 Ja '51

"This is a grand example of a book of delightful nonsense, which will bear many re-readings. The lovely pictures are joyous interpretations of the text and will be unforgettable." A. L. Shea

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 D 31 '50 220w

Christian Science Monitor p6 Mr 3 '51 110w

"It is a nonsense story which gives to words the gorgeous richness they deserve and to children the freedom to wander in the richness and color of words without regard to age, grade or word list. It is an alphabet book, yes, but a glorified one of ageless appeal. And nonsense story though it be, it is a real story with plenty of adventure and plenty of surprises." B. M. Miller

+ Horn Bk 27:20 Ja '51 1200w

"Original, imaginative, and extremely well-written nonsense story relating the exciting adventures of Apple's search for a Zebra Butterfly." H. M. Brogan

+ Library J 76:338 F 15 '51 80w

"This nonsense romance creates a whole scheme of delight, a webb of nonsensical patterns which the reader follows as in an irresistible maze. . . It is a book full of play: the play of the author with the reader, the play of the author with her own characters, the play with words, and the fascinating game of finding all the letters in all the pictures."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:32 Mr '51 120w

Wis Lib Bul 47:27 Ja '51

PARSONS, L. E., and STEARNS, JOHN K. Textile fibers. 80p $4 Int. textbook

677 Textile fibers 51-851

"An introductory textbook in which the commodity aspects of textile fibers are emphasized. There are four separately paged parts devoted respectively to cotton, wool, synthetic fibers and yarns." (Library J) Index.

"Although semi-technical, the book is not difficult to understand, and it should be of value not only to students enrolled in courses but to sales personnel and others whose work requires a general knowledge of present-day textile fibers." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 76:525 Mr 15 '51 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:31 Mr '51

"It will be a handy reference for the textile merchant, the chemist, the technologist, the manufacturer and the lay person."

+ Wis Lib Bul 47:58 Mr '51

PARTRIDGE, BELLAMY. Salad days; il. by Richard Powers. 272p $3.50 Crowell

B or 92 51-2933

Reminiscences of the author's student days in the 1890's. Hobart college and the law school at Albany are the scenes of most of his stories. Companion volume to Country Lawyer (Book Review Digest 1939).

Booklist 47:213; 309 F 15 '51; My 1 '51

Bookmark 10:182 My '51 40w

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 15 '51 410w

"Mr. Partridge's work has sometimes been compared to a Currier and Ives print. This book may be said to have the effect of a modern American primitive, ingenuous, homely, recognizing no law of perspective but its own, and remarkably literal." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 26 '51 500w

"It is all relaxed and blithely unchronological, written in an easy, feet-on-the-fender style, and as wholesome as buttermilk fresh from the churn." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ap 15 '51 600w

Reviewed by S. T. Williamson

N Y Times p12 My 6 '51 400w

New Yorker 27:129 My 12 '51 120w

"Many an American reader in his 60s and even younger will read it with a happy sigh of recollection and perhaps just a touch of mild melancholy when he considers how utterly gone are simplicities of the Nineteenth Century's end." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ap 16 '51 750w

Wis Lib Bul 47:120 My '51

PARTRIDGE, ERIC, and CLARK, JOHN WILLIAMS. British and American English since 1900; with contributions on English in Canada, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand and India. 341p $4.75 Philosophical lib.

420.9 English language—History 51-5593

A composite volume made up of articles by various hands though the first part of the book on British English is largely the work of Eric Partridge, the second part on American English is by J. W. Clark, associate professor of English at the University of Minnesota.

Booklist 48:61 O 15 '51

Reviewed by Harold Hobson

Christian Science Monitor p7 Jl 5 '51 50w

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds

Christian Science Monitor p7 S 20 '51 1100w

Kirkus 19:374 Jl 15 '51 170w

"Mr Clark's six chapters deserve the close attention of every student of the English language who is interested in the history of its new and erratic career as an American immigrant, for they are an invaluable addition to the literature of that fascinating subject. Keen, unbiased observation and shrewd critical judgment, as well as accurate scholarship, have gone to their making." H. W. H.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Je 19 '51 150w

Reviewed by George Genzmer

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p44 D 2 '51 750w

"To all those who have ever experienced curiosity about language this book is recommended. It imparts grace, generosity and a fine sense of balance." M. A. Pei

+ N Y Times p17 S 16 '51 330w

San Francisco Chronicle p27 O 28 '51 260w

Reviewed by M. M. Mathews

Sat R of Lit 34:14 S 1 '51 650w

Reviewed by C. E. Vulliamy

Spec 185:726 Je 1 '51 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p486 Ag 3 '51 600w

PASCAL, BLAISE. Pensées; with an English tr, brief notes and introd, by H. F. Stewart. 543p $5 Pantheon bks

242 Christianity 50-10042

"A bilingual edition, the French on the left-hand page, the new English translation by the late H. F. Stewart on the right. Dr. Stewart devoted a major part of his adult life to Pascal and his time, and was Dean of Chapel of Trinity College, Cambridge." N Y Times

"This edition will doubtless be the best for all serious readers of Pascal. It will bring them nearer to the mind of the author than any other, both by giving his words in his own language as well as in translation and by indicating the apologetic purpose which dominated the last years of his life. But I still think that the chief value of having a Pascal on the shelf is that you can dip into it anywhere and find a nugget—if not at the first dip, certainly at the second." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 67:1298 N 1 '50 600w

"In this new arrangement new numbers had to be assigned to the individual pensèes, but since there is no table of concordance, comparison with the text of other editions is rendered painfully tedious. This is but another reason why it seems improbable that the present edition will be accepted as the definitive one. But for reading Pascal in the way that is perhaps most valuable, in small bits at a time, dipping here and there, the English-speaking reader will be grateful for Dr. Stewart's matchless translation." W. J. Gaines

Crozer Q 28:163 Ap '51 650w

PASCAL, BLAISE—Continued

"Dr. Stewart's edition does great honour to his memory. It is a magnificent crown to his labours, devoted over long years to the study of a difficult author, a prince of thinkers." L. Lafuma

+ Hibbert J 49:194 Ja '51 1000w

"Dr. H. F. Stewart was probably the finest Pascal scholar in Britain, and his posthumous edition of the Pensées will probably be the standard one on this side of the Channel. Much of it is excellently done."

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 26 '51 120w

"No one will ever know exactly what Pascal intended to do with all the notes we know as his Pensées; but Dr. Stewart's interpretation is both scholarly and convincing. The French text follows Pascal's conservative and sometimes peculiar spelling; Dr. Stewart's translation which faces it, is excellent, neither too literal, nor too free. Readers of every kind—from the learned specialist to the layman and the student—will welcome this edition of the Pensées."

+ New Statesman & Nation 41:80 Ja 20 '51 270w

"A fluent translation faces each page of the French text; and the body of editorial notes, tucked away at the end of the volume, is brief and to the point. A more detailed table of contents would have helped the casual reader, who with the best will in the world is apt to lose 'the movement of Pascal's mind'; and more serious students would benefit from a table of cross-references facilitating a comparison of this new arrangement with such standard editions as Nelson's in the French and Everyman's in English." Marvin Lowenthal

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 Ja 14 '51 1650w

"This may well be the Pensées book for a long time to come." Harvey Breit

+ N Y Times p32 O 1 '50 230w

"The late Dr. H. F. Stewart of Cambridge was one of the world's eminent Pascal scholars and this translation of the Pensees represents the culmination of a lifetime of study and devotion to the thought of the genius of Port-Royal. It is a delight to read the carefully edited original text, which is the greatest stylistic tour de force that we have in French, side by side with a vivid English translation." A. B. T.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 26 '50 300w

"The present volume has a lucid introduction, an index and excellent notes, though it could be wished that the latter were on the same page as the text. A discontinuous series like the Pensées should be read discontinuously, and pondered slowly. Dr. Stewart's scholarly work, published after his death by Mr. I. M. McLean, is a first-class aid to the modern reader in doing this."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p584 S 15 '50 750w

PASHKO, STANLEY. Boy's complete book of camping; il. by Frank Rigney. 204p $2.50 Greenberg

796.54 Camping 51-11483

Contents: Planning for camp; Camp shelters; Sleeping in the open; Good camp sites; Packs and packing; Camp duds; Camp fires and lights; Camp grub; Camp sanitation; Making camp equipment; Camp emergencies; Hints for hikers; Fishing, hunting, and canoeing; Winter hiking and camping.

Booklist 47:406 Jl 15 '51

Horn Bk 27:340 S '51 50w

"Excellent, clearly written." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 76:1128 Jl '51 20w

"Will appeal to both boys and girls from 12-16 who are interested in the out-of-doors." Evalyn Willey

+ Library J 76:1237 Ag '51 80w

N Y Times p26 Je 10 '51 40w

PASTENE, JEROME. Three-quarter time; the life and music of the Strauss family of Vienna [with an introd. by Arthur Fiedler]. 307p il $3.50 Abelard

927.8 Strauss family 51-11219

A composite biography of Johann Strauss, Senior, famous Viennese composer, and his three sons, each famous in his own way musically. Contains a list of the recordings of all four Strausses, and a catalog of their output. Bibliography. No index.

Reviewed by Ernest Pisko

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Jl 26 '51 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p27 N '51

"Written in popular style, but the musician as well as the layman can profit by it." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 76:1228 Ag '51 80w

"This new book about the Strauss family covers the careers, musical and romantic, of Johann I and II, Josef, and Eduard Strauss as well as of Franz Lehar. Readable but not overly romanticized, following fairly well-trodden paths, it has appeal for the general reader. There is some analysis of the more important works with discerning remarks on their interpretation. . . Ambitious as the Reference Section appears, it is weakened by bibliographical ineptitude." D. J. Epstein

+ — Music Lib Assn Notes 8:712 S '51 350w

"The era, the personalities and the music have all been blended expertly together in this biography by Jerome Pastene, a young man who admires Strauss music and, even more important, knows how to write about it." Herbert Kupferberg

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Jl 8 '51 410w

"With astonishing naiveté (to use the politest word for it) [the author] travels in his book over more than nine-tenths of the way that other authors have gone before him. Hardly a fact or an anecdote in the book has not already been unearthed from the Viennese archives and already printed by other Strauss biographers, whom Mr. Pastene follows rather slavishly. He not only takes his general ideas from recently published books but also appropriates the various seasonings with which other writers have spiced their work." H. E. Jacob

Sat R of Lit 34:19 Jl 28 '51 550w

Reviewed by Victor Prahl

Springf'd Republican p5D Jl 15 '51 410w

"For music study groups: highly recommended."

+ Wis Lib Bul 47:162 Je '51

PATCH, BLANCHE ELIZA. Thirty years with G. B. S. 316p $3 Dodd

B or 92 Shaw, George Bernard 51-10302

"Miss Blanche Patch, a clergyman's daughter, became Shaw's secretary thirty years ago, seemingly almost against her will served him till his death, but was never 'as he perceived and said, swept away by his personality.' . . [Her] book is somewhat helter-skelter, not unlike, one fancies, the Shavian files. But she keeps pulling out entertaining and amusing records of what went on in the Shavian workshop. You can take Shaw for genius or not, as you like, but here is how he worked, here are the books he kept for reference, the ornaments on his mantel, the letters he got, the callers and cranks who besieged him, the friends he cherished." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"Most people, I suspect, feel that by this time they have heard more than enough about the Sage. But the latest Shavian memoir, Thirty Years with G.B.S., is an exceptionally interesting item." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 187:81 My '51 550w

Booklist 47:293 Ap 15 '51

Bookmark 10:230 Jl '51 40w

Reviewed by Milton Crane

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 1 '51 500w

"Shaw's idiosyncrasies, his 'mulishness,' his friendships, his books, economics, handwriting, lectures, arithmetical mistakes, hobbies, and enthusiasms fill Miss Patch's narrative with illuminating and amusing detail. Her book is fascinating and refreshing in attitude and execution, and will give pleasure to anyone interested in the private character of a great man." Harold Hobson

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 My 3 '51 400w

"Miss Patch's compassionate eye for weaknesses in her great master does not prevent her filling out many details which will help to round off the final picture of genius in glory and decline." Gerard Fay
Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 23 '51 600w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
Nation 172:565 Je 16 '51 500w

"A rambling, sometimes confusing book, homely, observant, rather comically complacent. . . Miss Patch has built up her portrait from the trivialities of a hard, everyday working life at the typewriter, the telephone and the files. Hers is an undomestic interior; she makes an occasional sharp, shrewd point; she has the level-headedness of the Shavian woman—though she firmly holds that she never was one and never came under the spell." V. S. Pritchett
+ — New Statesman & Nation 41:101 Ja 27 '51 1000w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Mr 25 '51 1750w

Reviewed by Edmund Wilson
New Yorker 27:102 Je 2 '51 1050w

"This book is not particularly well organized; it contains many digressions, some repetitions, and a few seeming contradictions. But it is intelligently and often amusingly written. How seldom is an intimate biographer worthy of his opportunities! Miss Patch is, definitely." William Irvine
+ Sat R of Lit 34:18 Ap 28 '51 600w

Reviewed by St. John Ervine
Spec 185:84 Ja 19 '51 1000w
Springf'd Republican p8C Ap 29 '51 600w
Time 57:110 Ap 9 '51 650w

"Miss Patch writes with detachment, even with a touch of her employer's unsentimentalism. . . Miss Patch's collection of stories are bundled together helter-skelter, and are none the worse for that, since she did not aim to write a biography."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p48 Ja 26 '51 700w
Wis Lib Bul 47:165 Je '51

PATERSON, JOHN. Praises of Israel; studies, literary and religious in the psalms. 256p $2.75 Scribner

223.6 Bible. Old Testament—Psalms 50-4212

"Part I contains a discussion of the agelessness of this 'Golden Treasury,' of the growth seen within the Psalter, and of the Gunkel classification of the psalms into literary types in the light of their probable use in Hebrew worship. In Part II the author quotes the King James Version and interprets ten psalms representing ten types as follows: hymn of praise (103), song of Zion (46), community lament (44), royal psalm (2), individual lament (51), psalm of trust (23), psalm dealing with the law (15), mixed type (90), national thanksgiving song (124), and prophetic psalm (82). Part III is on the religious teaching of the Psalter." (J Religion) Bibliography. Index of scripture texts.

"The author's knowledge of the historical backgrounds is ample, and his exegetical insight is keen. He deals both sympathetically and honestly with the materials." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 67:894 Jl 26 '50 160w

"This book on the Praises of Israel should prove very useful to laymen who want to know what modern scholarship is saying concerning the Psalter, and it should lead them to more intelligent and appreciative reading of the Psalms." J. P. Hyatt
+ Crozer Q 28:352 O '51 1000w

"Paterson's work is a joy to read for its deep appreciation of the emotional tone, the poetic quality and the religious teaching of the Psalter—to say nothing of the author's liberal use of Scotch pithy statement and venerable metrical renderings of outstanding passages." C. F. Kraft
+ J Religion 31:231 Jl '51 320w

PATERSON, NEIL. China run. 247p $2.75 Random house

51-9270

"A collection of eight stories whose settings vary between somewhere in England to somewhere in Spain. Each story is concerned with an individual who has a particular desire and how that desire shaped his or her life." Library J

Booklist 47:220 F 15 '51

Reviewed by Kelsey Guilfoil
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 11 '51 450w
Kirkus 18:683 N 15 '50 130w

"His stories ring true and should be interesting enough to most library users to be a good addition to any library." H. L. Roth
+ Library J 76:40 Ja 1 '51 100w

"Neil Paterson is a most entertaining story teller. Every story in 'The China Run,' his collection of short stories, is absorbing and alive. . . All of Mr. Paterson's stories are told with skill and wit and are full of twists of surprise, yet they are curiously lacking in depth; they do not stir the reader."
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 F 18 '51 420w

"Although a number of the stories—notably 'The Life and Death of George Wilson, Who Was an Extraordinary Fine Specimen'—make use of the twist, an indispensable ingredient of popular magazine technique, all are a pleasant distance above the regular run of blackstrap molasses." Gilbert Millstein
N Y Times p18 Ja 28 '51 200w

"Told in a loose, ironic tone that sometimes becomes a bit too relaxed to be readable. The longest story, 'The China Run,' about a Scottish woman sea captain of a hundred years or so ago, illustrates as well as any of them Mr. Paterson's curious propensity for digging up a rich and promising subject and making as little as possible of it."
New Yorker 26:90 Ja 27 '51 70w

"Neil Paterson's new collection is a refreshing example of what we may hope is a trend. Here are stories artfully constructed, dealing with full-bodied characters in significant situations who work out their dilemmas in terms of suspenseful dramatic action." E. J. Fitzgerald
+ Sat R of Lit 34:41 Mr 10 '51 320w

"Too talky for his stories' good, Paterson packs small emotional wallop. But at his best he can tell a fresh tale with few frills and no assist from his analyst's corner."
Time 57:110 Ja 29 '51 330w

PATRICK, JOSEPH, pseud. See Walsh, J. P.

PATTEE, RICHARD. This is Spain. (Science and culture ser) 541p map $7 Bruce pub.

946 Spain—History 51-2048

"This factual book includes the background necessary for understanding modern Spain, giving little-known facts and authoritatively refuting some popular interpretations. The Second Republic, The Civil War, the Franco regime, and contemporary Spain are covered in the full light of their historical significance. Spain is pointed out as the one Western nation which has survived after having felt the devastating physical pressure of Communism." Publisher's note

"The publication of this long-expected book by America's foremost expert on Hispanic affairs is an event of first importance. . . At long last the American Catholic and every decent truth-loving American of any other faith will have a source at hand which will enable him to debate the 'Spanish question' with firmness, conviction and exactitude." E. v. Kuehnelt Leddihn

PATTEE, RICHARD—Continued

+ Cath World 173:155 My '51 550w

"A well-balanced, unbiased book on Spain would be very welcome at this time, but this is not the book. Author, who has spent a great deal of time in Spain and who has lectured there recently, unfortunately appears to be anxious to prove that basically there is nothing wrong in that unhappy country." Donald Wasson

Library J 75:2151 D 15 '50 140w

"Mr. Pattee deserves justice in the favorable as well as the unfavorable sense. He has put an immense amount of hard, earnest work in every corner of Spain and a great deal of documentary research into this book. He is acute, sympathetic, scholarly, with a deep understanding of Spain and the Spanish people, and his book certainly deserves a reading, whatever one feels. . . In my opinion, many pertinent facts damaging to the Nationalists are left out, many disputable theses are put forward as facts, and there are many mistakes." H. L. Matthews

+ — N Y Times p32 Mr 4 '51 400w

PATTERSON, GARDNER. Survey of United States international finance, 1949. 222p pa $1.75 Princeton univ. press

338.91 U.S.—Economic policy. Reconstruction (1939-) 50-14037

"A general summary of the policies and activities of the United States in the general area of international finance, including gift programs, foreign loans and investment, exchange policy and balance of payments." Foreign Affairs

"The purpose of this experimental volume is to present in a discriminating, orderly and summary manner information on the activities, policies and programs of the United States which affected the general area of international finance during 1949. . . The author has done exceptionally well in a very complicated and difficult area." Donald Sham

+ Am Econ R 41:728 S '51 800w

Foreign Affairs 29:670 Jl '51 50w

"All of the material, with the exception of the final chapter of conclusions, is, of course, available in United States Government documents. . . Many persons will, however, find it useful to have all the information made available in one volume."

U S Quarterly Bkl 6;425 D '50 250w

PATTERSON, REBECCA. Riddle of Emily Dickinson 434p $4.50 Houghton

B or 92 Dickinson, Emily 51-7408

A new interpretation of the life and writings of Emily Dickinson. The author is a graduate of the University of Texas and has been an instructor in the English departments of several American colleges. Chronological table. Index.

Booklist 48:123 D 1 '51

Reviewed by J. F. Nims

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 11 '51 300w

"The acceptance, or rejection, of a theory such as this demands a scholar's knowledge; on the face of it however, Mrs. Patterson, insistent as she is, relies on some insubstantial surmise."

Kirkus 19:520 S 1 '51 190w

"Apart from the question of proof, the book in its handling of its subject is a model of biographical and critical ineptitude."

Nation 173:573 D 29 '51 140w

"Probably the worst book on Emily Dickinson yet written, and that is saying a good deal. It is worst in that it inflates a few stray bits of evidence into a huge fabrication of hypothesis, where supposition is recklessly piled on supposition and the truth of the whole 'proved' because everything hangs together. It is worse because it limits a poet's complex emotional life to a single unpleasant crisis and one hardly sufficient to account for an assumed twenty-five years of heartbreak. . . Fortunately Mrs. Patterson has made such indiscriminate applications of her favored solution of the 'riddle' that its absurdity will be at once apparent, except to like-minded investigators." G. F. Whicher

— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 N 4 '51 1350w

"Jumping to intuitive conclusions and framing a build-up on shaky evidence is always dangerous, and here it results in massive distortion. It limits and shrivels a spirit that shared others' emotions acutely, expansively, and for the most part with extraordinary gaiety. Emily Dickinson's poems and letters have always shown an unusual dependence on other people, both men and women. To say, as the author does, that 'women alone had power to wound her,' or that 'there is no man—no real man—anywhere in the poems,' seems perverse. It may well be that Kate Scott has been overlooked as an important figure in Emily Dickinson's life, and that the friendship spurred Emily to a greater capacity for writing poetry. How can we tell? The book merely asserts a friendship so exclusive that we should use it alone to set our watches." T. H. Johnson

— N Y Times p3 N 4 '51 1300w

New Yorker 27:86 Ja 12 '52 160w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p18 D 2 '51 250w

"Mrs. Patterson believes that the poet's lover was a woman. And this constitutes her uniqueness among such Dickinson biographers as Josephine Pollitt and Genevieve Taggard, who advanced male candidates. Also unparalleled is the sheer volume of perverse wilfulness with which Mrs. Patterson amasses her loosely circumstantial 'evidence.' And unlike Miss Taggard at least, she offers the reader very little by way of criticism, scholarship, or commentary which does not stand or fall with her interpretation." Richard Chase

— Sat R of Lit 34:26 D 1 '51 650w

Springf'd Republican p12C N 18 '51 600w

PATTON, MRS FRANCES GRAY. Finer things of life; il. by Garrett Price. 248p $3 Dodd

51-13488

Short stories about life in a small Southern town, where the father of the family is a college professor, and his Northern wife gayly struggles with "the finer things of life." Originally printed in the New Yorker.

Booklist 48:102 N 15 '51

"The gay, well bred, pleasant book that readers have been saying that someone should write. It is whimsical in spots, faintly poignant in others, but lit with a glowing, humorous aura made up of bright observations, sparkles of wit, and diamond bright philosofy, shot with incandescent characterizations." Marge Lyon

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 11 '51 500w

"The Finer Things of Life aptly describes Mrs. Patton's collection of short stories. Sensitivity, sentiment, and humor combine in them to grace subtle storytelling with an engaging humanity." Rod Nordell

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 Ja 3 '52 310w

"This first volume of short stories introduces a new writer of genuine talent." Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 D 9 '51 550w

"Mrs. Patton knows her people and their background, and if she is sometimes ironic, her irony is invariably gentle. Even when you find your own foibles and oddities neatly pinked, you won't mind it much, you'll realize that the author is laughing with you, not at you." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 8 '51 800w

"A delightful collection of short stories. . . Mrs. Patton's humor is witty and enjoyable." U. K. Alpert
+ Springf'd Republican p30A D 2 '51 180w

PAUL, ELLIOT, HAROLD (BRETT RUTLEDGE, pseud.) Murder on the Left Bank; a Homer Evans mystery. 314p $2.50 Random house 51-9188
Detective story.

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 11 '51 300w

Kirkus 18:710 D 1 '50 80w

"Elliot Paul has abandoned some of his wilder high-jinks in this latest mystery and relies more satisfactorily on a clever and thoughtfully worked out plot."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 F 25 '51 170w

Reviewed by Rex Lardner
N Y Times p29 Ja 14 '51 180w

"The plot is ingenious and the author's style, though periodically a little arch, is still far ahead of most of the field. Strongly recommended."
+ New Yorker 26:96 Ja 20 '51 80w

"There's an excellent American family and something about an oral will; oh yes, and some murders. If only the author hadn't tried to include a plot it would have been perfect." L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p24 F 11 '51 100w

"Knowing style, quick movement, and suspense. Anatole France in modern dress."
Sat R of Lit 34:24 F 3 '51 60w

PAUL, HENRY NEILL. Royal play of Macbeth. 438p il $6 Macmillan 822.33 Shakespeare, William—Macbeth
50-58085

An intensive study of Shakespeare's Macbeth, made with the purpose of discovering when, why and how it was written. It is the author's main conclusion that the play was written for King James and first performed before him on the occasion of the visit of King Christian of Denmark, his brother-in-law.

"Although his scholarship is of a very specialized nature, Mr. Paul brings to it great enthusiasm and a lively style."
+ Kirkus 18:456 Ag 1 '50 120w

"Recommended for Shakespeare and comprehensive theatre collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 75:1510 S 15 '50 40w

"All students of the play will be grateful to the [author] . . . for the fuller understanding which his lifetime of reading has brought to them. . . Not that I subscribe to all Mr. Paul's 'discoveries,' still less to some of his general conclusions. Like most men hot upon a trail, he is given at times to cry 'eureka' over a mare's-nest. . . But my chief criticism of Mr. Paul's book is that it did not appear five years earlier, for had it done so this critic might have plundered it freely for an edition of the play published in 1947." J. D. Wilson
+ New Repub 124:19 Mr 12 '51 850w

"Mr. Paul knows much about Shakespeare, King James' scholarship, Elizabethan ideas and practice of the occult. He has consulted an impressive list of living scholars. Still, the forcing of evidence to meet his assumption nettles the reader, destroys the impact of impressive new material." E. C. Dunn
+ — N Y Times p20 Ja 28 '51 360w

New Yorker 27:102 F 24 '51 160w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 D 24 '50 220w

"An important and interesting book." O. J. Campbell
+ Sat R of Lit 34:17 Je 9 '51 850w

Reviewed by Henry Popkin
Theatre Arts 35:4 My '51 230w

PAUL, LESLIE ALLEN. Age of terror. 256p maps $3 Beacon press
940 Europe—History 51-2192

"Mr. Paul is concerned to discover the causes of the pessimism which afflicts the rationalist today. Age of Terror is [a study] of the European crisis which has been deeply influenced by Bertrand de Jouvenel's Power and I should guess by the writings of Arnold Toynbee. If Mr. Paul rejects outright Mrs. Wootton's scientific postulates, he is also affronted by the easy-going scepticism of Russell and Cole which exposes as superstition the foundations of Christian civilisation." (New Statesman & Nation) Index.

Am Pol Sci R 45:935 S '51 20w

"His work, though valuable for its insights which are often shrewd and genuinely penetrating, is an unsatisfactory (because one-sided) analysis of our sickness. Nevertheless it is well worth reading both for content and for the thought trends it represents." D. E. Lee
+ — Ann Am Acad 277:260 S '51 500w

Reviewed by K. B. Cully
Crozer Q 28:280 Jl '51 270w

Foreign Affairs 30:153 O '51 30w

Reviewed by Robert Payne
New Repub 124:18 Je 11 '51 1350w

"An extremely competent study." R. H. S. Crossman
+ New Statesman & Nation 40:594 D 9 '50 120w

Reviewed by Peter Viereck
N Y Times p6 Jl 22 '51 280w

"Thought-provoking study."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p680 O 27 '50 650w

PAUL, LOUIS. A father in the family. 286p $3 Crown
51-12359

The scene is lower New York city in 1900. Louis Caset, at twenty-three, married a widow with three young children and took them all to live in a ramshackle house on 29th street. The story is of Louis' valiant attempt to support his ready-made family.

Booklist 48:65 O 15 '51

"Mr. Paul's excellent sense of timing and storytelling is again outstanding in this book. As evidenced by his former book, 'A Husband for Mama,' he has an admirable way with children, and when weighty events threaten to make this story lag, the small fry or the daffy landlady can be depended upon to create a laughable incident that keeps interest keen." Marge Lyon
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 9 '51 450w

"This novel, Louis Paul's ninth, is a happy, unpretentious story. . . This is a period piece about a nice family, and, as such, it makes gay and most agreeable reading." Joanna Spencer
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 S 23 '51 450w

"Louis Paul manages to make each new crisis exciting, funny and, on the whole, plausible. The Caset children are drawn with an understanding of the contradictions, pathos and exuberance of youth, and most of the author's other characters somehow give the impression that they are his oldest and dearest friends."
+ N Y Times p28 D 9 '51 200w

Reviewed by C. M. Brown
Sat R of Lit 34:21 D 8 '51 130w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal
Springf'd Republican p12C O 21 '51 200w

PAUL, MARTIN AMBROSE. Principles of chemical thermodynamics. 740p $7.50 McGraw 541.36 Chemistry, Physical and theoretical. Thermodynamics 51-3000

"Textbook written for the use of students who are majoring in chemistry. The subject

PAUL, M. A.—Continued
is treated fully and without omitting the mathematical aspects. In other words, the book is intended to equip the reader with an understanding of chemical thermodynamics that can be put to use in either research or industrial chemistry. One chapter is devoted to the statistical molecular theory of thermodynamics, and the 'Gibbs assembly' is discussed at some length. The author is professor of chemistry in Harpur College." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by J. C. Chu
Chem Eng 58:355 S '51 240w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 76:1133 Jl '51 80w

PAWEL, ERNST. Island in time. 255p $3 Doubleday
51-10754

Novel about a group of Jews interned on an island off Italy, while waiting to get into Israel. It pictures the various reactions of the members of the group, ranging from desperation to enervation, as they exist on the "island in time."

Kirkus 19:192 Ap 1 '51 170w

"Mr. Pawel's entire conception parallels very closely that of Alex Comfort's recent novel 'On This Side Nothing,' but . . . Mr. Pawel's novel is bitingly realistic, and far more impressive not merely in its rendition of the ugliness of camp life but also in its philosophic depth, maturity, and handling of individual characters. . . 'The Island in Time' is a distinguished novel and an auspicious beginning of a literary career." Harvey Swados
+ Nation 173:15 Jl 7 '51 390w

Reviewed by Robert Phelps
New Repub 125:21 Jl 23 '51 100w

"Mr. Pawel's first published novel displays an angry facility of phrase and characterization. It is unfortunate that these very qualities drive both his plot and his people to extremes. 'The Island in Time' could have been truly moving. But it loses itself in passion, and in rhetoric." Hal Lehrman
N Y Times p12 Ag 5 '51 340w

"It is a competent piece of fiction, though burdened quite heavily with reflections of no particular originality or depth." Robert Pick
+ — Sat R of Lit 34:19 Jl 7 '51 350w

"The strength and the weakness of this novel both reside in its somewhat tortuous symbolism. Although the background seems to be authentic, the characters appear as human beings only in flashes and some of them are not realized at all. For the most part, they are not so much people as analyzed agonies and opinions. Nevertheless, what the author has to say about the relationship between the individual and his society is worth considering."
U S Quarterly Bk R 7:242 S '51 280w

PAYNE, PIERRE STEPHEN ROBERT. Maharajah, by Richard Cargoe [pseud]. 262p $3.50 World pub.
51-13190

"To the small Indian state of Amandapore in the shadow of the Himalayas comes a terrorist bent on killing the maharajah. Before he is finally captured by sheer mischance, he demonstrates that one man can paralyze a whole state. He proves that fear alone is sufficient to cause a ferocious outbreak of violence, and he leaves behind him a lasting canker of suspicion and evil." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"Pleasant as a meringue puff, and about as significant."
Kirkus 19:494 S 1 '51 180w

"The characterization in 'The Maharajah' is rather hasty, the action jerky and not altogether believable, the motivations hardly clarified. Partly this skimpiness is deliberate, for the writer has attempted to create a modern fairy-tale. If it does not quite come off, that is because there is too much realism. Yet for many readers the swift pace, the colorfulness of a typical fairy-tale locale, the amusing portrait of the old queen, and the earnest discussion of contemporary political issues, will more than compensate for the novelistic weaknesses." Richard Winston
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p28 D 2 '51 450w

"The characters, are without valid basis. . . The bits of Indian mysticism thrown in for good measure fail to create the sense of reality wanting here. In short, this is a made story from the first to the last, shallow in inverse ratio to the attempt to make it appear deep." John Cournos
— N Y Times p10 D 23 '51 320w

+ New Yorker 27:145 O 13 '51 120w

Reviewed by Joseph Hitrec
Sat R of Lit 34:31 N 10 '51 320w

PAYNE, PIERRE STEPHEN ROBERT. Red Lion Inn. 306p $3.50 Prentice-Hall 51-6192

"To two daughters and son of the blustering, self-opinionated owner of a Thames-side inn, in Boer War Days, marriage was discouraged, and seemed unlikely. But one daughter loved an aristocratic Fabian, the other a gifted artist whose passion for beauty centered on the nude, and whose 'free-love' philosophy was ardently advocated and promiscuously practiced. The son, fighting Boxers in China, found his Chinese mate." Library J

Booklist 47:394; 48:32 Jl 15 '51; S 15 '51

"Mr. Payne's idea seems to be to symbolize the early years of the century. The love scenes are objectionable and ludicrous and the whole seems to have been slapped together in great haste." Riley Hughes
— Cath World 174:315 Ja '52 150w

Kirkus 19:302 Je 15 '51 190w

"Payne writes with colorful, competent style, but the plot is labored, the characters border on absurdity, the philosophy amoral." R. W. Henderson
Library J 76:1125 Jl '51 80w

"Mr. Payne has done a fine job. His people are not sharply outlined formulas but people with the faintly fuzzy dreams that all of us have, people who stumble into happiness or sorrow and somehow get through life." E. L. Acken
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 S 23 '51 600w

"'Red Lion Inn' is a beautiful little period piece, bathed in a soft candle-glow of romance, nostalgia, and brooding affection." Richard Match
+ N Y Times p39 O 7 '51 250w

"Mr. Payne writes with an easy tempo, as though lost in a smoke of recollections which he is recalling bit by bit and leisurely shaping into a pattern. A conversation of G. B. Shaw's, a stuffed crocodile, a performance by that darling of the music halls, Marie Lloyd; a tea of shrimp and winkles, a belted earl, and a night in Montmartre, have their part in the fortunes of the Amorys. You leave them feasting happily, the way all good tales should end." J. V.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p32 N 4 '51 270w

"This is a violent and vivid book with an almost Dickensian richness of detail and a total lack of Dickensian humor. Mr. Payne has done a competent job of thinking his way back into the scene of his period but is not so sure of his ground when it comes to his characters' emotions and motives." Elswyth Thane
+ — Sat R of Lit 34:33 N 24 '51 310w

Springf'd Republican p10B S 30 '51 110w

PAYNE, PIERRE STEPHEN ROBERT. Red storm over Asia. 309p $5 Macmillan
950 Communism—Asia. Asia—Politics
51-2375

"The red storm is of course communism. . . Mr Payne blames the drift toward communism—not necessarily Muscovian—on the failure of America and Europe to understand the forces that move the common people and to speak in human and social terms. He enumerates twelve tasks, among others, that America must accomplish (but 'there is very little time left') if all Asia is not to be communized." (Library J) Biographical notes. Index.

Booklist 47:343 Je 1 '51

Reviewed by F. H. Soward
Canadian Hist R 32:269 S '51 320w

Reviewed by Walter Simmons
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Je 24 '51 370w

Christian Century 68:1078 S 19 '51 180w

Reviewed by Max Fischer
Commonweal 54:123 My 11 '51 850w

Current Hist 21:168 S '51 70w

Foreign Affairs 30:166 O '51 20w

"The most challenging analysis of the march of Communism in Asia that we have had. . . Not easy reading, for much of it is unpalatable. Important! Newsworthy, particularly on Indo-China."
+ Kirkus 19:83 F 1 '51 400w

"Recommended, although Mr. Payne's deep sense of urgency and timeliness apparently mars his usual coherency and readability." H. P. Linton
Library J 76:512 Mr 15 '51 140w

Reviewed by Victor Purcell
New Repub 125:18 Jl 23 '51 320w

"A prolific writer with pronounced opinions on the controversial Chinese problem, Robert Payne has written his latest volume at white hot speed with white hot passions. The book is repetitious and at times contradictory. Much of what he has to say is half smothered by rhetorical bombast and irritating overstatement. And yet, perhaps because of these very imperfections, the book carries a strong emotional impact." E. O. Reischauer
N Y Times p3 Ap 1 '51 600w

"The book as a whole constitutes a timely and penetrating analysis of the situation in much of Asia. The chapters on Indo-China, Indonesia, the Philippines, India, and Burma are particularly informing. And Mr. Payne's brief but vivid summary of how the Communist triumph in China came about is an excellent piece of clear and informative writing." Hallett Abend
+ Sat R of Lit 34:40 Ap 14 '51 850w

School & Society 73:205 Mr 31 '50 40w

PAYNE, STANLEY LE BARON. Art of asking questions. 249p $3.75 Princeton univ. press

301.154 Public opinion polls 51-10734

"A specialist's book on construction of questionnaires and opinion surveys which may be of use to business men contemplating such surveys and of general interest to the public which submits to them. Irregular style with occasionally successful attempts at humor." Booklist

Am Pol Sci R 45:936 S '51 30w

"It is difficult to see what service Mr. Payne has performed in recording the folklore of his field. Experienced colleagues are already familiar with it and would quarrel with Mr. Payne about many details, while those less familiar with the field will as often be led astray as be informed." S. A. Star
Ann Am Acad 277:258 S '51 1200w

Booklist 47:376 Jl 1 '51

Reviewed by L. T. Heron
Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Jl 15 '51 60w

"The neophyte in research procedure can certainly learn from a careful reading of this book. For the experienced research technician, it has less relevance though it might serve as a reminder of some of the pitfalls in question wording perhaps forgotten. The book is not likely to find a broad audience but those concerned with the limited problems it considers are likely to find it a useful addition to their libraries." C. Y. Glock
+ Pol Sci Q 66:633 D '51 420w

PEAR, TOM HATHERLEY, ed. Psychological factors of peace and war; contributions by G. W. Allport [and others]. 262p $4.75 Philosophical lib.

172.4 Peace. War. Social psychology 51-2590

"'Because,' as has been pointed out often in the official publications of the United Nations, 'wars begin in the minds of men,' a number of psychologists, mostly British, whose main concern is the mind of man, have gotten together to tell us why and in what way the investigation of the human mind can contribute to the problem of peace." (Ann Am Acad) Also published with title: Psychology Factors of Peace and War.

Reviewed by G. E. Swanson
Am J Soc 57:409 Ja '52 1250w

"This book is less prejudiced than the run of the mill psychological publications or than the views of the man in the street. . . Sum Total: The book is a milestone on the psychologists' path from abstraction, erudition, isolation in the ivory tower to concretion in questions and answers, even at the price of laboratory pseudo exactness. By such return to common sense, psychology, the public, and last but not least peace will gain." W. Eliasberg
+ Ann Am Acad 276:137 Jl '51 500w

Foreign Affairs 30:156 O '51 20w

Reviewed by A. D. Harris
New Statesman & Nation 41:110 Ja 27 '51 1000w

"As a whole [the book] fails to achieve [its] main object. Too many of the essays suggest either that psychology has as yet little to say to the world in general (which is at once disappointing and improbable) or that it does not know how to say it."
Times [London] Lit Sup p768 D 1 '50 450w

PEARCE, RICHARD ELMO. Impudent rifle. 286p $3 Lippincott

51-1423

Historical novel of the Arkansas frontier in the 1830's. The impudent rifle of the title belongs to young Lieutenant Philip Royall, recently out of West Point. His one-man war against corrupt Indian agents is successful, as well as his attempts to win the girl he loves.

Booklist 47:311 My 1 '51

Reviewed by Pat Patten
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 S 9 '51 120w

"Robust and dashing, this will have men as well as women readers, for its intelligence, style and action."
+ Kirkus 19:33 Ja 15 '51 230w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 My 6 '51 90w

"This drama is performed not so much by persons as by personifications of human qualities in degrees of unalloyed concentration. Courage is incredibly courageous, villainy incredibly villainous. Unless the reader is willing to tolerate the author's zeal for bold strokes he is sure to feel annoyance at his glibness." L. S. Doughty
N Y Times p19 My 13 '51 110w

"All in all, this is the stuff of which many moving pictures are made, and it is a better-than-average historical adventure story set against the background of the formative years of our history." C. W. W.
San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ap 15 '51 160w

"By its nature the material of Mr. Pearce's story is colorful and absorbing, especially details of the situation that then existed among the Indian tribes of the Southwest Territory. But this is underplayed for the sake of stereotyped melodrama and romance. Although adept at handling his action scenes, the author fails to describe his hero's inner conflicts with conviction." J. M. Grant
Sat R of Lit 34:32 My 12 '51 290w

PEARE, CATHERINE OWENS. Mary McLeod Bethune. 219p il $2.75 Vanguard

B or 92 Bethune, Mrs Mary (McLeod)—Juvenile literature 51-7652

"Biography of Mary McLeod Bethune, one of seventeen children born of slave parents, [who] has risen from a barefoot cotton picker to a consultant at the San Francisco Conference which created the United Nations. She has been the friend and confidante of Presidents and their advisers. Her college for Negroes, started with one dollar and a half in money and faith in God, has become the Bethune-Cookman College valued at over a million dollars with nearly a thousand students." (Sat R of Lit) Bibliography.

Booklist 48:106 N 15 '51

"Mrs. Bethune's personal life is barely sketched. But the warmth of Mrs. Bethune's love for her fellow man glows from every page of this readable book." N. E. Taylor

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 N 12 '51 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '51

Kirkus 19:446 Ag 15 '51 160w

"Catherine Peare has done a magnificent job in her interpretation and presentation of a great lady. . . Recommended for all libraries." Augusta Baker

+ Library J 76:1717 O 15 '51 70w

"A biography with great vitality written with serious adult dignity, which will have long usefulness as the best sort of weapon in breaking down racial discrimination." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 D 30 '51 500w

"Catherine Peare, writing with sympathetic understanding, traces Mrs. Bethune's teaching career, her founding of Bethune-Cookman College, her humanitarian efforts during the depression and the recent war, and the worldwide recognition her work has won." N. B. Baker

+ N Y Times p14 N 11 '51 130w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead

New Yorker 27:186 D 1 '51 40w

"Thrilling story of one of our great contemporary Americans. . . This is a tremendous story that Miss Peare has told, a story of faith in America and in the eventual triumph of the faith of Thomas Jefferson. It is a story of sensational victory over staggering obstacles. It is a story to warm one's heart and relight the flame of optimism. Americans of all ages should read it." R. A. Brown

+ Sat R of Lit 34:47 N 10 '51 230w

PEARL, RICHARD MAXWELL. Guide to geologic literature. 239p $3.75 McGraw

016.55 Geology—Bibliography 51-2116

"In this work, the field of geology is now provided with a manual of standard literature and literature searching comparable to the manuals that have been available in chemistry and several other fields for some years. As the chapter titles indicate, the whole range of geological literature is covered. Under each heading the utility of a specific class of literature is discussed briefly and the chief established publications are described. The scope has not been restricted to strictly geological books and journals, but journals that include information of interest to geologists, along with information on other topics have also been included." N Y New Tech Bks

---

"The book will be useful at the reference desk of every library containing geological literature." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 76:876 My 15 '51 90w

"The book will be valuable not only in libraries devoted to geology but also in general scientific and technical library collections."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 36:37 My '51

PEARSE, REGINALD WILLIAM BLAKE, and GAYDON, ALFRED GORDON. Identification of molecular spectra. 2d ed rev 276p il $8.50 Wiley

535.84 Spectrum—Tables, etc. Molecules [51-9090]

"The second edition of this reference work contains much new data on the spectra of di- and poly-atomic band spectra. In the 10 years that have elapsed since the first edition [Book Review Digest 1942] much has been published in this field. The new edition includes a considerable amount of new tabular data arranged in two tables, (a) by wave length of persistent band heads and (b) by compounds. Four new plates have been added with 26 enlargements of spectra. In the compilation by compound analysis of the bands according to electronic transition and levels, references are included as well as a description of occurrence and appearance." Chem & Eng N

"To the practical spectroscopist such a compilation is clearly useful, and the first edition served its purpose very well. The second edition improves and brings up to date that work." B. L. Crawford

+ Am Chem Soc J 73:3550 Jl '51 400w

"The book is an indispensable reference for spectroscopists working in the field of band spectra and should prove useful to emission spectra analysts when dealing with low temperature excitation effects." W. R. Brode

+ Chem & Eng N 29:1680 Ap 23 '51 150w

Reviewed by J. R. McNally

J Phys & Colloid Chem 55:758 My '51 410w

"A reference book of considerable value to chemists and other workers using spectroscopy for the identification of unknown chemical compounds." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 76:334 F 15 '51 80w

"A valuable collection of data."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 36:31 Mr ''51

PEARSON, HESKETH. Dizzy; the life and personality of Benjamin Disraeli, earl of Beaconsfield. 310p il $4 Harper

B or 92 Beaconsfield, Benjamin Disraeli, 1st earl of 51-12084

An interpretation of the life and work, both literary and political, of Benjamin Disraeli. Index.

"Pearson's study of the great prime minister is an engaging one. It is memorable only in so far as the subject is memorable. . . Most of the time, Pearson does it justice. But sometimes he doesn't. His chief failure, perhaps, is that the reader at the end of the biography has not true conviction that Disraeli was a superb statesman and figure. . . But, it must be confessed, its very failure as a work of real significance makes it highly readable and engaging." Harvey Breit

+ — Atlantic 188:82 S '51 500w

Booklist 47:353; 48:10 Je 15 '51; S 1 '51

"Disraeli could hardly wish a more congenial biographer. A Tory and imperialist, Pearson's political outlook is as quaint as an antimacassar. . . But in spite of his occasional Blimpisms, Pearson's Dizzy is a pattern of portraiture and writing style, and the many samples of Disraeli's wit make it as much a comic as an historic delight." Clorinda Clarke

+ — Cath World 174:158 N '51 300w

"The reader with no interest in politics past or present and the reader on the other side from Pearson both can take delight in a witty, urbane, eminently readable book about as colorful a personality as the modern English speaking world has produced." A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 S 2 '51 250w

"Pearson does thorough justice to Disraeli. He could have done more justice to the tremendous churnings of the age in which he lived. . . The biographer might have delved still more deeply into Disraeli's character and come up with new behavior theories. Instead, he stays largely with the chronology of events, using vignettes and episodes to illuminate character." W. H. Stringer

+ — Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 23 '51 650w

"This book will interest any student of human character, especially as revealed in the politician." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 166:17 Ja 1 '52 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p27 N '51

"Mr. Pearson has written biographies of other men of wit and talent, among them Bernard Shaw, Oscar Wilde, Gilbert and Sullivan, Charles Dickens. In Disraeli he has found a major political figure with equally congenial attributes. If he skimps on the political background and tends to view nineteenth century English politics too exclusively as a duel between his hero and the blackguard Gladstone, he nevertheless comes up with a charming and sympathetic portrait of an unusual human being. Disraeli would have enjoyed this book." C. H. Weiss

Commonweal 55:42 O 19 '51 950w

Kirkus 19:313 Je 15 '51 180w

"Recommended." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 76:1335 S 1 '51 70w

Reviewed by A. J. P. Taylor

Manchester Guardian p4 O 12 '51 220w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch

Nation 173:194 S 8 '51 550w

New Repub 125:21 S 17 '51 80w

Reviewed by A. J. P. Taylor

New Statesman & Nation 42:412 O 13 '51 750w

"Mr. Pearson's book flows along agreeably. He has a gift for telling quotation, and his hero is eminently quotable. All the famous sayings, all the witty anecdotes are here—and Disraeli was a brilliant wit. The political life is well and simply sketched; the private life, which was really quite unscandalous, is here in proper balance." Crane Brinton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ag 26 '51 700w

"Here and there Mr. Pearson's book produces the impression of having been hastily put together. His insight is seldom profound, and some of his generalizations are somewhat foolish. . . His contempt for the profession of politics is unfortunate in the biographer of a great exponent of political strategy. Yet so long as he sticks to unvarnished narrative and allows his hero to tell the story himself, the drama he presents sweeps smoothly, boldly forward." Peter Quennell

+ — N Y Times p3 Ag 26 '51 900w

"A delightful, if not very profound, book."

+ New Yorker 27:115 S 8 '51 160w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ag 21 '51 900w

Reviewed by R. E. Roberts

Sat R of Lit 34:19 S 22 '51 1100w

Reviewed by W. D. Handcock

Spec 187:746 N 30 '51 160w

Springf'd Republican p5C S 23 '51 250w

Time 58:112 S 3 '51 1150w

"Mr. Pearson's entertaining book is written with admirable zest; Disraeli's surface life is well told but it is disappointing to find no fresh illumination of his nature."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p751 N 23 '51 650w

Wis Lib Bul 47:214 S '51

PEARSON, HESKETH. G. B. S.; a postscript. 137p il $2.75 Harper

B or 92 Shaw, George Bernard 50-10894

"This thin book, obviously put together in some haste, is an interesting footnote and postscript to the author's full-length biography written eight years ago. It is a footnote because it tells some of the difficulties of the biographer in preparing the longer work and discusses some of the better known apocryphal tales about G. B. S. with the great man's own comments concerning them. It is a postscript, of course, because it brings the biography through the last years of Shaw's life." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Atlantic 187:90 F '51 130w

Booklist 47:173 Ja 1 '51

Bookmark 10:84 Ja '51 30w

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 76:114 Ja 15 '51 60w

Reviewed by Gerard Fay

Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 23 '51 260w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch

Nation 171:680 D 23 '50 700w

Reviewed by M. D. Zabel

+ — New Repub 123:20 D 25 '50 750w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett

New Statesman & Nation 41:101 Ja 27 '51 1000w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 D 17 '50 2600w

Reviewed by William McFee

N Y Times p6 Ja 14 '51 750w

"During his lifetime, Bernard Shaw succeeded in an astonishing way in stage-managing almost everything that was written about him. It will now be possible to study him as a man like another, and this memoir, undistinguished though it is, is of interest as the first move in that direction."

New Yorker 26:168 D 9 '50 320w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 F 11 '51 400w

"The habitual reader of Shaw will want to add this small volume to his shelf for the good stories, whether genuine or merely apposite, that it contains, as well as for the accounts of the last years and the deathbed scene. Here a note of ghoulish poetry is unintentionally struck." Jacques Barzun

Sat R of Lit 33:16 D 23 '50 1250w

"We can be grateful for most of this new information and for the new garland of anecdote that Mr. Pearson has woven, but he may be taking some of Shaw's habitual exaggerations too literally." Henry Popkin

+ — Theatre Arts 35:8 Ap '51 380w

Wis Lib Bul 47:165 Je '51

PEARSON, HESKETH. Last actor-managers; with illustrations from the Raymond Mander and Joe Mitchenson theatre collection. 83p $3 Harper

927.92 Actors and actresses 51-10947

Brief critical and biographical essays illustrated with photographs of the actor-managers in their principal roles. Contents: Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson; Sir Herbert Tree; Sir George Alexander; Sir Frank Benson; Lewis Waller; Sir John Martin-Harvey; H. B. Irving; Laurence Irving; Oscar Asche; Harley Granville-Barker.

Bookmark 10:230 Jl '51 40w

Reviewed by Montagu Slater

New Statesman & Nation 41:76 Ja 20 '51 950w

"Actors and biographers have much in common: the former show lives in the aspect of living art, the latter present lives in the aspect of history or mythology. Since Hesketh Pearson has been both actor and biographer ('Bernard Shaw,' 'A Life of Shakespeare,' etc.), it is natural that he should give us these attractive and well-illustrated biographical sketches to perpetuate in history some of the colorful actor-managers of England whom he knew and admired." Richard Gaines

+ N Y Times p44 O 14 '51 420w

"Hesketh Pearson, once an actor himself, biographer of Shaw, Wilde, and Dickens, writes with style and engaging wit of Forbes-Robertson and nine other celebrated actor-managers who dominated the London stage for half a century before the close of George V's reign." Russell Rhodes

+ Sat R of Lit 34:32 D 22 '51 600w

PECK, STEPHEN ROGERS. Atlas of human anatomy for the artist. 272p 190il $6 Oxford

743.4 Anatomy, Artistic 51-10735

"This book, for the practicing artist and student, is organized for easy reference to the many phases of the study of human anatomy. . . The text is integrated with the illustrations it accompanies—convenient for the student as he studies various sections or refers to a particular subject. . . The author [is] lecturer on art anatomy at the Parsons School of Design, New York City." (School Arts) Pronunciation of terms. Index.

"This book is a thoughtfully conceived and a well executed volume for the art student or professional. . . Altogether a very thoro book." Gary Sheahan

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Je 3 '51 80w

"Recommended for high school and college level art students, teachers, art libraries and, of course, practicing artists."

+ School Arts 51:adv S '51 110w

PECKHAM, HOWARD HENRY. William Henry Harrison, young Tippecanoe; il. by Paul Laune. (Childhood of famous Americans ser) 190p $1.75 Bobbs

B or 92 Harrison, William Henry—Juvenile literature 51-10356

A biography of William Henry Harrison for young readers from eight to eleven. It begins with his boyhood in Virginia, and ends with his election to the presidency of the United States.

"Recommended for grades 3-5." M. F. Cox

+ Library J 76:880 My 15 '51 50w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Jl 29 '51 60w

"How much of this is fact and how much is fiction is not indicated here, but Mr. Peckham, Director of the Indiana Historical Bureau, has made an appealing figure of the Virginia boy who grew up to be a famous Indian fighter, a popular frontier hero and the ninth President of the United States." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p26 My 20 '51 80w

PEDLER, F. J. West Africa. 208p $2.50 Präeger

916.6 Africa, West 51-7838

"Introduction, sketching the main features with a wise selection of significant detail. The author's experience is mainly of British West Africa, but the French territories and Liberia are not left out of the picture. The book is descriptive rather than analytic, but Mr Pedler has some acute comments on the relations between central and local administration." Manchester Guardian

"The author writes sympathetically and pleasantly of the problems of the various peoples."

Current Hist 21:167 S '51 50w

"In spite of an unattractive English format this little book is a mine of reliable information on a comparatively little known corner of the world. . . Recommended." G. W. Hill

+ Library J 76:1335 S 1 '51 80w

Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 20 '51 40w

"Mr. Pedler's unusual combination of Colonial Office and commercial experience (with the United Africa Company) makes him well qualified to write a book about West Africa, since he is at home with the problems of political development and local government in Africa, and he also has first-hand knowledge of economic realities. The result is an interesting and objective little book which future travellers to West Africa should be advised to read."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p463 Jl 27 '51 500w

PEFFER, E. LOUISE. Closing of the public domain; disposal and reservation policies, 1900-50. 372p $4.50 Stanford univ. press

333.1 U.S.—Public lands 51-10461

"This book is a narrative account by a Stanford economist of this one aspect of changing public land policy since 1900. The characters in the story are assorted Congressmen, economic interest groups such as cattle raisers and lumbermen, conservationists, homesteaders, cabinet secretaries, career bureaucrats, presidents, and most important, the land itself. Dr. Peffer has competently focused her attention on the enactment and administration of Federal laws closing the domain." (San Francisco Chronicle) Index.

"If some readers, sharing the reviewer's prejudices, differ with a few of the judgments stated or implied, they should nevertheless be grateful for the pungency which these characterizations and opinions give to this very valuable and scholarly work." Charles McKinley

+ — Am Pol Sci R 45:1196 D '51 950w

"For a current highly provocative subject the evidence is presented and conclusions drawn with commendable objectivity. Appended statistical tables are conveniently informing. Occasional awkward constructions and metaphors mistakenly strained for emphasis alone reveal immaturity of authorship." E. D. Ross

+ — Ann Am Acad 277:238 S '51 450w

Nation 172:525 Je 2 '51 110w

"It is an interesting analysis of the conflicts of interest which have yielded a few fiascos and some legislative accomplishment." M. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p27 My 6 '51 330w

"This book is not angry or intemperate. On the contrary, it is a solid package of fact, its writing often in typical scholarly prose and its narrative antiseptically strained of emotion. Dr. Peffer's approach is historical and thus, in most cases, above the battle. But because any discussion that involves 20 per cent of the United States contains its own fascination, her authoritative book contains inherently exciting material." P. R. Levin

+ Sat R of Lit 34:36 Jl 14 '51 400w

"Dr. Peffer readily admits that her account is tentative, as it is based on the limited sources now available to scholars. Yet she has succeeded in reducing a complex series of events to understandable form, and in presenting logical reasons for a major shift in American land policy. Her book is heavily weighted with tables and notes which, while fascinating to the professional student, might discourage more casual readers."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 7:277 S '51 240w

PEKELIS, ALEXANDER HAIM. Law and social action; selected essays; ed. by Milton R. Konvitz. 272p $3.50 Cornell univ. press

347.04 Law. Common law. Jurisprudence 50-10986

"Alexander Pekelis was a cosmopolite. Born in Russia, he was educated in Germany, Austria, Italy, and England; his professional career was divided between Italy, France, and America; and he died in his forties, a professor at the New School for Social Research. His interests were as broad as his background. . . Law and Social Action is a collection of essays posthumously edited by Mr. Milton R. Konvitz, essays that range widely in length and subject matter, many of them papers presented to the Graduate Faculty Seminar of the New School." Ann Am Acad

Reviewed by R. A. Horn

Am Pol Sci R 45:608 Je '51 430w

"These essays are too sharp to be scholarly, too diverse to point a path to legal wisdom. They can well be used as a stimulus to teachers and to students. They will effectively shatter illusions about authority and tradition —which may itself be the beginning of scholarship and wisdom." Geoffrey May

+ Ann Am Acad 275:183 My '51 420w

"This is a remarkable book full of original insights about America, delightfully written by a man who, transplanted from Europe, vitally participated in American activities until his untimely death late in 1946, at the age of 44." Jerome Frank

+ N Y Times p3 Ja 14 '51 550w

"Thoughtful persons, laymen as well as scholars, will find this collection provocative, and sometimes engaging reading."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:178 Je '51 220w

PELLAPRAT, HENRI PAUL. Good food from France; tr. from the French and adapted by Charlotte Turgeon; drawings by Delos Blackmar. 288p $3 Barrows

641.5 Cookery 51-10219

"Charlotte Turgeon who did such a good job with 'Tante Marie's French Kitchen,' has done it again with another fine cookbook. She has translated and adapted H. P. Pellaprat's 'Traité de la Cuisine Familiale.' This is no ponderous tome and you don't have to be an experienced cook to use it. . . In search of those everyday dishes that I had not tasted since the last time I saw Paris, I found the eggs in aspic, the roast lamb à la Boulangère, the carrots in sour cream, and they turned out with authentic flavor. The full-dress dishes that you would expect to find in a French cookbook are there too, along with a wine list and twenty-one menus, a shade elaborate for the average household but you can adapt too, can't you?" N Y Times

---

Kirkus 19:205 Ap 1 '51 190w

"The recipes are clear and exact, as Mrs. Turgeon promises in the foreword, citing the recipe for puff paste as an example. With tongue in cheek, for success had not crowned previous efforts, I began with that one and lo and behold, it worked." Mary Poore

+ N Y Times p18 Je 24 '51 180w

"His explanations and instructions are lucid and precise. He has simplified the making of the basic French sauces to a point where the veriest tyro need not get flustered, and with these mastered will be ripe for bolder endeavors." Lewton Mackall

+ Sat R of Lit 34:43 Mr 10 '51 160w

PELLEGRINI, ANGELO M. Immigrant's return. 269p $3.50 Macmillan

B or 92 Italians in the U.S. Italy—Civilization 51-7138

"Autobiographical account of emigration to the United States from Casabianca, Italy, as a young boy in 1913, of growing up in the Northwest and the whole process of becoming American; then, a return to Italy as a college professor on a Guggenheim Fellowship." Library J

Booklist 48:97 N 15 '51

Reviewed by Edward Barry

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 18 '51 280w

"His evaluation is a valid one, but the handling is often awkward, in the transference from first to third person, from subjective to objective reactions. A social study, which is necessarily limited in its market."

Kirkus 19:424 Ag 1 '51 180w

"This brackets with Barschak's American Adventure as a warm, human document that is urged for most adult book collections." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 76:1562 O 1 '51 80w

Reviewed by Frances Keene

Nation 173:453 N 24 '51 500w

"A first-rate reporter, with the four eyes of his two selves, the Italian boy's, the American man's, Mr. Pellegrini presents his story of the return to his native land, of hospitality, of the poetic experience of meeting fellow philosophers and intellectuals, with charm and integrity." Ernestine Evans

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 D 23 '51 700w

"[His] recollections, along with a rather hasty account of his Italian sojourn, really add up to two books, neither of which he intended at the outset to write but both of which are a good deal livelier than his original idea, despite some very distracting interruptions in the narrative when the author puts himself in the third person, and despite a good deal of rhetorical comment on what Mr. Pellegrini terms 'creative Americanism' but has a hard time defining."

+ New Yorker 27:151 O 20 '51 180w

"A first-rate reminder to unthinking critics of everything American that they would do well to reorient themselves and see the greatness of their country as well as the mistakes they choose to point out." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 19 '51 900w

PELS, MRS GERTRUDE JAECKEL. Easy puppets; making and using hand puppets; il. by Albert Pels. 104p $2.50 Crowell

791.5 Marionettes 51-6331

Step by step instructions on making hand puppets and giving puppet plays. Includes diagrams. Index.

Booklist 48:37 S 15 '51

Bookmark 11:35 N '51

"Just right for pre-junior high activities."

+ Kirkus 19:484 S 1 '51 110w

"Recommended." Elizabeth Hodges

+ Library J 76:1574 O 1 '51 70w

"Over-all, this how-to book has a wide appeal and will start many a child off on a creative experience." Miriam James

+ N Y Times p34 N 11 '51 150w

PELTZ, MRS MARY ELLIS (OPDYCKE). Behind the gold curtain; the story of the Metropolitan opera, 1883-1950; sponsored by the Metropolitan opera guild, inc, New York. 96p il $2.50 Farrar, Strauss

782 Metropolitan opera company 50-10957

A brief history of the Metropolitan opera company, from its beginning in 1883 to the 1950-51 season. The author considers the building, its managers, performers and performances, and has included many photographs. No index.

Bookmark 10:84 Ja '51 30w

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 D 24 '50 230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '51

"Attractive, readable, and not without humor." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 75:2154 D 15 '50 100w

Reviewed by Cecil Smith

New Repub 123:21 D 18 '50 20w

"'Behind the Gold Curtain' reads and looks considerably like an extension of the house organ and lacks the elements it needs to make it a valuable work of reference: index, some sort of consolidated list of performances and repertory, and less of the wide-eyed wonder of the Opera Guild people toward their beloved Met." D. P.

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ja 28 '51 210w

"The main body of the book reviews briefly and admiringly the history of the company's performances and the procession of voices and personalities down the years. Here are the highlights for those who do not want all the detail in the histories of Kolodin and Krehbiel. There are numerous and often handsome pictures." P. L. Miller

+ Sat R of Lit 34:50 Ja 27 '51 290w

PEMBER, TIMOTHY. Swanson. 280p $3 Harcourt

51-5288

Character study of a young Englishman, a professor at a California college, who knew more about literature than about life. During the war, when he was a conscientious objector,

PEMBER, TIMOTHY—Continued
and afterwards, he learned about life the hard way.

Booklist 48:13 S 1 '51

"It's a book which is often psychologically rich, full of insights into how people would act in a given situation, full of odd corners and odder characters. The minor figures are much more sharply realized than the major. . . One thing is hard for me to believe—that a full professor in a university would not be helped to the limit when charged with a false crime, would not, at the very least, be interviewed and his case justly considered, in the university's own defense. This is important, because on his jail sentence all the balance of the book hangs. Yet I must admit a solid interest in what happens to a man abandoned by his university and his friends, even if inbelievably." Paul Engle
+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ag 12 '51 500w

Reviewed by E. L. Snodgrass
Christian Century 68:1280 N 7 '51 350w

"Timothy Pember writes superbly. His words are right, so right that one almost fails to notice them as words, and that is the ultimate perfection. His observation is accurate and delicate, his control sure." Robert Wichert
+ Commonweal 54:483 Ag 24 '51 550w

Kirkus 19:301 Je 15 '51 160w

"The author shows an excellent understanding of people and their relations and does a skilled job of portraying two diverse groups, the educated middle-class and the laboring class, in action." H. L. Roth
+ Library J 76:1222 Ag '51 120w

Reviewed by Robert Phelps
New Repub 125:21 S 3 '51 140w

"Swanson steadfastly exasperates even when his plight arouses pity and sympathy; he flounders too clumsily and one is finally unconvinced that he has it in him to snatch personal victory out of conventional failure any more than out of conventional success. But the novel has many merits; it combines subtlety with a notable grace of style, and Mr. Pember's observations of people and places are always so quietly exact that one searches for an equally apt word to describe a quality that makes the whole of 'Swanson' less good than several of its parts." James Hilton
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ag 12 '51 550w

"Given a serious intention, a demonstrated literary sophistication, and relationships potentially compounded of anguish and joy, it is something of a wonder to find a set of characters with so little life in them. It is very difficult to believe in Swanson, Margaret or Richmond, and it is almost impossible to be interested in them. What is missing is more than mere charm, warmth or humor; for here is a story all will and no inspiration, all intelligent evidence and no persuasion." Gertrude Buckman
— N Y Times p4 Ag 12 '51 330w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ag 20 '51 900w

"Mr. Pember's talents are unusual in that they include both a facility for adroit satire and the ability to endow the commonplace with an almost lyrical quality. His descriptions of the skidrow existence that Swanson leads after he leaves the university put one in mind of Anderson, both in their mellow tone and in their preoccupation with the virtues of simple people. Unlike most satirists, Mr. Pember has a story to tell rather than an axe to grind." Martin Levin
+ Sat R of Lit 34:16 Ag 18 '51 600w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal
Springf'd Republican p14A S 2 '51 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p725 N 16 '51 470w

PENNEY, JAMES CASH. Fifty years with the golden rule. 245p $2.75 Harper

B or 92 Penney, J. C., company 50-10795

Autobiography of the founder of the Penney chain of dry goods stores. The book tells how he went about to achieve his two ambitions: to be worth a million dollars and to lead a Christian life.

"The candor of this spiritual autobiography by one of America's leading businessmen is, to say the least intriguing." W. E. Hammond
Christian Century 68:798 Jl 4 '51 320w

Reviewed by Neil Martin
Christian Science Monitor p7 F 7 '51 240w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 76:45 Ja 1 '51 80w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 F 25 '51 170w

"In so far as Mr Penney's book describes the development of his chain of drygoods stores, it is a fascinating case history of business expansion. However, its dramatic, even explosive, mixture of business and religion makes it a document for a first-rate Hollywood director—but the director must also be a first-rate psychologist." Palmer Harman
+ — N Y Times p27 D 10 '50 160w

Wis Lib Bul 47:87 Ap '51

PENNOCK, JAMES ROLAND. Liberal democracy; its merits and prospects. 403p $4 Rinehart

321.8 Democracy 50-10692

"Professor Pennock's book is a defense of democracy where democracy is committed to the general tenets of traditional European liberalism; it attacks nonliberal or 'plebiscitary' democracy, in which, according to Professor Pennock, majority rule becomes majority tyranny and ends in the despotism of dictatorship. . . The governing principle of Professor Pennock's book appears to be the restriction of the right of the majority to have its way, lest that majority move in the wrong direction." Ann Am Acad

Reviewed by C. S. Hyneman
Am Pol Sci R 45:545 Je '51 1250w

Reviewed by David Spitz
Ann Am Acad 275:171 My '51 650w

"The sweetness and light of the author's Quaker approach is welcome, but his conclusions are a bit too optimistic; since, however, we live in an age of excessive pessimism, this volume deserves wide reading and consideration."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:179 Je '51 200w

PENOYRE, JOHN, and RYAN, MICHAEL. Observer's book of British architecture; il. by [the authors] describing and indexing the development of building in Britain from Saxon times to the present day with over 250 il, many of which are in colour; foreword by F. R. S. Yorke. 218p $1.25 Warne

720.942 Architecture—England 51-12746

"A small pocket guide covers style from Saxon to modern times. Nontechnical, line drawings. Picture index which groups architectural features by period and style for quick identification will please the tourist and beginning student." Booklist

Booklist 48:27 S 15 '51

"It is admirably suited for taking on one's travels."
+ New Statesman & Nation 41:630 Je 2 '51 90w

PEPLOW, BONNIE, and PEPLOW, EDWARD. Roundup recipes; with the help of the Arizona cowbelles. 278p $3 World pub.

641.5 Cookery. Cowboys 51-12327

"An organization called the Arizona Cowbelles Assn. has supplied the many recipes which Bonnie and Ed Peplow have put together in this book joining the straight recipes with introductory material in the way of history of the cowboy and discussion of what he likes to eat and such matters." San Francisco Chronicle

Booklist 48:6 S 1 '51

Kirkus 19:176 Mr 15 '51 90w

Reviewed by Charlotte Turgeon
N Y Times p19 Jl 15 '51 280w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p22 Je 24 '51 240w

PERCIVAL, EDMUND GEORGE VINCENT. Structural carbohydrate chemistry. 246p $7.35; to schools $5.50 Prentice-Hall

547.3 Carbohydrates. Sugars [50-3911]

"A compact presentation of the chemistry of the sugars and the related compounds. As the title indicates, the emphasis is on structure or configuration. However, information is included also on methods of preparation and on reactions. The book is liberally illustrated with structural diagrams. Pertinent literature is cited in footnotes." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 76:119 Ja 15 '51 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 35:83 N '50

PERCIVAL, MILTON OSWIN. Reading of Moby-Dick. 135p $2.75 Univ. of Chicago press

813 Melville, Herman—Moby Dick 50-8699

For descriptive note see Annual for 1950.

Reviewed by Walter Watson
Ethics 61:246 Ap '51 160w

"In this small book—less than a fourth the size of Moby-Dick—Mr. Percival adopts the intrinsic approach, determined to explore the organic meanings and not the sources of Melville's greatest book. His Reading has the personal warmth and liveliness that is inevitable when an individual, having a living interest in it, meets a book head on. But it also has its unconquerable limitations." Sherman Paul
+ — New Eng Q 23:530 D '50 1100w

"Some of Mr. Percival's reflections are illuminating; some serve chiefly to lead up to the magnificent prose of the quoted passages. This method of piece-by-piece interpretation often, for all its transparency, stands in the light a little."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p769 D 1 '50 420w

"This simple and convincing reading of a great book provides a satisfactory antidote to a number of strained interpretations of Moby-Dick which have recently been published."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:413 D '50 240w

PERNOUD, REGINE. Glory of the medieval world; tr. from the French by Joyce Emerson. 268p il $4.50 Roy pubs.

901 Middle ages. France—Civilization [51-1682]

This survey of the life of the French people in the 12th and 13th century contains chapters on the organization of society, on rural and urban life, on the church, on education, on literature and the arts, and on the daily life. The author is a curator of the Musée de l'Histoire de France at Paris.

Reviewed by John Randolph
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 22 '51 170w

"Miss Pernoud gives a loose chain of sympathetic essays, touching on the problems in a light vein, but more suited for the enjoyment of the connoisseur than for the introduction into a new field, which is what she wants to offer." Max Fischer
Commonweal 54:97 My 4 '51 280w

"Despite its oversanguine assumptions and its gallocentric faith that the medieval world and medieval France were synonymous, this book is pleasant reading and contains some penetrating insights. It might be described as a romanticized interpretation of grimmer realities." G. B.
+ — Sat R of Lit 34:16 Mr 31 '51 320w

"It would be easy to compile a most damaging criticism of this book by citing some of its more unfortunate statements. To do so, however, would be both unjust and misleading. This writer lacks poise, but she has a genuine love for her subject, and much that is both informative and interesting to say about it. Her nostalgia for the Middle Ages and her naive zeal in exploring them impart to this book a charm of its own. Its freshness goes some way towards excusing its overtones of enthusiasm."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p47 Ja 26 '51 550w

PERRIE, D. W. Cloud physics. 119p il $4.50 Wiley

551.57 Clouds 51-9779

"The publicity given in recent years to rainmaking or, as this author terms it, 'induced precipitation,' leads naturally to an increased interest in clouds and the phenomena of their formation. A considerable range of information about clouds is presented in this book. Though the work appears to be addressed to lay readers, the author's style is rather formal; consequently, some lay readers may find it difficult to read. However, it should prove easy enough for such readers as airplane pilots who have some professional interest in the subject." N Y New Tech Bks

"It will appeal to scientists reading outside their own fields and to mature general readers who have read other books on meteorological topics. Three charts of 'cloud characteristics,' a glossary and a bibliography give the book some reference value." R. R. Hawkins
+ Library J 76:710 Ap 15 '51 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:39 My '51

PERRIN, MRS BLANCHE CHENERY. By the same door. 217p $3 Macmillan

51-10653

Character study of an intelligent but domineering woman. Madge's first husband was killed in an accident while he was going away with another woman; her second marriage almost ended in estrangement. It was her oldest son who finally opened Madge's eyes to her own ruthlessness.

Booklist 47:347 Je 1 '51

Kirkus 19:137 Mr 1 '51 140w

"'By the Same Door' cuts deeper than Mrs. Perrin's amusing first novel, 'Deepwood,' and is no less deftly written. It is an entertaining story that will make some of its feminine readers a little uncomfortable." Mary Ross
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 My 13 '51 500w

"Mrs. Perrin has written a fast-moving and perceptive novel." Charlotte Capers
+ N Y Times p19 My 13 '51 150w

"What Mrs. Perrin has tried to do, and succeeded in doing with an amazing amount of penetration, is to show what happens when a woman attempts to change the nature of the men who love her. Although the subject is not as beguiling as that of her first novel, Mrs. Perrin has written this second one with firmer texture and sharper characterization." J. V.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 S 2 '51 150w

PERRY, GEORGE SESSIONS. Tale of a foolish farmer. 200p $3 McGraw

630.1 Country life—Texas Agr51-509

Stories about the author's two small farms in Texas which he ran, sometimes from long distances, with the help of the Arnwines, a Negro family. Their trials with the weather, cattle, workmen, and unmanageable farm machinery, are told with humor.

Booklist 47:290 Ap 15 '51

Bookmark 10:230 Jl '51 40w

"'Tale of a Foolish Farmer' is refreshing whether one lives on a farm, visits one occasionally, or never intends to see one. The book discloses a man who appreciates the deeply enriching effects of living close to the land, but is honest enough to admit the dark side as well as the bright." H. B. E.

PERRY, G. S.—Continued

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 31 '51 440w

"An accomplished accounting."

+ Kirkus 19:91 F 1 '51 160w

"'Tale of a Foolish Farmer' is not a nonfiction version of 'Hold Autumn in Your Hand,' but beneath the smooth surface is the same deep love of the Texas land." Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ap 15 '51 550w

Reviewed by Hal Borland

N Y Times p18 Je 10 '51 330w

"Mr. Perry's kind of pleasant humor depends chiefly upon his way of telling a yarn and doesn't come out well at second hand. If you read his 'Granny Van,' for instance, you know how he can kid himself in telling this sort of tale. And if you know his 'Hold Autumn in Your Hand,' you'll have encountered his sensitivity to the countryside of Texas and his poetic response to the natural things of the Texas out-of-doors. . . . A lot of people are going to like the way he does it." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 4 '51 700w

"Mr. Perry's love for the soil, for the turning of the seasons, and the shifting lights on the Milam County landscape is implicit in every chapter of this little volume. At the same time, he steers clear of the supercharged dithyrambic approach which afflicts so many earth-loving writers these days. He simply tells his story, with many a trivial side excursion, and then calls it a day." Stanley Walker

+ Sat R of Lit 34:20 My 12 '51 750w

PERRY, RALPH BARTON. The citizen decides; a guide to responsible thinking in time of crisis. 225p $3 Ind. univ. press

323.4 Citizenship. Public opinion. U.S.—Politics and government. U.S.—Foreign relations 51-14330

"Stimulating volume designed to help the average person sift the conflicting opinions spread through 'mass media' and think clearly on some of the controversial issues of today." Bookmark

Booklist 48:57; 116 O 15 '51; D 1 '51

Bookmark 11:58 D '51 30w

"A thoughtful book, with much of value for every reader."

+ Kirkus 19:595 O 1 '51 200w

"Perry is especially good on the doctrine of revolution. His simple adherence to basic American principles clears away a cloud of misunderstanding. He is fine on militarism, too, but in the inexpert judgment of a lay person he wabbles a bit when he discusses the justification of the means by the end; he comes alarmingly close to a defense of casuistry." G. W. Johnson

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 N 25 '51 600w

"Perry's new ideal of democracy 'requires that the people at large shall be qualified managers of their own affairs' because if they are allowed to read and listen and look at what they like, without instruction, they will choose the worse instead of the better program, ballot, policy and so forth. Such utter pessimism about the ability of people to learn from their own experience is rather exotic in this country." Asher Brynes

N Y Times p34 D 2 '51 550w

PERSICO, ENRICO. Fundamentals of quantum mechanics; tr. and ed. by Georges M. Temmer. 484p $8; to schools $6 Prentice-Hall

530.1 Atoms. Wave mechanics 50-11322

"A textbook for graduate students of physics. It is arranged in three parts, the first of which treats the subject historically and also describes the noted experiments upon which quantum mechanics is based. The second part is devoted largely to Schrödinger's wave mechanics, but the Bohr Sommerfeld theory is discussed in the final chapter of this part. The third part, which requires an understanding of Hilbert's space concepts and matrix algebra, is devoted chiefly to the general theory of quantum mechanics. . . The author is director of the department of physics of Laval University, Quebec. The translator has made a few changes in the text and has added English works and English translations to the bibliography." Library J

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 76:334 F 15 '51 160w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:12 Ja '51

PERSONS, STOW, ed. Evolutionary thought in America [ed. for the special program in American civilization at Princeton university]. 462p il $5 Yale univ. press

146 Evolution. U.S.—Civilization. Philosophy, American 50-10345

"This book is a collection of lectures delivered in the Princeton undergraduate program on American civilization and aims to trace the influence of nineteenth-century theories of evolution on American thought. It is divided into two parts, the first providing general historical and scientific background material and the second dealing with the influence of evolution on various fields of American thought." Ethics

"The several chapters—except those on the philosophy of culture and moral theory—are of uniformly high order, well-organized, and factually rich." John Sirjamaki

+ Am Soc R 16:129 F '51 240w

"Inevitably, in eight introductions there is much repetition, each of the other—and all of material easily available in other work. Further, it is fair to ask if the book relates the story of a great theme rising, challenging, sweeping all before it in many areas, and then subsiding—if it does subside—or changing, Protean, into other forms. I am afraid it does not, and the reason is that the editor did not take hold of the book and bring it under his control. There is no integrative beginning or end. The book is particularistic, and the insulation between disciplines is impermeable." R. E. Lane

Ann Am Acad 274:255 Mr '51 600w

"The present work constitutes a very important contribution to its field." A. W. Burks

+ Ethics 61:164 Ja '51 600w

School & Society 73:128 F 24 '51 30w

"Considering the comprehensive title of the book, the reader may be disappointed to find no lectures on such important subjects as the relation of evolution to education, literary history and criticism, geography, and historiography. The collection does show, however, how many vistas can be opened by this method of studying the 'cross-fertilization' of ideas, as contrasted with studying ideas in departmentalized isolation."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:37 Mr '51 240w

PESTALOZZI, JOHANN HEINRICH. Education of man; aphorisms; with an introd. by William H. Kilpatrick. 93p $2.75 Philosophical lib.

371.44 Education—Philosophy 51-2091

"With an introduction by William H. Kilpatrick, this is a collection of pithy sayings designed to present to the serious reader some of the underlying basic principles of the philosophy of education of the great Swiss." School & Society

Reviewed by R. C. Miller

Churchman 165:16 My 15 '51 90w

Reviewed by Walter Watson

Ethics 61:335 Jl '51 90w

"Worthy of the attention of ministers, parents, and other library patrons." Nathaniel Stewart

Library J 76:110 Ja 15 '51 140w

"In our prolix times the strength and incisiveness of Pestalozzi's writing, which only careful thinking can produce, give this book a special value." Rene Fueloep-Miller
+ N Y Times p6 S 2 '51 490w
School & Society 73:94 F 10 '51 40w
Springf'd Republican p5D Mr 25 '51 180w
Wis Lib Bul 47:248 N '51

PETERS, ARTHUR ANDERSON (FRITZ PETERS, pseud). Finistère. 307p $3 Farrar, Straus 51-9378

"In a quiet, understanding tone Mr. Peters presents the story of a young boy's search for love. Matthew's divorced parents are busy with their own affairs. His friend Scott has other attachments. The boarding school is strange to him until he rooms with Andre who introduces him to some of the mysteries of sex. This relationship changes for one with a teacher (male) with whom he falls in love." Library J

"Mr. Peters, I feel, has wrested a pretty creditable work of fiction from the emotional turmoil of the wounded adolescent. . . Mr. Peters has handled a difficult theme with dignity, persuasive insight, and compassion." C. J. Rolo
+ Atlantic 187:76 Ap '51 600w
Booklist 47:254 Mr 15 '51

Reviewed by Paul Engle
Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 F 25 '51 350w
Kirkus 18:732 D 15 '50 190w

"Well done, but selection should depend on the degree of sophistication of the library user." H. L. Roth
Library J 76:111 Ja 15 '51 100w

"If this sincere and moving story is more than a pathological study, its purpose is to invoke pity for the homosexual's problems." H. I'A. Fausset
Manchester Guardian p4 F 16 '51 180w

"Suffers from being considerably over-written. The characters are well-observed but the atmosphere is sketchy and unconvincing and the writing never rises to the level of the tragedy." John Raymond
New Statesman & Nation 41:194 F 17 '51 90w

"Here is a deeply conceived novel, held together by a clean integrity of purpose that enables it to be forthright as well as intelligent on a miasmic topic." Frederic Morton
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 F 18 '51 850w

"So far as this reviewer recalls, this is the best novel he has ever read on the theme of homosexuality (Proust excepted) and its tragic consequences in a world made up of 'selfish, ruthless, cruel, egocentric people.'" H. F. West
+ N Y Times p5 F 18 '51 450w

"Mr. Peters writes with a serious and melancholy air, but his people are commonplace, and there is not enough life in his story to support the great weight of words he spreads upon it."
New Yorker 27:109 F 17 '51 70w

"At this moment in our social history it is difficult for most American authors to write a novel about a homosexual affair without making either a tract or an apologia. Mr. Peters has done neither. Instead, he has kept resolutely in focus his great theme: the corruption and the murder of innocence." Gore Vidal
+ Sat R of Lit 34:13 F 24 '51 650w

"There are knowledgeable and, I daresay, illuminating things in the book, but too much evasion and too much sentimentality—much too much—to make the not very comprehensible business comprehensible, not to say 'significant.'" R. D. Charques
Spec 185:256 F 23 '51 130w
Times [London] Lit Sup p113 F 23 '51 140w

PETERS, FRITZ. See Peters, A. A.

PETERS, HAROLD SEYMOUR, and BURLEIGH, THOMAS DEARBORN. Birds of Newfoundland; il. by Roger Tory Peterson; published in association with the Dept. of natural resources, Province of Newfoundland. 431p $6 Houghton
598.2 Birds—Newfoundland 51-13734

"The authors spent more than 300 days in the field, in all seasons of the year and all sections of the island. Editorial matter is considerable on each species: description, field marks, nest and eggs, range, status in Newfoundland, habits. Introductory sections, addressed primarily to Newfoundland residents, are designed to tell all the information needed to launch a student of wild birds." Chicago Sunday Tribune

"A thorogoing, systematic account, designed to be a standard reference work." A. C. Ames
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 18 '51 250w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 77:59 Ja 1 '52 50w

"The authors' style is frequently pedestrian, with some disconcerting grammatical errors. The plates, beautiful illustrations by Roger Peterson, are clear, detailed and excellent with the exception of one drawing: a fourth digit superfluously added to the Arctic three-toed woodpecker. However, in spite of these limitations this volume will long remain the standard work on birds in Newfoundland and as such it is valuable both to amateurs and specialists visiting the island." Thomas Foster
+ — N Y Times p20 N 11 '51 230w

"Special compliment should be paid the 32 handsome color plates and other drawings and sketches by Roger Tory Peterson. They manage to make an already fine text come alive—and, as they must be in this kind of thing, are much more than merely decorative. . . An index that appears to have been carefully copyread, end maps of Newfoundland showing principal localities mentioned, and a bibliography of source and other selected material contribute to make 'Birds' a fine thing." J. E. P.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 N 25 '51 250w

PETERSON, FLORENCE. Survey of labor economics. rev ed 871p $5 Harper
331 Labor and laboring classes. Trade unions 51-3458

"This new edition of Dr. Peterson's comprehensive work not only brings the text up to date on recent developments in labor relations, wages, and social security legislation, but incorporates the latest statistical data in new charts and tables. Two chapters have been added to permit more comprehensive discussions of such topics as union-management cooperation, problems of government workers, and methods of settling labor disputes." (Management R) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1947.

Booklist 47:365 Je 15 '51
Management R 40:515 Ag '51 60w

PETITPIERRE, JACQUES. Romance of the Mendelssohns [tr. by G. Micholet-Cote]. 251p il $4 Roy pubs.
B or 92 Mendelssohn-Bartholdy, Felix. Mendelssohn-Bartholdy, Cécile Charlotte Sophie (Jeanrenaud)

"Few biographers of Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy have given much attention to his beautiful wife. And that is odd, because Cécile Jeanrenaud was not only the subject of many portraits but was herself an accomplished artist, writer and musician. M. Petitpierre, a descendant of the Jeanrenaud family, has gathered many previously unpublished documents and pictures to make up this deficiency; in the process, he reveals the composer and his wife as warm human beings." N Y Times

PETITPIERRE, JACQUES—Continued

"The book is a beautiful production, manufactured in Switzerland, with fine colored portraits of the principals and 90 other illustrations. Recommended for libraries and booklovers generally." George Hanson

+ Library J 75:1827 O 15 '50 130w

"Little attention is given to the music of Mendelssohn, and what mention is made is not particularly enlightening or discerning. The value of the book lies in its presentation of little-known facts concerning the character and family of the wife of Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy and in the delineation through pictures of the atmosphere in which the Mendelssohns lived." Ralph Moritz

+ — Music Lib Assn Notes 8:528 Je '51 380w

Reviewed by Carter Harman

+ N Y Times p37 N 5 '50 180w

Reviewed by N. C. Carpenter

Sat R of Lit 33:31 N 25 '50 320w

PETTINGILL, OLIN SEWALL. Guide to bird finding east of the Mississippi; with il. by George Miksch Sutton. 659p $5 Oxford

598.2 Birds—U.S. 51-12259

A guide for the experienced bird watcher. Arranged by state, and by locality under each state, the guide gives information about species of birds, important bird concentrations, types of bird habitats, and lists institutions that are of ornithological interest. Detailed index.

Booklist 48:26 S 15 '51

"No guide of this type can supply all the answers. Some of this reviewer's favorite birding spots in a number of states are excellently described; others sketchily, particularly as to access to the most productive parts of an area. The author at times has been led by his correspondence with local birding enthusiasts into somewhat extravagant claims as to the species which can be expected to occur regularly in a particular place. On the whole, however, he has done an excellent job." John Bayles

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 S 30 '51 330w

"Mr. Pettingill's book fills a much needed gap in bird-book subjects. It is essentially a travel book—for the confirmed bird enthusiast. How often has the bird lover on a vacation trip wondered where he could see best the birds of the region and what they might be. This volume is the labor of love the author assigned himself out of his own heartfelt need." M. J. Taylor

+ Christian Science Monitor p5 D 27 '51 200w

Cleveland Open Shelf p26 N '51

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 76:1814 N 1 '51 50w

"A concise, well-indexed, readable manual. . . New Yorkers will be delighted and amazed at the possibilities of bird watching in New York City." Thomas Foster

+ N Y Times p30 S 30 '51 100w

New Yorker 27:160 D 15 '51 60w

PFIFFNER, JOHN MCDONALD. Supervision of personnel; human relations in the management of men. 454p $6 Prentice-Hall

658.3 Employment management 51-4444

"A discussion which sums up currently approved principles of personnel practice, and is intended for the use of line supervisors. Emphasizes the democratic attitude, and attempts to explain why, rather than how, the supervisor functions. Basing its statements on recent research in psychology and administrative practice, this sketches a pattern for the effective supervisor who will be a democratic leader, who also recognizes that he is in some measure responsible for the personal satisfactions that contribute to the efficiency of his workers." Booklist

Booklist 48:6 S 1 '51

"Mr. Pfiffner has written an unusually good book on an extremely vital subject. . . The bibliographies are exceptionally adequate and usable, as is true also of the index; format and printing are above average." Phyllis Osteen

+ Library J 76:1339 S 1 '51 140w

PHELPS, EARLE BERNARD. Public health engineering; a textbook of the principles of environmental sanitation; v 2, pt. 3, The food contact, in collaboration with Walter D. Tiedeman. 213p il $4 Wiley

614 Food adulteration and inspection. Sanitation. Sanitary engineering. Public health (48-4238)

"This volume follows the author's concept that the health aspects of man's environment may be studied under three major contacts, air, water, and food. Volume I [Book Review Digest 1948] covered the first two contacts; air and water, as parts I and II. Volume II presents part III—the food contact. The principles of sanitation as they apply to the production, handling, and distribution of food are presented with the more important food-borne diseases indicated. Sanitation principles have been developed using two foods, milk and shellfish, to illustrate their application." (Am J Pub Health) Index.

"Although of general interest to all persons concerned with basic sanitation principles as applied to the food contact, this book will be of especial interest to the food inspector responsible for milk plant inspection and control." Earnest Boyce

Am J Pub Health 41:464 Ap '51 290w

Eng N 146:41 Je 14 '51 130w

"The book is compactly written, but is not difficult to read. It should be of interest to any young professional worker in the field." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 76:334 F 15 '51 120w

"Though of primary interest to professional workers in public health, especially those in charge of the inspection and regulation of plants where food is processed and of restaurants, the work is not too technical to be useful for reference in answering questions of the general public."

N Y New Tech Bks 36:30 Mr '51

PHILLIPS, THOMAS HAL. Golden lie. 279p $3 Rinehart

51-10303

The story of a boy's growing up in a Mississippi town; of his love for his tolerant, ex-athlete father; of his religious, but passionate mother; and of his friendship with his Negro friend, which ends in tragedy.

Reviewed by Edmund Fuller

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 29 '51 320w

Kirkus 19:135 Mr 1 '51 150w

"Thomas Hal Phillips' second novel displays the same sure ability of narration, the careful craftsmanship, the luminous prose which characterized his first book. . . Mr. Phillips presents many insights into small-town life in the South, and he is particularly effective in sketching the relationships of father and son. 'The Golden Lie' is a rewarding book." Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ap 29 '51 340w

"Mr. Phillips' characters, being not so complex as in the first book and having less to struggle against, seem not quite so rich and incisive. Yet they are full of a warmth which is communicated to the reader, and Savanna especially stands out sharply and intelligibly." Hubert Creekmore

N Y Times p4 Ap 29 '51 650w

"Mr. Phillips intones his story with an air of significance and authority that makes his characters seem, if not dreamlike, certainly beyond life. . . Not one of his people is a believable human being except in occasional moments of strong emotion or impulse, and then they seem extremely alive."

New Yorker 27:113 My 3 '51 100w

"'The Golden Lie' is a book about many things. It tells of the security of a young boy whose love is deep rooted in his father and of a father's understanding of his son. It deals with tolerance, without once, as far as I can remember, mentioning the word. There is much about religious self-delusion, smugness, and hypocrisy. Yet never is the sound of ax-grinding audible in anything that Hal Phillips writes. His style is as quiet as the sound of creek water lapping at a grassy bank." C. N. Govan

+ Sat R of Lit 34:30 Je 2 '51 370w

"The Golden Lie has faults; its pace is too slow and its dialogue lacks individual flavor. But it is good as a study of family life, and as a portrait of the natural links between boys it is even better."

+ Time 57:110 Ap 30 '51 320w

PIAGET, JEAN. Psychology of intelligence [tr. by Malcolm Piercy and D. E. Berlyne]. 182p $3.50 Harcourt

151 Intellect [51-991]

"The pragmatic or evolutionist view has an effective exponent in Professor Piaget. Famous for his brilliant work in genetic psychology, he presents a brief discussion of intelligence as the culmination of growth in virtue of its 'sensorimotor' component or affinities, its variability and spontaneity, together with the freedom that constitutes objectivity." Nation

"Whether or not Piaget is correct in his interpretations of preconceptual and intuitive thinking, investigations of the child's socialization are going to have to take his hypotheses into account. Social psychologists who are interested in the development of roles, identifications, motives, and self will find this book a rich source of hypotheses and suggestions." Anselm Strauss

+ Am Soc R 16:572 Ag '51 800w

"It is ironic rather than inconsistent, however unfortunate, that symbolic logic, despite the vigor with which Piaget challenges the pretensions that form its connection with certain philosophic schools, nevertheless supplies his final definition of intelligence. Otherwise the book is unexceptionable. Even though it eschews the profuse statistical methods and material, it presents the hypothesis by which they must be construed." Martin Lebowitz

+ — Nation 172:333 Ap 7 '51 400w

Reviewed by D. O. Hebb

Yale R n s 40:553 spring '51 210w

PICARD, BARBARA LEONIE. Mermaid and the simpleton; il. by Philip Gough. 253p $2 Oxford

398 Fairy tales

Fifteen fairy tales for ages eight to twelve.

Booklist 47:225 F 15 '51

"Not all the stories have sufficient life and vigor to make them good for telling; but enough of them do so that the book is well worth adding to the storyteller's shelves."

+ Horn Bk 26:488 N '50 80w

Kirkus 18:642 O 15 '50 120w

"Though the discriminating storyteller will pass it by, it will, nevertheless, have a place on the fairy tale shelf, with its simple goat-herds and haughty princesses, its ivory boxes, and magic tapestries of which children never seem to tire." Mary Strang

Library J 76:55 Ja 1 '51 70w

"Through these fifteen tales parade all the characters of traditional folklore: maidens in distress; simple country boys winning fame and fortune; wicked witches and cruel fathers. Their adventures, too, follow the well-known patterns. Goodness triumphs over evil and true love remains true in the face of all obstacles. The unusual qualities of the book lie in the author's original turns of imagination and in her sense of magic and wonder." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p12 D 24 '50 160w

PICKERING, ERNEST. Homes of America, as they have expressed the lives of our people for three centuries. 284p il map $5.75 Crowell

728 Architecture, Domestic. Architecture—U.S. 51-4857

A survey of the history of American domestic architecture during the last three hundred years. The author, Professor of architecture at the University of Cincinnati, attempts to show how the economic and political events in America, have shaped its homes. Copiously illustrated. Index.

Booklist 47:398 Jl 15 '51

"The book is filled with the romance of old houses pieced together in a close-knit pattern that can be followed with relish by the student of architectural history as well as the owners and would-be owners of new homes." W. C. Harvey

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 4 '51 480w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 76:1425 S 15 '51 110w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Jl 22 '51 700w

"It is a sound, well designed, and functional book. It is the only book I know which tells the story of American houses right on through from the first real dwellings of the early English settlers to what is going on today. But it seems to me quite weak on contemporary houses." Richard Pratt

+ — Sat R of Lit 34:14 D 22 '51 390w

Wis Lib Bul 47:250 N '51

PIDDINGTON, RALPH O'REILLY. Introduction to social anthropology. 2v v 1 442p il maps $7 Praeger

572 Anthropology

"This first volume is intended as an introductory textbook for college students, missionaries, and colonial administrators. The author, Reader at University of Edinburgh, is a trained disciple of Malinowski. . . Broadly surveys primitive man throughout the world, and his law, religion, magic, and economics. . . 12-page bibliography, and an index." Library J

"Professor Piddington has accepted the role of a disciple propagating the faith of the master. . . By virtue of its faithful dedication to Malinowskiism, the book presents marked worth and glaring weaknesses. It is a valuable addition to the textbook field of anthropological works in that it offers a concise presentation of Malinowski's system. . . However, it is in these very advantages that the disturbing weaknesses of Piddington's book also lie. Just as the master was prone to give the impression that he had a corner on 'scientific' anthropology and, indeed, that all significant and meaningful anthropology began with him, so a reading of Piddington's book could easily impress the neophyte that all anthropology of consequence is the product of Malinowski and his followers." E. A. Hoebel

+ — Am Anthropol 53:246 Ap '51 1200w

"The book offers a welcome illustration of the mutual dependence of field work and a crystallized methodology. The solid grounding of the book in both should recommend this outline to students, particularly to future field workers." Ernest Manheim

+ Am J Soc 56:368 Ja '51 370w

"Piddington's Introduction is not without virtues; and if he uses it in connection with lectures from his new chair in Auckland University College it will admirably serve his classes. The promised second volume may rectify some faults, but one suspects that the work will have a limited appeal among instructors in American universities." J. S. Ellsworth

Am Soc R 15:695 O '50 300w

Reviewed by J. M. Scherr

Library J 76:328 F 15 '51 90w

PIEPER, JOSEF, and RASKOP, HEINZ. What Catholics believe; introduction by Gerald B. Phelan; tr. by Christopher Huntington. 112p $2 Pantheon bks.

282 Roman Catholic church—Doctrinal and controversial works 51-12297

An exposition of the basic principles of the Catholic church, based on the apostles creed, the sacraments, the Christian virtues, the Bible and the history of the Church. Index.

"A brief straightforward handbook. . . The tone is simple and expository rather than argumentative."

+ Commonweal 55:78 O 26 '51 150w

"Recommended." R. P. Breaden

+ Library J 76:1565 O 1 '51 110w

School & Society 74:367 D 8 '51 10w

PIERCE, DAVID EUGENE. Chemical engineering for production supervision. 2d ed 290p il $4 McGraw

660 Chemical engineering 50-58299

"Designed as a textbook for nontechnical men, this strikes an excellent balance between theoretical and practical information and should serve as a useful 'answer book.' Slight revisions and a new chapter on the subject of absorption mark the second edition." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1942.

Booklist 47:190 Ja 15 '51

"Altogether the author has done an excellent job in meeting his stated goals and the problems included are well chosen and numerous. The practicing chemical engineer or student will probably find the presentation rather elementary and incomplete." C. C. Monrad

+ Chem & Eng N 29:1255 Mr 26 '51 200w

"While the book is intended primarily for the advancement of non-technical personnel in production supervision, it should also serve as an excellent refresher for technical personnel who have been in industry for a number of years and who are confronted with the necessity of preparing for examinations required in connection with their registration as professional engineers." E. K. Nicholson

+ Chem Eng 58:264 Mr '51 420w

PIERCE, JOHN ROBINSON. Traveling-wave tubes. 260p $4.50 Van Nostrand

621.38 Vacuum tubes—Traveling wave tubes 50-10409

"The traveling wave tube is a new electronic device which apparently is destined to find wide application in telephony, television, and ultra-high frequency radio. . . . This is undoubtedly the first book on the subject. It is written by a member of the technical staff of the Bell Telephone Laboratories, and it is addressed to graduate engineers in the communications field. It provides a detailed treatment of the theory of traveling wave amplifiers and some indication of their potential uses. Magnetrons and double-stream amplifiers, viewed as related devices, are discussed more briefly. Apparently the bibliography lists all of the articles that had appeared up to August, 1949." N Y New Tech Bks

N Y New Tech Bks 35:96 N '50

"The book limits itself primarily to the linear or low-level behavior of all these devices. It is particularly important for use by those workers concerned with broad-band amplification problems, as in television relaying, and in communication methods such as pulse code modulation, or FM, which trade bandwidth for reductions in distortion, noise, and interference."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:108 Mr '51 300w

PIGANIOL, PIERRE. Acetylene; homologs and derivatives; pref. by G. Dupont; tr. from the 2d rev. ed. by Frederick A. Hessel and John B. Rust. 356p il $10 Mapleton house, Publishers, 5415 17th Av, Brooklyn 4, N.Y.

547.23 Acetylene 51-9527

"Although acetylene is one of the most important organic chemicals, both in the laboratory and in industry, only a handful of books about it has been published. This translation of the first systematic French work should be welcome as an important addition to the literature available in English. In it, the field is compactly surveyed, largely from the viewpoint of industrial chemists, with particular attention to reactions, conditions and yields. Each chapter concludes with an extensive bibliography, including patents. Literature published as late as 1947 is cited." N Y New Tech Bks

"It is difficult, without reference to the original publication, to ascertain whether the many ambiguities and unclarities in the text are the fault of the translators or of the author. . . As a compilation of reactions involving acetylene, it is handled without the skill usually expected of an author of a text." M. S. Kharasch

— Chem & Eng N 29:3562 Ag 27 '51 280w

"The book has been reproduced from typewritten copy, and the typewriting was obviously far from perfect, but none of the misspellings, poor spacing or smudged letters noticed by this reviewer destroyed the meaning of the text."

+ — N Y New Tech Bks 36:17 Mr '51

PIGGOTT, STUART, and DANIEL, GLYN EDMUND. Picture book of ancient British art. 27p 50pl $2.75 Cambridge

913.42 Art, Primitive. England—Antiquities

"Seventy-three pictures of treasures that have survived from prehistoric times make a book on the craftsmanship of the ancient wood carver, iron worker and potter in pre-Roman Britain. The originals, scattered in British museums, were chosen as representative of their era yet pleasing to the modern eye, and to show to what extent the craftsman of yesterday speaks to his colleague—and to all of us—today." N Y Times

N Y Times p13 Ag 12 '51 50w

"The 70-odd photographs of prehistoric art make the happiest match between the publishers who have produced it so cheaply and so admirably and the editors who have selected the illustrations so discriminately and introduced them with a taste as sure as their knowledge is profound. Nothing could more clearly demonstrate the fallacy of judging the arts by the evolutionary yardstick." H. J. Massingham

+ Spec 187:275 Ag 31 '51 190w

"The introductory essay is an original contribution to art-history, valuable because it emanates from those who have studied prehistory in all its varied aspects. The book will certainly be welcomed by archaeologists, though it is perhaps an exaggeration (and certainly too soon) to claim, as does the 'blurb' that it arouses their enthusiasm."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p480 Ag 3 '51 250w

PIKE, EDGAR ROYSTON. Round the year with the world's religions; with four plates in colour and many drawings by E. C. Mansell. 207p $2.50 Schuman

394 Fasts and feasts—Juvenile literature. Religions—Juvenile literature [50-244]

Myths and legends, customs and rituals of many religions and places, presented in simple language suitable for young people's reading. Arrangement is by month in which particular festivals and holidays are observed.

Booklist 47:322 My 15 '51

Bookmark 10:155 Ap '51 30w

"The style is pleasant, chatty, but lacks a coordinating perspective. Fun to pick up, easy to put down."

Kirkus 19:125 Mr 1 '51 90w

"Recommended for school and public libraries." M. M. Gantt

+ Library J 76:606 Ap 1 '51 90w

"Once past the eerie and somewhat confusing account of Jainist belief which opens this book, you will find a mighty interesting collection of facts about religious holidays. . . As in a good many factual books from England the style is frequently stilted, reading rather like an old travelogue, but the information is entertaining and will be especially stimulating to boys and girls who enjoy folk customs." E. L. B.

+ — N Y Times p22 Mr 25 '51 180w

PILLSBURY, DOROTHY. No high adobe; vignettes by M. J. Davis. 198p $3.50 Univ. of N.Mex. press
814 New Mexico—Social life and customs 50-10958

A collection of short stories or sketches about the author's Spanish-speaking neighbors near her New Mexican home.

Booklist 47:202 F 1 '51

Reviewed by Frances Sawyer
Christian Science Monitor p14 D 26 '50 180w

"With sensitive understanding and more than a trace of envy, Miss Pillsbury writes of these 'poor' Spanish Americans as her 'rich neighbors.' They have an unaffected dignity and kindness. . . They possess in their simple adobe houses a beauty for which rich Anglos 'strive in vain with the help of architects and decorators. It is indigenous—the product of centuries of living.' " F. H. Bullock
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 D 31 '50 650w

New Yorker 26:86 Ja 6 '51 30w

PIMLOTT, JOHN ALFRED RALPH. Public relations and American democracy. 276p $4 Princeton univ. press
301.154 Public opinion—U.S. 51-5518

"A study by an English social historian of public relations as carried on in the United States, largely as conducted by various agencies of the federal government. How it is conducted, by what kind of persons, through what media, with what social justification; how much of its product is information and how much propaganda, how much legitimate." Library J

"Mr. Pimlott is informed, wise, and even-tempered. His book is a fresh, invigorating note in the literature of propaganda." J. L. McCamy
+ Am Pol Sci R 45:1193 D '51 700w

"Here is a good, brief, balanced interpretation, by an English social historian, of American public relations." H. J. Parry
+ Ann Am Acad 278:200 N '51 500w

"Despite the limited scope of his research, the author has compiled information which public relations practitioners may find of interest and presents details of public relations activities which could be valuable supplementary reading for social science students." Ken Clayton
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 S 23 '51 250w

"An objective, detached presentation that clarifies a much clouded subject of great importance." J. E. Cross
+ Library J 76:1568 O 1 '51 60w

PINCHERLE, ALBERTO (ALBERTO MORAVIA, pseud). The conformist; tr. by Angus Davidson. 376p $3.50 Farrar, Straus
51-13615

"Marcello Clerici at the age of 13 is obsessed with the belief that he is an abnormal person; after committing a crime he determines to seek normality, and to conform in every way to what he thinks society considers conventional. He succeeds in conforming and for twenty years follows his 'normal' path through school, in life, and as a fascist government official, only to find his actions to have been unnecessary and unnatural for him." Library J

"Every book of Moravia's—and The Conformist, with its consummate craftsmanship, is, I think, his most impressive—increases my admiration for his rare combination of talents: for the sharp individuality and driving energy of his storytelling, and the depth, subtlety, and richness of his psychological perceptions. His is a corrosive vision which bites like acid through the cant notions about human nature." C. J. Rolo
+ Atlantic 188:93 N '51 600w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
— Cath World 174:316 Ja '52 250w

Reviewed by Edmund Fuller
Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 N 11 '51 480w

"For anyone deeply interested in the contemporary novel, The Conformist has a lot more to offer than the brilliant opening chapters. Moravia now shows a mastery of the visual scene completely absent from, say, The Woman of Rome. In fact in all the differences between this new work and the first, some good, some bad, can be seen the growth of an important, potentially a great, writer of our times." Frank Getlein
+ Commonweal 55:179 N 23 '51 700w

Kirkus 19:499 S 1 '51 250w

Reviewed by H. L. Roth
Library J 76:1563 O 1 '51 130w

" 'The Conformist' [is] beautifully translated by Angus Davidson. . . Since it is a parable, one expects a moral, which Moravia's wisdom does not allow him to formulate but which the form demands. 'The Conformist,' in this sense, is a curious hybrid, a didactic novel which teaches no lesson." Ernest Jones
Nation 173:403 N 10 '51 800w

Reviewed by H. C. Webster
New Repub 125:27 D 10 '51 330w

Reviewed by T. G. Bergin
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 N 4 '51 800w

"Those who sometimes grew weary plodding through the flat, pale first-person of Adriana's rambling naturalism will find 'The Conformist' easier going. It is neater, faster, paced precisely to its plot. If it views passionate scenes with the same cool, enervated detachment that has put distance between character and reader in Moravia's other fiction, that is the mark of his writing and a characteristic of the country he writes from—like the yellowish antique glaze, never seen in America, which gives a remote quality to Italian scenery." Robert Lowry
N Y Times p4 N 4 '51 800w

"It is odd to find an artist of Moravia's stature playing blankly with a dim, adolescent thought of this kind—that life is futile and largely a matter of illusions. The extraordinary beauty of some of the writing does much to make one forget the weakness of the whole, but it is, all the same, a disappointing book. It should perhaps be added that this disappointment from a major artist is still an outstanding novel." Anthony West
New Yorker 27:149 D 15 '51 1400w

"Ambiguity is not a redeeming quality in any novel; it can produce at times, as it does here, the startling effect of a nightmare in which what is unreal assumes the texture of solid flesh; but a work of fiction conceived in unreality and giving birth to unnatural men and women lacks solidity. In the end it fails to convince the reader that it is more than a disordered, if fascinating, dream." Harrison Smith
Sat R of Lit 34:17 N 17 '51 470w

Time 58:118 N 12 '51 380w

PINCHERLE, ALBERTO (ALBERTO MORAVIA, pseud). Conjugal love. 183p $2.50 Farrar, Straus 51-9840

"The narrator is a wealthy, slightly fatuous dilettante, Silvio Baldeschi, whose life has been restless and ineffectual until his fairly recent marriage, which has proved profoundly satisfying. Baldeschi has long cherished a belief in his creative powers, and now he has the strength of purpose to apply himself to writing a masterpiece. . . Moravia leads him in due course

PINCHERLE, ALBERTO—Continued
to a recognition of his painful lack of talent and the detection of his wife in a shocking infidelity. But the discovery of the devil in his wife's flesh and the collapse of his own pretensions bring an understanding of truths which give a deeper substance to their 'conjugal love.'" Atlantic

"There is a vibrant awareness in Moravia's fiction of the erotic element in life—something of the sex-consciousness of D. H. Lawrence minus Lawrence's sex-mysticism. Moravia's powerful sensuality is altogether spontaneous and forthright, free of any taint of staginess; and his shrewd insight into the psychology of sex never sounds like clinical analysis." C. J. Rolo
+ Atlantic 187:77 Ap '51 500w

Reviewed by Kelsey Guilfoil
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Ap 8 '51 500w

Kirkus 19:34 Ja 15 '51 160w

"The writing is fluid, the story is short but the book as a whole is not recommended for purchase beyond pay collection." H. L. Roth
Library J 76:326 F 15 '51 80w

"For all its technical accomplishment, for all its subtlety and sophistication, it is a little dead, a superb exercise and nothing more. Moravia has tried to bring off a second Adolphe, but he has missed."
New Statesman & Nation 41:351 Mr 24 '51 500w

"In this story, depressing, as is all of Moravia's art, in its unflinching scrutiny of the evil and weakness in man, there is a new note. There is something distantly resembling a hero. Silvio, a character made up of 'impotence, morbidity and selfishness,' is defeated. But Moravia has made him emerge in defeat as a man whose one virtue, a difficult zeal to study himself without pity or deceit, endows him with a certain tragic stature." Serge Hughes
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ap 1 '51 700w

Reviewed by Paolo Milano
N Y Times p4 Mr 25 '51 500w

"Fascinating reading, although, evasive and half-told as it is, it engages the reader's memory rather than his heart. The title seems to have been chosen without reference to the story, and the ending, faithful to the mood of the unhappy Silvio, is sheepish and modest, a long way from the grandiloquent pace of the opening pages."
+ New Yorker 27:90 Mr 31 '51 120w

Reviewed by Marc Rivette
San Francisco Chronicle p20 Mr 21 '51 600w

"The climax of the story and Baldeschi's oddly masochistic acceptance of it are not likely to strike every reader as plausible, including this one. But along the way and in the closing pages Moravia offers rich and subtle fare. His newest work, despite its almost novelette shortness, leaves far more sticking to the ribs than many a seven hundred-page 'giant' of recent memory. The translation by Angus Davidson, incidentally, reads smoothly and naturally enough to have been an original." David Davidson
+ Sat R of Lit 34:19 Mr 31 '51 550w

"This portrait of the artist as a middle-aged mediocrity is sometimes so subtle in its investigation of the intricacies of love that it recalls Stendhal. In the superb English translation of Angus Davidson, Conjugal Love moves with the assurance of a little masterpiece."
+ Time 57:106 Mr 26 '51 440w

"Among the welter of vague, worthy, shapeless novels, often talented enough in their way, Conjugal Love stands out as a notable achievement in a form of writing that few novelists in this country would waste time in studying. It is rendered into sensitive and fluid English."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p129 Mr 2 '51 480w

Reviewed by Paul Pickrel
Yale R n s 40:766 summer '51 140w

PINKERTON, MRS KATHRENE SUTHERLAND (GEDNEY). Hidden harbor. 278p $2.75 Harcourt 51-13356

Alaska in 1910 is the background for this story for older boys and girls. It is about Spence Baird, his father and mother, and Spence's younger brother and sister. When the family boat developed dry rot, the whole family rallied round to help Spence acquire a 'gas' boat.

Booklist 48:128 D 1 '51

"The dangers, difficulties and varied rewards of modern pioneering in Alaska are set forth vividly in this well-written adventure story. . . We end with a deeper feeling for Alaska and a new sense of its varied resources, of the difficulties of its salmon business, of the crafts of its Indians, and of its dramatic natural beauty." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 N 11 '51 260w

"This is a story with broad scope, excellent characterization and tangy regional atmosphere." F. C. Smith
+ N Y Times p18 N 11 '51 180w

"Stirring and intelligently written fiction for high-school readers." K. T. Kinkead
+ New Yorker 27:180 D 1 '51 40w

"The author of 'Hidden Harbor' spent many years in Canada and Alaska, and readers familiar with boats, logging and Indian lore are likely to enjoy her book." S. M. Neal
+ Springf'd Republican p6D D 30 '51 100w

PINNEY, PETER. Dust on my shoes. 371p il $4 Bobbs
915 East—Description and travel 51-13866

A vagabond journey thru Greece, Turkey, Syria, Iraq, Persia, Afghanistan, India, Pakistan and Burma. The author is a twenty-nine year old Tasmanian.

Booklist 48:99 N 15 '51

Reviewed by E. L. Acken
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 D 9 '51 320w

"'Dust on My Shoes' belongs to a noble and enduring literary tradition. Sir John Mandeville popularized it in the fourteenth century, and it has been practiced in our own time by a whole shoal of young writers, plucked from the British public school system and cast upon all the seven seas." R. C. Lewis
+ N Y Times p12 O 28 '51 330w

PIPER, EVELYN, pseud. See Modell, M.

PLAIDY, JEAN, pseud. See Hibbert, E.

PLAYFAIR, GILES. Heart of fame. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 368p $3 Little 51-10462

Character study of a great actor. The novel traces Charles Stranleigh's career from his discovery in Manchester early in life, to his ignominious death some forty years later. The narrator purports to be the London theatrical critic who first discovered Stranleigh.

Booklist 47:347 Je 1 '51

"This is not a deep book, for it breaks through into no new insights, but it is a clever and reasonably penetrating one. As the son of Sir Nigel Playfair and the godson of Mrs. Patrick Campbell, Giles Playfair writes knowledgeably of the theater in which he grew up, though more of trends and atmospherics than of specific personages." Ruth Chapin
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 21 '51 320w

Kirkus 18:736 D 15 '50 230w

"It is a fascinating story of English theatrical life. Recommended for general circulation as well as for collections of stage fiction." George Freedley
+ Library J 76:773 My 1 '51 130w

"Mr. Playfair writes quietly, unemphatically, letting his narrator tell the story of Charley much as one would talk it out to a friend. As the story cumulates, the figure of Charles Stranleigh is built up to an impressive portrait; one is convinced both of his greatness as an actor and his lovableness and shortcomings as a man." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 My 20 '51 460w

"Mr. Playfair's style is easy and matter-of-fact and plainly he is more interested in the psychology operating Charley than in luridly emphasizing his troubled adventures." Lewis Nichols

+ N Y Times p16 Je 24 '51 270w

Reviewed by Don Pitt

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Je 10 '51 120w

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst

Sat R of Lit 34:17 My 26 '51 400w

Reviewed by Marghanita Laski

Spec 187:552 O 26 '51 240w

Wis Lib Bul 47:255 N '51

PLIEVIER, THEODOR. World's last corner; adapted from a translation by Robert Pick. 295p $3 Appleton

51-2262

This novel by the author of Stalingrad (Book Review Digest 1948) combines in adapted form material from two novels which were previously published in German under the titles: Im letzten Winkel der Erde and Haifische (1946). The story concerns the adventures of a German sailor, Wenzel, who jumps ship in a small South American port and there tries to make a living sometimes by honest, sometimes by dishonest methods.

"There's brutality and crudity here; there's no prettying up of the rawness of life along these cruel shores; there's powerful characterization, an authentic feel of the sea and the life, and a story that, unpleasant as it often is, carries the reader along."

Kirkus 19:133 Mr 1 '51 230w

Reviewed by H. L. Roth

Library J 76:704 Ap 15 '51 110w

"The title page says that the book has been 'adapted from a translation,' whatever that means, and the publishers imply that material from two separate novels by Plievier has been translated and woven together. But the weaving is not skilful, and the final product is hardly fair either to Plievier or to his audience, who will recognize in this oddly jumbled but intriguing book another facet of a powerful and mature imaginative talent." Harvey Swados

+ — Nation 172:476 My 19 '51 240w

"I can't help suspecting (though I have not read the two constituent novels in the German original) that the process of abridgment and synthesis of which the present edition must be a product is at least partly responsible for my disappointment. Luckily many flashes of tragicomedy and life-size drama have been preserved. Even as it is, 'The World's Last Corner' draws a perceptive social picture of Latin-American harbor life." Frederic Morton

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ap 15 '51 800w

"Through the murky fog of the translation, the adaptation, the telescoping, like a durable bright point of light Plievier's mature gift is visible. It is a gift of the utmost naturalness and is primarily concerned with the gestures and the acts of living people." Harvey Breit

+ — N Y Times p5 Ap 15 '51 450w

"The reader looking for entertainment will find it an agreeable adventure story about a tough seafaring man. It recalls, much more than Conrad, John Masefield's stories of Sard Harker's adventures when the Wanderer brought him to South American ports." Anthony West

+ New Yorker 27:121 My 12 '51 450w

"'The World's Last Corner' has flesh and flavor. It is a pity that it never gets down to telling a coherent story." J. R. Ullman

Sat R of Lit 34:29 Je 2 '51 750w

Time 57:112 Ap 16 '51 440w

PLUMB, BEATRICE, and others. Wedding anniversary celebrations. 220p $2.75 Denison

793 Entertaining 51-12694

Includes instructions for thirty-five parties to celebrate twenty-four anniversaries. The remainder of the book is composed of miscellaneous bridal customs, toasts, recipes, etc.

Booklist 48:45 O 1 '51

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter

Springf'd Republican p5C S 23 '51 130w

PLUMMER, CATHARINE. Rose on the summit. 244p $3 Putnam

51-5600

The story of four days in the life of Nodie O'Connor, the four days before her graduation from a Boston convent school. During that time Nodie's ambition to become an artist seems in a fair way to come true, for she is granted a scholarship to the Museum.

"While Miss Plummer's first novel is primarily for and about teen-agers, her message is in a way directed to adults. It's a story of youth, and Miss Plummer presents it so well that the book could serve as a key to adult understanding of young people." Betty Swords

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 S 2 '51 180w

"When Mrs. Plummer concentrates on the unique and special atmosphere of a convent school she is in her element, and she is especially felicitous in her portraits of the teaching sisters. But the problems and growing pains of the younger generation demand considerably more skill and insight than she brings and gives to this very slight novel." Lily van Ameringen

+ — N Y Times p14 Ag 20 '51 190w

Reviewed by C. M. Brown

Sat R of Lit 34:53 S 8 '51 100w

Springf'd Republican p7C S 16 '51 120w

POLANYI, MICHAEL. Logic of liberty; reflections and rejoinders. 206p $4 Univ. of Chicago press

323.44 Liberty

"In this series of essays Michael Polanyi clarifies the meaning of liberty with regard to the problems raised by our own turbulent period of history. He answers the questions: What is the meaning of liberty today? How can it be defined in relation to science and to society." (Publisher's note) Index.

"These are lively discussions, and the reader is liable to find that just, perhaps, because he provokes Professor Polanyi also succeeds in stimulating." W. H.

+ — Manchester Guardian p4 My 29 '51 450w

San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 11 '51 470w

Reviewed by Maurice Cranston

Spec 187:219 Ag 17 '51 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p359 Je 8 '51 650w

POLING, PAUL NEWTON, ed. God and the nations. 128p $2; pa $1 Doubleday

341 International relations 50-10410

Five authors consider the responsibility of the church in the atomic age. Contents: The problem of security, by Harry R. Rudin; The United States and the U.S.S.R., by Vera Micheles Dean; National sovereignty and the world community, by Walter W. Van Kirk; World recovery and point four, by James P. Warburg; Nine theses on war and peace, by Pitirim A. Sorokin.

Reviewed by Neil Martin

Christian Science Monitor p6 D 16 '50 300w

Kirkus 18:577 S 15 '50 120w

POLING, P. N.—Continued
"The book is small, urgent, stimulating of thought." E. B.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 14 '51 230w
Springf'd Republican p3D N 19 '50 60w

POLITI, LEO. Little Leo. [28p] col il $2 Scribner
51-12320

A picture story book for ages four to eight. It is based on an incident in the author-artist's own childhood. Little Leo and his family went from their California home to visit Leo's grandparents in Italy. There Leo became the center of attention because he owned an Indian suit. Pictures and text describes what the smart Italian mamas did about it.

Booklist 48:90 N 1 '51
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 11 '51 110w
Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '51

"A beautiful book that is sure to be a favorite." J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews
+ Horn Bk 27:322 S '51 50w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore
Horn Bk 27:400 D '51 50w
Kirkus 19:578 O 1 '51 130w

"Use of foreign words may create a stumbling block for young readers. Outstanding illustrations in full color. Recommended for ages 5-8." Margaret Miller
Library J 76:2010 D 1 '51 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p30 O 7 '51 120w

"The soft colors, lovely double-page pictures of the Italian village, interiors, and the children are things of beauty and joy. The best Politi book yet." Phyllis Fenner
+ N Y Times p40 N 11 '51 130w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead
New Yorker 27:172 D 1 '51 60w

"Children 4 to 8 should be delighted with the excellent color illustrations scattered profusely through the book. They should also be most interested in the first lesson in Italian which is painlessly introduced. This is a superior children's book in every way."
+ San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 11 '51 90w

"The joyous, childlike atmosphere in this picture book should do a great deal to make American and Italian boys and girls feel mutually friendly."
+ Sat R of Lit 34:54 N 10 '51 200w

POLLARD, ERNEST CHARLES, and DAVIDSON, WILLIAM LEE. Applied nuclear physics. 2d ed 352p il $5 Wiley
539.1 Nuclear physics 51-9274

"The first edition of this book, published in 1942 [Book Review Digest 1943] was one of the few pre-World-War-II books to include an account of nuclear fission. Though there are now many others that contain information on this subject, this work is still one of the most readable and useful texts. A good deal of new material has been added in this edition, including discussions of pile theory, nuclear chain reactions, and an extensive table of data on isotopes. It is written on the college level and is intended for students who have studied general physics." N Y New Tech Bks

---

"The college sophomore as well as the plant engineer, will find a careful reading and rereading of the text as rewarding as any two or three point course in the average university. The book prescinds from a consideration of, and a preoccupation with, atomic weapons, and that is as it should be. One of the authors comes from industry, the other from education—each with the mettle that makes for happy alloying."
+ Chem Eng 58:284 F '51 350w

"With the limitations of 'security' and of rapid change clearly in mind, the authors have rendered a real service in producing a work which will be most useful to the increasing host of those engaged in nuclear research or technology, particularly to those newly entering the field." S. C. Lind
+ J Phys & Colloid Chem 55:758 My '51 360w

"The book remains a compact, well-organized introduction that is particularly suitable for college students and other readers who have some knowledge of basic physics and atomic theory." R. R. Hawkins
+ Library J 76:334 F 15 '51 130w
N Y New Tech Bks 36:28 Mr '51

POLLARD, FRANCIS EDWARD, and others. Democracy and the Quaker method. 160p $3 Philosophical lib.
289.6 Friends, Society of. Democracy

"The thesis of this book is that the Quaker technique of executing business has a contribution to make to the democratic process among non-Friends. After presenting some of the problems resulting from attempting to reach decisions by majority rule, and after describing the method of Friends in some detail, the authors document their thesis by a number of cases illustrating the use of the Quaker techniques, both among Friends and non-Friends." Crozer Q

Am Pol Sci R 45:253 Mr '51 20w

"To one nurtured in a sincere, moralistic, but intellectually cautious Quaker community, this book is at once a pleasure, a record of disappointment, and a welcome reopening of an old but neglected problem." A. H. Cope
+ — Ann Am Acad 274:223 Mr '51 430w

"This nugget-like book is a concentrate of three centuries of Quaker experience in cooperative thinking. Its sense will be new to many and its purpose itself lead to endless controversy unless readers understand at the outset that the Quaker way of conducting a business meeting is all of a piece with their religion. . . Only in Appendix III do they seem unwise—in suggesting that Friends' Meetings are a fruitful field for 'psychical researchers and those concerned with the psychology of groups.' Nothing could be more out of place." T. M. Longstreth
+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 D 18 '50 360w

Reviewed by R. L. Coe
Crozer Q 28:174 Ap '51 500w

Reviewed by Walter Watson
Ethics 61:331 Jl '51 550w

POLONSKY, ABRAHAM. World above. 471p $3.50 Little 51-9563

The personal and intellectual growth of a psychiatrist is the subject of this novel. Dr Carl Myers' rise from medical researcher in 1932 to chief doctor of a Veterans' Administration hospital in the present is traced. There is an interlude in Europe, during World war II, when Dr Myers is a medical major and head of a psychiatric institute.

"This novel is written with emotional vigor and keen insight into human character and foibles. At times the interest seems to lag, but in general there are revealed a powerful realism and an honest effort to probe the hidden wounds of a suffering humanity." L. E. Cannon
+ Christian Century 68:561 My 2 '51 430w

"Overlong and only intermittently interesting."
Kirkus 19:11 Ja 1 '51 170w

"The author has handled a complicated and difficult subject well, and his descriptions of the methods of psychosomatic medicine and of scenes in mental institutions are sufficiently restrained to give the necessary local color without overpowering the story as a whole." J. E. Brown
+ Library J 76:407 Mr 1 '51 140w

"This is a huge, restless book attempting to give scope to the spiritual bafflement which has overtaken Western civilization today. Mr. Polonsky has charged—and partially smothered—his second novel with much of the modern mind's burden." Frederic Morton
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Je 3 '51 390w

"A playwright and scenarist, Mr. Polonsky writes well, though his story is often weighted down with Freudian overtones. But no one who has tried to rationalize science, humanity and religion in his own mind will fail to appreciate the sincerity of the author's purpose." F. G. S.
+ N Y Times p20 Ap 22 '51 180w

"'The World Above' is all the more disappointing because it is written with considerable narrative skill. Mr. Polonsky never allows interest in the line of the story to lag for long. It is a pity that he does not explore his subject matter with greater insight." Martin Levin
— + Sat R of Lit 34:41 Ap 28 '51 220w

PONSONBY, DORIS ALMON (MRS JOHN RYBOT). Family of Jaspard. 397p $3 Crowell 51-13095

"Of all the many children of Robert Jaspard, wealthy and powerful merchant of eighteenth-century London, it is Barnabus and Fan who are most apt at arousing his anger, who find it easiest to challenge his authority. For they are the illegitimate children whom he has brought into his house to tame and chasten his wife, Melissa. In their own way, and quite without purpose, they are avenging her, not to mention their own unknown mother. Their mishaps are at the center of this tale. Both Barnabus and Fan break out of the confines of Jaspard's aristocratic London house to adventure in illicit love, intrigue, scandal." Sat R of Lit

---

Kirkus 19:410 Ag 1 '51 230w

"The atmospheric detail is vivid but not overwhelming. Humor of course cannot live long among all the black emotions, and the awful threatened consequences of revolt. Occasionally, however, the author touches up a scene with irony and then we come closer to the Jaspard family than to most fine figures in a historical novel. Generally we enjoy the book as a well-written, splendidly illustrated story of escape." Isabelle Mallet
+ N Y Times p5 N 25 '51 350w

"Miss Ponsonby's novel is a comedy of manners, but it is not an engaging one, nor is it really spirited. The Jaspards seem on the whole a tedious lot, interested exclusively in their various appetites and maintaining no apparent relationship with any of the other realities." N. L. Rothman
Sat R of Lit 34:18 N 24 '51 340w

"A delightful 18th century comedy of manners." J. C. C.
+ Springf'd Republican p28A N 25 '51 180w

POOLE, AUSTIN LANE. From Domesday book to Magna carta. 541p $5 Oxford
942.02 Great Britain—History—Medieval period, 1066-1485 [51-7682]

"The President of St John's concentrates on the twelfth century, and by extending his view to take in the rule of William Rufus at the beginning and of John at the end he sharpens the outlines of the picture—gives to this slice of history the unity of a 'period.' For the reigns of the two autocrats emphasize both what endured and what social and political change occurred in the space of these four generations." Manchester Guardian

---

"Dr Poole performs the task to admiration. He reviews a mass of unwieldy documents, historical treatises, monographs, and articles, to understand which few of us have either the leisure or the technical equipment; and he gives a straightforward and interesting account of it all. Not only this: he writes with the authority of a very learned man who has gone to the original texts and has reflected long on these matters, and he sets down deliberate judgments of his own, which always compel attention." C. R. Cheney
+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 28 '51 600w

"Dr. Poole refers with justice to the intellectual revolution of the twelfth century, but gives little more than a list of writers and works and does not investigate the relations between the growth of knowledge and of power, between the conflicts of ideas and those of interests and personalities. . . Twelfth-century England was more interesting and less repugnant than Dr. Poole's dispassionate pages suggest; but we can be grateful to him for a valuable work of reference, shrewd, compact and without nonsense." J. O. Prestwich
+ — New Statesman & Nation 42:314 S 22 '51 1150w

"Mr. Poole handles his subject with masterly craftsmanship. He has complete control over the available material both original and secondary. As a result he can support his descriptions of complex institutions with pertinent illustrative examples. He has the critical capacity to know what is important, to make effective generalizations, and to pronounce acceptable judgments on controversial points, and he has no hesitation about expressing his own views however unconventional they may be. Moreover, he writes with verve and humor." Sidney Painter
+ Sat R of Lit 34:34 O 13 '51 750w

"The merits of this volume cannot in fact be better appreciated than by a perusal of its final chapter. Those who hold views different from Mr. Poole's on what should constitute general history, and how it should be written, are bound, with whatever reluctance, to have reserves in acclaiming his book as a whole. They will therefore be the more anxious to voice their respect for the labour, for the learning, and above all for the scholarly integrity, that have contributed to its compilation."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p525 Ag 24 '51 3600w

POOLE, KENYON EDWARDS, ed. Fiscal policies and the American economy. 468p $6.35; to schools $4.75 Prentice-Hall
336.73 Finance—U.S. 51-9449

"A symposium by authorities exploring the ramifications of federal fiscal policy from different points of view. By thus correcting general theory in the light of the impact of real world forces the editor hopes that a more realistic synthesis may be approached. Thus he provides some analysis of the historical background, while further chapters discuss monetary aspects, employment and the price level, debt management, government expenditures, financial institutions, repercussions on business, distribution of income and public welfare, international aspects. References at ends of chapters." Library J

"This volume, which analyzes the theoretical, monetary, and institutional aspects of fiscal policy in a series of nine essays, each written for it by a different contributor, is a useful addition to the extensive literature in this field. Although the technical competence displayed in the essays is high, the book contains only one new contribution, the chapter on the redistribution of income through the fiscal system. Its main value lies in its examination of fiscal instruments in relation to the institutional framework of the American economy, a direction of emphasis which some readers may regard as constituting an additional contribution." C. A. Hall
+ Am Econ R 41:979 D '51 2150w

"The authors are particularly well qualified to discuss their several topics, and their symposium should be quite helpful to those interested in this field." R. G. Blakey
+ Ann Am Acad 275:193 My '51 650w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 76:870 My 15 '51 140w

POPE, ALAN. Aerodynamics of supersonic flight; an introduction. 184p il $4 Pitman

629.1323 Aerodynamics, Supersonic 51-325

"A brief survey of current theory and experimental methods. According to the author it is designed for use in one-semester college courses offered to students who wish to test their own interest in supersonic aerodynamics and thus determine whether to pursue the subject further. Previous college courses in calculus and elementary dynamics are assumed." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 76:710 Ap 15 '51 60w

"The author's style is clear; the book is well organized and very generously illustrated."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 36:18 Mr '51

POPKIN, MRS ZELDA (FEINBERG). Quiet street. 382p $3.50 Lippincott

51-3210

A story of Jerusalem in 1947 and 1948, and especially the story of Boston-bred Edith Hirsch who sees her daughter Dinah become a fighter in the cause of the free state of Israel.

Booklist 47:286; 329 Ap 15 '51; My 15 '51

Kirkus 19:138 Mr 1 '51 170w

"Her effort is earnest but the fictionized parts of her story detract from the drama of its historical portions, and the history, stark and tragic, minimizes the climaxes she has devised for her character." Thomas Sugrue
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ag 26 '51 320w

"While the book has flavor and warmth, it rarely allows the characters to be flesh and blood. Indeed, much of this novel seems a journalistic account of events—the bombings of the Palestine Post and Ben Yehuda Street, the blowing up of the medical convoy that stunned the civilized world—rather than a study of human emotions in times of crisis. There is a shapelessness to the whole book." Gertrude Samuels
+ — N Y Times p18 My 20 '51 550w

New Yorker 27:136 My 19 '51 60w

"Mrs. Popkin rarely engages in editorializing, but she writes with a great amount of sympathy and affection for the people of Israel. This warm, human account of the struggles and sacrifices involved in the building of a new democracy is well worth reading not only for its dramatic narrative but for its vivid documentary picture." I. B.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 15 '51 220w

"The over-all impression of 'Quiet Street' is pleasant. Mrs. Popkin displays few of the qualities of the gifted novelist, but she writes from knowledge and with warmth, love, and compassion." Charles Angoff
+ Sat R of Lit 34:17 Jl 7 '51 450w

POPPER, KARL RAIMUND. Open society and its enemies. rev ed 732p $7.50 Princeton univ. press

301 Philosophy. Social sciences 50-58301

"Popper's book has gone through three printings in England, and changed minds at Oxford, where it was the subject of a special seminar. . . Popper describes his book as a 'kind of critical introduction to the philosophy of society and politics,' but it is also, either as a whole or in part, a survey of Greek philosophy and modern philosophy since Kant, an essay in the logic of investigation, a treatise on the art of government, an inquiry into the aims of the social sciences, a history of the rise and fall of Athens, a formal philosophical critique of idealism, an analysis of the ideology of fascism and of its pervasive success, a study of the meaning of Marx, and a defense, and in many ways model, of clarity, scientific method, and democratic procedure." Nation

---

"Popper has made an impressive contribution to scholarship in bringing into the open, with ample documentation, the assumptions and weaknesses of these philosophical systems. He has undermined their elegant pretensions, and a careful reader can gain much from Popper's labors. . . Second, Popper has marred his exposition by repeated failure systematically to develop the argument. I found myself constantly distracted by his practice of interrupting the main analysis to make lengthy explorations of side issues. . . Third, the argument would have been immeasurably strengthened if Popper had found occasion to develop explicitly the hostile consequences of Marxism to open societies. . . Fourth, Popper's conception of intelligent action within the open society is not too clear." G. H. Hildebrand
+ — Am Econ R 41:212 Mr '51 3200w

Am Pol Sci R 45:286 Mr '51

Reviewed by H. M. Lynd
Am Soc R 16:268 Ap '51 600w

"This first American edition in one volume of a work first published in England in two volumes some five years ago, constitutes a revision or, perhaps better, a correction, of the latter. To confine the revision to minor matters was sound judgment on the part of the author; while in the present case at least, by reason of convenience and availability, I feel that this new edition of a work of major significance is fully justified." T. I. Cook
+ Ann Am Acad 274:253 Mr '51 800w

"Analyzing the various 19th- and 20th-century movements, beginning with the teachings of Hegel and Marx, at a period when faith in the influence of Christianity in Europe was waning, Mr. Popper draws a clear picture of Hegel's dominating influence on the Prussian state, as well as a just portrayal of the processes of Marx's reasoning and character. If we regard his work, as he desires, as an inducement to seek the right path away from overstressed collectivism, we shall find the pages full of useful information." Leila Flower
+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Ja 29 '51 230w

"Probably the most stimulating, original, and genuinely important book to appear in many years. . . No thinking person would be doing himself a service by neglecting Popper's book." Joseph Kraft
+ Nation 172:159 F 17 '51 1900w

"It is not often that a book so truculent in tone manages despite its length to be both suggestive and interesting. . . That the author has failed to correct the excessive voluntarism of his position in this American edition of his work, which had a resounding success abroad, is puzzling. . . Despite these strictures, and many more that could be made if space permitted, Mr. Popper has written an uncommonly stimulating book. It is crotchety and wayward but contains many insights in social philosophy, which testify to a humane spirit and a keen, if impatient, intelligence." Sidney Hook
+ — N Y Times p6 Jl 22 '51 950w

School & Society 72:366 D 2 '50 30w

"Combining the clarity of thought of the trained scientist with lucidity of presentation, Mr. Popper has written an unusually thoughtful and provocative book." Hans Kohn
Yale R n s 40:570 spring '51 1050w

POPULAR MECHANICS MAGAZINE, CHICAGO. How to grow the best lawn and garden in your neighborhood; a complete guide to gardening and landscaping; ed. by Edward L. Throm and Betty Kanameishi. 176p il $2.50 Pop. mechanics

635.9 Gardening. Lawns. Landscape gardening Agr51-515

Brief guide to home landscaping, with instructions for lawn maintenance; planting of trees, shrubs, and flowers: how to grow vegetables; making lawn and garden furniture, etc. Index.

Booklist 47:306 My 1 '51

Reviewed by William Yates
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 6 '51 70w

POPULAR MECHANICS MAGAZINE, CHICAGO. How to paint with brush and spray; ed. by Sam Brown. 160p $2.50 Pop. mechanics

698.1 Painting, Industrial 51-11120

Practical information on problems of home painting and staining, inside the house and out. Includes preparation of the wood for painting. Index.

Booklist 47:377 Jl 1 '51

"Whether you want to paint a figurine or house, you'll find complete details here, profusely illustrated. This is a complete guide to painting." William Yates
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Jl 8 '51 40w

"Undoubtedly some readers will need a fuller discussion of some points than is provided. However, illustrations have been used lavishly and some points that are rather briefly treated in the text are illustrated clearly." R. R. Hawkins
Library J 76:1132 Jl '51 80w

POPULAR MECHANICS MAGAZINE, CHICAGO. 100 beautiful pieces of furniture you can build; prepared by the Craftsman editors; with a complete index. 160p il $3; pa 75c Pop. mechanics

684 Furniture 50-11802

"Here is a practical book for the home cabinet maker. Details are given for more than a hundred fine looking pieces of furniture you can build, including tables, desks, lamps, cabinets, record stands, dressers, chests of drawers, and complete suites for living, dining and bedroom. Several of the designs are exclusives of John Bergen, furniture designer." (Chicago Sunday Tribune) Index.

Booklist 47:184 Ja 15 '51

Reviewed by William Yates
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 F 25 '51 50w

"It is intended for the home craftsman, and undoubtedly it will be both popular and useful." R. R. Hawkins
+ Library J 76:334 F 15 '51 60w

PORTER, EVELYN ELLEN KATE. Story of music. 292p $3 Philosophical lib.

780.9 Music—History and criticism 51-11442

A history of music from earliest times to the present, written by an English author for young readers.

"At many points sketchy in the extreme." C. K. Miller
Library J 76:1426 S 15 '51 50w

"So we have another 'Story of Music'—that is, a history of music in disguise for those who do not like the real article. It is like most others of its kind: uninformed, juvenile, unoriginal, and uncritical." P. H. Lang
— Music Lib Assn Notes 8:715 S '51 90w

"For a first book about music we recommend it highly." Victor Prahl
+ Springf'd Republican p22A S 9 '51 150w

POSSELT, ERIC, ed. World's greatest Christmas stories; il. by Fritz Kredel. 426p $5 Prentice-Hall

Christmas stories 50-10810

This new edition of a book published two years ago (Book Review Digest 1949) contains stories and songs about Christmas from 23 countries. Each division is introduced by a typical Christmas carol of that country.

Booklist 47:158 D 15 '50

"We wonder why Ireland is represented only by Lynn Doyle's 'Turkey and Ham,' and Portugal merely by a story faintly related to Christmas, and Latin America not at all. In the United States the editor names no writer but Heywood Broun, Bret Harte, Damon Runyon, Christopher Morley, O. Henry. The book then is far from being what its ambitious title would lead one to expect."
Cath World 172:320 Ja '51 100w

"Here is a book that is really a pleasure—something you can give to almost anyone whom you may have overlooked in the mad rush of Christmas shopping. And it would make a fine present to yourself. Festive, plump, but not clumsy, it comes nicely to the hand." J. F. Nims
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 D 24 '50 400w

"The strange juxtapositions which inevitably arise are all pleasantly fused by the introduction of each new country with the words—and music—of a traditional native Christmas song. This felicitous touch, together with excellence of typography and format, considerably enhances the value of the book. The prose content, although less consistent in quality, is still appropriate." M. W. Stoer
+ — Christian Science Monitor p7 D 2 '50 900w

"A charming book, both in format and in contents. . . Recommended for young people and for the older boys' and girls' sections of all children's rooms." M. D. Read
+ Library J 76:188 F 1 '51 80w

"There is only one supreme Christmas story. It is not in this book. But its echoes have reverberated through every nation of Christendom. They still reverberate regardless of Iron Curtains. It is these echoes, from many diverse lands and a wide variety of authors, which Mr. Posselt has judiciously recorded to make this collection. It should be said at once that he has produced the finest of all anthologies of Christmas fiction." G. P. Whicher
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 D 3 '50 1250w

San Francisco Chronicle p26 D 3 '50 130w

POST, MRS EMILY (PRICE). Cookbook; Edwin M. Post, jr, ed-in-chief. 384p il $5 Funk

641.5 Cookery 51-11221

This book contains recipes for dishes chosen by Mrs Post and her son, tested in the Emily Post Institute kitchen, and tried out by a novice. Recipes are arranged in usual cookbook order, are clearly printed, usually one to a page. There are suggestions for menus and a full index.

Bookmark 10:230 Jl '51 20w

"Worth looking into." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 76:966 Je 1 '51 50w

Reviewed by E. L. Tinker
N Y Times p13 Ag 26 '51 170w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 23 '51 200w

POTEAT, EDWIN MCNEILL. God makes the difference; studies in the faith of nature and the nature of faith. 242p $3 Harper

201 Religion—Philosophy. God 51-10343

In this treatise the minister of Pullen Memorial baptist church, Raleigh, North Carolina, shows how God makes the difference in every aspect of life: in the family, society, economics, love, redemption, death, and immortality. Index.

"Dr. Poteat writes with verve and power, and he exhibits almost encyclopedic information about the various elements of living from both the secular and Christian points of view. He handles the naturalistic and scientific approaches with sympathy and accuracy, and is willing to treat the idea of God as an 'invention' (as he interprets the word) while the 'fact' of God is an experience."
+ Churchman 165:16 Jl '51 120w

"Dr. Poteat has a very active mind. He has read widely. He has thought with a certain virile energy. And he writes with a quality of rugged vitality. . . His style at its best has a fine mastery. But there are too many crass words and too many phrases which lack in urbanity. And there are pages of tense eager writing which are likely to leave the reader cold. . . The friendly reader will close the book wishing that more men used as much energy as Dr. Poteat in getting away from the conventional to what they believe to be real. Like all books which in the best sense are provocative, this one makes it inevitable that the man who peruses its pages shall think as well as read." L. H. Hough

POTEAT, E. M.—Continued
+ — Crozer Q 28:282 Jl '51 420w

"Poteat is very well read. His quotations and citations are chosen from a wide range of modern and ancient literature. He also has a natural facility at epigrammatic writing. There are a few places, however, where the reader might feel that some of this knowledge is secondhand, and other places where the author's desire to adorn his paragraphs makes his thinking seem unreal." C. D. Kean
+ — J Religion 31:293 O '51 900w

"This is not an easy book to read. Not only does it require sound thinking, but its style is discursive. Dr. Poteat is more arresting as a preacher than as a writer."
Kirkus 19:271 Je 1 '51 120w

POTTER, CHARLES FRANCIS. Preacher and I; an autobiography. 429p $4 Crown
B or 92 Clergy—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 51-12006

Autobiography of a Unitarian minister who later became the leader of the First Humanist society of New York. Index.

"The author's comments on the passing religious scene are interesting, although for the most part he proceeds on the assumption that everything that happened to him will be of interest to everyone else."
Kirkus 19:607 O 1 '51 180w

"Recommended only for the large public library with a public interested in theology, and for theological seminary libraries." E. H. Weeks
Library J 76:1806 N 1 '51 210w

"Mr. Potter writes concisely, with an eye for anecdote and humor, and he takes care as he goes along to sum up for the uninitiated the implications of his theological wars and to explain the metaphysical notions involved in his more momentous battles. It makes stimulating and nostalgic reading for anyone even remotely interested in religion. . . All of this is lively reading, and even theology seems bright in Mr. Potter's hands." Thomas Sugrue
+ N Y Times p6 D 23 '51 450w
Time 58:77 D 3 '51 800w

POTTER, MRS MIRIAM S. (CLARK). The Littlebits; il. by Miriam and Zenas Potter. 129p $1.75 Lippincott
51-11176

The Littlebits were a happy family of very tiny people who lived in a little house in the woods, kept a pair of mice for horses, and were friends of the smaller birds and insects. For ages 5 to 8.

"For the beginner reader." Polly Goodwin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 11 '51 110w
Kirkus 19:577 O 1 '51 90w

"Sheer fantasy in very old-fashioned style. Some children between five and seven may enjoy having it read to them." E. T. Dobbins
Library J 76:2010 D 1 '51 70w

"The book is a nice size to the hand; its vaguely old-fashioned flavor will lure many grandmothers to read it aloud to small children." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 N 11 '51 110w

"The family of Littlebits live in a tiny house in The Magic Meadow. They are so small they ride mice for horses and dine off a single strawberry. Their life is one of danger, excitement and neighborly kindness, and Mrs. Potter's telling offers many opportunities for bright and merry laughter."
+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 11 '51 120w

POTTER, ROBERT DUCHARME. Arthritis; what you can do about it. 239p $2.75 Dodd 616.72 Arthritis 51-13044

"Robert D. Potter, who is executive director of the recent International Congress on Rheumatic Diseases, is not a doctor. He is past president, however, of the National Association of Science writers [etc]. Mr. Potter's book is chiefly a clear, exact description of what arthritis is in its various forms, an outline of what medical science has learned about arthritis so far, some suggestions of how the sufferer may make the best of his condition, and a discussion of the various treatments developed, including what is so far known about ACTH and cortisone." San Francisco Chronicle

Booklist 48:80 N 1 '51

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p10 S 29 '51 250w

POTTER, STEPHEN. Some notes on lifemanship; with a summary of recent researches in gamesmanship; reprinted from The lifemanship papers; il. by Frank Wilson. 120p maps $2.50 Holt
827 51-10304

"Rules for polite gouging of competitors in all forms of social contact—conversation, weekending, writing, wooing." Booklist

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic 187:78 My '51 350w
Booklist 47:399 Jl 15 '51

Reviewed by Milton Crane
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 My 6 '51 370w
+ Kirkus 19:146 Mr 1 '51 200w

Reviewed by Naomi Lewis
New Statesman & Nation 40:658 D 23 '50 850w
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Ag 19 '51 70w

"It is a caustically and constantly funny book, not so speciously blimpish as it looks at first glance, consistently understated, a mine of practical strategy, a highly mannered exercise in the study of manners, and a ringing, true-blue British refutation of all that Dale Carnegie managed to wad into that egregious handbook for self-betterment, 'How to Win Friends, etc.' " B. V. Winebaum
+ N Y Times p12 Ap 29 '51 320w

" 'Lifemanship' is not quite so tidy a book as 'Gamesmanship,' and it doesn't hang together as well (it is a collection of pieces that appeared in British magazines), but it has more variety, and, except for a few fumbles and an occasional dull stretch . . . it manages to be funnier." Edith Oliver
+ New Yorker 27:76 Je 30 '51 800w

"Mr. Potter covers a lot of ground. . . He has a section on 'Woomanship,' in which his counsel on how to approach and impress young women might alone be worth the price of the book to many a reader if just for its warning against overdoing the play so many men seem to overdo—being 'just boyish.' " J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ap 13 '51 900w

Reviewed by John Lardner
Sat R of Lit 34:38 Ap 14 '51 600w

"The fun of Mr. Potter has the extraordinary merits of being subtle yet hilarious, concealed and open, allusive and self-evident; and how delightful it is to find a wit that is neither sick nor soured in this burdened and anxious age!" C. E. Vulliamy
+ Spec 184:628 D 1 '50 450w
Time 57:110 Je 4 '51 900w

"Mr. Stephen Potter has indeed achieved a singular triumph; not the triumph of evolving a new method of getting on—he is, in effect, doing for his generation what Samuel Smiles did for his—but of collecting and organizing and putting into a practical, workmanlike shape all that before was vague and haphazard. What is more, he has formed a style of writing that matches his material admirably."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p731 N 17 '50 600w

POUGH, RICHARD HOOPER. Audubon water bird guide; color il. by Don Eckelberry; line drawings by Earl L. Poole. 352p $3.50 Doubleday

598.2 Birds—North America. Water birds 51-10952

A field guide to the water, game and large land birds of eastern and central North America from southern Texas to central Greenland. Book is sponsored by the National Audubon society.

Booklist 47:358 Je 15 '51

"Excellent book."
+ Bookmark 10:230 Jl '51 40w
Cleveland Open Shelf p26 N '51
Kirkus 19:222 Ap 15 '51 120w

"Recommended for the reference shelf." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 76:1128 Jl '51 40w
+ New Yorker 27:67 Jl 7 '51 30w
Springf'd Republican p5D Je 3 '51 80w

POUND, EZRA LOOMIS. A B C of reading. (New classics ser) 206p $1.50 New directions

028 Books and reading. Literature—History and criticism. Poetics A51-7954

"This volume, first published in 1934 [Book Review Digest 1934] was designed by Pound as a textbook on verse." (New Yorker) "In the first of two long sections Pound explains what he understands to be the meaning and purpose of literature. . . The second section of his book is an anthology of poetic exhibits which illustrate his theories; these selections, as one might expect, are off the track of most anthologies." (Sat R of Lit)

"It is full of original and suggestive ideas on the meaning and operation of the poetic art. A series of 'exhibits'—poems ranging from Chaucer and Gavin Douglas to Pope, Crabbe, Browning, Landor, and Whitman—brighten the text, and the comments ring with Pound's early wit and vigor."
+ New Yorker 27:171 N 24 '51 90w

"This is a lively, entertaining, and sometimes instructive excursion into literary criticism." Robert Halsband
+ Sat R of Lit 34:48 Jl 14 '51 230w

POUND, ROSCOE. Justice according to law. 98p $2.50 Yale univ. press

340.04 Law—Philosophy. Justice 51-14186

"Made up of three lectures recently delivered at Westminster College. They illustrate the reasons why Pound's influence, particularly during the Nineteen Twenties when he was dean of the Harvard Law School, became one of the greatest in the legal profession of any country. . . The first lecture is titled 'What Is Justice?' and certainly any one reading it will learn a great deal about the answers put forward by various thinkers in the remote and fairly recent past. . . The second lecture, entitled 'What Is Law?' is as we might expect the best of the three. . . When the subject changes to 'Judicial Justice,' as it does in the final chapter, the tone becomes carping." N Y Times

"We bow again to [Pound's] power of analysis, his skill at classification, and his overwhelming erudition. If querulousness with certain modern developments keeps breaking in, it cannot obscure his encyclopedic command of his subject. On these scores he is not to be surpassed." E. N. Cahn
+ N Y Times p55 N 25 '51 750w
Time 58:66 N 26 '51 850w

POWDERMAKER, HORTENSE. Hollywood, the dream factory; an anthropologist looks at the movie-makers. 342p $3.50 Little 791.4 Hollywood, California. Moving picture industry 50-10280

For descriptive note see Annual for 1950.

"The picture of Hollywood which emerges from this book is a far from pretty one but certainly worth having. It is internally consistent, and the vigorous protests which have followed its publication have often naively confirmed its author's observations." Ralph Linton
+ Am Anthropol 53:269 Ap '51 800w

Reviewed by David Riesman
Am J Soc 56:589 My '51 1650w

"Whatever may be the merits of this book as journalism or as criticism, its publication is a disservice to American social science, and especially to anthropology. It will increase the suspicion of those who view anthropology as more of a cult than a science. And it will strengthen the scepticism of those who view anthropologists themselves as people who use more magic than do the primitives they purport to study." Robert Bierstedt
— Am Soc R 16:124 F '51 1150w

Reviewed by Terry Ramsaye
Ann Am Acad 273:255 Ja '51 500w

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 186:92 D '50 450w
Bookmark 10:86 Ja '51
Cleveland Open Shelf p3 Ja '51
Manchester Guardian p4 S 25 '51 450w

"'Hollywood the Dream Factory' is not entirely worthless. It contains some intelligent descriptions of Hollywood types and some interesting chitchat about Hollywood problems. But its besetting sin is to substitute metaphor and vocabulary for analysis; and it exhibits practically no acquaintance with such concrete factors as the history of American mass entertainment or popular taste." Arthur Schlesinger, Jr.
— + Nation 171:705 D 30 '50 1400w

"Hollywood, for good or ill, is now part of the world's heritage, and it is important that we understand how it operates. This book may well help people to grasp a part of the problem, but it is by no means the full-scale analysis for which we are waiting." Frank Hauser
New Statesman & Nation 42:508 N 3 '51 600w

Reviewed by Virginia Graham
Spec 187:402 S 28 '51 500w

Reviewed by Hillier Krieghbaum
Survey 87:183 Ap '51 230w

"'Hollywood, The Dream Factory' is a useful, constructive book, a book concerned not only with the production of films in Hollywood, but also with the impact of those films on our society. It is often a fascinating book, the case histories of actors and actresses, producers, directors and writers (all concealed under such names as Mr. Kowtow or Miss Manifest Destiny) giving the effect of a roman a clef. 'The Dream Factory' would even be a valuable book for Hollywood itself if the people out there could only read it with the same objectivity with which Dr. Powdermaker wrote it." Arthur Knight
+ Theatre Arts 35:6 Ja '51 1300w
Times [London] Lit Sup p690 N 2 '51 500w
U S Quarterly Bk R 7:81 Mr '51 350w

POWELL, ANTHONY. Question of upbringing. 230p $2.75 Scribner

51-3026

"The novel takes place in the early twenties; it tells of the emergence from adolescence of three boys from upper middle-class English families. The story begins at Eton, where the three, Stringham, Templer and Jenkins, first meet. After a brief interlude in Paris, the scene shifts to Oxford and to the great world of London." Publisher's note

POWELL, ANTHONY—Continued

"A subtle, but still sharpened reflection of scenes and characters which demonstrates a skilled observation and a polished prose."
+ Kirkus 19:195 Ap 1 '51 170w

"The peculiarities of Mme Leroy's house in Touraine prove rather tedious, and Professor Sillery, though true to a certain academic type, is overdrawn. But the housemaster, Le Bas, Uncle Giles, and the insufferably dull and dogged Widmerpool are droll creations from life, in spite of the touch of caricature. Mr. Powell's style, if sometimes too elaborately detailed, is civilised and accomplished, and he blends happily the immediate and the retrospective." H. I'A. Fausset
+ — Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 26 '51 120w

Reviewed by Harvey Swados
New Repub 125:21 Ag 20 '51 200w

"After eleven years Mr. Powell has written a new novel. Though admirers will detect in it certain modifications of style—for example, an occasional preference for the unduly telegraphic sentence—the general method and presentation are the same as in the author's prewar novels. Since the book's inspiration appears to be partly autobiographical, an excursion into time past, we could not wish for anything better. Just as Spenser is popularly reckoned the poet's poet, so Mr. Powell is the novelist's novelist." John Raymond
+ New Statesman & Nation 41:104 Ja 27 '51 800w

Reviewed by Sylvia Stallings
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Ap 22 '51 500w

Reviewed by Roger Pippett
N Y Times p11 Jl 8 '51 320w

New Yorker 27:117 Ap 28 '51 70w

Reviewed by Lewis Vogler
San Francisco Chronicle p22 My 6 '51 800w

"If the thing is to be done at all it must be done coolly, delicately, with the lightest of light touches, and all this Mr. Anthony Powell manages with apparent lack of effort. His schoolboys of the nineteen-twenties are, on the whole, entertaining creatures, and their approach to realities, cautious in some cases and headlong in others, is shrewdly observed. But I cannot help thinking that by this time they have become a collection of perfectly detestable middle-aged men." Barbara Worsley-Gough
+ Spec 185:190 F 9 '51 110w

"Mr. Powell is, mercifully, a writer without a 'message,' either philosophical, religious, or political; he is content to examine without comment, and to illustrate through character in action, the changes in human nature brought about by the changing face of the social order in which we live: in other words, he is attempting to fulfil the novelist's only true function."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p100 F 16 '51 2450w

POWERS, ALFRED. Long way to Frisco; a folk adventure novel of California and Oregon in 1852; drawings by James Daugherty. 186p $2.50 Little 51-4263

Tall tale of the gold rush days in which a young miner who had gone broke contracted to deliver 1400 hogs to San Francisco.

Booklist 48:147 D 15 '51

"The story is told with gusto and humor." W. H.
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 N 11 '51 130w

Kirkus 19:298 Je 15 '51 170w

"An unusual story of frontier life told with wry humor and good characterization." R. W. De Angelo
+ Library J 76:1649 O 15 '51 110w

"It is a 'two-fisted' tale indeed. Mr. Daugherty's chapter headings are excellent." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 S 23 '51 90w

"Based on a forgotten incident, this 'folk adventure novel' as the author calls it, is a refreshing change from the average Western yarn. Its vigor and its humor are reflected in Mr. Daugherty's illustrations." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p14 Ag 5 '51 180w

San Francisco Chronicle p7 N 11 '51 600w

"This is an unusual story both in theme and treatment. Its classification as a junior book is questionable inasmuch as anyone who likes a tall tale of American pioneer days will not be disappointed in it. . . Mr. Powers has done a nice job, not only in telling a highly interesting yarn but in creating the atmosphere in which it lives. The characterization is excellent." M. P. Allen
Sat R of Lit 34:37 Ag 18 '51 190w

POWERS, ANNE. Ironmaster. 429p $3.50 Bobbs
51-9841

Historical novel of the years following the ratification of the United States Constitution. The chief character is the industrialist, Martin Rafferty, veteran of the Revolution and friend and disciple of Hamilton. The story deals with Martin's political and economic ups and downs and with his relations with two women, Barbara Tappan, daughter of wealth and position, and Jill Lansing, a newspaper woman.

"Miss Powers, who writes with smooth vigor, occasionally dips into the sordid and again the ridiculous, both excrescences on an otherwise competent yarn." Riley Hughes
+ — Cath World 173:313 Jl '51 200w

Reviewed by Henry Cavendish
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 11 '51 440w

"Miss Powers gives a lively picture of infant industry and ideology in a young nation. Martin, as a character, is an interesting sketch not quite filled in, as is Jill. Barbara, Martin's first love could have been made a fascinating psychological study if Miss Powers had drawn her more carefully. The background, however, is excellently done and the story is always interesting." E. L. Acken
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Mr 18 '51 230w

Reviewed by J. M. Grant
— Sat R of Lit 34:30 Jl 21 '51 250w

POWERS, EDWIN, and WITMER, HELEN LELAND. Experiment in the prevention of delinquency; the Cambridge-Somerville youth study; with a foreword by Gordon W. Allport. 649p il maps $6 Columbia univ. press

364.36 Cambridge-Somerville youth study. Juvenile delinquency 51-11502

"A substantial volume of some 700 pages, it consists of three parts: the report of findings proper, with its appropriate generalizations, written by Edwin Powers, director of the study; an evaluation of the significance of the findings by Helen Witmer; and an over-all evaluation of the contribution of both to social science and social work, by Gordon W. Allport." Survey

"Highly recommended for all sociology reference shelves." J. M. Scherr
+ Library J 76:777 My 1 '51 120w

School & Society 74:320 N 17 '51 40w

"In spite of the over-all negative conclusions this work is a model of honesty in research at one of the nebulous frontiers of social science. Every worker responsible for the guidance and development of children should read this book not once, but again and again." W. B. Sanders
— + Social Forces 30:236 D '51 850w

"This study is a noteworthy event in social work research. . . [It] represents a level of objectivity and scientific self-disicipline that is rare in itself and rarer still in the practice of social work, where empirical imitation, unverified hypothesis, and institutional special pleading are but too frequent." Philip Klein

+ Survey 87:498 N '51 1000w

POWYS, JOHN COWPER. Rabelais; his life, the story told by him, selections therefrom here newly translated; and an interpretation of his genius and his religion. 424p $3.75 Philosophical lib.
B or 92 Rabelais, François 51-3374

"An attempt to present to the modern world the great satirist, humorist, and humanist—a man who was a standard-bearer of common sense in a murky age. . . The author has made fine new translations of many passages from Rabelais's works, selecting those he thinks best exemplify the man's genius and best expound his witty and irreverent views on such follies as pedantry and religious intolerance." New Yorker

"John Cowper Powys' 'Rabelais' is an altogether Rabelaisian farrago that would probably have pleased its subject very well." Milton Crane
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Jl 15 '51 170w

Christian Century 68:990 Ag 29 '51 220w

"In Mr. Powys' enthusiasm, his unabashed and bounding erudition, and in a certain ingenuous quality of joy inherent in his writing, there seems almost an organic relation to the Rabelaisian thirst. Powys has made fine, quite literal, translations of a number of well-chosen selections from his author, coming as close as possible, I suppose, to capturing the 'airy, light, French character' which he wishes to release from Urquehart's grandiloquent perversions." J. L. Lewis
Ethics 62:76 O '51 250w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 O 14 '51 30w

"An exciting and perceptive biography that is the best thing of its kind in English."
+ New Yorker 27:117 Je 9 '51 120w

School & Society 73:270 Ap 28 '51 20w

Time 58:90 Jl 23 '51 400w

PRAT, FERDINAND. Jesus Christ; his life, his teaching, and his work; tr. by John J. Heenan. (Science and culture ser) 2v $12 Bruce pub.
232.9 Jesus Christ—Biography 50-58219

"This 'Life' of Christ [is] by Ferdinand Prat, a French Jesuit scholar who died in 1938. . . The fact that the translation by Father Heenan of Georgetown University is of the sixteenth French edition (since the first, in 1937) indicates the wide acceptance of the book, among readers of all faiths. . . Father Prat's accomplishment is a complex one. He develops and immerses the reader in two worlds. One is the historical world in Palestine at the time of Christ. . . The other is the contemporary world of historians of Christianity and scholars of the Bible." N Y Times

"Père Lagrange has already conferred on this work the supreme tribute: 'the best Life of Christ in existence.' So be it! . . Father Heenan's translation is excellent, conveying the full meaning of the original in the smooth rhythms of a bright English style." J. B. Sheerin
+ Cath World 173:77 Ap '51 190w

"Prat has succeeded in combining erudite scholarship with deep devotion. Footnotes and supplementary notes are academic in the best sense of the word; but the text is for hoi polloi. Certain passages even retain some of the beauty and poetic accent of the original." J. H. Cobb
+ J Religion 31:301 O '51 410w

"This is at once a monumental work of scholarship and a beautifully written, reverential appraisal of our Lord. Father Prat has adhered closely to the scriptural record and has refused to be diverted from the path of scholarly accuracy by the legends and apocryphal stories which have been built up about the life of Christ. At the same time, understandably and inevitably, the life and work of Jesus are interpreted from the point of view of Catholic dogma."
+ Kirkus 19:51 F 1 '51 180w

"The unity and accomplishment of the work are the breadth and depth it can add to almost any reader's understanding and realization of the New Testament—those readers first, perhaps, with a tendency toward 'Gallic reasonableness' and its accompanying intellectual curiosity." Philip Burnham
+ N Y Times p4 F 4 '51 490w

"Superb is not too strong a word with which to hail this scholarly reconstruction of the life of Christ, now available in English after having gone through sixteen French editions. . . Father Prat's work would certainly deserve prime consideration if a 'best' life of Christ were to be chosen." H. C. Gardiner
+ Sat R of Lit 34:38 F 10 '51 650w

PRATOLINI, VASCO. Hero of our times; tr. from the Italian by Eric Mosbacher [Eng title: Hero of today]. 211p $3 Prentice-Hall
51-6316

"The tragic story of Virginia whose executed husband had been a Fascist. After the liberation, fearful of reprisals she leads a life of seclusion caught up in the turmoil and suspicion of postwar Italy until she falls in love with Sandrino, a 16-year-old Neo-Fascist who blackmails her, exploits her love, and absconds with her savings in order to equip a Fascist brigade. Her continuing love for Sandrino leads to the final tragedy." Library J

Reviewed by Edmund Fuller
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 21 '51 350w

"Even the most level-headed reader will become exasperated reading this jumbled piece of nonsense. What need was there of translating it at all? Was it the prestige of Pratolini's very competent first novel, A Tale of Poor Lovers? Is the work supposed to have any actual value? If in the future Italian works are of this level, it would be best to spend one's hours with a good translation of Pinocchio." Serge Hughes
— Commonweal 55:158 N 16 '51 300w

— Kirkus 19:403 Ag 1 '51 150w

"Recommended." W. K. Harrison
+ Library J 76:1334 S 1 '51 80w

"It strikes me as an over-written book; not indeed either stupid or vulgar; arresting, like a nightmare, but also confused, like a nightmare." Paul Bloomfield
Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 2 '51 140w

Reviewed by Frances Keene
Nation 173:527 D 15 '51 850w

Reviewed by H. C. Webster
New Repub 125:26 D 10 '51 110w

"An ugly little tale which would have been better left undecorated. But Signor Pratolini has embellished it with naive digressions along party lines, put into the mouths of a pair of party dummies. A tract for the times? No, at least surely not as the author intended. The political padding merely cushions the impact, and the only message that gets through obliquely glorifies a very different party. Apart from this and apart from the oppressively sexual atmosphere, the sentiment and the sensationalism, which can only be described as childish, A Hero of To-day is a vivid account of a contemporary melodrama."
— New Statesman & Nation 41:351 Mr 24 '51 450w

"Readers of 'A Tale of Poor Lovers' will not need to be told of Pratolini's gifts as a narrator nor of the sympathetic and humane spirit that informs his work. They will find the same virtues, I think, in 'A Hero of Our Time' but they will find in it also other things that make of it a richer and more significant book." T. C. Bergin
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 O 14 '51 550w

PRATOLINI, VASCO—Continued

"Pratolini's realistic writing, with its symbolic undertones, is not here at the top of his form. He shows himself a poor master of his backgrounds; he leaves the reader full of unanswered questions." Nancy Lenkeith
— + N Y Times p34 O 21 '51 290w

Reviewed by Anthony West
New Yorker 27:150 D 15 '51 650w

San Francisco Chronicle p26 N 4 '51 350w

Reviewed by E. J. Fitzgerald
Sat R of Lit 34:46 D 1 '51 100w

Reviewed by Marghanita Laski
Spec 186:220 F 16 '51 470w

Springf'd Republican p41A D 9 '51 80w

Time 58:120 O 8 '51 290w

"By putting the blame for his hero's downfall on the results of the war Signor Pratolini ignores all the evidence which goes to prove that plain anti-social behaviour is not confined to any age or country. Apart from this, the events in the book are well, sometimes too well, observed, and there are several characters with normal impulses to help their neighbors."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p225 Ap 13 '51 160w

PRATT, FLETCHER. Double in space. 217p $2.75 Doubleday

51-14187

Two science-fiction novels.

Bookmark 11:61 D '51

"Slight but not silly."
Kirkus 19:589 O 1 '51 80w

"Both stories, despite fine detail work, are well below Mr. Pratt's level—and not aided by his glib belief in national stereotypes as a substitute for individual characterization." H. H. Holmes
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 N 18 '51 180w

" 'The Wanderer's Return,' by far the better, is the story of a space fleet's odyssey among the stars. It demonstrates the writer's knowledge of naval procedure and his interest in the classics. 'Project Excelsior,' on the other hand, is a weak story set on an American space satellite in the near future." Viliers Gerson
+ — N Y Times p41 N 18 '51 110w

Reviewed by Don Fabun
San Francisco Chronicle p20 D 16 '51 80w

PRATT, FLETCHER. Monitor and the Merrimac; il. by John O'Hara Cosgrave II. (Landmark bk) 185p $1.50 Random house

973.7 U.S.—History—Civil war—Naval operations. Ericsson, John 51-13885

Tells the story of the life of John Ericsson, the man who designed the Monitor, and the part which this strange ship played in the Civil war.

Booklist 48:175 Ja 15 '52

Kirkus 19:440 Ag 15 '51 190w

"Recommended." C. W. Field
+ Library J 76:1714 O 15 '51 70w

"It should prove absorbing to boys of ten to fourteen, and even older. The pictures are splendid too." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 N 11 '51 70w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown
N Y Times p36 N 11 '51 70w

PRATT, FLETCHER, ed. World of wonder; an introduction to imaginative literature; foreword by Edith Mirrielees. 445p $3.95 Twayne

Short stories—Collections 51-12260

Anthology of science-fiction stories with biographical data and comment by Fletcher Pratt.

"When I finished this book, I realized I had been given some very good news: After a wearisome absence, imagination that enchants without confusing is returning to the modern short story by way of science-fiction and fantasy. Writers of realistic and symbolic fiction, especially the obscurantist variety, had better look to their laurels. This sparkling collection is a gantlet thrown down to them." Fritz Leiber
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 S 23 '51 350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '51

"A giant-sized anthology which is intelligently edited and a world away, over and above the average space opera."
+ Kirkus 19:368 Jl 15 '51 80w

"A really excellent collection." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 76:1222 Ag '51 130w

"In a year of far too many anthologies, Mr. Pratt's collection is still outstanding for a variety of reasons: his literary standards are gratifyingly high; he makes no arbitrary distinction between 'science fiction' and 'fantasy,' but wisely covers a wide field of imaginative literature." H. H. Holmes
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 S 30 '51 100w

"Nineteen excellent stories." Villiers Gerson
+ N Y Times p33 O 7 '51 110w

Reviewed by Don Fabun
San Francisco Chronicle p24 O 7 '51 140w

"The book has been designed as an introduction to imaginative literature and to that end the editor has incorporated before each tale interesting and informative notes, both on the author and the particular story presented." D. F. M.
+ Springf'd Republican p12C O 21 '51 140w

PRATT, JULIUS WILLIAM. America's colonial experiment; how the United States gained, governed and in part gave away a colonial empire. 460p maps $6; to schools $4.50 Prentice-Hall

325.373 U.S.—Territorial expansion 50-11728

"A study of the rise and decline of expansionism in the U.S. Each of the extraterritorial possessions is traced from its acquisition; its origins, government, effects of colonial policy and its present social condition are explored. The last chapter considers the problem of U.S. security, its dependence on island bases, and relation to expansionist policies." Booklist

---

"The book will be a convenient reference, perhaps a text in several fields. . . His survey should help other investigators to go farther, as into the operation of colonial governments as well as its structure, the growth of political parties, the relationships of imperialism and isolationism, and the experience of the continental territories, which (while quite properly excluded from this book) has much in common with Hawaii and Alaska." E. S. Pomeroy
+ Am Hist R 56:989 Jl '51 360w

"An interesting and able account of the expansion of the United States." L. A. Mander
+ Am Pol Sci R 45:590 Je '51 430w

Booklist 47:199 F 1 '51

Reviewed by R. D. Heffner
Nation 172:234 Mr 10 '51 1000w

PRATT, WALLACE EVERETT, and GOOD, DOROTHY, eds. World geography of petroleum. 464p il maps $7.50 Princeton univ. press

665.5 Petroleum 50-11069

"This volume consists of a series of essays intended to describe the geological occurrence of petroleum, the functional organization of the industry, the chief petroleum bearing regions, and various aspects of utilization. The appendix includes statistics of production and exports in 1938 and 1947 by regions, a select bibliography, a note on glossaries, and a table of conversion factors. The heart of the book is part three—The World's Petroleum Regions—which consists of thirteen descriptive papers on specific regions and three more or less speculative papers regarding the prospects of broader areas." Sat R of Lit

"The special province of geography is comparative regional description and analysis. It is the application of such comparative analysis to one of the world's most significant resources that occupies more than 400 of the 464 pages of this book and that gives it its greatest value. The comparative statistical compilations, the extensive bibliographies, the excellent maps and photographs, the simple but adequate explanations of technical matters—all these may be found, albeit in scattered sources—but the regional analyses and comparisons are unique." L. E. Klimm

+ Ann Am Acad 274:230 Mr '51 700w

Booklist 47:169 Ja 1 '51

Bookmark 10:168 Ap '51

"This book is recommended reading for everyone, chemists or not, in or out of the petroleum industry, who wants a better understanding of petroleum—the most vital commodity in today's world—as it affects people and nations." H. M. Smith

+ Chem & Eng N 29:1680 Ap 23 '51 400w

Foreign Affairs 30:155 O '51 30w

"The book is an important one not only for information on petroleum, but for its bearing on international affairs." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 76:334 F 15 '51 90w

Reviewed by Eugenia Gage

Pacific Affairs 24:102 Mr '51 320w

"The full and scholarly story of the petroleum industry that is here set forth should be of immense value to all persons connected with the industry, and to strategic planners who work in the offices of the highest military commanders." C. W. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 4 '51 150w

Reviewed by E. DeGolyer

Sat R of Lit 34:52 Ja 20 '51 800w

"This volume is particularly appropriate at this time for an understanding of developments in the world situation. It is also important in plotting the rapid growth of one of the largest industries and forces in our present world economy." C. M. Grigg

+ Social Forces 30:118 O '51 260w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:48 Mr '51 250w

PRENTIS, EDMUND ASTLEY, and WHITE, LAZARUS. Underpinning; its practice and applications. 2d ed rev & enl 374p il $10 Columbia univ. press

721.1 Foundations 50-10640

"When buildings begin to settle into the earth or when it is necessary to build something under them or next to them, underpinning is required. . . This work has long been recognized as the chief authority on the subject. The first edition was published in 1931 [Book Review Digest 1932] and it has been out of print for a number of years. A considerable part of the material in this edition has been carried over from the first, but among the new material is a chapter on the raising and moving of heavy structures and another on the underpinning of the White House by the authors' firm during the renovation now under way." Library J

Booklist 47:158 D 15 '50

Eng N 147:47 Ag 16 '51 60w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 75:2011 N 15 '50 130w

PRENTISS, AUGUSTIN MITCHELL. Civil defense in modern war; with a chapter on air power today, by Augustin M. Prentiss, jr. 429p il $6 McGraw

355.23 Civilian defense 51-5032

"The subtitle of this book sums up its content—a text on the protection of the civil population against A-B-C warfare (Atomic-Bacterial-Chemical). The author's objective is to bring home to 'every man, woman and child in the land that, despite the enormous increase in destructive power of air attack, there are ways and means effectively to counter such enemy action and enable the civil population to carry on their daily tasks in maintaining the nation's industrial economy and war effort.' " Eng N

Booklist 48:5 S 1 '51

"Gen. Prentiss calls his book a text on the protection of the civil population against atomic, bacterial, and chemical warfare. It is not an easy text. Detailed descriptions of the most scientific methods of destruction, followed by details on methods to gain a measure of protection, followed by more details on organizational procedures to obtain maximum protection, exhausted this reader. The book could better be called a source book or hand book in Civil Defense. It is well and authoritatively written and amply documented." Charles Green

+ — Chem & Eng N 29:4534 O 22 '51 290w

Reviewed by L. T. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 S 23 '51 50w

Eng N 147:48 Jl 12 '51 270w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:67 S '51

PRESNELL, FRANK G. Too hot to handle. 278p $2.50 Mill

51-12080

Mystery story.

Kirkus 19:300 Je 15 '51 60w

"The plot is smothered in incident (of the sort that records, as momentous, everything between the desire for a cigarette and its lighting) and drowned in a violence in which the author obviously takes a good deal of pleasure. The consequence is a clutter of incident without any real coherence." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 S 23 '51 90w

"The locale is Los Angeles; the material is all basically familiar: gang killings, dope smuggling, filthy peccatures. Yet the writing is clean, acute, objective; and in lawyer Ed Harlow, Presnell has created an unusually successful detective, mentally hard, physically violent, but conceived and projected as a believable human character." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p11 S 2 '51 120w

"Writing is of the fairly decent hard-boiled school, capable enough. C plus." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p18 S 9 '51 50w

"For devotees of grim and gory." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R of Lit 34:42 S 22 '51 30w

Springf'd Republican p22A S 9 '51 70w

PRESNELL, ROBERT. Edgell's island. 371p $3 Dial press

51-9914

Beginning with Edgell Shields at his mother's funeral, this is the story of Marya Shields told in flash-backs and in the son's searchings among the memories of those who had known her, as the wife of rich John Shields, as the lover of Guy le Tourneau, as the strangely glamorous leader of a Hollywood set.

"Marya's story is a sordid affair that is always a little incredible. The chronicle of the son's lonely, neglected boyhood and confused young manhood is tragic enough, yet fails to be very moving, perhaps because it is told in so offhand a manner and because the many characters are not always completely developed." Mildred Walker

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 6 '51 300w

"Mr. Presnell writes with conviction. In spite of its belaboring of the symbolic approach and the astonishing triteness of its conclusion, readers may well find 'Edgell's Island' entertaining." F. G. Fellowes

+ — N Y Times p28 Ap 1 '51 260w

Reviewed by N. L. Rothman

Sat R of Lit 34:29 My 19 '51 270w

PRICE, CHRISTINE. Three golden nobles; il. by [the author]. 239p $2.75 Longmans 51-12261

Historical tale of life in fourteenth-century England for grades six to eight.

Booklist 48:90 N 1 '51

Reviewed by J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews
Horn Bk 27:412 D '51 70w

Kirkus 19:323 Jl 1 '51 110w

"The book has a fascinating sweep of spirited action and descriptive detail." E. S. Mitchell
+ Library J 76:1817 N 1 '51 60w

"The story is well done, in a lively style. Both text and many dashing sketches give the medieval flavor in a way acceptable to the average eleven-to-thirteen-year-old." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 D 9 '51 140w

"This British author presumes an acquaintance with feudal customs and vocabulary that may exist in her country, but that will be possessed here by only the exceptional child reader. However, young Stephen's adventures as a runaway serf may provide enough exciting action to offset the perplexities." N. B. B.
N Y Times p18 N 11 '51 170w

"It is a pleasure to find a young author with a taste for historical romance and the skill to make it live. Obviously she is in love with the England of those days, and her descriptions of its life are drawn with charming sincerity. The bitter poverty of serfdom, the pageantry of London, the drudgery and the inspiration that were the lot of an artist's apprentice are first felt and then described in sympathetic detail." M. P. A.
+ Sat R of Lit 34:62 N 10 '51 150w

School & Society 74:175 S 15 '51 50w

Wis Lib Bul 47:221 S '51

PRICE, OLIVE M. Valley of the dragon; a story of the times of Kublai Khan; il. by John Moment. 250p $2.50 Bobbs 51-9968

"The elements of a thrilling adventure story for Junior High age are here: a brave, poor camel boy for hero; a stolen white mare the boy loves, one of the precious breed of the Emperor; the mystery of the sign of the silver scorpion; a far journey south of the Gobi Desert to a weird castle; and a ruthless bandit chief." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"Suspense, history, adventure, and good characterization. For 10-to-14-year olds." M. J. T.
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 5 '51 70w

"Lin Fu's adventures are too fantastic, the characters are not real enough, and the descriptions of events and places are just words. Recommended for large collections only." C. W. Field
Library J 76:714 Ap 15 '51 80w

"The cruelty of the era is made clear, but also something of its poetry, its special skills and learning. Here is the beginning of Europe's search for spices and for new worlds." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 My 13 '51 110w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Hodges
N Y Times p12 Jl 8 '51 140w

"Olive Price has developed a colorful picture of life in Thirteenth Century Cathay with all its pageantry and cruelties, weaving through it a variety of adventures that keeps suspense high. Good illustrations, done perhaps by a talented Chinese artist familiar with Peiping and its camels, would have enhanced the story."
+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 11 '51 210w

PRICE, ROGER. In one head and out the other. 173p $2.50; readers' ed pa $1 Simon & Schuster 817 51-9379

A book of humor which sets forth a new "philosophy of life," Avoidism, summed up in the phrase "I won't, therefore I ain't gonna."

Kirkus 18:743 D 15 '50 120w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Ap 15 '51 250w

"It happens that Mr. Price can draw. His absurdities often become downright funny, if slightly less than delicate, in his illustrations." Harry Gilroy
+ N Y Times p24 Mr 11 '51 240w

"A good funny book is as rare a publishing event as a historical novel about a virgin. . . It is for this reason that I command ruffles and flourishes for Roger Price, whose new book for people who just want to lie down has been worn to tatters from being clutched to this bosom. Funny fellow, this Price." Lee Rogow
+ Sat R of Lit 34:13 Ap 7 '51 500w

"Enthusiastically recommended to those who are tired of worrying about the world situation, as who isn't." R. F. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p6D F 25 '51 300w

PRICE, WILLARD DE MILLE. I cannot rest from travel; an autobiography of adventure in seventy lands. 313p il maps $4 Day
910.4 Voyages and travels 51-13471

Anecdotes about the author's experiences as a traveller in most of the countries of the earth, over a period of forty years.

Booklist 48:99 N 15 '51

"One of the best books of adventurous travel published in many years." Mason Warner
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 O 21 '51 450w

Reviewed by Rod Nordell
Christian Science Monitor p14 N 29 '51 470w

Cleveland Open Shelf p27 N '51

Reviewed by W. K. Harrison
Library J 76:2118 D 15 '51 90w

Reviewed by Marcus Duffield
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 N 4 '51 240w

"Altogether this is an engaging, pleasantly personal sort of book and many readers will enjoy it. Some, however, will wish that the author had written more of the book as he writes the first few chapters about his youth, taking more room for comment and reflection and not concentrating quite so much on episode and incident. As it stands, the performance is a trifle too much like a roman candle when it might easily have been more like the handsome set-piece which leaves a firmer and deeper impression." J. H. Jackson
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 11 '51 700w

Springf'd Republican p12C N 18 '51 230w

"What gives a reader confidence in Mr. Price is his modesty, his shrewdness, and his liberal and tolerant appraisal, whether when regarding Gandhi, or a chief head-hunter of the Philippines."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p499 Ag 10 '51 450w

PRIESTLEY, JOHN BOYNTON. Festival [Eng title: Festival at Farbridge]. 607p $3.95 Harper 51-2104

Farbridge, that stiff-necked South Midlands town, decided not to join in the 1951 Festival of Britain: it would be only another headache for the tax payer. That was where the Commodore came in. The novel describes the ultimate effort of Farbridge in the Festival.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 187:86 My '51 320w

Booklist 47:274 Ap 1 '51

Bookmark 10:184 My '51 30w

"The best things in the book are the passages which tick off titled scroungers for meals and drinks, and those which parody the plays of Christopher Fry, the poetry of Eliot, and high-brow literary criticism. Mr. Priestley is good-natured even in his parody, for he is out for fun, and he flings it around with a lavish hand." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 173:233 Je '51 300w

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 1 '51 750w

Reviewed by Ruth Chapin
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 5 '51 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '51

Kirkus 19:35 Ja 15 '51 210w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel
Manchester Guardian p4 My 11 '51 270w

Reviewed by Walter Allen
New Statesman & Nation 41:568 My 19 '51 1300w

"With humor, sometimes broad, sometimes subtle, Mr. Priestley creates the score and more of characters. . . That they bear marked resemblance to the people who enliven the works of Angela Thirkell is no derogatory criticism of Mr. Priestley for he is an old master in this school of literary portraiture. . . In writing of the entertainment of the fortnight's jubilee, Mr. Priestley is at his impish best, resorting frequently to well placed little barbs of satire." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Mr 25 '51 900w

"So original and versatile an artist could never be bound by a formula, but 'Festival' is a rollicking tale which will certainly be compared to 'The Good Companions' of 1929. . . Mr. Priestley is so superb a master of description and the apt phrase that everyone comes unforgettably to life. . . There will certainly be more important books written this year, but it is doubtful if there will be many livelier, more colorful or more entertaining ones." Nancie Matthews

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 25 '51 550w

New Yorker 27:90 Mr 31 '51 100w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles
San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ap 8 '51 700w

Reviewed by Basil Davenport
Sat R of Lit 34:18 Mr 31 '51 750w

Reviewed by R. D. Charques
Spec 185:630 My 11 '51 480w

Time 57:110 Mr 26 '51 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p289 My 11 '51 500w

Wis Lib Bul 47:121 My '51

PRINGLE, PATRICK. Stand and deliver; the story of the highwaymen. 287p il $3.75 Norton

364.38 Brigands and robbers [51-12062]

A collection of true stories about English highwaymen of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. Illustrated with reproductions of old prints. Index.

Reviewed by R. L. Blakesley
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 19 '51 250w

"What Mr. Pringle has not done is to write a lively book. He has, heaven knows, tried hard enough. He is very anxious not to be dull, and often expresses this anxiety. . . A story of the highwaymen is drama or nothing. Mr. Pringle provides us only with information." Richard Lockridge

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 19 '51 700w

"As exciting a catalogue of derring-do as one could wish. With a fine contempt for fictional robbers, Mr. Pringle shows beyond question that the real article was far more romantic and colorful. . . This volume is a treasure trove indeed for the historical novelist." F. G. Slaughter

+ N Y Times p21 Ag 26 '51 320w

"Since the modus operandi of the average highwayman was unquestionably cut and dried, Mr. Pringle's careful history after a while becomes a little repetitious. It's nicely presented, however, and there are some first-rate chapters on the less widely publicized aspects of these gentlemen's lives—the roads they operated on, the prisons they languished in, the chaplains who prayed over them, and the thieftakers, or detectives, who contributed to their ultimate doom."

+ — New Yorker 27:85 Ag 25 '51 440w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 24 '51 800w

Time 58:90 Ag 20 '51 700w

"By far the most interesting part of the book are the general chapters on Newgate and the slow growth of law and order. The book has numerous illustrations, many from The Annals of Newgate, compiled by the Reverend John Villette, Ordinary of Newgate in the latter part of the eighteenth century. The reproductions are often too small for details to be clear—which, the subjects being murder, prison and execution, is perhaps not always a disadvantage."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p225 Ap 13 '51 600w

PRINTERS' INK (periodical). Advertising idea book, by editors and contributors; arranged in dictionary style [pub] in assn. with Printers' ink pub. co, inc, New York. (Printers' ink business bookshelf) 348p il $5 Funk

659.1 Advertising

"A miscellaneous collection of 634 tested selling and marketing ideas on all phases, fields, techniques of advertising, drawn from news sources, and arranged alphabetically under headings from 'Advertising Agencies' to 'Wrapping.'" Library J

Reviewed by Winifrid Baum
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 S 30 '51 40w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 76:1568 O 1 '51 30w

"A stimulating source of tested ideas on every phase of advertising."

+ Management R 40:515 Ag '51 30w

PRITCHARD, JAMES BENNETT, ed. Ancient Near Eastern texts relating to the Old Testament. 547p $15 Princeton univ. press

221.93 Bible. Old Testament 50-12738

"This survey of the literature of the Ancient Near East contains translations into English by competent specialists of texts which archaeologists have discovered in Egypt, Palestine, Syria, Asia Minor and Mesopotamia in the course of the last hundred years. These texts have been selected with the Old Testament in mind with Palestine as the central point. From the introduction and critical bibliography before each selection the reader learns whether the particular passage has ever appeared before in a modern language, and if so, whether the translation was accurate or not. . . The book contains a table of contents listed by language, an index of references to passages from the Old Testament, and an index of the names of the deities, demons, persons, places and other proper names which appear in the translation of the texts." Library J

"This carefully prepared and beautifully printed volume is one that every serious student of the Old Testament will want to keep at his right hand." J. W. Swain

+ Am Hist R 56:534 Ap '51 650w

"A valuable source book from which serious students of the Old Testament can gain a good perspective for a fuller understanding of the cultural background of Old Testament history and of the likenesses and differences that

PRITCHARD, J. B.—Continued
existed between Israel and the nations surrounding it. . . For this aid many a reader will be grateful when in his search for intelligible factual information he finds himself faced with so much that is unfamiliar, strange and puzzling in these Texts. He will be grateful also for the Index of Biblical References and Index of Proper Names." T. C. Petersen
+ Cath World 172:239 D '50 250w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 67:1265 O 25 '50 1000w

"The careful editing and presentation of the material have made it a work that can be effectively used by the preacher and the great body of unacademic folk who have a love for the study of the Bible." Arthur Jeffery
+ Crozer Q 28:142 Ap '51 2900w

Reviewed by Alexander Heidel
J Religion 31:211 Jl '51 750w

"Highly recommended for the college, university and reference library." R. P. Breaden
+ Library J 75:2150 D 15 '50 320w

Times [London] Lit Sup p4 Ap 27 '51 750w

"Incorporating all fresh translations and the best of scholarship, this important book offers especially to historians of religion, culture, and literature an authoritative collection of the significant literature of the ancient Egyptians, Sumerians, Akkadians, Hittites, and Canaanites."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:149 Je '51 180w

PRITCHETT, VICTOR SAWDON. Mr. Beluncle. 310p $3.50 Harcourt
51-12719

"A London suburb is the setting for the story of Mr. Beluncle, a whirligig of mixed emotions and drives since his dream world, of betterment and advancement, never correlates with reality. His rationalizations make possible his misuse of his mother's, his wife's and his sister's money. . . Mixed in with this is his connection with the Parkinson sect and the excitement of the cure worked for Mrs. Truslove's crippled sister, Judy. There are his boys, Henry, George and Leslie (quite a young horror and monster), the antipathy of the community represented by the venomous Vogg and his housebound mother, and the disastrous crash brought about through Judy's death." Kirkus

---

"I don't know which I value more, the centrality of the book which is Mr. Beluncle's trials and triumphs, or the odds and ends of the book. . . I would vote for the odds and ends, mainly because I felt the novel to be inconclusive, to rush too hastily as it were toward its own end. One could put it another way: I would vote for the odds and ends for now, all the while hoping that Mr. Beluncle is the first novel of, at the very least, a trilogy." Harvey Breit
+ Atlantic 188:80 O '51 400w

Bookmark 11:34 N '51 30w

"With all of V. S. Pritchett's deftness with words, with all of his subtle sense of humor [and sometimes of farce], 'Mr. Beluncle' somehow just beluncles along a long [if pleasant] trail of words, with little ideas of getting any special place." Fanny Butcher
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 S 23 '51 450w

"The humor of Mr. Beluncle is of a highly special British order, and at times even more private than that; so it is likely that some will find it only boring or vexatious. . . Still, Pritchett has quite a turn for sly caricature, and for mandarin-style verbal brilliance. It's unfortunate the story is too diffuse, the fun will never quite focus. But when you look at the author's picture, and think of his position on the earnest and frequently distressed New Statesman and Nation, and then of this wacky Mr. Beluncle— you feel a kind of affectionate admiration that would say: Go it, old boy. Go it." Paul Dinkins
+ Commonweal 55:75 O 26 '51 280w

Kirkus 19:405 Ag 1 '51 210w

"Recommended, though it will not be widely popular." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 76:1566 O 1 '51 60w

"It is difficult unless the reader is at home with Mr Pritchett's method, to visualize the time of the action. It is presumably that of the present day (judging from such details as Mr Beluncle's vision of a boardroom for his company), yet it reads all the while like some Edwardian creation. These, however, are minor drawbacks in a work of such originality, vitality and depth." Elizabeth Jenkins
+ — Manchester Guardian p5 O 26 '51 330w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Bowen
New Statesman & Nation 42:438 O 20 '51 1750w

"What most impresses in this clever novel is the author's economy of strokes in the portrayal of character, and his equal skill in communicating the flavor of life in that London suburb 'before its churches and its High Street were burned out and before its roofs stripped off a quarter of a mile at a time.' The quoted phrase, taken from the first paragraph of the book, is a sample of that skill, for from the outset it puts Mr. Beluncle in his place and his antics in a sort of aspic." James Hilton
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 S 23 '51 650w

" 'Mr. Beluncle' is high comedy. Most of the characters are absurd or dreadful or both, but they fascinate us because they do not let us escape without admitting how much we have in common with them." R. G. Davis
N Y Times p5 S 23 '51 850w

Reviewed by Brendan Gill
New Yorker 27:142 O 13 '51 300w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 25 '51 400w

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst
Sat R of Lit 34:35 O 13 '51 500w

"Paradoxically Mr. Beluncle fails by its success, a triumph of craftsmanship involving a failure of art. . . The comparison between Mr. Beluncle and such creations as Mr. Micawber, Mr. Skimpole or Mr. Dorrit is an obvious one, and leads to the conclusion that, though Mr. Pritchett's creature is, in the same mode, as brilliant an invention as any of these, he himself lacks Dickens' genius in perceiving that such creatures can never be more than adjuncts to plots based on characters more capable of heroic development." Marghanita Laski
— + Spec 187:552 O 26 '51 210w

"Mr. Beluncle is in his best short-story grain. He has a mischievous eye for surburban pomposity, he invents delightfully loony characters, he writes with crisp wit. The opening 50 pages weave a fine picture of 'mind-sharpening, heart-deadening warfare' between a middle-aged husband and wife. But then something goes wrong. . . Author Pritchett fails to cap his story with any recognizable climax, and it slowly sputters out. In final impression, it is more an album of sketches than an integrated novel."
Time 58:124 O 8 '51 350w

Times [London] Lit Sup p660 O 19 '51 2750w

Wis Lib Bul 47:216 S '51

PROCHNOW, HERBERT VICTOR, ed. American financial institutions [contributing authors: Douglas H. Bellemore and others]. 799p $8; to schools $6 Prentice-Hall

332 Finance—U.S. Banks and banking—U.S.
51-11568

"A study of the entire American financial structure, intended to provide an understanding of all the major American financial institutional types—their functions, relationship, methods of operation, and the distinct services each provides in our economy. In chapters written by specialists in universities and institutions, the varied types of institutions are separately treated, and integrated by chapters dealing with such general phases as the development and functioning of our monetary system, Treasury operations, and government regulation. . . Reading list at end of chapters." Library J

Booklist 48:24 S 15 '51

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 76:1338 S 1 '51 90w

PROCHNOW, HERBERT VICTOR. Successful speaker's handbook. 343p $4.50 Prentice-Hall

808.5 Public speaking 51-11484

"Avoids high-pressure techniques and concentrates on sound thought and preparation; emphasizes proper language, delivery, breathing, and distinctness. The advice, though not unusual, is practical and is convincingly stated. Illustrative speeches and selections enhance the book's value as a good basic text for the person who takes his speaking seriously." Booklist

Booklist 48:7 S 1 '51

Reviewed by R. D. Innis
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 5 '51 180w

PROCTER, MAURICE. Hurry the darkness. 214p $2.50 Harper

51-5560

"A novel about crime in the English white-collar class, in which murder is incidental to larceny, black-market practice and forgery." San Francisco Chronicle

Kirkus 19:336 Jl 1 '51 70w

"The author has an almost poetic gift for telling the story. What the book lacks is motivation—it is one of those futile tragedies without any real depth of meaning."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 S 16 '51 100w

"A sharply effective melodrama. An ex-policeman himself, Procter shows a fine understanding of criminal methods." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p31 S 9 '51 90w

"Realistic job done in an admirably clean style. B plus." L. G. Offord
+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 S 16 '51 70w

"Characters are a little too black and too white; but they are woven into a fascinating web of relationship. Well-handled irony." Kathleen Sproul
+ Sat R of Lit 34:39 S 29 '51 40w
Springf'd Republican p5C S 23 '51 40w
Wis Lib Bul 47:216 S '51

PROCTOR, JAMES D. Man on the couch; George Pringle who lived twice. 244p $2.75 Dial press

51-2812

A satire on the amateur psychoanalyst, which shows the havoc wrought in a peaceful family by one Polly Freeman.

"Pokes broad and slightly bawdy fun at psychoanalysis, but the hilarity has its inevitable limitations. The author's romp with paranoiac tendencies exhausts itself trying to fill a book, and the tinkling cymbals grow tinny."
— + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 My 27 '51 120w

"'The Man on the Couch' is a faintly bitter but amusing study of a sore-pressed man's reactions to amateur and quack probing of the super-ego." Rex Lardner
N Y Times p17 Je 17 '51 140w

"It is fine to have Mr. Proctor in there leading what begins as a well-organized counter-attack, and if at the end of his book he retires in some confusion it is not without having dealt some glorious blows at the beginning." Vance Bourjaily
Sat R of Lit 34:34 My 26 '51 400w

PROCTOR, SAMUEL. Napoleon Bonaparte Broward; Florida's fighting Democrat. 400p $5 Univ. of Fla. press

B or 92 Broward, Napoleon Bonaparte. Florida—Politics and government 50-11070

"Professor Proctor portrays here the significant career of Napoleon Bonaparte Broward. Broward was one of those liberals who came along in Florida about the time Ben Tillman in South Carolina, Tom Watson in Georgia, and James K. Vardaman in Mississippi were raising storms in their respective states; but Broward was never violently anti-Negro or demagogic as were Tillman, Watson, and Vardaman. He was more the type of Hoke Smith of Georgia or John Sharp Williams of Mississippi. It was during his governorship, from 1905 to 1909, that this colorful leader gained his greatest renown as a liberal and made such an impress on the history of his state as to lead to the term 'The Broward Era.'" Ann Am Acad

"Mr. Proctor has produced a biography which needed writing and he has written well. In fact, the parts of this study which depict scenes of nature are done with real literary skill. In some of the finer points of biographical portrayal, however, this book has its limitations." G. C. Osborn
+ — Am Hist R 56:680 Ap '51 290w

"Professor Proctor, a member of the faculty of the University of Florida, has written a scholarly, sympathetic biography of Florida's most famous governor." E. M. Coulter
+ Ann Am Acad 275:187 My '51 360w

"This is a well written biography of a previously rather obscure Democratic politician of Duvall County, Florida." H. E. Jensen
+ Social Studies 42:188 Ap '51 1000w

PROFFITT, JOSEPHINE MOORE (SYLVIA DEE, pseud). There was a little girl; il. by James Alexander. 246p $2.75 Macmillan

51-10839

Eight year old Susan is the narrator of this story of what happened after her mother, a newspaper woman, came home from a vacation with a new husband. Mr. Dick was a violinist with an ambition—to make his debut at Carnegie Hall.

Booklist 47:347 Je 1 '51
Kirkus 19:135 Mr 1 '51 100w

"As readers of Sylvia Dee's 'Dear Guest and Ghost' need not be told, her pen is nimble and there is a trace of the invisible in her ink. But eight-year-old Susan is solid and her slant on the adult world will jog joyous memories—especially if you belong to the same sex and were (at her age) of an inquiring mind." Lisle Bell
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Je 3 '51 260w

"Miss Dee's third novel, like its predecessors, is all good, clean fun, tiny tugs at the heart-strings, simple declarative sentences and not much more." Gilbert Millstein
+ N Y Times p10 Jl 29 '51 200w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 18 '51 460w

"'There Was a Little Girl' is a witty and humorous book, but I sometimes found myself laughing with tears in my eyes. Behind the comedy, behind the delightful, ingenuous fun and the ridiculous situations is a poignant little history of a family relationship, and of the struggle and sacrifice and indomitable optimism which go with maintaining a self-styled genius in the house." S. H. Hay
+ Sat R of Lit 34:16 Jl 7 '51 440w

PROUTY, MRS OLIVE (HIGGINS). Fabia. 246p $2.75 Houghton
51-4590

Another story about the Vale family of Boston, this follows the unhappy love story of Fabia Vale to its final solution.

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
— Cath World 174:315 Ja '52 120w

"The story isn't new, but it is told with a great deal more honesty and insight than one generally finds in a love triangle tale, with emphasis not on the moral, but the personal issues involved." Olive Carruthers
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 S 16 '51 550w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Yates
Christian Science Monitor p13 Ja 3 '52 350w

Kirkus 19:214 Ap 15 '51 200w

"This is the fifth of Mrs. Prouty's books about the Vale family, and the Bostonian blueblood is running a trifle thin. Plenty of adults in this world have never grown up, as a character in 'Fabia' tritely but truly says, but this work suffers from a surfeit of them." Lisle Bell
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 S 16 '51 320w

"Mrs. Prouty's insight into a sensitive girl's emotional problems is psychologically sound, but her solution of Fabia's dilemma is too pat to be entirely credible. Much of the plot is revealed in patches of long-winded dialogue—'let's sit down and talk it over,' the characters seem to say—and they do at great length. The result is a rather old-fashioned, conventional novel." Ray Pierre
Sat R of Lit 34:15 S 29 '51 220w

Springf'd Republican p5C S 23 '51 130w

Wis Lib Bul 47:166 Je '51

PRYOR, ELINOR. Big play. 454p $3.75 McGraw 51-12537

A story of the oil industry in Texas and Oklahoma in the 1920s and 1930s. Follows the career of the chief character, Brock Catlin, from his days as an assistant driller to his success as a multi-millionaire wildcatter.

Booklist 47:374; 48:50 Jl 1 '51; O 1 '51

Reviewed by Edmund Fuller
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 S 23 '51 370w

Kirkus 19:403 Ag 1 '51 230w

"Recommended." L. R. Etzkorn
+ Library J 76:1222 Ag '51 90w

"Miss Pryor can be a bit too girlish in some of her domestic scenes but, in the main, she brings in a gusher of a story. It seemed to me that she failed to make convincing Billie's transition from a rather sweet girl into a bejewelled, drunken, foul-mouthed virago. Even so, Billie is a moderately successful characterization while Catlin, though he does sometimes run a bit more than lifesize, is both engaging and real. It is the background that makes 'The Big Play.' By the time Miss Pryor gets through you have explored every facet of a fascinating industry." V. P. Hass
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 S 23 '51 400w

"The temptation to overdramatize in a narrative of such times is almost irresistible but 'The Big Play' is written with admirable restraint. None of its characters is overdrawn and it gives us an excellent story of one of the gaudiest periods in American history." Hoffman Birney
+ N Y Times p39 O 7 '51 100w

— San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 14 '51 60w

"Miss Pryor is at her best when she describes the raw boom towns, the development of spectacular oil fields, the struggle for power between independent wildcatters and big oil companies. Unhappily, her creaking plot does not measure up to its setting." Ray Pierre
Sat R of Lit 34:35 N 24 '51 230w

PUBLIC opinion, 1935-1946; under the editorial direction of Hadley Cantril; prepared by Mildred Strunk. 1191p $25 Princeton univ. press
301.154 Public opinion 51-272

"A monumental compilation, under the editorial supervision of the director of Princeton's Office of Public Opinion Research, of the results of nationwide opinion polls conducted by 23 organizations in 16 countries from 1935 to 1946. The result is a compendium of opinion on almost every subject of public interest—foreign relations, taxation, industry and agriculture, education, religion, politics, finance, unemployment, the atom bomb, crime, the entertainment world, international cooperation, every major aspect of World War II, etc. Results of the surveys, which are classified by subject matter for convenient reference, represent opinion in the U.S., the British Empire, and the European Continent." Management R

"The product of this Gargantuan labor is an invaluable and irreplaceable record of how people used to think." H. M. Hughes
Am J Soc 57:87 Jl '51 800w

Reviewed by Daniel Lerner
Am Soc R 16:402 Je '51 1900w

Foreign Affairs 29:668 Jl '51 30w

Management R 40:161 Mr '51 100w

Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 31 '51 150w

Reviewed by G. C. Homans
New Repub 124:20 Je 11 '51 1000w

Reviewed by Aylmer Vallance
New Statesman & Nation 42:50 Jl 14 '51 650w

Reviewed by C. Y. Glock
Pol Sci Q 66:634 D '51 490w

"Unfortunately, there is no methodological information given to permit an evaluation of the data presented. The absence of specific indications of sample size or type of sample design, the lack of tests of statistical significance of differences, and the failure to report sampling and other measures of error require the user to exercise great caution in interpreting the results."
U S Quarterly Bk R 7:213 Je '51 220w

PURCELL, VICTOR WILLIAM WILLIAMS SAUNDERS. Chinese in southeast Asia [issued under the joint auspices of the Royal institute of international affairs and the Institute of Pacific relations]. 801p maps $11.50 Oxford
325.251 Chinese in southeastern Asia 51-2471

"Mr. Purcell is an expert on the Chinese in Malaya, about whom he published a book in 1948. Now he has furnished a mass of information about the Chinese in South-east Asia as a whole. Successive sections deal with the Chinese in Burma, Siam, Indo-China, Malaya, British Borneo, Indonesia and the Philippines." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Bibliography. Index.

"A book that provides a wealth of material, excellent insights, and dispassionate reasoning. It is given an orderly framework, ample footnoting, a useful Index, and a good Bibliography. There are also a number of interesting appendixes on special topics. Seen as a whole and despite its minor shortcomings, it is doubtful that it will be replaced for quite some time to come." R. I. Crane
+ — Am J Soc 57:290 N '51 700w

"For the historian of the Chinese or of Southeast Asia, Mr. Purcell's account, for the most part on a country-by-country basis, of the early contacts of the Chinese with the area will be highly useful since it brings under one roof a large amount of source materials from various languages which date from many periods. Inevitably these materials are fragmentary, scattered, and anecdotal, but cumulatively they build up a reasonably coherent picture and are often both entertaining and revealing." Rupert Emerson
+ Am Soc R 16:407 Je '51 1050w

"For those who would understand the background and present status of this movement, and for all social scientists concerned with the universality of their studies, Purcell's book, the first comprehensive work in any language on Chinese migration and settlement in South-east Asia, will be an indispensible source." R. J. Coughlin

+ Am Soc R 16:407 Je '51 1050w

Reviewed by L. A. Mills
Ann Am Acad 278:248 N '51 470w

Foreign Affairs 30:168 O '51 50w

Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 30 '51 150w

Reviewed by Bruno Lasker
New Repub 125:19 Ag 6 '51 550w

"The author is well qualified for his task. He has lived more than a quarter of a century in the Far East, much of that time as an official with the British Government in Singapore and Malaya as an expert on Chinese affairs. His sources of reference are imposing and he had the help of many well-informed British and American officials, researchers and writers." Foster Hailey
+ N Y Times p11 My 6 '51 400w

"The book is as comprehensive in scope and as rich in materials as can reasonably be expected from a single author. Moreover, it is the work of a scholar who writes with the charm and insight of a man for whom the subject of his study represents much more than an object of mere research." H. J. van Mook
+ Pacific Affairs 24:313 S '51 1650w

"As the author says in the preface, it would have taken seven or eight years of research to produce a definitive study of this vastly intricate problem: and in seven or eight years it might have come too late. With the less than two years at his disposal Dr. Purcell had clearly to choose between a more or less superficial attempt to pass final judgement on the whole question and a collation of all the available facts wtih his own special knowledge of Malaya. He has done far the more valuable work in choosing the latter alternative." A. D. C. Peterson
+ Spec 185:250 F 23 '51 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p223 Ap 13 '51 550w

PURCELL, WILLIAM ERNEST. Five minutes to twelve; il. by Arthur Wragg; foreword by Horace W. B. Donegan [Eng title: These thy gods]. 104p $2 Morehouse

914.2 Great Britain—Civilization 50-9723

"This book . . . traces the national and international disorders to the threshhold of every home, and then—inside the door—directly to the feet of every individual. We are shown how the tremendous issues of the day are all bound up in the behavior of Everyman. . . While the author had in mind conditions now existing in Britain, his outspoken message is equally significant for America." Pref

"One does not know whether just to commend the subject matter which analyzes the moral and religious sickness of our day, or the striking illustrations by Arthur Wragg which begin each chapter. The title comes from the lateness of the hour given our generation to find the way to survival."
Churchman 165:17 F 1 '51 160w

"The book is vividly written and the illustrations by Arthur Wragg are unusual. Apt to be more effective and more widely read than volumes that are more weighty."
+ Kirkus 18:600 O 1 '50 170w

"The especial effectiveness of this tract in novel form stems from the unconventional way in which the psychological ills of contemporary England are presented. Instead of talking about post-war cynicism, juvenile delinquency, and the breakdown of the family in general, the author creates a memorable gallery of typical characters to show social trends in action." Chad Walsh
N Y Times p26 Ja 7 '51 270w

Reviewed by E. M. Tainton
San Francisco Chronicle p19 S 24 '50 600w

PURDY, CLAIRE LEE (STEWART) (MRS RUDOLF KOHL). Antonín Dvořák, composer from Bohemia. 200p $2.75 Messner

B or 92 Dvořák, Antonín—Juvenile literature 50-10174

A biography of the Bohemian musician, written for grades seven to nine. The author stresses the relationship of Dvorak to his musical background. Bibliography. List of Dvorak's compositions. Index.

Booklist 47:191 Ja 15 '51

Horn Bk 27:115 Mr '51 80w

Kirkus 18:521 S 1 '50 120w

"Recommended for young people's collections." Clara Adams
+ Library J 76:123 Ja 15 '51 90w

"A musical biography for teen-agers which we highly recommend." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ja 21 '51 100w

PURYEAR, VERNON JOHN. Napoleon and the Dardanelles. 437p $5 Univ. of Calif. press

327.44 Napoleon I, emperor of the French. Turkey—Foreign relations—France. France—Foreign relations—Turkey 51-10924

"This monograph on the place of the Near East in Napoleonic foreign relations tells—within the conventions of classical diplomatic history and directly from the archives and previous scholarly work—the story of interactions among the high governmental personalities of France, Turkey, Persia, Russia and other nations as they came into the orbit of Near Eastern affairs in relation to Europe, 1802-1815." N Y Times

Manchester Guardian p3 N 30 '51 160w

Reviewed by Geoffrey Bruun
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 26 '51 750w

"Mr. Puryear, Professor of History at the University of California, writes clearly, though with such attention to detail, such immersion in his material, that all but the most prepared reader will need to concentrate with more than usual care on the reading." Crane Brinton
+ N Y Times p17 Ag 12 '51 500w

"Such a solid study has definitive value for students of the period, and should give food for thought to those who believe that history repeats itself."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:278 S '51 200w

PUSEY, MERLO JOHN. Charles Evans Hughes. 2v 829p il $15 Macmillan

B or 92 Hughes, Charles Evans 51-7851

"Associate editor of the Washington Post has given us this biography of late Chief Justice. Hughes has been subject of various specific studies, but these two volumes will probably prove to be the authoritative biography. They give a complete picture of the long and distinguished legal career leading to positions such as attorney, professor of law, governor, Secretary of State, etc., crowned by the Chief Justiceship. . . Author had full access to Hughes' autobiographical notes and other primary sources; moreover, he had personal discussions with Hughes in the last years before his death." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 48:170 Ja 15 '52

Reviewed by A. S. Henning
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 18 '51 900w

Reviewed by Henry Sowerby
Christian Science Monitor p11 N 21 '51 800w

"The entire story of Mr. Hughes' career, including the governorship of New York and his years on the U.S. Supreme Court, is one which Americans will find exhilarating in these days of sadly needed leadership of the same gifted, honest and fearless character." Leander Danley

PUSEY, M. J.—Continued
+ Churchman 165:17 D 1 '51 300w

"His biographer knows the period, the issues, and places his distinguished subject in his era. A book that lawyers will find particularly interesting for the analysis of many of the cases on which Justice Hughes sat."
+ Kirkus 19:517 S 1 '51 310w

"His weaknesses and mistakes are played down, and some will criticize work on this account. . . Sustained interest and readability throughout lengthy work show experienced hand of journalist. Numerous interesting photos and cartoons. Recommended for public and pertinent educational and law libraries." H. H. Bernt
+ Library J 76:1702 O 15 '51 210w

"A lively, warm and stirring story which holds the interest of the reader from beginning to end." O. J. Roberts
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 N 18 '51 1300w

"After finishing these 800 pages, at least one reader wishes that a pen as incisive as Walter Bagehot's or as tart as Lytton Strachey's could write a biographical essay in order to contribute to the understanding of a towering personality, even when economizing truth. But it is fortunate that Chief Justice Hughes entrusted his papers to so conscientious and responsible a digger into materials as Pusey for his authorized Life." Felix Frankfurter
N Y Times p1 N 18 '51 2300w

"Mr. Merlo J. Pusey has made his biography of a genuinely great man an unusually interesting book." Anthony West
+ New Yorker 27:73 D 22 '51 3050w

"The story [of Hughes' life] has been brilliantly told in these two volumes. In many ways, the author is the one best fitted to write the first full-length, more or less authorized biography, for he had the privilege of many personal interviews, arranged for this purpose, with Chief Justice Hughes during the last three years of the latter's life. And he had exclusive access to the Hughes papers in the Supreme Court and the Library of Congress." C. W. Weinberger
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 18 '51 1500w

"I wish every young American would read this antidote to current cynicism and disillusionment regarding public life." Henry Wriston
+ Sat R of Lit 34:15 D 15 '51 1250w

PYLE, MARJORIE MCDONALD. Help yourself get well; a guide for TB patients and their families; with a foreword by H. Corwin Hinshaw. 235p $3 Appleton

616.246 Tuberculosis 51-3260

Advice to the tuberculous patient based on the author's own experience as a physician, a scientist—and a patient. Partial contents: Accept the verdict; Rest—it's wonderful; On books and reading; On hobbies; Rehabilitation—the way back; The psychology of the tuberculous; Going home.

"This is an excellent book—for the patient with tuberculosis before and after recovery, for his family and friends, and for the doctors and nurses who care for him, as well as for everyone interested in public health." A. L. Hart
+ Am J Pub Health 41:1532 D '51 280w

Booklist 47:377 Jl 1 '51

Bookmark 10:228 Jl '51 10w

"A hopeful, helpful approach to the therapy of tuberculosis."
+ Kirkus 19:221 Ap 15 '51 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 S 23 '51 110w

Wis Lib Bul 47:211 S '51

Q

QUATTROCIOCCHI, NICCOLO DE. See De Quattrociocchi, N.

QUEEN, ELLERY, pseud. of FREDERIC DANNAY and MANFRED LEE, ed. Literature of crime; stories by world-famous authors. 405p $3.50 Little

Short stories—Collections 50-10909

A collection of short stories about crime written by authors not usually associated with mystery or detective story writing. Contents: The post-mortem murder, by Sinclair Lewis; Ransom, by P. S. Buck; Before the party, by W. S. Maugham; Murder in the Fishing Cat, by E. St V. Millay; The juryman, by John Galsworthy; The murder, by John Steinbeck; Monk, by William Faulkner; The limitations of Pambè Serang, by Rudyard Kipling; Tabloid news, by Louis Bromfield; The killers, by Ernest Hemingway; Hunted down, by Charles Dickens; Paul's case, by Willa Cather; The stolen white elephant, by Mark Twain; The Gioconda smile, by Aldous Huxley; The hand, by Guy de Maupassant; The letters in evidence, by C. S. Forester; Haircut, by Ring Lardner; An ideal craftsman, by Walter de la Mare; The catbird seat, by James Thurber; Markheim, by R. L. Stevenson; Mr. Brisher's treasure, by H. G. Wells; London night's entertainment, by Margery Sharp; Sense of humor, by Damon Runyon; The verdict, by Frank Swinnerton; Clerical error, by J. G. Cozzens; Guilty, by Fannie Hurst.

Booklist 47:174 Ja 1 '51

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ja 7 '51 160w

"Old or new, each of these twenty-six items is to the Queen's taste—and few devotees of the genre would dare to ask for more." Melville Heath
+ N Y Times p20 Mr 11 '51 230w

"Only two or three of the stories in this volume have a mystery or surprise angle; most are serious studies of the by-products of crime or of the criminal mind. They're as excellent as you'd expect, coming from acknowledged masters in other types of fiction." L. G. Offord
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 D 24 '50 100w

"Excellent editorial selection."
+ Sat R of Lit 33:58 D 2 '50 40w

QUEEN, ELLERY, pseud. of FREDERIC DANNAY and MANFRED LEE. Origin of evil. 245p $2.50 Little 51-10221

Detective story.

Booklist 47:382 Jl 1 '51

Bookmark 10:185 My '51

"Ellery Queen, in fine form."
+ Kirkus 19:81 F 1 '51 70w

"As in all of the Ellery Queen books, the emphasis is on puzzle rather than character and emotion. But this time, by peopling the book so richly, the Queens have given their puzzle an additional depth and warmth."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 My 6 '51 230w

"This is one of those novels in which each turn of the plot is so neatly conceived that any action-synopsis would detract from your own pleasure. Let me simply say: If (as is statistically probable) you're a Queen fan, the anniversary volume is one of the best of all the twenty-five Queens. If you're unfamiliar with Queen, try this one—and find yourself ensnared by a master of the fascination inherent in the grandly fantastic, even improbable, but compellingly constructed murder problem." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p27 Ap 8 '51 420w

"Rather farfetched and overwritten."
New Yorker 27:143 Ap 14 '51 90w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ap 8 '51 100w

"Of course compulsory."
+ Sat R of Lit 34:63 Ap 14 '51 50w

Reviewed by Esther Howard
Spec 187:310 S 7 '51 60w

Times [London] Lit Sup p599 S 21 '51 140w

QUEEN, ELLERY, pseud. of FREDERIC DANNAY and MANFRED LEE, ed. Queen's awards: sixth series; the winners of the sixth annual detective short-story contest; sponsored by Ellery Queen's mystery magazine. 247p $2.75 Little

Short stories—Collections (46-8129)

Contents: The enemy, by Charlotte Armstrong; Murder at City hall, by A. H. Z. Carr; Fool's mate, by Stanley Ellin; 'Bye, 'bye, Bluebeard, by V. B. Shore; The hair shirt, by Roy Vickers; Cherchez la frame, by Craig Rice and Stuart Palmer; All the way to the moon, by Q. Patrick; The contradictory case, by Hugh Pentecost; Woman hunt no good, by Oliver La Farge; Flowers for an angel, by Nigel Morland; The man whose wishes came true, by C. S. Forester; The most dangerous man in the world, by Lord Dunsany; O time, in your flight, by Vincent Cornier; Perchance to dream, by Lisa Robineau.

Kirkus 19:458 Ag 15 '51 100w

"The latest volume is an essential part of the series and its first-prize story ('The Enemy' by Charlotte Armstrong) is an especially ingratiating one. But while the others are for the most part easy enough to read, there is less than the usual number of really good ones in the lot. Several tales exhibit a disturbing indifference to the rules of fair play in the tale of detection and there is a good deal of that fervent prose which has come to be called 'psychological.'" James Sandoe
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 O 21 '51 250w

"No matter what other collections may be called, you'll invariably find the best crime short stories of any given year in the annual volume of prize-winning stories from Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine. . . If, therefore, The Queen's Award: Sixth Series is faintly disappointing, it merely means that this is a slightly off year among the creators of detective short stories. And disappointing, I hasten to add, only by the extremely high standards which earlier volumes have set." Anthony Boucher
+ — N Y Times p24 N 11 '51 240w

"This volume would be valuable if only for the fine, exciting and meaningful first-prize winner by Charlotte Armstrong, but the others make wonderful reading, too." L. G. Offord
+ San Francisco Chronicle p28 N 4 '51 90w

"Pleasant variety." Sergeant Cuff
+ Sat R of Lit 34:76 N 17 '51 40w

Wis Lib Bul 47:255 N '51

QUEEN, ELLERY, pseud. of FREDERIC DANNAY and MANFRED LEE. Queen's quorum. new rev & expanded ed 132p $4 Little

016.8083 Detective stories (books about)—Bibliography. Fiction—History and criticism 51-12528

"History of the detective-crime short story in terms of the 106 most important books in the field since 1845—most important in Ellery Queen's estimation, but there is no reason at all to dispute his (their) opinions. First edition was published in 1948 [as part of Twentieth Century Detective Stories, Book Review Digest 1948], this revision is chiefly notable for its welcoming William Faulkner's Knight's Gambit to the fold, with an incidental lively defense of the mystery story against the 'arrogance and disdain' of critics who disparage the form." (Library J) Index.

"The writing is clean and nervous, with very few of the stylistic vagaries sometimes indulged in by the Queens. Recommended." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 76:1418 S 15 '51 70w

"Mr. Queen's augmented history is abristle with facts and judgments all expressed in agitated prose. Indeed, Mr. Queen is about the only man of our acquaintance who has managed to remain breathless for twenty-five years. . . The function of the list for readers is dubious: it certainly should not be used as a reader's guide, since even the obtainable portions of the list are, for the most part, as indigestible as they are undistinguished prose. I'd guess that the reader with more taste than curiosity might possibly find one-third of Mr. Queen's nominations readable, whereas if more than a dozen of them have any genuine historical interest even within the limits of the form I've not found that importance demonstrated." James Sandoe
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 S 30 '51 300w

"One may ask the nature of an edifice with 106 'cornerstones,' and how a book which announces itself as 'one man's opinion' can also be a 'quorum.' Yet this minor sniping does not lessen the fact that the book is indispensable to the literary student and to the book collector, and an entertaining course of curious information for the general reader." Anthony Boucher
+ — N Y Times p29 S 30 '51 220w

"Both a useful check-list and a stimulating book to read, since even the bibliographical notes are pleasantly informal and just as likely as not to develop into condensed essays on the subject in hand whenever the author feels like it." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 S 20 '51 650w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff
+ Sat R of Lit 34:32 O 20 '51 30w

QUENTIN, PATRICK, pseud. See Webb, R. W.

QUINN, ARTHUR HOBSON, ed. Literature of the American people; an historical and critical survey. 1172p $9; text ed $6.50 Appleton

810.9 American literature—History and criticism 51-10789

This comprehensive history of American literature is divided into four parts: The colonial and revolutionary period, by K. B. Murdock; The establishment of national literature, by A. H. Quinn; The later nineteenth century, by Clarence Gohdes; The twentieth century, by G. F. Whicher. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by G. W. Allen
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 S 16 '51 1100w

"Any work that begins with Captain John Smith and ends approximately with John Steinbeck must of necessity hit the high spots. In spite of this, students will be surprised, I believe, at the amount of material the authors have managed to get into this work. Estimates of individual writers have to be succinct, and they are. Now and then, one of the contributors will take time and space to consider a writer at greater length than you might expect, and come up with an admirable judgment." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 18 '51 650w

School & Society 73:302 My 12 '51 40w

"Many of the errors of detail and distortions of emphasis in this book spring from an earnest patriotism which is prepared to twist all historical standards in order to create the illusion that literary progress in America has been constantly in alliance with the development of an American way of life. Instead of assessing the literary value of American writing the authors are inclined to measure the merits of all writers in terms of good Americanism."

QUINN, A. H.—Continued
Times [London] Lit Sup p403 Je 29 '51 1000w

"Although it is obvious that no single book treating such a vast subject can hope to please everyone, this one seems to fall short of what might be hoped for in the way of over-all organization and integration. . . On the whole, and in spite of some of the faults suggested, the book is very competent and deserves wide use in the kind of courses for which it was prepared."
+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 7:239 S '51 290w

R

RAAEN, AAGOT. Grass of the earth; immigrant life in the Dakota country. 238p $3 Norwegian-American hist. assn.

917.84 Frontier and pioneer life—North Dakota 51-349

"This is the intimate story of a Norwegian immigrant family's life in the territory that was admitted to the Union as North Dakota. It is unusual in two respects. It is concerned not with the first frontier but with 'the middle period of Norwegian settlement.' . . Its hero, the father of the family, was a Norwegian agricultural school graduate who had had eighteen years of army service following his completion of an officer training course." Sat R of Lit

---

"Actually, these are no ordinary reminiscences, for they are carefully based on diaries and letters and are written by a scholarly and sensitive woman. The book is therefore a valuable contribution to American social history." C. C. Qualey
+ Am Hist R 56:686 Ap '51 310w

"A vivid, intimate picture." Lisle Bell
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ja 28 '51 360w

"The story narrated in the third person, is told . . . with warmth and fidelity." J. T. Winterich
+ Sat R of Lit 34:21 Mr 3 '51 110w

Reviewed by H. A. Pedersen
Social Forces 29:468 My '51 180w
Social Studies 42:144 Mr '51 10w

RAINICH, GEORGE YURI. Mathematics of relativity. 173p $3.50 Wiley

530.1 Relativity (physics) 50-12085

"An introductory exposition of the mathematical concepts and techniques necessary to a full comprehension of relativity. The book is designed for upperclass and graduate college students majoring in mathematics or physics. It is beyond the grasp of general readers except for those few who have achieved a good deal of competence in advanced mathematics. The author is Professor of Mathematics in the University of Michigan, and the book is a development of a course which he has taught there for more than twenty years." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 75:2011 N 15 '50 80w
N Y New Tech Bks 35:93 N '50

RAMAN, SIR CHANDRASEKHARA VENKATA. New physics; talks on aspects of science. 144p $3.75 Philosophical lib.

530.4 Physics 51-10486

"In this book the noted Indian scientist who won the Nobel Prize for physics in 1930 discusses selected aspects of modern physics for mature laymen. The range of topics is wide. There are, for example, discussions of the shells of molluscs and of geometrical forms in nature, along with talks on the physics of solids." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 47:324 My 15 '51

"Dr. Raman has ably demonstrated that it is possible to give exposition of great clarity without appeal to analogy. His style is severely precise but lucid and interest-holding if the reader has a reasonable concern for the content of the topic under discussion. It is correct to say that an intelligent nontechnical reader will find all that is presented quite understandable." B. C. Hendricks
+ Christian Century 68:1015 S 5 '51 200w

"The lectures are charmingly written and combine the features of popular attractiveness, clear presentation, and worth-while subject matter." A. W. Burks
+ Ethics 62:76 O '51 120w

"The essays are all interesting and easy to read. Probably because they were first delivered by radio, they are entirely free of mathematical symbols." R. R. Hawkins
+ Library J 76:710 Ap 15 '51 80w
N Y New Tech Bks 36:41 My '51
San Francisco Chronicle p21 Je 10 '51 60w

"Professor Raman's passion for science, 'the highest form of creative art,' is evident throughout the book. His discussions of stars, cosmic rays, weather, and soil combine the intense enthusiasm of the nature-lover with the analytical insight of the physicist. Unfortunately, this short and brilliant book is outrageously priced beyond the budgets of the people who would enjoy it most."
+ — Sat R of Lit 34:15 Jl 7 '51 340w
School & Society 73:222 Ap 7 '51 60w
Springf'd Republican p11D Je 10 '51 300w
Wis Lib Bul 47:248 N '51

RAMSEY, CHARLES GEORGE, and SLEEPER, HAROLD REEVE. Architectural graphic standards for architects, engineers, decorators, builders, and draftsmen. 4th ed 614p il $10 Wiley

692.2 Building—Details 51-11243

"The users of the third edition will find it hard to believe that the present edition contains eighty percent more material. Throughout the book plates have been revised so as to include more information and new information. Of the 566 full-page plates, 368 are new and 151 are revised. Drawings and dimensions are now included for even the latest varieties of modern chairs. The index now runs to 48 three-columned pages." (Library J) For first and second editions see Book Review Digest 1933 and 1936.

Booklist 48:34 S 15 '51

"Since 1932 when the first edition was published, this 'bible' of architectural drafting rooms has been found useful in many other places. Factory managers, engineers, superintendents of office and industrial buildings and interior decorators are among the groups who use it for information on standard symbols, details of construction, and dimensions of not only structural materials but also of most articles used inside buildings." R. R. Hawkins
Library J 76:1133 Jl '51 120w
N Y New Tech Bks 36:51 Jl '51

RAMSEY, PAUL. Basic Christian ethics. 404p $3.75 Scribner

171.1 Christian ethics 50-14782

"Citing original documents of importance in the development of ethical theory, the author expounds at length the meaning of Christian liberty, Christian love, faith, Christian vocation, virtue, and the relation between Christian love and social policies. Appended are excellent suggestions for further exploration by the reader, indicating the author's hope that the book will be used widely as a textbook. . . The author is an associate professor of religion in Princeton University." (Christian Century) Bibliography. Index.

"It is indeed a fine textbook for the theological student, as well as a comprehensive essay in itself, which will establish Dr. Ramsey as one of the authoritative writers in this field for years to come. This evidently is a first book. One hopes that later on he will write in more palatable form for the 'intelligent layman,' for whom a good book in basic Christian ethics is highly needed. This is too erudite to serve that purpose." K. B. Cully
+ Christian Century 68:174 F 7 '51 700w

Reviewed by R. G. Stephens
Ethics 61:235 Ap '51 400w

Kirkus 18:602 O 1 '50 160w

"The author, who is Associate Professor of Religion at Princeton, has brought his theological, biblical and historical scholarship to bear on fundamental aspects of man's nature, motivation and conduct." J. A. Pike
+ N Y Times p4 F 4 '51 900w

"While Professor Ramsey has produced a lively and sincere book with a wide range of reference and quotation, it is probably more useful as a stimulus to discussion than as a statement of what Christians usually suppose Christian ethics to be."
Times [London] Lit Sup p752 N 24 '50 480w

RAMSEY, ROBERT. The mockingbird. 223p $3 Dutton
51-5017

Tragic story of a Memphis, Tennessee, family in the 1880's, told by the young son of the family. David is only seven, and there is much this grave little boy does not understand about his gentle father, his pretty governess, and his vindictive older sister. But the Negro servants, Loosh and his wife Viny, he does understand, and they give some stability to a shaking world.

Reviewed by Henry Cavendish
Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 S 2 '51 300w

"It is a notably successful use of a tricky technique; a story, superficially slight yet redolent with implications, carried on at two levels at the same time with an admirable economy of detail." Ruth Chapin
+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 2 '51 290w

Kirkus 19:250 My 15 '51 130w

"Mr. Ramsey writes with much skill. The disintegration of the household, the reactions and anxieties of the small boy whose world collapses, and his refusal to accept the fact of the final catastrophe, are vividly presented. . . 'The Mockingbird' is planned as the first of a series of related novels of Southern life. It is a rewarding book in its own right, and stirs anticipation for work to come." Coleman Rosenberger
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Jl 29 '51 380w

"In setting out to write the book in the fashion which he chose, Mr. Ramsey showed courage. And his choice has been justified—for he has succeeded in re-creating a time and place." Elizabeth Bullock
+ N Y Times p4 Jl 29 '51 600w

Reviewed by Frances Gaither
+ Sat R of Lit 34:18 Ag 18 '51 600w

RANDALL, KENNETH CHARLES. Wild hunter; il. by Manning de V. Lee. 236p $2.50 Watts, F.
51-9969

Story of a boy's love of hunting, of the beautiful dog he loved, and of Al Doane, the guide of an exclusive gun club on the Michigan peninsula. For grade six and older boys.

Booklist 47:316 My 1 '51

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Jl 1 '51 200w

Horn Bk 27:252 Jl '51 40w

Kirkus 18:725 D 15 '50 200w

"Seldom have we found a warmer, more wholesome outdoor sport story which will engage the attention of father and son alike." F. W. Butler
+ Library J 76:881 My 15 '51 60w

"Many men who enjoy pheasant-shooting would like this story, as well as boys from twelve to fifteen. It includes good tips on guns and trap practice, and a brief glossary of hunting field terms." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ap 29 '51 160w

"A great dog story." H. B. Lent
+ N Y Times p30 Ap 29 '51 190w

"Everyone who loves the bright days and crisp nights of a northern autumn can revel in the scenes and scents that Mr. Randall recreates so vividly. Manning Lee has made for the story black-and-white sketches as chapter-headings and effective end-papers printed in golden brown. It is a book for grown-ups as well as for boys and girls."
+ Sat R of Lit 34:48 My 12 '51 270w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:248 S '51 70w

Wis Lib Bul 47:126 My '51

RANDALL, ROBERT HULBURT. Introduction to acoustics. 340p il $6 Addison-Wesley 534 Sound 51-12181

"A college textbook designed for use after the student has passed courses in introductory physics and calculus. A good share of the space is devoted to basic matters such as particle vibration theory, plane waves in air, waves in three dimensions, acoustic impedence, and speech and hearing. Considerable material is included also on acoustic applications, musical instruments, speech, architectural acoustics and even ultrasonics." Library J

"Besides its intended use by students planning to specialize in physics or a branch of engineering requiring a knowledge of acoustics, the work will be of interest to graduate physicists and engineers in need of an introductory survey of present-day acoustics." R. R. Hawkins
Library J 76:1938 N 15 '51 130w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:65 S '51

RANDOLPH, VANCE, ed. Ozark folksongs; 4v v3, Humorous and play-party songs; v4, Brush-Arbor music and miscellaneous songs and ballads. 4v subs only $15 State hist. soc. of Mo, Columbia, Mo.
784 Folk songs, American (47-1554)

"The last two volumes of Vance Randolph's Ozark Folksongs. . . Mr. Randolph has divided the five hundred and forty-one different songs and their music, exclusive of variants, into four groups in these last two volumes. They are titled In Lighter Vein, Play-Party Songs, Brush-Arbor Music, and Miscellaneous Songs and Ballads. Except for the Play-Party Songs, these divisions are not of help in locating specific material, but any difficulty is remedied by the inclusion in Volume IV of an excellent index of titles and first lines for all four volumes of the work. The songs in these last two volumes are, with some few exceptions, chiefly of American origin, and owe little to the British tradition." (U S Quarterly Bkl) For volumes one and two see Book Review Digest 1947, 1948.

"One of the most interesting and comprehensive collections of American folk songs. One expects much of the Ozarks as a mine for folk songs, particularly native pieces and one is not disappointed." Horace Reynolds
+ Christian Science Monitor p8 Ja 6 '51 650w

"From a critical viewpoint, musical as well as literary, this fourth volume might be said to represent the dregs of the popular mind. There may be some legitimate doubt as to the value of much of it qua folklore, but none about its importance to the study of the culture of an area steeped to the saturation point in this sort of stuff. . . In point of size, the set compares with the published collections of Barry, Sharp, and the Lomaxes. It has been well received by folklorists. Musically, however, it is not in the class of these former collections, with respect either to actual content or to technical detail. The whole process of collection, transcription, selection, and editing of the music was amateurish from start to finish. In this our author, we must hasten to add, is not wholly to blame." Charles Seeger

RANDOLPH, VANCE—Continued

Music Lib Assn Notes 7:469 Je '50 900w (Review of v4)

"'In these four volumes Vance Randolph sets himself alongside the late John A. Lomax as America's most important folksong collector. He has followed innumerable leads, and wandered endless trails, and come up at the end with an immense load of pure, virgin ore from the mossy Ozark ledges." J. G. Fletcher

+ N Y Times p7 My 28 '50 1200w

"A work which must rank high in the field of American folklore studies. . . Important reference tools, the headnotes to each song make the work indispensable for the library and the student."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:288 S '50 280w (Review of v3)

RANDOLPH, VANCE. We always lie to strangers; tall tales from the Ozarks; il. by Glen Rounds. 309p $4 Columbia univ. press

817 Folklore—Ozark mountains 51-10537

Tall tales of many kinds, which originated in the Ozarks. Oversize and undersize crops, animals, and even fantastic animals and weather figure in the stories. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 47:301; 323 My 1 '51; My 15 '51

"Vance Randolph knows more about the Ozark folk than any other author who has ever written of the region. For 30 years he has hunted, eaten, fished, loafed and drunk moonshine with the hill people, scribbling bits of their conversation, folk lore and superstitions on scraps of paper which he slyly tucked into his pockets as he smoked and listened. This latest book, 'We Always Lie to Strangers,' is by far the neatest and best organized of the lot. . . This is gay, salty reading, a real man's book." Marge Lyon

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 20 '51 410w

Reviewed by Harold Reynolds

Christian Science Monitor p7 Jl 12 '51 850w

"It's a top selection in liars' contests, of wild and absurd anecdotes and jokes, and offers a hearty skimming of regional humor."

+ Kirkus 19:46 Ja 15 '51 100w

"Anyway you take it, this is useful as humor, Americana and folklore. It has a valuable annotated bibliography and qualifies as both scholarly and entertaining." E. L. Lewis

+ Library J 76:178 F 1 '51 130w

"It is a joy to report that Vance Randolph whose active interest in tall tales of the Ozark Hills has lasted well over a quarter century, has brought between covers of a book a rich harvest of humorous and whimsical tales of the 'tall' genus and that Mr. Randolph has a very special feeling for this sort of thing. He recognizes many truths that have escaped the scholars and proves beyond shadow of doubt that he is not only a master-teller but a master-listener as well." Carl Carmer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Je 10 '51 450w

"A priceless collection of tall tales, and it's good, sound American folklore, too." Hoffman Birney

+ N Y Times p10 My 13 '51 350w

"Altogether it's a wonderful collection that Mr. Randolph has put together." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 3 '51 850w

"'We Always Lie to Strangers' is immensely amusing in many areas, also important and informative. . . Mr. Randolph strives to make a highly readable book and on the whole he succeeds. . . Randolph's style and enthusiasms come most vividly and charmingly alive in two truly worthwhile chapters: one dealing with Ozark hunting yarns, which the author handles deftly: the other a nearly classic prize collection of Ozark fish stories. The author has an ear and eye for hunting, and he adores fishing. The happy result is that these two chapters are well worth the price of admission." C. M. Wilson

+ — Sat R of Lit 34:23 Je 16 '51 850w

RANKIN, MRS LOUISE S. Gentling of Jonathan; il. by Lee Townsend. 223p $2.50 Viking

Horses—Legends and stories 50-10412

"Here is a case of horse gentling boy. Jonathan was the terror of the town until Mrs. Coralie Rutledge came to live next door. She understood boys and realized that owning and caring for a horse might change Jonathan into the fine lad she was sure he could be. So strong was her faith in him that she gave him her beautiful Prince Drogo." Horn Bk

Booklist 47:225 F 15 '51

"The boy's growing up process is sympathetically and skilfully handled and should win an eager response from 9 to 12 year old readers, who will like, too, the authentic and colorful picture of life in the west." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 F 4 '50 190w

"Skillfully, Mrs. Rankin traces the development of Jonathan's character, his efforts to earn money to support Drogo, his growing awareness of community problems and his new ability to make friends and to forget himself. And she writes a very good story for the ten-to-twelve-year-olds, into the bargain."

+ Horn Bk 27:36 Ja '51 100w

"There is sound horse information here for the fans, but young readers may feel that Jonathan is too emotional and prissy in reformed state and his sudden change of heart in conforming to adult standards too sudden."

Kirkus 18:515 S 1 '50 150w

"Wholesome approach to a difficult subject; written with considerable distinction and furnished with real story interest. Boys and girls eleven and up will welcome this." M. E. Martignoni

+ Library J 76:123 Ja 15 '51 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 11 '51 90w

RANSOM, JOHN CROWE, ed. Kenyon critics. See Kenyon review (periodical)

RANSOME, STEPHEN, pseud. See Davis, F. C.

RAPHAELSON, SAMSON. Hilda Crane; a drama. 152p pl $2.50 Random house

812 51-9722

Play about a modern woman whose "freedom" brought her little happiness. After two divorces and several affairs she returns to her Illinois home hoping to recapture a little of her youth. A third practical marriage, advised by her sensible mother, does not solve her problem.

Booklist 47:291 Ap 15 '51

Bookmark 19:40 Ja 15 '51 10w

"This high class soap opera was a failure on Broadway, but will probably be a little theatre favorite. All except large drama collections should await demand." George Freedley

Library J 76:520 Mr 15 '51 20w

"Piercing beneath the glossy facade of modern woman's vaunted freedom, Raphaelson writes here an incisive human drama whose implications are heartbreaking." Frank Jones

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ap 8 '51 120w

RAPP, ALBERT. Origins of wit and humor; il. by Ted Key. 208p $2.75 Dutton

808.7 Humor. Laughter 51-9104

A serious study of the origins of laughter by a member of the department of Classical languages and archaeology at the University of Tennessee. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 47:214 F 15 '51

"A sound, entertaining volume, utterly unlike any scholarly stuffiness its title might suggest. It contains examples of basic jokes and their expansion and is amusingly illustrated by Ted Key." Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ja 7 '51 270w

"It is dotted throughout with rather painful examples of quips and gags. However, good reading for the layman and the drawings by Ted Key of Hazel fame are wonderful."

+ — Kirkus 18:672 N 1 '50 160w

"For public and college libraries." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 75:2074 D 1 '50 130w

Reviewed by Bergen Evans

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Ja 28 '51 650w

"About one-third of the book is devoted to proving that laughter derives from the hostility of man to his fellow-man. . . Professor Rapp having stated something that all students of comedy learned in their cradles, that laughter is evoked by man's inhumanity to man, won't let it go. He labors the point, he continues to prove and reprove it, he tells us bum jokes and then dissects the jokes." Al Capp

N Y Times p22 Ja 14 '51 750w

"A simple and very readable book on the reasons why people laugh. . . For all that Mr. Rapp writes lightly and amusingly, his book is a solid and scholarly affair within its limits, as his notes, comfortably kept out of the reader's way at the back of the volume, and his careful bibliography will demonstrate. Mr. Rapp, in fact, is that rare bird who knows his subject so well that he doesn't have to be solemn about it. His book is good reading." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ja 10 '51 850w

"A sorry collection of old wheezes tricked out with a top dressing of analytical jargon. What he says is often reasonable, but it is also repetitive and most elementary." Louis Untermeyer

— Sat R of Lit 34:12 Ap 7 '51 700w

RAPPAPORT, ARMIN. British press and Wilsonian neutrality. 162p pa $2.50 Stanford univ. press

940.5373 Neutrality. European war, 1914-1918 —U.S. Public opinion—Great Britain 51-1883

"Study of editorial and news columns of 37 British newspapers (1914-1917) by an instructor in history at the University of California (Berkeley)." Am Pol Sci R

"This is a worthy project well executed. . . Mr. Rappaport overlooked no major source of British editorial opinion, and so careful and thorough was his research that it is safe to predict that the job will not have to be done again." A. S. Link

+ Am Hist R 56:941 Jl '51 220w

Am Pol Sci R 45:596 Je '51 20w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:278 S '51 240w

RASHEVSKY, NICOLAS. Mathematical biology of social behavior. 256p $5 Univ. of Chicago press

301.8 Social sciences—Methodology. Biological physics. Biomathematics 51-9381

"This monograph presents a treatment of mathematical biology and psychology as they are related to a new approach to a mathematical theory of certain aspects of social behavior. The first five chapters of the book, constituting Part I, review the nature of brain mechanism and behavior from the point of view of mathematical biophysics. Part II, Social Hierarchies, develops, in five chapters, a mathematical approach to the problem of social classes and related phenomena. The next thirteen chapters are grouped under Parts III-V, titled respectively Imitative Behavior, Motivational Behavior, and Learned Behavior. Part VI consists of four chapters considering special problems." U S Quarterly Bk R

"In this volume the author attempts to combine and relate some of the findings of two of his previous works, Mathematical Biophysics (rev. ed., Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1948) and Mathematical Theory of Human Relations (Bloomington, Indiana: Principia Press, 1948). This reviewer feels that the results are doubtful. . . The erroneous conclusions are largely due to over-simplification of situations. However, even these over-simplifications lead to ponderous mathematical formulations. All of which leads to the conclusion that social behavior is much more complex than Professor Rashevsky's book would lead one to believe." D. O. Price

Social Forces 30:119 O '51 500w

"The treatment is highly original; it will be of interest primarily to mathematicians, physiologists, psychologists, and sociologists."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:189 Je '51 190w

RAVINES, EUDOCIO. Yenan way. 319p $3 Scribner

B or 92 Communism—Latin America 51-7602

"A sort of mea culpa by a man who was until recently one of the top Communist organizers in South America. Mr. Ravines, a Peruvian, studied his peculiar art in the same Comintern schools in Moscow that Klement Gottwald and Mao Tse-tung attended. He was one of the major figures in the South American Bureau of the Comintern and was very active in the Spanish Civil War. It was while he was on Comintern duty in Spain that he began to lose faith in the world revolution and in revolutionists, and began to see Stalin for what he is, rather than as the workers' messiah." New Yorker

"This is a well written book which captures the interest of the reader from the first page. Much of it, no doubt, is true history. The rest may be fiction or prejudice." J. F. Rippy

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Ja 6 '52 290w

"While the book's lucid narrative style is easy to follow, the reader will not infrequently find it pedestrian going because—reflecting the author's Communist training—it at times gets lost in dialectical cloudland. Most of the time key personalities of world communism, past and present—such as Mao, Dimitrov, Manuilsky, Kirov, Marcucci, Togliatti, etc.—are little more than sterile talking machines." R. M. Hallet

— + Christian Science Monitor p9 D 29 '51 800w

Kirkus 19:517 S 1 '51 130w

"No index, but recommended for all libraries." M. S. Byam

+ Library J 76:1927 N 15 '51 160w

"This exposure of the plots which its author executed as a Comintern agent in South America is palatable reading. Mr. Ravines, from the testimony of those who know him, is a competent and trustworthy witness. . . Many who question the wisdom and promise of Haya de la Torre (who is now a political refugee in the Colombian Embassy in Lima, and whose case has recently evoked ambiguous pronouncements from the Hague Court) will read with skepticism Ravines' somewhat intemperate indictments of that indubitably able man." Hubert Herring

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 N 25 '51 750w

Reviewed by Milton Bracker

N Y Times p6 O 28 '51 650w

"Altogether, an important, instructive, and astonishingly specific book."

+ New Yorker 27:174 D 8 '51 160w

RAYFORD, JULIAN LEE. Child of the snapping turtle, Mike Fink. 335p $3.75 Abelard 51-12374

"Historical novel based on the life of Mike Fink, famous scout and Indian fighter, keelboatman and trapper. Born in Pittsburgh in 1770, Fink grew up on the edge of the wilderness, on the shores of the Allegheny and Ohio rivers. Traffic on the rivers held an early fascination, and he soon became a keelboatman, spending most of his life on the rivers between Pittsburgh and New Orleans. A robust novel, depicting the rough life of the river men and of the river towns—Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Louisville, Natchez, New Orleans." Library J

"An important contribution to midwest Americana." L. R. Etzkorn
+ Library J 76:1223 Ag '51 120w

"Mr. Rayford has dug into that rough and tough first quarter of the Nineteenth Century and come up with frontier and river lore that makes his book worth it for that alone. . . Altogether, I suppose, this isn't quite a novel, but it doesn't make a great deal of difference. It's the very material which in a proper novel would be confusing, that furnishes the best reading in the book." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 S 12 '51 490w

"The author appears to have made a thorough study of the historical background, and offers many graphic pictures of life on the old frontier. However, it seems unfortunate that, in his desire to achieve verisimilitude, he finds it necessary to have his characters use a rather overwhelming amount of dirty language. While it is no doubt true that the frontiersmen did speak with spiced tongues, just as many people do today, it seems that the book would have been equally effective without quite such a conscientious hewing to the line in this respect." H. H.
Springf'd Republican p7C S 16 '51 150w

RAYMOND, RENE (JAMES HADLEY CHASE, pseud). Figure it out for yourself. 250p $2.50 Duell 51-10418

Detective story.

Kirkus 19:114 Ag 1 '51 60w

"James Hadley Chase, who is still best known for the malodorous 'No Orchids for Miss Blandish,' is tamer here. There are fewer eccentric degenerates and even the element of sex is given only perfunctory (if persistent) place." James Sandoe
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 O 14 '51 70w

"Despite the lack of authenticity in the scene-painting, it manages to be unexcitingly readable." Anthony Boucher
N Y Times p32 O 14 '51 60w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 14 '51 90w

"Wild as they come." Sergeant Cuff
Sat R of Lit 34:32 O 20 '51 50w

"In spite of the garish properties of the story, the solution is carefully planned and the final revelation (providing also the motive) is satisfactorily surprising."
Times [London] Lit Sup p65 F 2 '51 50w

RAYMOND, RENE (JAMES HADLEY CHASE, pseud). Too dangerous to be free. 256p $2.50 Duell 51-9949

Detective story.

Kirkus 19:80 F 1 '51 70w

"Mr. Chase is well on his way to becoming the goriest writer in the detective story field, and his new novel virtually drips with blood."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 My 20 '51 140w

"The identity of the villain will surprise no one, but if you like to read about violence, murder and insanity, they are all present here." N. M.
N Y Times p19 Je 3 '51 110w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ap 8 '51 90w

"Expert."
+ Sat R of Lit 34:40 Ap 28 '51 50w

READ, GRANTLY DICK. Introduction to motherhood. 104p il $1.75 Harper
618.2 Mothers 51-11663

"Designed for young parents, it appeals to their common sense, their fortitude in facing fears, and their oncoming maturity. Scientifically accurate, yet with medical terminology reduced to a minimum, Dr. Read's book will be a delight and a boon to young, expectant mothers." Wis Lib Bul

"The discussion of personal hygiene for the pregnant woman is not equal in quality to the rest of the book and the scant and vague attention given to modern prenatal care is surprising. Some of the advice, especially concerning diet, is inconsistent, confusing, and out of accord with recent research. The reviewer believes that this book has a valuable contribution to make to expectant mothers but that it is uneven in quality, excelling chiefly in subjects close to the author's personal interests. It should be recommended only in conjunction with other texts." H. C. Stuart
Am J Pub Health 41:1432 N '51 290w
Kirkus 19:255 My 15 '51 100w

"This latest book by Dr. Read is the most readable, compact, and comprehensive he has yet written. . . Highly recommended."
+ Wis Lib Bul 47:211 S '51

READ, HERBERT EDWARD. Collected poems. 201p $3 New directions
821 51-10654

"Best known for his criticism of literature and art, this British poet appears in a collection which brings together, except for some discarded juvenilia, all the poems previously issued in separate volumes from 1914 to 1945. Inclined toward the metaphysical, his eclogues, war poems, satires and lyrics have 'the air of present reality.'" Library J

Reviewed by G. D. McDonald
Library J 76:1029 Je 15 '51 110w

"A quiet excellence is Mr. Read's best quality; this speaks often in the lyrics, whose concentration gives them something close to intensity and informs the longer metaphysical works, so that, while there is no great tension here, there is reasonable support and sustenance." Rolfe Humphries
+ Nation 173:198 S 8 '51 100w

Reviewed by M. L. Rosenthal
New Repub 125:28 D 10 '51 650w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 O 28 '51 40w

"Americans know Herbert Read for his singularly unpretentious, engaging and often noble prose. His collected poems are finally available over here, and one hopes that they will gain something of the influence they have enjoyed in England. American poetry could use some of his clarity and equanimity, his combination of delicacy and force." Kenneth Rexroth
+ N Y Times p5 Je 17 '51 210w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman
Sat R of Lit 34:33 Jl 21 '51 40w

READ, HERBERT EDWARD. Phases of English poetry. rev ed 192p $1.50 New directions
821.09 English poetry—History and criticism. Poetry 51-2807

"To the first edition of this book, published in 1928 [Book Review Digest 1929], the author has made such alterations 'as the passage of time made desirable' and added two new chapters, on Poetry and Love, and Poetry and Sentiment. His general thesis is that in its evolution English poetry has developed from the widest possible to the narrowest possible appeal." Nation

"The new chapters fit in amazingly well, as their bulk concerns periods otherwise little treated: the Elizabethan and neo-classical. Quoting freely and following topical interests with judicious selectivity across the centuries, Read provides for another generation of readers a fine, quick survey of English poetry. He writes as a lover who knows his subject and helps others to know and hence love it, too." A. C. Ames
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 24 '50 110w

"Stimulating and invaluable for students."
+ Kirkus 18:650 O 15 '50 80w

"As usual, Mr. Read seems thoughtful, painstaking, unassuming, informal, and also just a little bit dry."
+ — Nation 171:682 D 23 '50 110w

"The two new chapters which are offered in this edition of Phases of English Poetry are neither conspicuously better nor worse than the older materials of the study, and the reissue of the volume cannot be explained by them. It remains to be said that Mr. Read has given us much valuable matter along with much shadow. It is pleasant to find him a champion of such poets as Chaucer, Spenser, and Collins. His chapter on Pure Poetry is at last metaphysical and richly suggestive. It is unfortunate that his volume has not filled the need for a genuinely evolutionary study of English poetry." Gene Baro
Poetry 77:362 Mr '51 2150w
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ja 28 '51 100w

READER'S DIGEST (periodical). Fun fare; a treasury of Reader's digest wit and humor; selected by the editors of the Reader's digest in collaboration with Bob Hope [and others] with il. by Robert Day. 316p $2.50; pa $1 Simon & Schuster

817 Joke books 50-11047

"Jokes, blunders, child sayings, mistakes in print, short sketches by Benchley, Thurber, and others, all culled from the parts of the Reader's digest everyone reads first." Booklist

Booklist 47:203 F 1 '51

"This book should prove a best seller in the few countries that have been overlooked by the monthly edition of The Reader's Digest. The treasury of the best wit and humor ever to appear in the RD no doubt will be fresh in, say, Nepal, even if it is old stuff to the faithful of this most widely read American magazine. . . The collection is weakened by the inclusion of corn. Evidently the RD, so expert at applying the scalpel to the material of other magazines, got blood-shy when confronted with the task of cutting itself down to anthology size." Bernard Kalb
+ — Sat R of Lit 34:36 Ap 7 '51 320w

READY, WILLIAM B. The great disciple, and other stories. 158p $2.50 Bruce pub.

51-11244

"Here, in 18 tales, some of which have appeared in such magazines as The Atlantic Monthly and the Saturday Evening Post, some of which were unpublished in magazine form, the author provides a good look at the Welsh-Irish as well as some Irishmen at home and abroad. And while he's doing it he tells a fine and rousing yarn—sometimes of action, sometimes of romance, now and then of ancient Irish legendry, once or twice of war and men at war, but always a good story." San Francisco Chronicle

"Mr. Ready is at his best in his school stories; here the lovingly remembered background with its evocative detail can support the somewhat jejune fabric of 'glory.' Much thinner are his four tall, falsely hearty tales of Coo-Cullen . . . and his anecdote about the way Finn MacCool built the American railroads." Riley Hughes
+ — Commonweal 54:316 Jl 6 '51 290w

"Perhaps it's because I am personally an easy mark for the old legend, perhaps not; but to my mind the best fun in this book is in the yarns in which Mr. Ready picks up some Irish folklore and gives it his own special twist." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Jl 6 '51 650w

"About half the eighteen stories in this collection are rich in what William Faulkner has called 'the old universal truths lacking which any story is ephemeral and doomed.' At least two of the group will continue to make the anthologies: 'Barring the Weight' and 'The Piper Pays.' . . The stories about Cuchulain, the leprechauns, St. Patrick, and the Nativity are so different in character and style from the others as to merit publication in a separate volume, preferably for young readers. Given dignified treatment, the Cuchulain saga could, in Mr. Ready's hands, make an important new juvenile for Americans." A. F. Wolfe
+ Sat R of Lit 34:17 Ag 11 '51 300w

RECHNITZER, FERDINAND EDSTED. Jinks of Jayson valley; il. by Marguerite Kirmse. 216p $2 Winston

Dogs—Legends and stories 50-10758

Story of two dogs, mother and son, and the lonely boy who befriended them after the mother collie is lost in the western mountains.

Kirkus 18:520 S 1 '50 140w

"Hackneyed plot, stereotyped characters barely tip the scale in view of the fact that here is a new dog story, set in the authentic atmosphere of sheep-raising country, which holds the reader's interest and will prove popular. Purchase depends on library's policy of leniency in order to meet demand for dog stories. Easily read by 12 and up." F. W. Butler
— + Library J 75:1840 O 15 '50 70w

"In spite of a familiar plot and the stock character of the cousin, there is enough freshness in the up-to-date setting and the warm treatment to make an appealing story. Marguerite Kirmse's drawings of the collies are delightful." F. C. Smith
+ N Y Times p26 Mr 4 '51 180w

"Boys in their early teens, and girls in the doggy set, will probably enjoy this simply written book, which is written quite dead-pan and without a spark of humor."
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 12 '50 200w
Springf'd Republican p7B D 24 '50 120w

RECORD, WILSON. The Negro and the Communist party. 340p $3.50 Univ. of N.C. press

325.26 Negroes. Communist party of America 51-10538

An intensive study of the Communist Party's attempts, during three decades, to enlist the mass support of American Negroes. These attempts have failed, the author believes, "because [since] the aspirations of the American Negro are essentially egalitarian, a 'bourgeois' document like the American Constitution has a liberating potential in the Black Belt of Alabama and in the ghetto of Harlem that the Communist Manifesto could never hope to have." (p.315)

"The work reflects the meticulous care of a disciplined scholar working with emotionally loaded material. He makes explicit his own democratically oriented value-judgments, while maintaining scientific detachment of a high order." St Clare Drake
+ Am J Soc 57:395 Ja '52 500w
Am Pol Sci R 45:1212 D '51 230w

"The book is clearly written and enlivened by an occasional nice turn of phrase. It is difficult, however, for the reader to keep all the alphabetical organizations in mind, though a list of abbreviations is provided after the

RECORD, WILSON—Continued
table of contents. The notes have been relegated to the back of the volume. It might have been better, if page footnotes were to be eschewed, to have placed them at the end of each chapter." M. R. Davie
+ — Am Soc R 16:740 O '51 320w

Reviewed by G. S. Schuyler
Ann Am Acad 277:255 S '51 800w

Booklist 47:376 Jl 1 '51

Reviewed by Roi Ottley
Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 My 6 '51 550w

Reviewed by H. A. Jack
Christian Century 68:798 Jl 4 '51 450w

"Objective, dispassionate, and well-documented study." R. W. Logan
+ Nation 172:544 Je 9 '51 950w

"Wilson Record has written the best, most complete, most objective analysis of this aspect of the activities of the American wing of Stalinism yet published." Roy Wilkins
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Jl 29 '51 800w

"Written by an Assistant Professor of Sociology at San Francisco State College, 'The Negro and the Communist Party' is a full and penetrating account of radicalism among American Negroes." Saunders Redding
+ N Y Times p6 Ap 29 '51 600w

"Well-written and readable, this book is challenging by its forthright presentation and vigorous insights which are free from apologetics, special pleading or the ethnocentrism which often mars books in this field." Irving Babow
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 17 '51 600w

" 'The Negro and the Communist Party' is an invaluable source book for authentic background and factual information on the party's objectives and failures in the Negro field. For all those seeking such data it is indeed required reading." H. L. Moon
+ Sat R of Lit 34:14 My 19 '51 800w

"The book while not a literary effort, reads much like an exciting novel. The author makes few if any, academic pretensions, yet the volume is scholarly grounded. It is couched in simple, straightforward, and interesting language, and the 'practical-minded' should have little trouble understanding. This is to say that your reviewer recommends The Negro and the Communist Party as required reading for the practically orientated as well as the theoretically grounded social scientist." M. C. Hill
+ Social Forces 30:111 O '51 500w

"Mr. Record's book is by no means a work of supererogation. While it is true that most intelligent Negroes already know what he has learned only after prodigal burning of midnight oil, their knowledge is rarely supported by statistical proof. The author has provided them the proof they need." Guichard Parris
+ Survey 87:502 N '51 600w

"A book of more significance than the special theme indicates, this volume is also a concise history of the Communist Party in America."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:279 S '51 220w

Reviewed by J. H. Franklin
Yale R n s 41:133 autumn '51 390w

REDDING, JAY SAUNDERS. On being Negro in America. 156p $3 Bobbs

325.26 Negroes 51-13473

A combination of comment and personal recollection in which the author sums up the difficulty of being a Negro in America. "He makes it clear . . . that he has long since discarded the spiritual adjustments, implanted in him by his parents, that might have enabled him to accept one of the viewpoints commonly held by his fellow-Negroes, whom he divides off into race chauvinists, educationists (believers in the ultimate victory of intellectual competence), gradualists, individualists, and radicals." New Yorker

Booklist 48:94 N 15 '51

Reviewed by Roi Ottley
Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 D 9 '51 500w

"A very human document, written with simplicity, dignity, and unaffected frankness." Leila Flower
+ Christian Science Monitor p13 N 24 '51 550w

Reviewed by M. C. Hughes
Commonweal 55:126 N 9 '51 500w

"This brief auto-psychoanalysis is one of the most effective statements in recent literature of the constant conflict experienced by the Negro between his reactions as a normal human being and those which life in America requires of him." R. W. Logan
+ Nation 173:427 N 17 '51 750w

"If only men would live up to Christ's teachings! Then not only the race problem but a good many other problems might be solved. This is Mr. Redding's final message. He himself is not very hopeful. He is full of the doubts and the uncertainties of our age. But in this eloquent, passionately written little book, he has done all that one thoughtful citizen, deeply concerned with the times, can do. He has shed his own light, which is considerable, on a problem which, as long as it remains unsolved, will weigh heavily on American civilization and on the American conscience." W. L. Shirer
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 N 11 '51 900w

" 'On Being Negro in America' is likely to infuriate some whites, and almost as many Negroes, perhaps enough so that both will see that the time wasted in perpetuating some of our myths is keeping us all less than whole. It would seem best that we too get on to something else." Bucklin Moon
N Y Times p47 O 21 '51 600w

"A moving chapter having to do with his own son's introduction to the business of being Negro indicates that Mr. Redding hasn't been able to achieve complete catharsis through the writing of this book, or to arrive at any very concrete solutions to his dilemma. He has done a valuable piece of work, however, by hacking away without venom at a great deal of the national mental underbrush that ensnarls the question."
New Yorker 27:154 N 3 '51 220w

Springf'd Republican p30A D 2 '51 240w

REED, DOUGLAS. Somewhere south of Suez; a further survey of the grand design of the twentieth century [with introd. to American readers]. 405p $3.75 Devin-Adair

916.8 World politics. South Africa—Politics and government 51-9856

A British journalist's observations on the South African scene, together with his examination of African and world political matters. He comes to the conclusion that the free, Christian Western world is in danger of extermination by a combination of Russian communism and political Zionism using African natives in a third World war.

Booklist 47:343 Je 1 '51

Reviewed by Roi Ottley
Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ap 29 '51 500w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn
New Repub 125:20 Jl 9 '51 550w

— New Statesman & Nation 39:724 Je 24 '50 300w

"It would be mischievous to recommend this book as an introduction to South Africa and her problems, but those who need no introduction may find in it some glimpses of the South African scene that they can recognise, as well as matter for some quiet chuckles." Cyril Ray
Spec 184:94 Jl 21 '50 550w

"While the book undoubtedly will be highly objectionable to many readers, and may even be considered slanderous by some, it could be counted as a worthwhile contribution to current writing on the basis that it at least exposes a trend of thought which presumably is not confined solely to the author." H. H.

Springf'd Republican p10D Ap 15 '51 320w

REED, ELIOT, pseud. of ERIC AMBLER AND CHARLES RODDA. Skytip. 222p $2.50 Doubleday

50-11192

Mystery story.

"Writing glides smoothly, with flashes of literary ardor, but plot effort is strained." Drexel Drake

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 F 18 '51 60w

"Something a bit different here."

+ Kirkus 18:665 N 1 '50 70w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ja 28 '51 200w

"Among the best spy novels, and those concerning an innocent bystander whose curiosity leads him into hair-raising terror, the names that lead all the rest include Graham Greene, Eric Ambler and Hammond Innes. 'Skytip' is a complex chase story in this tradition. . . It is worth noting that the Mr. Ambler mentioned above shares in the copyright of 'Skytip'—which would indicate to the addict that he is at least partly responsible for the wonderful excitement it generates." E. B.

N Y Times p27 Ja 21 '51 210w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ja 14 '51 80w

Sat R of Lit 34:24 F 3 '51 60w

REED, WARREN. She rode a yellow stallion. 323p $3 Bobbs

50-10529

A family chronicle the scene of which is Wisconsin from 1846 to 1919. Three generations of a Scottish-American family are the chief characters.

Booklist 47:116 N 15 '50

"This three-generation novel is warm, expert, homely with wind and weather, touched with imagination and love for the region and its old-timers, and done by a new writer of promise."

+ Christian Science Monitor p8 D 23 '50 220w

"What 'She Rode a Yellow Stallion' lacks in the craft of fiction it makes up in cheese craft."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ja 7 '51 100w

"Judged as a first novel this one is a better than average job. Although Mr. Reed inclines toward the cliché his descriptions are vivid and the dialogue skilfully handled. His ambitiousness, however, accounts for the novel's greatest shortcoming—sketchiness." J. M. G.

+ — Sat R of Lit 34:32 Ja 6 '51 270w

"Good characterization and story."

+ Wis Lib Bul 47:26 Ja '51

REED, WILLIAM MAXWELL. Patterns in the sky; the story of the constellations; il. by D. F. Levett Bradley. 125p $2.50 Morrow

523.89 Constellations—Juvenile literature

51-11618

Gives the mythological stories and astronomical facts about several of the most prominent constellations. For grades five to eight.

Booklist 48:38 S 15 '51

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '51

"Both entertaining and useful for all ages." J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews

+ Horn Bk 27:337 S '51 70w

Kirkus 19:350 Jl 15 '51 160w

"A must for the beginning astronomer of any age." M. I. Ross

+ Library J 76:1714 O 15 '51 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 S 9 '51 90w

"The text is simply and clearly written. Children who liked Reed's 'The Stars for Sam' will be glad to find this book." G. O. Blough

+ N Y Times p32 N 11 '51 90w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead

New Yorker 27:189 D 1 '51 60w

"The book is written in the friendly, informal style that has made so many friends for Maxwell Reed's earlier books."

+ Sat R of Lit 34:72 N 10 '51 130w

Wis Lib Bul 47:259 N '51

REES, JOHN RAWLINGS. Health of the mind. 207p $2.75 Norton

131.3 Mental hygiene 51-6690

"Addressed to the ordinary layman who needs to be more adequately informed on questions concerning his psychological make-up and the resulting problems of his behavior." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 48:43 O 1 '51

"A stimulating, yet never confining, introduction for the layman to the subject of mental health."

+ Kirkus 19:558 S 15 '51 150w

"A college student would find this book on an elementary level, but excellent for review purposes. . . Highly recommended." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 76:1418 S 15 '51 90w

New Repub 125:21 N 12 '51 30w

Reviewed by Herman Vollmer

N Y Times p16 N 25 '51 340w

REEVE, CHRISTOPHER. Murder steps out. 281p $2.50 Mill

51-9275

Detective story.

Bookmark 10:110 F '51 10w

"Smartly written and well constructed English countryside murder puzzle." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Mr 4 '51 50w

Kirkus 18:685 N 15 '50 70w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 Mr 4 '51 160w

"You may find it hard to believe that a writer in 1951 can with a straight face present a plot centered about a ruby 'removed from the head of a huge image of the Goddess Kali and known as the Red Eye of Death'. . . Yet, Mr. Reeve knows how to tell a story in so pleasant a British manner and how to fill in the chinks of a multiple plot so adroitly that even this unusually long and often preposterous mystery novel is never dull." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p15 F 11 '51 140w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p23 F 18 '51 90w

"Good bed-book."

Sat R of Lit 34:40 F 24 '51 50w

REEVES, RUTH ELIZABETH (TRAUGHBER). Lament for a lonesome corpse. 223p $2 Phoenix

51-10925

Detective story.

"Enough unfolding of surprise among stilted situations to promote interest." Drexel Drake

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Je 17 '51 50w

"A rather poorly motivated mystery."

— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Jl 15 '51 90w

"Unpretentious and harmless." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p16 Jl 1 '51 70w

"Characterizations confused and inconsistent, fundamental plot fair, writing sprightly. Proper editing might have made this into a nice little yarn." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Je 3 '51 70w

REHM, GEORGE. Twelve cows—and we're in clover; the story of a man who bought a farm; with an introd. by Louis Bromfield. 255p $3 Morrow

630.1 Farm life. Dairying 51-7266

"Some men love horses, some love dogs, and George Rehm love cows. He didn't find that he loved cows until, at the age of 53, he retired as a newspaper man and bought a farm in Pennsylvania, hoping to do a little subsistence farming. The farm had cows which went with it, for it was a run-down dairy farm. He kept the cows, learned dairying, and now, four years later, has forgotten all about subsistence farming. With his cows, he's living in clover and wouldn't swap places with most other people." (N Y Times) Index.

Booklist 48:96 N 15 '51

"The timely appearance of this excellent book nullifies my intention of writing, sometime, a similar volume to be called, 'Fifty-eight Cows and We're Bankrupt.'. . I am glad it happened to a man who could tell about it in his entertaining way. I hope his herd never gets so big the davenport suffers." John Gould

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 N 8 '51 600w

"An honest and unglorified record of neighborliness, verdant pastures, cool clean barns, and the vicissitudes as well as pleasures of a way of life."

+ Kirkus 19:469 Ag 15 '51 160w

Reviewed by H. S. Taylor

Library J 76:1702 O 15 '51 90w

"Sound fellow, Mr. Rehm, and a sound book." Stanley Walker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 N 25 '51 600w

"A rather quiet book which, happily, doesn't try to make [the author] out an ignorant clown turned loose among hayseeds. In it is some quiet humor, a wealth of factual information and an honest love of the land. It makes good reading for anyone who would like to know what can happen to a man in his fifties who decides to turn farmer and finds himself in love with cows." Hal Borland

+ N Y Times p34 N 18 '51 230w

Wis Lib Bul 47:249 N '51

REICHENBACH, HANS. Rise of scientific philosophy. 333p $3.75 Univ. of Calif. press

100 Philosophy. Science—Philosophy 51-9723

"The purpose of Dr. Reichenbach's work is to show that philosophy has proceeded from speculation to science. Beginning with examinations of shortcomings of traditional philosophy, author turns to exposition of modern scientific philosophy. He attempts to collect philosophic results developed through the analysis of modern science, and through the use of symbolic logic." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 47:287 Ap 15 '51

Reviewed by H. W. Steiger

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ag 2 '51 450w

"If the book is instructive, this is not so much because of the light shed on philosophy as on what a logical positivist must omit if he is to look at it from the somewhat oblique angle of his 'scientific philosophy.' The philosopher may welcome the publication for still another reason: he will see the contemporary 'therapist of ideas' at work and for once, can judge the positivist performance in a field where, deprived of its technical impressiveness, it cannot borrow from symbolic logic the cold light of formal precision. The result is a narrow-minded scientism, insensitive to all but mathematical logic and the mathematical sciences of nature, comparable to the usefulness of a knife, as sharp on one side as it is dull on the other." C. H. Hamburg

Ethics 61:336 Jl '51 400w

"Mature readers will find this a rewarding experience." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 76:516 Mr 15 '51 120w

Reviewed by Justus Buchler

Nation 172:619 Je 30 '51 850w

"The chapter on modern logic represents perfection in popular writing about a difficult theme. . . Much of the excellence is carried into the following chapter, which deals with probability, but toward the end of it there is apparent a tendency to exaggerate the significance of probability in exact science. The remainder of the book is effective writing and, in my opinion, very good philosophy. But it should be stated that the treatment is persuasive and not quite as objective as the book's title might indicate." Henry Margenau

+ — New Repub 125:20 Ag 13 '51 600w

"In many respects this is an important book. It is an informed summary of one of the richest movements of thought in recent times; and though it deals with questions of the highest abstractness, it successfully avoids, for the most part, the use of unexplained technical jargon. Mr. Reichenbach writes with vigor and bite, and there is the authority of a considerable reputation behind what he has to say. Nevertheless, the book misses its mark." Charles Frankel

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 S 16 '51 900w

"People hoping to get from science a panacea for all the problems that vex us and an answer to all our questions will derive small comfort from Dr. Reichenbach's book. But readers who have a critical approach, who are tired of obscurantism and fuzzy thinking, who want a fresh approach to how and why we think and act as we do, will derive much stimulation from 'The Rise of Scientific Philosophy.' " I. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 My 13 '51 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p616 S 28 '51 700w

"Much of the material, such as that on the verifiability of meaning and the emotive theory of ethics, will be familiar to readers of works on logical positivism. Of particular value, however, is Dr. Reichenbach's discussion of his own theory of probability."

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:149 Je '51 170w

REICHMANN, EVA G. Hostages of civilisation; the social sources of national socialist anti-Semitism. 281p $3 Beacon press

296 Jews—Political and social conditions. Jews in Germany 51-5986

"Dr. Reichmann states in her preface that what she set out to do was to determine 'whether a particular Jewish community was expelled and destroyed because the Gentiles amongst whom it lived decided for any serious reasons that life with the Jews had become unbearable for them.' To arrive at an answer, Dr. Reichmann has made a rather thoroughgoing analysis of modern German society. She has examined the mainsprings of German history, studied the development of the various classes which comprised Germany and, of course, the place of the Jewish community in that milieu." Canadian Forum

Reviewed by O. I. Janowsky

Ann Am Acad 278:243 N '51 950w

Reviewed by A. Andras

Canadian Forum 30:139 S '50 480w

"This study of the Jewish problem is devoted to the social causes of anti-Semitism in Hitler Germany, but the conclusions which it reaches have important implications for anyone who is interested in philosophizing about the Jews the world over." S. V. McCasland

+ Crozer Q 28:362 O '51 900w

"Her book is not easy to read. It is wordy and discursive and adopts too readily the jargon of technical terms derived from older sciences by the sociologist but which have nothing of the exactitude which science demands—or should demand—of technical terms. The reader could have been spared quite a lot of Dr. Reichmann's sociological quotations and also such argument on them as is, strictly speaking, irrelevant." R. T. Clark

Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 17 '50 450w

"Dr. Reichmann's current study of German Jewry is one of the least emotional books on the subject; she is a pupil of Morris Ginsberg, and applies her teacher's methods with thoroughness and considerable documentation."
+ New Statesman & Nation 39:284 Mr 11 '50 190w

Reviewed by J. H. Lichtblau
N Y Times p9 Jl 29 '51 480w

"Some of her distinctive arguments seem sound enough; others carry only a dialectical conviction that is almost too nice. The weakness of an otherwise sober and carefully documented thesis . . . is perhaps specially apparent if one compares the springs of anti-Semitism in Germany with those in Tsarist Russia or in the United States at the present day. Miss Reichmann, who attempts no such comparison, is rather too narrowly preoccupied with her own essentially German view of the special conditions of German historical development to be able to distinguish clearly between different psychological aspects of a recurring problem in the western world."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p163 Mr 17 '50 450w

REID, CORNELIUS L. Bel canto; principles and practices. 211p $4.50 Coleman-Ross

784.93 Singing and voice culture 51-818

"Mr. Reid has gone to the sources—Tosi, Mancini, and more recent works—and digested the evidence on just what is properly meant by the term bel canto. This is, the author concludes, the exact opposite of the modern 'scientific' method of singing. The serious student should consider both sides and decide whether or not the basic principles have been changed by modern conditions." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '51

"There is plenty to ponder over in this provocative and readable book. Recommended." P. L. Miller
+ Library J 76:329 F 15 '51 80w

"From an examination of the book it is obvious that extensive study and care have gone into its preparation. The major principles of the bel canto technique are sufficiently documented to assure the reader of a minimum of inference on the part of the author. The book is well-indexed and includes a bibliography." M. F. Mickel
+ Music Lib Assn Notes 8:335 Mr '51 650w

"This is an earnest and sincere book. What Cornelius Reid has to say about the principles on which the concept of bel canto rests is sound and valuable. . . How successful the author has been in describing procedures designed to assist the student in learning how to sing beautifully is another matter." Sergius Kagen
+ — Sat R of Lit 34:31 F 24 '51 270w

REILLY, MRS HELEN (KIERAN). Lament for the bride. 249p $2.50 Random house 51-11443

Detective story.

Kirkus 19:238 My 1 '51 80w

."It's a good one, although Mrs. Reilly hangs her story on one of those artificial situations where a few words of explanation would have cleared up everything."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ag 5 '51 140w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
N Y Times p17 Ag 5 '51 110w

"Not one of Mrs. Reilly's best, but still well above average."
+ — New Yorker 27:87 Ag 18 '51 80w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 15 '51 80w

"Suspenseful and interesting; characters three-dimensional—but the actual mystery confusing, leaving one feeling sold out." Kathleen Sproul
+ — Sat R of Lit 34:45 Jl 21 '51 40w

REINHERZ, NATHAN. Quest of the sages' stone; il. by Henry C. Pitz. 262p $2.75 Crowell 51-937

Historical-adventure novel of fifteenth century England written for boys of ten to fourteen. The story revolves around the search for a mysterious manuscript, reaching its climax when the hero, David Carvel, brings the manuscript to the printer, Caxton.

Booklist 47:277 Ap 1 '51

"A well-rounded story with a completely satisfactory and believable ending." J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews
+ Horn Bk 27:253 Jl '51 120w

Kirkus 19:2 Ja 1 '51 170w

"Not a necessary purchase; useful to libraries needing material on this period." Elizabeth Burr
Library J 76:531 Mr 15 '51 80w

"Adventure predominates in the story, which, however, is full of information about the Middle Ages. The boy or girl of about eleven to thirteen who reads it will find the stirrings of new thinking contrasted to old, in David and some of those he meets. Henry Pitz contributes a few striking, powerful pictures. The typography and printing are excellent." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Mr 11 '51 240w

"The story moves swiftly and, despite a rather florid style, the fifteenth century background is vigorously drawn. Less convincing is David's change of heart when the true nature of the book is revealed. . . It is inspiring but a little too sudden to be wholly effective." E. L. B.
+ — N Y Times p30 F 25 '51 150w

"This is an unusual adventure story, illustrated with fine drawings and especially satisfying in type and format."
+ Sat R of Lit 34:52 My 12 '51 250w

REISCHAUER, EDWIN OLDFATHER. United States and Japan [maps by R. L. Williams]. (American foreign policy lib) 357p $4 Harvard univ. press

327.73 Japan—History—Allied occupation, 1945-. Japan—Foreign relations—U.S. U.S. —Foreign relations—Japan. National characteristics, Japanese 50-3943

For descriptive note see Annual for 1950.

"On the whole, it is ably and carefully done, but it inevitably falls victim to the limitations of brevity in its attempt to cover a civilization in one small volume. Sometimes it adheres a little too closely to the Western tradition as to what books on Japan should say." T. K. Noss
+ — Am J Soc 56:378 Ja '51 950w

Bookmark 10:6 O '50 30w

Reviewed by George Bennett
Canadian Forum 31:69 Je '51 650w

"A survey so ambitious could hardly have been attempted with success by anyone lacking the experience and scholarship possessed by Mr. Reischauer. These qualities have enabled him to maintain a uniformly high standard of interest, accuracy and freshness throughout the book." G. R. Storry
+ Pacific Affairs 24:202 Je '51 650w

"Despite the authentic manner in which the material is presented, a few points of emphasis are debatable. For example, it is probable that Japan actually borrowed more from Germany, especially in political theory, governmental structure, education, law and military organization, than from the United States. . . These minor points detract little from the work as a whole. It is a well-written and penetrating analysis which will do much toward clarifying the basic problems which confront the United States in Japan." Hugh Borton
+ — Pol Sci Q 66:130 Mr '51 750w

"Addressed to the general reader, this book should be studied carefully by all persons who are interested in the international responsibilities of the United States."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:466 D '50 200w

REISCHAUER, E. O.—Continued

"In many ways Mr. Reischauer's book is the first to be written about a Far Eastern country from an 'area' approach. It is a generally successful pioneer effort to present the whole picture, to bring together in a meaningful way the traditions, the character-structure, and the political, social, and economic institutions of the Japanese. This is the sort of approach that we must have. It can be achieved either by trying to master all the disciplines yourself or by bringing them together in teamwork. Mr. Reischauer has chosen the former approach." G. E. Taylor

+ Yale R n s 40:331 winter '51 750w

REITMAN, FRANCIS. Psychotic art. 180p il $4.50 Int. univs. press

616.8 Mental diseases. Art 51-11222

"A British psychiatrist distinctly enhances current studies on the art products of the mentally ill. Since schizophrenics are almost the only contributors to psychotic art, both symptoms and art are interpreted from a clinical standpoint, using the psycho-physiological data of a biological approach, speculative and interpretative approaches are rejected as unverifiable. The status of art therapy in the treatment of mental disease and a brief discussion of some great psychotic artists are also included. Bibliography, index." Library J

Reviewed by J. M. Scherr
Library J 76:1027 Je 15 '51 100w

"The treatment is often heavy with learning. Sometimes experiments which do not seem to be particularly relevant are dragged in, perhaps because they may appear to make the whole affair seem more securely scientific. In spite of all this it is a good book for anybody who will read it with care, and match it up against other treatments of the same topics. It raises a number of profound and important issues. Even if the treatment is partial—and Dr. Reitman himself points out that this is inevitable—the part that is treated is brought to some definite and decisive conclusions. It is a serious and significant contribution to a topic which all too frequently has been publicly presented lightheartedly and with insufficient authority."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p56 Ja 26 '51 1250w

RELYEA, GLADYS M. Night the storm came; il. by Scott Maclain. $1.75; lib ed $2.25 Aladdin

51-12375

"Thunder was the one noise that Ricky did not like. When he and his boxer went for a stay at Uncle Steve's light house, the noises all around him were wonderful. . . But thunderheads blew up and Ricky wanted to go home. Uncle Steve then taught him the hows and whys of lightning and thunder and how to time the distance of the lightning. Ricky lost his fear, but Boxie learned not a thing and still ran for the bed at a distant rumble." N Y Times

Booklist 48:110 N 15 '51
Bookmark 11:35 N '51
Kirkus 19:346 Jl 15 '51 110w

"Recommended." Juanita Walker
+ Library J 76:1572 O 1 '51 50w

"Clever and useful for boys afraid of thunder or lightning. . . Information about weather is cleverly and briefly given." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p32 N 11 '51 70w

"The easy text, styled for second-graders, is accompanied by simple pictures in nautical blue and white." Miriam James
+ N Y Times p39 N 11 '51 110w

RENDINA, MRS LAURA (JONES) COOPER. Debbie Jones; frontispiece by Ruth King. 244p $2.50 Little

50-12118

A sequel to Roommates (Book Review Digest 1948). This describes Debbie's second year at Pine Ridge, her problems, her two crushes, and her meeting with Peter. For girls ten to fifteen.

Horn Bk 26:483 N '50 50w

"The author has turned boarding school inside out, but even with a seam showing here and there, this is a delightful book."
+ Kirkus 18:611 O 1 '50 180w

"Girls may find this story a help in interpreting and solving their similar problems. For early teens." E. E. Frank
+ Library J 75:2160 D 15 '50 70w

"All this is plausibly written, but somehow it doesn't jell into a convincing whole. It will, of course, please young girls with its details of school life, but it lacks the thought and substance which made 'Roommates' so memorable." E. L. B.
+ — N Y Times p42 O 22 '50 150w

RENIER, GUSTAAF JOHANNES. History: its purpose and method. 272p $3 Beacon press

907 Historiography. History—Methodology [51-998]

A treatise on the meaning and methods of history and historians by the professor of Dutch history in the University of London.

"If there exists a clearer or more practically useful interpretation of history itself and its relationships with the humanistic sciences than is contained in this beautifully written book, the reviewer has yet to discover it." S. W. Reed
+ Am Soc R 15:836 D '50 230w

"Renier's knowledge is wide, and his choice of words is often unusual and fitting; however at times he seems to choose words like a baton-twirler. Here is a book for individuals who wish to think deeply on questions which may affect little their historical methodology but which will enrich their minds and mellow their tolerances. The final value attached to this work by a reader rests, I suspect, on his feelings toward pragmatism." Garland Downum
+ Ann Am Acad 274:228 Mr '51 450w

Reviewed by Arthur Child
Ethics 61:233 Ap '51 650w

Reviewed by Emery Neff
New Repub 124:28 Ja 15 '51 1050w

"Mr. Renier's book is a notable contribution to this literature. It is the work of a practising historian, not (as has often been the case) of a philosopher trying to fit history into preconceived framework. At the same time it is based on a consistently held and explicitly avowed philosophy—that of pragmatism." J. R. Strayer
+ Sat R of Lit 34:14 Mr 17 '51 700w
School & Society 73:80 F 3 '51 30w

"With the keen insight of a master craftsman of a meditative mind describing his own craft, Professor Renier of the University of London writes sanely and pleasantly of the nature and attributes of history." J. L. Godfrey
+ Social Forces 29:343 Mr '51 300w

"Professor Renier's work is grounded in great erudition and much thought, has a hard core of knowledge and sense, but is overgrown by the weeds of an exuberant and excitedly aggressive diction. The person of the author is all the time in the foreground, addressing the reader, and by too much personal exhibitionism diverting attention from the theme and its deeper treatment."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p47 Ja 26 '51 320w

Reviewed by Crane Brinton
Yale R n s 40:560 spring '51 270w

REPPY, ALISON. Civil rights in the United States. 298p $4.50 Central bk. co.

323 Civil rights 51-69

"An analysis of Supreme Court decisions in the area of civil rights during the last three years." N Y Times

Reviewed by R. J. Harris
Am Pol Sci R 45:905 S '51 650w

Reviewed by Roger Baldwin
Ann Am Acad 275:177 My '51 300w

"It is always valuable to have new evaluations of our basic Constitutional freedoms, and especially so today. This book is a welcome reminder that liberty is not to be had for the mere asking but is the fruit of vigilance, courage and understanding." S. M. Blinken

+ Churchman 165:16 Mr 15 '51 170w

Reviewed by H. H. Steiner

Columbia Law R 51:676 My '51 1650w

"In every respect Dean Reppy's book is an able and thorough presentation of the development of our civil rights in a very vital period of our national history. This is a scholarly work and yet a very modest one; the author does not express his own constitutional theories, but confines himself in the main to what the courts have said and done." L. P. Stryker

+ Harvard Law R 64:1221 My '51 1200w

"The dean of New York University Law School has rendered a scholar's and lawyer's service to every layman concerned with the wide fields of the law and practice of civil rights. . . It is aimed at general readers in need of a handy reference volume. Nothing comparable has been done in the literature of civil rights; and since the field of law keeps widening under the pressures of conflict, it is to be hoped that Dean Reppy and his colleagues will make the study the first of a series." R. N. Baldwin

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 F 25 '51 650w

"A reviewer must always be careful lest he condemn an author for not having written a book he never intended to write. None the less, this book does not quite meet the needs of any one audience. It will be useful to the general reader, but it falls so often into a dry recital of the facts and decisions of large numbers of cases that such a reader will find his attention lagging. On the other hand, the specialist will find Dean Reppy's analysis of cases rather elementary. Finally, it is necessary to mention occasional inaccurate reporting of detail in this book." R. K. Carr

+ — N Y Times p23 F 18 '51 380w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:179 Je '51 170w

RESNER, LAWRENCE. Eternal stranger; the plight of the modern Jew from Baghdad to Casablanca; foreword by Bartley C. Crum. 216p $3 Doubleday

296 Jews—Persecutions. Jews in the East (Near East) 51-13141

"Formerly a New York Times reporter, this American visitor to the Orient in 1950 expands his diary into a travelogue describing the strange political history, migrations, persecutions, and cultures of Jews ('Eternal Strangers') in Morocco, Algeria, Tunisia, Djerba, Libya, Egypt, Syria, Iraq, Yemen, etc." (Library J) Index.

"Mr. Resner is sympathetic to the traditional plight of oriental Jewry, but his conscious attempt to avoid psychologizing is a definite lack in the book. A book which will not particularly please Zionists in its bareness, nor is there enough here for a scholarly audience."

Kirkus 19:427 Ag 1 '51 130w

"Interestingly written; most valuable for rare, unknown, and enlightening facts about socio-economic statuses of Jews of the Orient." J. M. Sherr

+ Library J 76:1331 S 1 '51 120w

"'Eternal Stranger' is told in terms of the people themselves, and because Mr. Resner is a skilled writer they come to life, and you share the horrors they are undergoing and you share, too, the indignation felt by the author." Quentin Reynolds

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 N 25 '51 600w

"Resner's report combines a flat rewriting of historical data with routine contemporary reporting, which occasionally rises to moderate distinction. His account has the authenticity of personal contact; he saw the places and the people, and he came away with justified anger and distress. His story is brightened by warm tributes to two sets of heroes: the airlift pilots, many of them American, who flew the 'Magic Carpet,' bringing tens of thousands to safety in Israel; and the staff of the Joint Distribution Committee." Hal Lehrman

+ N Y Times p22 O 14 '51 650w

San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 23 '51 200w

Springf'd Republican p10D O 7 '51 180w

RET, ETIENNE. Advice to a young artist. 86p il $2.75 Dodd

751.4 Painting. Drawing—Instruction 51-12107

"In the impersonal role of teacher, the book encourages the young artist to find fun in his painting, to 'feel' the picture in line and color rather than laboriously and mechanically cover the panel with his oil paints. In addition to practical, how-to-do exercises and sound technical instructions, Mr. Ret shares the satisfaction experienced by those artists who paint, not to public standards, but to the higher dictates of their own consciences and emotions." Christian Science Monitor

"There is an admixture of humor and seriousness, sincerity and levity, tradition and independence, that is very refreshing in a book of this kind." Gary Sheahan

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 S 30 '51 100w

Reviewed by William Drake

Christian Science Monitor p7 S 20 '51 170w

"It bears the stamp of spontaneous art, and thus is an invaluable guide for the new painter—or for the tired one in need of stimulus." D. P.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p32 N 4 '51 280w

RETI, RUDOLPH RICHARD. The thematic process in music. 362p $5 Macmillan

781.61 Music—Theory 51-10953

"A systematic, ground-breaking work in which the author examines first things, musically speaking. He draws upon the evidence of five centuries to justify his thesis that the thematic process was first consciously introduced by the classicists (Mozart, Haydn, Beethoven, and their contemporaries) and that, as it became subconscious and increasingly ineffective, music lost a constructive technique of prime importance for which it has yet to compensate in any-thorough-going-way." Library J

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '51

"The book is not for the reader who runs. It needs to be pondered over, and the ideas therein adjusted and readjusted by the specialist to his own notion of the materials and techniques of music. It should lay the ground for further studies along similar lines." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 76:866 My 15 '51 150w

"One of the remarkable characteristics of music, especially of compositions conceived on a large scale and made up of different movements, is the inner unity which often pervades the whole in spite of a seeming diversity in many of the parts. Dr. Reti has made a detailed and provocative analysis of this unitas multiplex in a book which can be read with profit and interest by the amateur as well as the professional musician." C. C. Pratt

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 8:699 S '51 550w

"Dr. Reti is a man of culture and of musical insight, and his thorough knowledge of, and deep love for, the vast body of music of which he writes is open to no question. However, he makes it difficult for the reviewer, for along with very much that is shrewdly and profoundly observed the book contains very much indeed that tends to vitiate its genuine qualities. Dr. Reti seems not only to fall, but at times even plunge, into several very common traps which beset the thematic analyst. . . This reviewer feels obliged, while paying full respect to Dr. Reti's learning, his very considerable insight, his undeniable sincerity, and the importance of the problems which he discusses, to question both the final validity of his premises and the final soundness of his conclusions." Roger Sessions

RETI, R. R.—Continued

+ — Sat R of Lit 34:20 O 27 '51 1050w

Springf'd Republican p22A S 9 '51 270w

REXROTH, KENNETH. Beyond the mountains [verse plays]. (Directions ser) 190p $1.50 New directions

812 51-9631

"This volume contains four plays—'Phaedra,' 'Iphigenia at Aulis,' 'Hermaios,' 'Berenike.' They are short: I suppose they can be called 'one-act plays.' . . As the titles indicate, the situations in these plays are derived from Greek antiquity, the first two from standard mythology, the last two, which are related sequentially, from Rexroth's imagined re-creation of a historical episode. The motivating idea of all these plays is the same—the struggle of the individual to transcend the web of events through strength of will or purity of love or the euphoria of acceptance." Nation

"The verse is somber and cadenced, the action intense and compact. However, for the general reader, these plays of lust and violence have little of life in them—dark, dim, difficult, they will have a limited appeal."

Kirkus 18:690 N 15 '50 90w

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 76:868 My 15 '51 30w

"The ultimate question is: Can these plays be performed? I am not qualified to answer. But Rexroth has obviously written them with performance in mind, and I think I should like to see them if they were well done. The doing would be hard, for these plays are to be performed as a dance, formerly, arbitrarily. In each of them the highest moment is an actual dance, and therefore the music would be important too. Only the most imaginative of directors could make this attempt, and even he would consult the poet often. Yet the attempt should be made." Hayden Carruth

+ Nation 172:328 Ap 7 '51 600w

Reviewed by P. D. Smith

New Statesman & Nation 41:512 My 5 '51 480w

"Rexroth is one of the leading craftsmen of the day. There is in him no compromise with the decayed line of past experience. His work is cleanly straightforward. The reek of polluted Shakespeare just isn't in it, or him. I don't know any Greek, but I can imagine that a Greek, if he knew our language as we ought to but don't, would like the athletic freshness of these words." W. C. Williams

+ N Y Times p5 Ja 28 '51 900w

"It seems to me that, remarkably intelligent as it is, Mr. Rexroth's plotting has been just a shade too ambitious for his poetic gift. To predict that these plays may have to content themselves with a succes. d'estime in the field which includes Murder in the Cathedral and At The Hawk's Well is also to place them securely in the same category and to point to their great interest and suggestiveness." R. W. Flint

+ — Poetry 78:356 S '51 1600w

Reviewed by Frank Jones

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ap 8 '51 300w

Reviewed by Howard Griffin

Sat R of Lit 34:36 Jl 21 '51 180w

REYES, ALFONSO. Position of America, and other essays; selected and tr. from the Spanish by Harriet de Onís; foreword by Federico de Onís. 172p $5 Knopf

970.04 America 50-10378

"To the book-reading public this Mexican sage makes his first appearance in this volume. Shepherded on to the English-speaking stage by Harriet de Onís, introduced to the American reading public by Professor Federico de Onís, he appears in the best tradition of the Spanish-speaking scholar who has for so many years been sure of friends and advisers in the Spanish Department of Columbia University. . . His translator presents ten essays which give a reasonably good cross-section of Reyes's prose and wisely refrains from trying to put his poetry into English. His famous Vision of Anáhuac is here, and a revealing essay on the native poetry which the Spaniards found in Mexico. . . His more solid and provocative thinking appears in the title essay and in one on the American mind which precedes it." Nation

Booklist 47:217 F 15 '51

"The prosaic title of this little volume gives no hint of the elegance of its style, of its typography and format, or of the varied nature of its literary content. . . Señor Reyes's eclecticism undoubtedly is remarkable. Quotations from the great literatures of Europe and Asia fit easily and naturally into the native Latin-American background. His scholarship is never ponderous. . . The disconnected glimpses of Señor Reyes afforded in these essays give some indication of the originality of his thought and the purity of his style. Invariably they exhibit the rich vein of humanism and urbanity that reminds us of elements too frequently lacking in our more impetuous literature of the North." Henry Sowerby

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 F 3 '51 480w

Kirkus 18:622 O 1 '50 100w

"One hopes that some day the Reyes thinking may appear contemporaneously, so that we know what he is thinking while he is thinking it. . . Perhaps Mrs. Onís, having broken through the barrier that divides us from Reyes, may give us a new book of comment while it is still news. Thanks to her we know what Reyes thought about various yesterdays—the next thing we want to know is what he thinks about today." Mildred Adams

+ Nation 172:16 Ja 6 '51 650w

"His thought moves in transparent, widening, overlapping, concentric circles from its Mexican center. The color grows more intense as we move toward that center, so that the best and most vivid essays are the most specifically Mexican." B. D. Wolfe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 D 24 '50 1150w

"His book should appeal both to cultural curiosity and to those who wish to know about Hispanic America more than is usually told in academic treatises, touristic surveys and Guntherlike reports." Jorge Manach

+ N Y Times p25 O 22 '50 600w

"The work of Señor Reyes is an excellent example of the kind of dazzlingly brilliant minds to be found among Latin intellectuals. By the most rigid tests it does not disclose, especially in the more general essays, either striking originality or profundity nor is it likely to reach beyond a small and selected public, but the powers of suggestion native to a mind essentially poetical are everywhere present." Herschel Brickell

+ Sat R of Lit 34:16 Je 9 '51 750w

REYNARD, ELIZABETH. Mutinous wind; il. by William Barss. 210p $2.75 Houghton

51-10994

A tale of witchcraft and pirates on Cape Cod in the early 1700's. It is the story of beautiful Maria Hallett who loved a sailor and wove a spell to make him successful, but thereby wrought her own tragic end.

Booklist 47:363 Je 15 '51

Bookmark 10:232 Jl '51 30w

Reviewed by Mildred Walker

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Je 10 '51 470w

Kirkus 19:194 Ap 1 '51 110w

"Witches, pirates, Cape Cod and good writing—need one say more! . . . Not every reader will respond to the story but there will be those who will be grateful the library chose to buy the more unusual." M. P. McKay

+ Library J 76:960 Je 1 '51 80w

"The author, a descendant of a versatile line of Cape Cod seamen including admirals, pirates and plentiful skippers, is unquestionably an authority on this long-steeped Capiana, a strong, strange old brew. But as fiction writer she has not here been so successful; too much legend has been compressed and utilized at any cost. To be effective as a story it should have been told more simply, sparsely, and selectively." L. T. Nicholl
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Je 17 '51 380w

"One may accept the story as a fanciful, even poetic tale, or read it as an allegory. It is vague and altogether improbable, yet it has warmth and spirit." W. B. Hayward
N Y Times p23 Je 10 '51 120w

New Yorker 27:65 Jl 7 '51 80w

"The tale is told as gravely and as calmly as a children's story, the marvelous and the miraculous intermingled with the everyday. Obviously Miss Reynard loves the Cape and its people, so that a pleasant warmth and tenderness suffuse these pages. She is not afraid to be at times extremely sentimental, though that is not an important fault in a book of this kind. The prose is less sure. Often it is pedestrian, occasionally it becomes stilted and conspicuously quaint; these lapses are the more to be noted because in other passages Miss Reynard has reproduced the lively rhythms and lilting poetic quality of the old prose balladry with fine effect." Sigrid de Lima
+ — Sat R of Lit 34:10 Je 30 '51 500w

Wis Lib Bul 47:167 Je '51

REYNAUD, PAUL. Unite or perish; a dynamic program for a united Europe. 214p $3 Simon & Schuster

341.184 United States of Europe (proposed) 51-10306

A French statesman, premier of France in 1940, discusses world politics and presents arguments in favor of a European federation, a third power to hold the balance between two giants of East and West.

Booklist 47:339 Je 1 '51

Reviewed by Gilbert Twiss
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 3 '51 260w

Current Hist 20:347 Je '51 130w

Foreign Affairs 30:153 O '51 20w

Kirkus 19:144 Mr 1 '51 150w

Nation 172:593 Je 23 '51 140w

Reviewed by Frederick Kuh
New Repub 124:18 My 21 '51 650w

"What M. Reynaud has to say in this important book is worth our attention, even though we dare not assume that he is representative of French opinion." Crane Brinton
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ap 1 '51 1250w

"M. Reynaud has not been an altogether attractive figure in French politics. In the Thirties he displayed great realism in his attitude toward Germany; but defects of character and will prevented him from living up as Premier to the cogency of his intellectual insights as a Deputy. As a champion of a united Europe, he lacks the moral force of Mr. Churchill. His stern and somewhat unpleasant clarity still remain; as in the late Thirties he is surely right on the central issue, and his book is a contribution of high value to a subject of the highest importance." Arthur Schlesinger, Jr.
+ — N Y Times p20 Ap 8 '51 800w

Reviewed by René Albrecht-Carrié
Pol Sci Q 66:610 D '51 750w

Reviewed by Albert Guerard
Sat R of Lit 34:14 My 26 '51 700w

REYNOLDS, ADRIAN, pseud. See Long, A. R.

REYNOLDS, BARBARA LEONARD. Alias for death. 188p $2.50 Coward-McCann 51-9105

Detective story.

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ja 21 '51 200w

"A well-constructed puzzle is all but smothered in the lavender-and-old-lace frills and furbelows of the main character's spinsterish personality." Hillis Mills
N Y Times p27 F 18 '51 160w

"Pretty involved and explanatory toward the end, but generally pleasing to read." L. G. Offord
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ja 14 '51 100w

"Close to a bore."
— Sat R of Lit 34:24 F 3 '51 50w

REYNOLDS, ERNEST RANDOLPH. Modern English drama; a survey of the theatre from 1900; with a foreword by Allardyce Nicoll. 240p il $3.50 Univ. of Okla. press

822.09 Theater—Great Britain. English drama—History and criticism 51-10539

A review of the British stage during the last fifty years. Classified under such heads as: the literary drama—ballet—opera; spectacle drama; the drama of ideas; drama of character; narrative drama. Lists British theaters and touring companies. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 47:342 Je 1 '51

"Possible as a text, it is certainly a volume for a sizable theatre collection in a university or large public library." George Freedley
+ Library J 76:868 My 15 '51 60w

REYNOLDS, GRAHAM. Introduction to English water-colour painting. 64p 66pl $5 Scribner

751.42 Water color painting 51-10361

"Deputy Keeper, Department of Paintings, Victoria and Albert Museum, provides analysis of work from eighteenth century on; illustrations, in black and white, frontispiece in color, of landscapes and illustrations by Cotman, Crome, Whistler and others." Library J

Kirkus 19:85 F 1 '51 150w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut
Library J 76:1227 Ag '51 30w

Times [London] Lit Sup p16 Ja 12 '51 300w

REYNOLDS, JAMES. Grand wide way. 347p $3 Creative age 51-9234

Life among the Irish upper classes is the background of this novel. Johnny Lassitter, home from ten years of wandering in foreign lands, is the hero. The story follows a few years in the lives of Johnny and his family, their servants, and their horses. With the death of his adored, aristocratic grandmother Johnny inherits the home he had always loved, but never expected to have.

"Mr. Reynolds is a master architect of these Irish country places. He brings them alive. His book is full of Irish humor, informed with affection, and musical with a dialect which makes English conversation seem stiff and mannered in comparison. The plot has little propulsion; it is the characters who draw you forward." Edward Weeks
+ Atlantic 187:74 Ap '51 240w

Booklist 47:274 Ap 1 '51

Bookmark 10:158 Ap '51 30w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Cath World 174:73 O '51 210w

"Recommended as delightful entertainment." M. H. Zipprich
+ Library J 76:180 F 1 '51 100w

"Here is a world such as few of us have ever seen except in the movies or photographed in lush magazines. By and large, its people seem intended to typify the heights and depths and queernesses and excesses to which human nature is said to be prone when freed of most of the common constraints . . . but Mr. Reynold's pride in his characters and their possessions often leads him into the didacticism of the personal conductor. For an excursion, however, into the romantic, fabulous, even prodigious, he gives you as good a run for your money as the hero's horse." Mary Ross

REYNOLDS, JAMES—Continued

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 F 18 '51 400w

"Mr. Reynolds, who has written a whole book on horses, offers us some colorful scenes of Irish racing meets. There is much of that Irish racy language with which John Synge has acquainted us. Background and décor are superb. . . All in all, this is a friendly novel, a first-rate escape in these long-drawn days of crisis." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p4 F 11 '51 280w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Sat R of Lit 34:30 My 5 '51 290w

REYNOLDS, LLOYD GEORGE. Structure of labor markets; wages and labor mobility in theory and practice. 328p $4.50; college ed $3.50 Harper

331.21 Wages. Labor supply—U.S. Migration of workers 51-2556

"Professor Reynolds has divided this analysis of wages and labor mobility into two sections. Part One is a case study of a New England city which should certainly be representative of the general industrial labor market pattern in postwar United States. In Part Two, Dr. Reynolds reexamines traditional labor market theory and presents his own stimulating and flexible conclusions on a question of first importance to economists." (San Francisco Chronicle) Index.

Reviewed by R. A. Lester
Am Econ R 41:1003 D '51 1150w

Booklist 47:323 My 15 '51

Reviewed by D. K. Oko
Library J 76:603 Ap 1 '51 200w

"We are glad to see the publication of this excellent final report on the Yale labor market study, for it is one of several such studies which are adding gradually but substantially to our understanding of labor mobility." F. T. Malm

+ Management R 40:712 N '51 220w

San Francisco Chronicle p11 My 27 '51 60w

"Professor Reynolds has done a very skillful writing job. While a considerable amount of detail of the field investigation is included, the tedium often accompanying such reports is absent. Throughout the book the reader is made aware of the fact that the study covers one group of workers at one time and place, but the wider scope of the specific issues is emphasized constantly." Lois MacDonald

+ Survey 87:397 S '51 450w

"The work is perceptive and thought provoking, and represents a real contribution to the literature of labor markets."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:262 S '51 240w

RHODE, IRMA. Viennese cookbook. 260p $3 Wyn

641.5 Cookery, Austrian 51-3006

"A great variety of typical Viennese recipes using ingredients available here. Not for the inexperienced cook, nor for one concerned with economy." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 47:341 Je 1 '51

"A specialty cookbook, not intended as a basic one. Not too general in interest."
Kirkus 19:46 Ja 15 '51 200w

Reviewed by Charlotte Turgeon
N Y Times p14 My 13 '51 80w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 28 '51 130w

"This book gives one the feel of Vienna in its heyday, with its color, its customs, its cafés, and its restaurants, that made the most of veal and pork because beef and lamb were scarce and inferior. The characteristic dishes and drinks here presented, with their nostalgia stirring names, touch more than one's palate." Lawton Mackall

+ Sat R of Lit 34:45 Mr 10 '51 60w

RHODE, JOHN, pseud. See Street, C. J. C.

RHODES, SOLOMON ALHADEF. Gérard De Nerval, 1808-1855, poet, traveler, dreamer. 416p $4.75 Philosophical lib.

B or 92 Gérard de Nerval, Gérard Labrunie, known as

Biography of a nineteenth century French poet, forerunner of Baudelaire and Rimbaud in the Romantic movement.

Reviewed by John Randolph
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Je 10 '51 90w

"Nerval's name (it was really Labrunie), never well known outside of France, now awakens only faint echoes. His importance in French literature is scarcely enough to entitle him to such a full biography as this. . . His was perhaps the most pathological case in the whole history of the Romantic movement. But he deserves respect for his unquestionable genius and for the quality of his best work." W. E. G.

Christian Century 68:81 Ja 17 '51 330w

"Recommended for libraries interested in French literature." W. K. Harrison
Library J 76:38 Ja 1 '51 110w

"As a poet and story-teller and founder of the Symbolist movement, Gérard de Nerval has long been acclaimed by French critics. Barrès envied him: Proust saluted him: more recently he has had the questionable honour of a Surrealist accolade. To the English public his merits are relatively unfamiliar; and Mr. S. A. Rhodes's biography, imperfect as it is, disfigured by many unfortunate touches of facetiousness and slanginess, contains a mass of absorbing information about his life and literary growth." Peter Quennell

+ — New Statesman & Nation 41:596 My 26 '51 1750w

"The casual American reader will find here only the history of a rather odd personality, and he may finish the book unaware that Gérard de Nerval has a greater claim to his attention than mere eccentricity would warrant." E. D. Sullivan

N Y Times p4 Jl 15 '51 460w

"Gerard's life seemed not to have any progression, any maturation of outlook. He simply aged. In the absence of an internal structure that would throw into bolder relief his character and the more significant events of his career, we find a sort of picaresque narrative in which all the parts slide, as did the poet's life. The result is a lack of emphasis on the important phase of his Byronic career. This principal weakness, however, should not turn the reader away from an interesting and informative biography." C. E. M.

San Francisco Chronicle p23 F 18 '51 320w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:130 Je '51 250w

RHYS, MRS HELEN CHRISTINA EASSON REES. See Oliver, J. pseud.

RIBALOW, HAROLD URI, ed. This land, these people [by Howard Fast and others] with an introd. by the editor. 302p $3.75 Beechhurst press

Short stories—Collections 50-11139

An anthology about Jewish life in America. It is made up of short stories, written by Jewish authors. Partial contents: Where are your guns? by Howard Fast; Red necktie, by Jo Sinclair; A lady of my own, by Michael Seide; Death of an actor, by David Bernstein; Under the dome: Aleph, by Waldo Frank; The Minyan, by Alexander Klein; The Kinnehórrah, by Jerome Weidman; Writ of divorcement, by Ludwig Lewisohn; Maurie finds his medium, by Meyer Levin; Nobody can beat Freidkin's meats, by Arthur Kober; Resurgam, by Louis Zara; A bitter farce, by Delmore Schwartz; Act of faith, by Irwin Shaw.

"This collection of short stories accomplishes an astonishing feat; it creates, from two dozen stories by as many authors, written over a period of twenty-five years, an integrated book which reads as if it were one continuous narrative, about a group of people who lived in various parts of the United States at different times, whose individual acts rippled out from one to another ring of cousins and uncles like circles from a stone dropped in a pool. It is a strong, startling book, a tribute to the editorial skill of Harold U. Ribalow." Thomas Sugrue
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Ja 21 '51 650w

"This is the first time, we believe, that stories about Jewish life in America have been gathered in one volume. There are twenty-four of them in this anthology, all published before, all highly readable, selected with an eye to giving the reader a composite picture of Jews in this country." Louis Falstein
+ Sat R of Lit 34:16 Jl 14 '51 280w

"While the collection contains some excellent writing, as typified by Irwin Shaw and Jo Sinclair, much of the material is not up to this standard, although a piece such as Howard Fast's "Where Are Your Guns?' makes up for all the other undistinguished writing." R. C.
+ — Springf'd Republican p8C Ap 29 '51 130w

RICCI, JOHN ETTORE. Phase rule and heterogenous equilibrium. 505p $12 Van Nostrand
541.39 Phase rule and equilibrium 51-2329

"A thorough and rather original introduction to the applications of the phase rule, first stated by Gibbs in 1876, and now recognized as one of the basic laws of chemical reactions. It is written on the graduate level. Though specific data for a variety of systems are given, the work is not intended as a reference book of data on equilibria in specific systems. Papers from which examples are drawn are cited in footnotes throughout the work, in addition to the selected list of books at the end." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. I. Katzin
Am Chem Soc J 73:5518 N '51 650w

"The book is systematic and readable, and should be very useful to the student of phase rule." Henry Eyring
+ Chem & Eng N 29:2672 Je 25 '51 180w

"A scholarly and at times lengthy treatise on the fundamental yet deceptively simple principles of phase behavior and of phase diagrams. . . The material is supplemented by a large number of simple yet adequate sketches, and many references to both current and older literature are provided." G. F. Kinney
Chem Eng 58:273 Jl '51 200w
N Y New Tech Bks 36:20 Mr '51
U S Quarterly Bk R 7:316 S '51 240w

RICE, ELMER L. Seven plays. 524p $5 Viking
812 50-10796

The plays were chosen from the author's work from 1914 to 1945. Contents: On trial; The adding machine; Street scene; Counsellor-at-law; Judgment Day; Two on an island; Dream girl.

Booklist 47:154 D 15 '50
Kirkus 18:588 S 15 '50 100w

"Recommended for small drama collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 75:2155 D 15 '50 70w
San Francisco Chronicle p21 F 11 '51 200w

RICH, ADRIENNE CECILE. Change of world [poems] with a foreword by W. H. Auden. (Yale ser. of younger poets) 85p $2.50 Yale univ. press 811 51-2563

Short poems by a young American poet of twenty-one. The poems "speak quietly but do not mumble, respect their elders but are not cowed by them, and do not tell fibs." (N Y Times)

"Here we have the work of a real young poet. . . Very nice work, too." Rolfe Humphries
+ Nation 173:77 Jl 28 '51 280w

"Thanks to her search for perfection she has composed her poems with an almost flawless perception and sound ear. While one might say that she belongs to an age in which youth is skeptical of a world unmade by tottering elders, she is clearly aware of the artist's place in society, and this without special pleading or self-defenses. She is, in short, the kind of neo-classic poet who relies on true form. In this she resembles another young poet, somewhat older than herself: the perfectionist Richard Wilbur." Alfred Kreymborg
+ N Y Times p27 My 13 '51 240w

"Miss Rich is twenty-two and just out of Radcliffe. She is well read and has a sense of humor and a feeling for variety and proportion. Each of her poems has its own shape and tone; if she is modest, she is not monotonous. And she nowhere succumbs to that urge toward the poetic chic that dates so quickly and now mars certain pages of Edna St. Vincent Millay and Elinor Wylie with a faded modishness." Louise Bogan
+ New Yorker 27:150 N 3 '51 200w

RICH, HELEN. Willow-bender. 277p $3 Simon & Schuster
50-10862

This novel tells two stories: one concerns the destruction of a small frontier town by a gold mining project; the other is the love story of the young wife of a middle-aged miner, and the young man, hurt and embittered by an unsuccessful marriage, who comes to the town in the employ of the mining company.

Christian Science Monitor p4 Ja 13 '51 190w

"Unworldly, even innocent, this has an uncluttered, straight line of development."
+ Kirkus 18:532 S 1 '50 180w

"Against the background of the high mountains with mountain sun and air and seasons—a late spring violently interrupted by the roaring mountain snowstorm called the Willow-Bend, and the hot summer mountain weather that follows—and the ceaseless gnawings and screechings of the gold dredge, Miss Rich tells her beautifully integrated story of the passing of a town. And she makes it seem a proper part of the touching story of a mountain girl and the lover who was briefly hers." F. H. Bullock
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 D 17 '50 400w

"The author, a young Western newspaperwoman who spent much of her life in the milieu she describes, could have made a gripping story of her material, if she had stayed close to the man-versus-nature pattern she established so expertly in her opening chapters. It's truly unfortunate that Eros loses no time in lifting a snow-spangled head among the gold boat's tailings. Miss Rich's triangle (gnarled miner, dredge paymaster, and the miner's dewy wife) is as conventional as it is unconvincing." C. V. Terry
+ — N Y Times p36 N 26 '50 220w

"What comes of it is Miss Rich's story and, as the publisher says, it is a love story sure enough, and well handled. I believe, though, that most readers will remember the book chiefly for the vivid, though simply drawn picture of the town itself. . . That picture, and the character of old Jett, pioneer wife of Andy's friend, are in themselves worth the whole love story and then some. So, by the way, is Miss Rich's method of telling her story, which she does in a simple, direct, spare style that adds up to genuine strength as honestly simple styles always do." J. H. Jackson

RICH, HELEN—Continued
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 D 5 '50 750w

RICH, MARK. Rural prospect. 183p il $1.50; pa $1 Friendship press

261 Country church 50-8260

"The author, who has given many useful years to the rural church problem, has written not only of the transition in rural church life through good roads, automobiles and a changing rural economy but has outlined with reasoning that challenges denominational institutionalism as one of the main factors in rural church decline. The author frankly urges the virtues of the community church as the answer." Churchman

---

"The book, while written by a thorough student, has an easy flowing style and should be viewed as a broad introductory statement of the general situation in thousands of rural areas." S. W. Slaughter
+ Christian Century 68:305 Mr 7 '51 700w

Reviewed by A. W. Taylor
Churchman 164:17 N 1 '50 250w

"One who seeks an up-to-date, concise treatise on rural life will find in Rural Prospect a well-balanced presentation. Teachers of rural courses in church-training institutes will find the book an excellent text. Those interested in the welfare of the rural church will commend the author for his final chapter in which he pays tribute to the work of Mark Dawber, giving him honor in company with Oberlin and Neff." H. B. White
+ Crozer Q 28:89 Ja '51 400w

RICHARDS, LENORE, and TREAT, NOLA. Quantity cookery; menu planning and cooking for large numbers; 2d rev. ed. by Nola Treat and Lenore Richards. 628p $4.95 Little

641.57 Cookery for institutions, etc. Menus 51-9305

"A revision with a more thorough discussion of menu planning, approximately 100 new recipes, and enlarged tables of weights and measures and suggestion lists. In the recipes measures as well as weights are indicated." (Booklist) For earlier editions see Book Review Digest 1922, 1939.

Booklist 47:222 F 15 '51

"Treat and Richards have done a grand job again in the revision of their old, excellent book." E. G. Killam
+ Churchman 165:17 Ag '51 120w

"The new edition goes far in excellent suggestions in judging foods, in dealing with the ever-present problem of 'left overs,' and in the choice of food combinations, both from a nutritional standpoint and the equally compelling question of budget allowances. In this respect the book is singularly free from theoretical discussions. . . Quantity Cookery is well planned and well written, practical in its treatments, and an excellent source in the undertaking of research." Georgia Schlosser
+ J Home Econ 43:375 My '51 700w

"Invaluable for restaurants, institutions, large public functions. Not intended for the person who has a household of varying size (boarding house, small inn, etc.)—and for that market a book is still needed."
+ Kirkus 18:720 D 1 '50 110w

Reviewed by K. T. Willis
Library J 76:967 Je 1 '51 20w

"Streamlined in its presentation it is excellent in the guides and suggestions for balancing nutrition, cost, customer satisfaction, and distribution of the work load on equipment and employees." M. A. Gram
+ Sat R of Lit 34:48 Mr 10 '51 60w

RICHARDS topical encyclopedia; ed. by Ernest Hunter Wright and Mary Heritage Wright; ed. for Canada: Albert William Trueman. 15v il pl maps $99.50; to schools and libraries $79.50 Richards co.

031 Encyclopedias and dictionaries 50-3816

"Richards Cyclopedia appeared first in 1933 and was reviewed in the Subscription Books Bulletin of July 1934. It was copyrighted again in 1937. A review of the Richards Topical Encyclopedia, c1939, was published in the January 1940 Bulletin. Since then the set has been copyrighted in 1940, 1943, 1945, 1946, 1947, 1949, and 1950. . . The topical arrangement is broad and is divided as follows: science, 4 volumes; social studies, 4; basic industries, 1; applied science, 1; art and biography, 3; leisure time activities, 1; index, 1. In the front of each volume is a table of contents, a list of color plates and a key to pronunciation. Each volume is divided into sections or articles of varying lengths; each section or article is preceded by a 'unit page' with an outline of study for the material which follows. . . The set is profusely illustrated with photographs and drawings large and small. . . The index is detailed and includes titles of books and pictures." Subscription Bks Bul

---

"Richards Topical Encyclopedia can be used with profit for home reading or browsing but it is decidedly limited for reference. . . Richards Topical Encyclopedia could hardly be considered thorough or well-rounded. For this reason, and because of its topical arrangement, it is not recommended for reference use in libraries."
— + Subscription Bks Bul 21:58 O '50 2050w

RICHARDSON, ALBERT EDWARD. Georgian architecture [Eng title: Introduction to Georgian architecture]. 256p 70il 155pl $5 Pellegrini & Cudahy

724.14207 Architecture, Georgian. Architecture—England 50-13639

"Professor Richardson's monumental 'Classical Architecture in Great Britain and Ireland' is an authority in its field, and this 'Georgian Architecture' is a proper companion. His text is illustrated with 70 of his own line drawings as well as with some 150 half-tones." Christian Science Monitor

---

Reviewed by Neil Martin
Christian Science Monitor p8 D 23 '50 400w

"The author is primarily an architect, writing for those aware of his special problems, but he is neither fussy nor stuffy. This forms the third in an admirable series of introductions, under the general editorship of Hugh Casson, of which Regency and Victorian have already appeared." Lincoln Kirstein
+ New Repub 123:25 D 11 '50 100w

"Throughout it is a continuous treat for anyone with a taste for the Georgian. But the pleasures of the book are not just those of being reminded of old friends. . . The only intellectual effort that is required in reading it is in relating the illustrations to the text."
+ New Statesman & Nation 39:80 Ja 21 '50 270w

Reviewed by Wayne Andrews
Sat R of Lit 34:39 Je 2 '51 270w

"Professor Richardson has long been in the forefront of the propagandists for Georgian architecture, and he is author of at least one book, Monumental Classic Architecture in Great Britain and Ireland, that belongs to the class of indispensable reference works. It is all the more sad that one should have to record that An Introduction to Georgian Architecture does not come up to what one might reasonably expect of it." Marcus Whiffen
— Spec 183:706 N 18 '49 900w

"Professor Richardson's text has an air of having been hurriedly set down and is by no means worthy of its author. It is a curious mixture of art-history jargon and banal observations, and is full of slipshod sentences. . . Nevertheless, in spite of carelessness and error, Professor Richardson preserves a never-failing enthusiasm, and if his book cannot be recommended as a reliable guide it has the essential attribute of an introduction, in that it arouses a desire to be better acquainted with the subject."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p54 Ja 27 '50 370w

RICHARDSON, ANTHONY. Alone he went [Eng title: Wingless victory]. 248p map $3 Norton

940.548142 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, English. Embry, Sir Basil Edward 51-11619

"In May, 1940, Wing Commander Embry made his last operational flight over France. As his plane went in on the bombing run over St. Omer, it suffered a direct hit and had to be abandoned. Embry was captured but escaped while in a prisoner of war column. Though he managed to stay out of permanent German POW camps, he was captured twice more before making his way back to England via Paris and Spain. Embry is now Commander-in-Chief, Fighter Command, RAF." Library J

Booklist 47:373; 399 Jl 1 '51; Jl 15 '51

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 26 '51 220w

Kirkus 19:339 Jl 1 '51 130w

"Interesting enough but not as exciting as The Wooden Horse or The Great Escape. Recommended." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 76:1216 Ag '51 70w

Reviewed by M. D. Read

Library J 76:2127 D 15 '51 30w

"For years Embry did not tell any one the story of his escape in detail. Then a friend and fellow flyer, Anthony Richardson, persuaded him to re-live the story almost minute by minute: not merely the overt happenings but the thoughts that went through Embry's head as he faced the almost daily crises, any one of which might have meant death. Mr. Richardson has fashioned it into a breath-taking adventure story." Marcus Duffield

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 19 '51 700w

"The story of Embry's escape is perhaps not as well told as it might have been, but its factual basis makes these weaknesses appear slight. Throughout, one thrills to Embry's passion for freedom—freedom from the very smell of dictatorship." Peter Blake

+ — N Y Times p10 Ag 19 '51 450w

"Mr. Richardson, in close collaboration with the protagonist of his story, has taken infinite pains over every detail of the Commander's capture by the Germans, his escape, and his heartbreakingly slow progress across France to safety, but he is considerably hampered by the circumstance that his material has at this date a very familiar ring. It's too bad, since Mr. Richardson is an excellent reporter, who manages to steer almost clear of the self-conscious laconism favored by most writers dealing with the wartime experiences of the British."

+ — New Yorker 27:134 S 15 '51 130w

"It is clearly the most enthralling and constantly exciting book that has appeared in many years." C. W. Weinberger

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ag 19 '51 650w

Springf'd Republican p22A S 9 '51 220w

Time 58:112 Ag 27 '51 450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p719 N 17 '50 440w

RICHER, CLEMENT. Ti-Coyo and his shark; an immoral fable [tr. from the French by Gerard Hopkins]. 235p $3 Knopf 51-11057

Ti-Coyo, a shrewd youngster of mixed parentage, living in St Pierre, trains a shark to help him in his business of diving for coins thrown from ships in the harbor of St Pierre. He succeeds so well that the shark saves Ti-Coyo's life and his sweetheart's during the eruption of Mount Pelée.

"This small and charming fable is so expertly written that it would have been something of a surprise if it had turned out to be his first novel. It isn't; the author, it seems, has published a half-dozen novels in France." Harvey Breit

+ Atlantic 188:84 S '51 240w

Booklist 48:13 S 1 '51

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 S 2 '51 450w

Kirkus 19:161 Mr 15 '51 190w

"This is a charming fable that will delight the numerous readers who want a change of reading diet. Highly recommended." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 76:862 My 15 '51 110w

"What lifts the thing above the level of a sort of diabolical Disney cartoon is the cool, sly style of Gerard Hopkins's excellent translation." Norman Shrapnel

Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 6 '51 70w

Reviewed by Robert Phelps

New Repub 125:21 S 3 '51 90w

"An agreeable frivolity, it goes on rather too long." J. D. Scot

New Statesman & Nation 42:50 Jl 14 '50 70w

"This story [is] cleanly and dexterously written." Gouverneur Paulding

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 26 '51 750w

"Chiefly one must regard the tale of Ti-Coyo and his shark as one of those charming books which, like 'The Little World of Don Camillo' and the 'Miraculous Fish of Domingo Gonzales,' appear from time to time with little notice taken of them except that they remain in the minds of those who have read them as delightful interludes in a dusky world." Russell Owen

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 26 '51 410w

New Yorker 27:84 Ag 25 '51 80w

"This is a fairy tale, fable, or what you like. But it is also a delight for any reader who can enjoy a bit of satire blandly done, with the special wide-eyed innocence Mr. Richer brings to his story. If it sounds like your cup of tea, you'll be happy you didn't miss it." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ag 27 '51 800w

"It is refreshing in this year of grace and this reign of fear to hit upon an unassuming little book which tells a story and tells it with grace, with economy, and with humor. . . This is a simple and entertaining story, artfully written but deceptively naïve." Henri Peyre

+ Sat R of Lit 34:21 S 8 '51 550w

"This is a delicious trifle, a conte that might have been written by Anatole France for his own amusement, a delicate, refrigerated dish in which the harsh flavours and shapes of reality are cooled and decorated and presented by a witty chef." Barbara Worsley-Gough

+ Spec 187:43 Jl 6 '51 220w

Time 58:117 S 3 '51 350w

Times [London] Lit Sup p417 Jl 6 '51 430w

RIDDELL, JAMES. Flight of fancy [foreword by Nevil Shute]. 256p pl maps $5 Duell

910.4 Voyages and travels [51-3191]

The diary of a journey by private plane, begun in 1948 by the author and Nevil Shute. The itinerary included Italy, Greece, Turkey, Syria, Iran, India, Burma, Malaya, Java, Bali, Timor, and Australia. Mr Shute's plane was small, so the journey was taken in relatively short hops. Many photographs.

"Despite the complexities of modern travel the two men had an unforgettable experience. The story makes excellent reading and should be a must for anyone bitten by the same travel bug that assaulted Nevil Shute and James Riddell." Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 22 '51 340w

Reviewed by Roland Sawyer

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 17 '51 480w

RIDDELL, JAMES—Continued

"There is a sparkling quality of unexpected humor here, a warm, completely individual response to the previously known and totally unknown ports of call, visions from the air, and dream worlds on the ground. Personality-plus for the international visas."

+ Kirkus 19:146 Mr 1 '51 190w

Reviewed by Dorothy Carrington

New Statesman & Nation 41:47 Ja 13 '51 230w

"You would think that just a sketching of external things would make a notable diary, but Mr. Riddell throws in his dreams, and his questions as well as his answers, as West meets East, and tries to get the hang of peoples who deal with time rather than space. . . His book is enough to make some readers enlist in almost any air force skimming the world and risking life for almost any cause. It is not a Number 1 book, but it's quite a case for dreams." Ernestine Evans

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Ap 29 '51 750w

Reviewed by Sugden Tilley

N Y Times p17 Jl 22 '51 180w

"Mr. Riddell's log is loosely organized and chatty, and full of close observation, philosophical speculation about the peoples of the East, and rather coarse-grained humor."

New Yorker 27:128 Ap 21 '51 180w

"Readers who know Mr. Riddell's work are justified in expecting from him something quite different from the ordinary travel-book, and this volume will not disappoint them. It is an intensely personal record of observation and reflection; even if neither is always very profound, each has a freshness of its own that is exhilarating. Best of all, it is immensely readable."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p788 D 8 '50 210w

RIDENOUR, LOUIS NICOT, and others. Bibliography in an age of science. (Second annual Windsor lectures, 1950) 90p il $2.50 Univ. of Ill. press

010.1 Bibliography 51-11147

"In these Illinois lectures two physicists and a librarian discuss the library problem largely in terms of tools and machines. The reduction of storage space by use of microfilm, the cutting of time and effort in cataloging and bibliografic work by use of mechanical and electronic sorting machines, the pooling of resources by inter-library communication systems are the objectives in mind." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 9 '51 360w

"Research, University and Special Librarians, and a large non-library audience will find it of immediate interest and importance. Some will be frightened, some confused; many will be enlightened and more inspired." V. D. Tate

+ Library J 76:1206 Ag '51 350w

Times [London] Lit Sup p460 Jl 20 '51 140w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:325 S '51 220w

RIDER, JOHN FRANCIS, and USLAN, SEYMOUR DANIEL. Encyclopedia on cathode-ray oscilloscopes and their uses. 992p il $9 Rider, J.F.

621.38413384 Cathode ray tubes 50-12901

"A successor to Rider's The Cathode-Ray Tube at Work, first published in 1935. Since it contains approximately six times as much material as the earlier work, it can hardly be described as a revised edition. The tremendous expansion reflects the great increase in the uses of cathode-ray oscilloscopes and the increasing complexity of their component circuits and elements. The work is designed primarily for users of cathode-ray oscilloscopes, particularly radio and television servicemen; however, it contains a good deal of material which is basic and not directly applicable to uses." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 76:119 Ja 15 '51 140w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:4 Ja '51

RIESMAN, DAVID, and others. Lonely crowd; a study of the changing American character. 386p $4 Yale univ. press

136.4973 U.S.—Social life and customs. National characteristics, American 50-9967

For descriptive note see Annual for 1950.

Reviewed by W. A. Weisskopf

Am Econ R 41:1009 D '51 600w

"Stimulating and provocative book." Margaret Mead

+ Am J Soc 56:495 Mr '51 1400w

Reviewed by Read Bain

Am Soc R 16:269 Ap '51 1000w

Booklist 47:182 Ja 15 '51

"Since most of what Mr. Riesman puts forward is not statistically demonstrable, he not unnaturally hedges a good many of his statements. But that is fair enough. The book is thought-provoking and if other readers are like this reviewer, they are going to check on themselves as to the extent of their inner or other direction." A. Andras

Canadian Forum 31:117 Ag '51 340w

Reviewed by Henry Sowerby

Christian Science Monitor p7 D 30 '50 700w

"The main body of the work is one of the most penetrating and comprehensive views of the 20th century urban American you're likely to find. The psycho-sociological analyses of various specific items from the media as well as of the media themselves, are well worth time and thought. The author's style is a delight. . . Indeed his sound literary instincts may partly explain his disappointing happy ending." Frank Getlein

Commonweal 54:621 O 5 '51 2050w

Foreign Affairs 29:671 Jl '51 30w

"Mr. Riesman's brilliant intuitive study of the emerging American character should interest lawyers. It should help them to bring into focus their observation of the American scene, and also heighten their awareness of the underlying trends in the law itself." L. L. Jaffe

+ Harvard Law R 64:1403 Je '51 1750w

Management R 40:162 Mr '51 20w

"The book is a spirited exploration of the new and somewhat hagridden American personality, written in a style that is popular without condescension and that holds jargon to a welcome minimum, and it is full of sharp and disturbing conclusions. Its chief weakness is its ending, which leaves us entirely up in the air, uncertain of where we go next."

+ — New Yorker 26:166 N 4 '50 150w

"David Riesman's is the rare book which will be read with pleasure and profit even by those who reject its central conclusion." Oscar Handlin

+ Sat R of Lit 34:14 Mr 3 '51 700w

Reviewed by D. W. Calhoun

Social Forces 30:113 O '51 500w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:190 Je '51 350w

RIEZLER, KURT. Man: mutable and immutable; the fundamental structure of social life. 365p $5 Regnery

128 Man 51-9140

"An investigation of fundamental structure of social life, which begins with questions concerning permanence of man amid changing societies and cultures and concerning ground on which an answer could stand and survive changing conditions. Although author recognizes philosophical problem involved in such questions he postpones philosophical question until the end. After establishing frame or 'relational structure', the author proceeds to discuss the passions, and misery and happiness, and concludes with discussion of three meanings of questions, 'What is Man?' " (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by Robert Cumming

J Philos 48:701 O 25 '51 1500w

"Treatment involved at times but investigation yields some satisfaction. Recommended for mature reader and student." O. G. Lawson
Library J 75:2001 N 15 '50 130w

"If this book seems to make rather simple things sound profound, the general content of the book and its long range philosophical goals are well worth consideration in an age of gimmicks, atom bombs, and suppression of many human values." I. B.
San Francisco Chronicle p24 F 11 '51 300w

"To do all this well obviously requires an exceptional range of learning and experience, and Dr. Riezler brings to the subject the fruits of years of reflection as a physical scientist, as a classicist, as an educator, and as a statesman. To an American reader the language will seem somewhat foreign and pretentious, but if he is a critical reader, he will discover that the subtleties of language and of the German phenomenology are for the most part not mere rhetoric, but contribute to the understanding of the complexities of human life, and add a philosophical dimension to social science."
U S Quarterly Bk R 7:190 Je '51 240w

RIGGLEMAN, JOHN RANDOLPH, and FRISBEE, IRA NOBLES. Business statistics. 3d ed 818p il maps $5.50 McGraw

658.001 Business. Statistics 51-2154

" 'The book has been expanded particularly with regard to machine tabulation, business cycles, business forecasting, and market analysis; and new chapters have been added on planning and organizing statistical work, applied sampling, and quality control.' " (Booklist) For second edition see Book Review Digest 1939.

Booklist 47:365 Je 15 '51

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 76:870 My 15 '51 70w

RIGGS, FRED WARREN. Pressures on Congress; a study of the repeal of Chinese exclusion. 260p $3.75 King's Crown press

325.73 Chinese in the U.S. U.S. Congress. U.S.—Emigration and immigration 50-9875

A study of the repeal of the Chinese exclusion law in 1943, plus an investigation of the role of the pressure groups and citizens committees, in the making of our laws. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by L. R. Peattie
Am J Soc 57:96 Jl '51 290w

"By far the most interesting and suggestive portion of the book is contained in the last sub-section which is wholly devoted to an analysis of the dynamics of the legislative process. Here the author makes some telling points while interrelating the pressure group process to the administrative responsibilities for legislative policy and to the formal procedures of actual legislation. Writing temperately, with comprehensive control of his material, the author has performed his task well." C. W. Shull
+ Am Pol Sci R 45:234 Mr '51 380w

"The book is a valuable study of how public policy and public opinion are formed with an eye on new legislation. The story told by the author is by no means 'typical' of what happens. . . We do not, however, know what story, if any, would be 'typical,' for our knowledge is extremely meagre. Many more books, like this one by Mr. Riggs, are needed to fill a void—a void which is hardly excusable or tolerable in a democracy." M. R. Konvitz
+ Am Soc R 16:125 F '51 400w

"The book, while tightly organized, does contain a number of repetitious statements. However, Dr. Riggs by stressing processes—the strategy and tactics of a catalytic group—has made a significant contribution to studies of pressure politics. He has enhanced the value of the book by an introductory analysis of the history of the passage of the Chinese Exclusion Laws and of the national and international setting that made the passage of the repeal measure possible." Belle Zeller
+ Ann Am Acad 275:175 My '51 1000w

Booklist 47:151 D 15 '50

Reviewed by J. B. Parrish
Churchman 165:16 My 15 '51 110w

Foreign Affairs 29:671 Jl '51 20w

"A valuable contribution to an understanding of 'what makes our democracy tick.' Recommended for libraries with readers especially interested in government." H. H. Bernt
+ Library J 75:1826 O 15 '50 100w

Reviewed by N. W. Mah
Pacific Affairs 24:332 S '51 330w

Reviewed by Hillier Krieghbaum
Survey 87:236 My '51 70w

"The study is relatively weak in statistical analysis of Congressional voting, and might profitably have given more comprehensive and closer attention to the groups that supported the Chinese exclusion policy for more than half a century. Nevertheless, this fully documented story of the reversal of a harmful and undemocratic immigration policy and the substitution for it of one more nearly in accord with the American credo is both important and significant."
+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 6:466 D '50 240w

RIGSBY, HOWARD. Murder for the holidays. 247p $2.50 Morrow 51-9075

Detective story.

Reviewed by E. Fowke
Canadian Forum 31:165 O '51 60w

Kirkus 18:667 N 1 '50 70w

"Smooth and fast."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ja 28 '51 140w

"Pretty drab and hackneyed—despite one really neat plot-twist in the solution." A. B.
N Y Times p16 F 4 '51 100w

"You may not mind the familiar sound of the plot since the background is authentic, the style crisp and not too flippant, and the pace consistently fast." L. G. Offord
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ja 28 '51 80w

"Exciting—but synthetic."
Sat R of Lit 34:38 Ja 27 '51 50w

RILEY, JOHN WINCHELL, and SCHRAMM, WILBUR. The Reds take a city; the communist occupation of Seoul, with eyewitness accounts; narratives translated by Hugh Heung-wu Cynn. 210p $2.75 Rutgers univ. press

951.9 Korea—History—War and intervention, 1950- . Communism 51-13868

"A document of cumulative horror by Dean Wilbur Schramm of the University of Illinois, a communications specialist, and John W. Riley Jr., Professor of Sociology at Rutgers University. As members of a team of experts assembled by the Air Force to assess Communist techniques as they had been imposed upon the Korean people, the professors conducted more than sixty detailed interviews with South Korean officials who had remained in Seoul during the Communist occupation; interviewed over fifty citizens from other walks in Seoul life, and had briefer talks with 1,300 refugees, including 462 from Communist North Korea." (N Y Times) The results of these interviews are given in this book. Index.

"The Schramm-Riley team has done an excellent job of ferreting out facts from Korean informants—a task that cannot be appreciated until you try it yourself." Walter Simmons
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 25 '51 350w

Reviewed by Gordon Walker
Christian Science Monitor p9 D 17 '51 650w

Reviewed by Harold Isaacs
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 18 '51 550w

RILEY, J. W.—Continued

"One of the most comprehensive glimpses behind the Iron Curtain that Westerners have been given. What and how the Communists did in Seoul is a lesson, say the authors, in Communist intentions planned for every city and farm community in the world." Charles Grutzner

+ N Y Times p7 O 28 '51 1050w

New Yorker 27:166 N 24 '51 170w

RILEY, JOHN WINCHELL, and others. Student looks at his teacher; an inquiry into the implications of student ratings at the college level. 166p $2.75 Rutgers univ. press

371.134 Teachers, Rating of. College professors and instructors 50-11155

Report of a survey carried on at Brooklyn College by members of the sociology department of Rutgers University under a grant from the Carnegie Corporation. They gathered 6000 student reactions to their instructors, attempting to find answers to such questions as "What students expect from teachers and what the students actually get, the characteristics of the 'good' teacher, how teachers react to student ratings and how such evaluations may be translated into better teaching." (San Francisco Chronicle)

Reviewed by E. S. Johnson
Am J Soc 57:300 N '51 360w

"While this is not a conclusive study, it seems to show that careful research in the area of student reaction to instruction has a role to play in any survey of teacher effectiveness." M. R. Brown

N Y Times p32 Ap 22 '51 160w

"No doubt many students will see in this evaluation of teachers a way of letting off steam, but the end result, if the evaluation is well done, will be an improvement in the quality of teaching." I. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 F 25 '51 240w

Reviewed by Logan Wilson
Sat R of Lit 34:18 Je 30 '51 350w

School & Society 72:400 D 16 '50 30w

Reviewed by J. J. Valenti
School R 59:435 O '51 500w

RILKE, RAINER MARIA. Letters to Benvenuta; with a foreword by Louis Untermeyer [tr. by Heinz Norden]. 87p $2.75 Philosophical lib.

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 51-11824

Letters written by the poet to a young Viennese pianist during a sojourn in Paris in 1914. Benvenuta's replies are not included.

"It is not a further documentation of their unusual association (of which Magda von [Graedemer-Hattingberg] wrote in Rilke and Benvenuta [Book Review Digest 1949]) that is intended, but a new, revealing fragment of the poet himself—of his roving, lively thought with its teeming intimations of man's innate mystery and its exuberant intellectuality and wit."

Atlantic 188:97 N '51 130w

"This volume should be owned, for it is shot through with the essential Rilke, feelingly translated by Heinz Norden. But the newcomer to the poet would better begin with the great collections of letters or the works, then Nora Wydenbruck's biography and Benvenuta's book. After those experiences he can enjoy these bits in perspective and with justice." T. M. Longstreth

Christian Science Monitor p13 S 13 '51 470w

Kirkus 19:314 Je 15 '51 100w

Nation 173:313 O 13 '51 110w

RIPKA, HUBERT. Czechoslovakia enslaved; the story of the communist coup d'etat. 339p $3.50 Macmillan

943.7 Czechoslovakia—Politics and government [50-2995]

"A Czech scholar and former Cabinet Minister, Hubert Ripka is one of the men who led the tragic effort after World War II to make Czechoslovakia a land in which Communists and democrats could live together in peace and freedom. . . He traces his country's travail from the Munich betrayal in 1938 through the occupation to liberation, then, in lucid detail, shows how the Communists undermined the reborn republic. When it became obvious the Communists would lose the 1948 elections in spite of all their intrigues they resorted to 'direct action.' " N Y Times

---

Current Hist 21:228 O '51 110w

Foreign Affairs 29:678 Jl '51 10w

Reviewed by A. J. P. Taylor
Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 27 '50 700w

"This is primarily a political book and, indeed, one of the most important of its kind. I am generally distrustful of books by émigrés and their wholehearted supporters. . . The book by Mr. Ripka is in quite a different class. Not only is Mr. Ripka (except for a few unfortunate gallicisms) a brilliant writer, but he tries—usually successfully—not to allow his political passions to run away with him. The characters are all superbly alive." Alexander Werth

+ New Statesman & Nation 39:165 F 11 '50 1400w

"Ripka's book, written in exile a year after the Communist coup d'état of February, 1948, is the most complete and authoritative account of that event yet written." D. A. Schmidt

+ N Y Times p3 My 6 '51 550w

New Yorker 27:128 My 12 '51 160w

Reviewed by Hal Lehrman
Sat R of Lit 34:28 Je 23 '51 600w

Reviewed by S. G. Duff
Spec 184:218 F 17 '50 850w

Times [London] Lit Sup p115 F 24 '50 900w

RITTENHOUSE, MRS CONSTANCE (MORGAN), and VINTON, IRIS. Abbie Higgins, young group work executive. 280p $2.50 Dodd 50-10890

A vocational story for girls of seventeen to nineteen. Abbie Higgins decided on group work as a career, specifically Girl Scouting. The story of her experiences is based on the authors' own knowledge.

Booklist 47:206 F 1 '51

"Serious, thoughtful, yet entertaining reading; good career material based on the personal experiences of both authors." R. C. Buell

+ Library J 76:341 F 15 '51 90w

"In spite of its forbidding title this is a good story. . . It is serious, but reflects the enthusiasm of two writers who know and love the field." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 4 '51 50w

RITTER, LEO JOHN, and PAQUETTE, RADNOR JOSEPH. Highway engineering. 721p il maps $6.50 Ronald

625.7 Highway engineering 51-10362

"An engineering college textbook in which present-day techniques in highway building and maintenance are authoritatively described. All of the phases of the subject that are of interest to the practicing highway engineer are touched upon. Thus, highway finance is discussed as well as the design of concrete pavements. Approved methods of making traffic surveys and the control of erosion of roadsides are among the minor topics included." Library J

Booklist 47:324 My 15 '51

"The first completely new major text on highway engineering to appear since the publication of Hewes' American Highway Practice in 1942. It is designed as text for students in engineering schools, whereas Hewes' book was directed primarily to the practicing engineer. The coverage of highway engineering is broad and well balanced."
+ Eng N 147:43 Jl 12 '51 120w

"The book should be a useful one in technical collections. It is adequately illustrated and there is a ten-page bibligoraphy." R. R. Hawkins
+ Library J 76:877 My 15 '51 90w

RITTS, PAUL. TV jeebies; il. by Dick Strome; foreword by Ed Sullivan. 150p $2 Winston

791.4 Television—Anecdotes, facetiae, satire, etc. 51-13739

"TV Jeebies is the occupational disease of that realm of organized confusion commonly known as television. . . Deserted by radio and confounded by studio union restrictions, Ritts, a Philadelphia TV producer, fights his way thru this bewildering world and tries to show the viewer how the TV show finally gets to your living room. Meanwhile, Richard Strome draws from ambush sketches of so-called stars, technical men, and the confounding gimmicks that snarl up video." Chicago Sunday Tribune

"This book is loaded with laughs. Some evening, when you want to get away from television, you might spend an hour with 'TV Jeebies.' It's light, escape reading." Larry Wolters
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 O 28 '51 160w

"The style is light but it is practical in its advice. Recommended to large collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 76:1810 N 1 '51 30w
School & Society 74:367 D 8 '51 40w
+ Springf'd Republican p30A D 2 '51 100w

RIVETT, EDITH CAROLINA (CAROL CARNAC, E. C. R. LORAC, pseuds). Accident by design. 218p $2.50 Doubleday 51-2218

Detective story.

"British to the bone, this is also tenacious and thoroughly tenable."
+ Kirkus 19:13 Ja 1 '51 70w

"The characters are not without flavour; suspicion is handsomely distributed; and the plot, in spite of its scrupulous fairness, may easily trip you up. Such a book, in these lean times, deserves a thorough reading." Ralph Partridge
+ New Statesman & Nation 40:522 N 25 '50 150w

"An English mystery, civilized, creditable and enriched by a series of excellent, sharp characterizations."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Ap 8 '51 180w

"Here is a solid story of sedate pace which never once loosens its grip on the reader's fascinated attention." Elizabeth Bullock
+ N Y Times p18 My 6 '51 120w

"Mr. Lorac's style might be described as pedestrian, but his plot is lively and ingenious."
+ — New Yorker 27:124 Mr 10 '51 110w

"Although the murderer is fairly easy to spot the background, the character drawing and the gentle English pace are thoroughly pleasant."
+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Mr 25 '51 80w

"Nice going." Kathleen Sproul
+ Sat R of Lit 34:40 Ap 28 '51 50w

RIVETT, EDITH CAROLINE (CAROL CARNAC, E. C. R. LORAC, pseuds). Copy for crime. 189p $2.50 Doubleday 51-13658

Detective story.

Kirkus 19:458 Ag 15 '51 70w

"When the truth has been sorted out, one of the characters observes with candor, 'Really, the whole story is preposterous.' And so it is, too, if only when it comes to the unwinding. Readers who care to resent it at that point will have ample grounds for complaint. I found it possible to accept it for all of the preceding pleasantries." James Sandoe
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 N 4 '51 200w

"All quiet, solid and exceedingly satisfactory." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p24 N 11 '51 50w

"Entertaining enough, if you feel up to grappling with the plot."
New Yorker 27:192 N 17 '51 90w

"This is one of those agreeably unsensational yarns, with plenty going on but few exclamation points." L. G. Offord
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 18 '51 70w

"Smooth going." Sergeant Cuff
+ Sat R of Lit 34:76 N 17 '51 40w

RIVETT, EDITH CAROLINA (CAROL CARNAC, E. C. R. LORAC, pseuds). I could murder her [Eng title: Murder of a martinet]. 189p $2.50 Doubleday 51-13070

Detective story.

Bookmark 11:61 D '51

Reviewed by Drexel Drake
Chicago Sunday Tribune p22 O 21 '51 100w

"A neat and tidy job."
+ Kirkus 19:369 Jl 15 '51 60w

"She has named at least two more characters than she has found use for and they clutter the scene a trifle. But the rest of them are clear and forcible. . . It all has a quiet credibility that is not common in detective stories. The compassionate, shrewd presence of Chief Inspector Macdonald is, as usual, particularly agreeable." James Sandoe
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 O 14 '51 200w

"The murder of a dominant matriarch of an eccentric family is conventional enough material; but excellent characterization, particularly of a wonderful charwoman and of a sympathetic and believable murder, infuses the situation with fresh life." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p32 O 14 '51 90w

"The author's cast is so large and its members are so similar in their general air of eccentricity that the casual reader may have some trouble keeping them straight, but on the whole the story is ingenious and distinguished by a kind of semi-plausible characterization."
+ — New Yorker 27:128 O 6 '51 180w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p12 O 21 '51 50w

"Good." Sergeant Cuff
+ Sat R of Lit 34:45 N 24 '51 40w

Reviewed by Esther Howard
+ Spec 187:168 Ag 3 '51 90w

ROARK, GARLAND (GEORGE GARLAND, pseud). Doubtful valley; a novel of traitor whites and Apaches in 1880. 278p $2.50 Houghton 51-2265

Western story.

"Here's a new writer in the western field and a good one. . . A better than average western." Al Chase
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 My 6 '51 110w
Kirkus 19:80 F 1 '51 40w

"Told on a high level of competence." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 76:406 Mr 1 '51 70w

"'Doubtful Valley' is a yarn with lots more fire than smoke. George Garland has a sharp eye for detail and no time for non-essentials. He tells Jeff Call's story in hard-bitten prose."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 My 20 '51 170w

ROARK, GARLAND—Continued

"'Doubtful Valley' is full of action—grudge fights, skirmishes with the Indians and a full-fledged small-scale war, while carrying the thread of an A-1 mystery and a more than usually interesting love story." J. F. S.

+ Springf'd Republican p6D Ap 8 '51 170w

ROBB, DAVID METHENY. Harper history of painting; the occidental tradition; introduction by Francis Henry Taylor. 1006p il col pl $12.50; text ed $7.50 Harper

750.9 Painting—History 51-7191

Traces the history of painting from the cave paintings of prehistoric times to the present day. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:45 O 1 '51

"Despite certain faults, this is certainly going to be a valuable book of reference and should prove of great help to students who need a fundamental background in the history of painting." F. A. Sweet

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p21 O 21 '51 500w

"More than 500 beautiful illustrations—16 of them in color—highlight this handsome volume. . . Excellent photography has rendered clear tonal values, and an even cursory examination of the pictures with their accompanying text gives the reader a comprehensive and panoramic view of pictorial art in the western world. In the lengthy roster of famous names, but few have been omitted." Thomas Donlon

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 11 '51 750w

Cleveland Open Shelf p27 N '51

"To compress into a single volume a subject as broad as the history of painting in the western world from the Old Stone Age to the present is a formidable task. The author bold enough to attempt it must be prepared, first of all, to run the gauntlet of the specialists who lie in wait for him along the course of his marathon sprint through the ages. . . 'The Harper History of Painting' proves more than adequate to most of these demands, yet it seems curiously disappointing as a whole. . . [The author] commands a wide range of information and has marshaled his facts with exceptional care. Apart from some minor slips and misprints, unavoidable in a book of such scope, I recall only two obvious errors. . . The disappointing quality of Robb's book has little to do with questions of detail. It resides, rather, in the limitations of its conceptual framework." H. W. Janson

+ — N Y Times p7 Ag 26 '51 650w

New Yorker 27:179 D 8 '51 120w

"The thousands of college students and the many other readers who have used an earlier history by Professor Robb (in collaboration with J. J. Garrison) will be prepared for the thoroughly documented study which has gone into the present work. The author's effort with this 'History of Painting' has intensified rather than relaxed, and it has been mellowed by more of his own personal appreciation of the masters he follows—from prehistoric times to the very latest years in the incessant development of painting." Walter Pach

+ Sat R of Lit 34:45 N 3 '51 750w

Reviewed by W. C. Smith

Springf'd Republican p14C O 28 '51 450w

"The text is didactic without being either chatty or patronizing. Backed by good taste and sound scholarship, the volume will be treasured and pored over for years." Highly recommended."

+ Wis Lib Bul 47:212 S '51

ROBB, MARSHALL J., comp. Scotch whiskey [ed. by Archie R. Turnbull]. 127p pl $3 Dutton

663.5 Whisky 51-9731

A treatise on the history, manufacture, and blending of Scotch whiskey. Illustrated with many photographs and reproductions of old prints. Index.

Booklist 47:268 Ap 1 '51

"Recommended to men of distinction; to the people who saw Compton Mackenzie's jovial film, Tight Little Island; and perhaps a few libraries." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 76:178 F 1 '51 80w

"There's a little bit of everything in this book. It quotes some befuddled paragraphs from Boswell, poesy and doggerel in praise of Scotch and snippets from Robert Burns, who was both excise man and whisky hymner. There are cocktail recipes. . . There are also some splendid photographs of highland distilleries and of their artisans whose Caledonian countenances reflect the joy of dedication to a patriotic art." S. T. Williamson

N Y Times p6 Jl 15 '51 600w

Sat R of Lit 34:15 D 29 '51 70w

ROBBINS, ROSSELL HOPE. T. S. Eliot myth. 226p $3 Schuman

811 Eliot, Thomas Stearns 51-14190

"Some offstage rumblings, indicating distrust of the content of Eliot's work, have been occasionally heard, but Dr. Robbins brings the attack to the center of the stage—where he challenges Eliot's position as a great poet and cultural leader. A writer's reputation seldom is so exalted that it no longer is subject to reappraisal and possible dethronement. In the case of Eliot, Dr. Robbins cites chapter and verse in an attempt to show that he is contemptuous of democracy, disgusted with humanity, reactionary in theology, arrogant in his obscurity and irrationality, reproachable in his borrowing from other writers, and dangerously misleading in his social thought." Library J

Reviewed by J. F. Nims

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 N 18 '51 500w

"An excellent, thought provoking and condemning analysis of the western world's most talked of contemporary poet and thinker. . . A very lively addition to practically any shelf."

+ Kirkus 19:624 O 15 '51 310w

"I think the book must be taken seriously, although the validity of some of the charges is not always established and the author's own viewpoint is open to criticism. The major attack is quite unwisely centered upon Eliot's religious belief. . . For large literature collections only." G. D. McDonald

Library J 76:1802 N 1 '51 200w

"Rossell Robbins' condemnation is graceless, pitiless, and comes to seem endless; its excesses at first shock and at last amuse the reader." Randall Jarrell

N Y Times p36 N 18 '51 650w

ROBERTS, CATHERINE. Real book about making dolls and doll clothes; il. by the author. 191p $1.25 Garden City bks.

649.55 Dolls 51-12263

Instructions and patterns for making different kinds of dolls; rag dolls; paper dolls; doll-house dolls; dolls with hard heads of soap, clay, etc. Includes doll dressmaking and designing. For grades five to eight. Index.

Booklist 48:53 O 1 '51

Kirkus 19:321 Jl 1 '51 80w

"Well indexed. Instructions are not always explicit, and there are too few diagrams, but a naturally creative child would find the book stimulating. The fact that patterns are to be traced may limit the book's use in the public library." Claire Nolte

Library J 76:1574 O 1 '51 50w

ROBERTS, CECIL. Terrace in the sun. 247p $3.50 Macmillan

51-14511

"The hero, a middle-aged English artist named Stephen May, finds that he can achieve happiness by giving comfort to others. His servant finds happiness in marriage. And an elderly English spinster, who was perfectly happy to begin with, finds herself feeling even better when she visits these people and sits in the bright sunshine of their terrace, which is attached to a nice little villa in Monte Carlo." New Yorker

Booklist 48:144 D 15 '51

Reviewed by Edmund Fuller
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 6 '52 400w

"Not much above humdrum, but a smooth turned life story."
— + Kirkus 19:496 S 1 '51 160w

"The British background and the glimpses of life in Florence and Rome are of rather more interest than the people of the novel. 'A Terrace in the Sun' is unexciting but pleasant and cheerful in effect." Mary Ross
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p42 D 2 '51 360w

"The author has provided little novelistic vitality to frame his celebration of happier days. . . Roberts' prose is, however, relaxed and relaxing. Those who liked the rather mannered grace of his travel books and the quiet pace of his novel 'Victoria Four-Thirty' should find this latest offering to their liking." E. J. Fitzgerald
N Y Times p58 N 25 '51 280w
New Yorker 27:170 D 8 '51 80w

ROBERTS, MRS DOROTHY M. Leadership of teen-age groups. 195p $3 Assn. press

301.1584 Leadership. Youth 50-10934

This handbook for teachers, community leaders, and others who work with groups of young people, gives suggestions for organization and program planning and sets forth qualifications and objectives for adult leaders.

Booklist 47:182 Ja 15 '51
School & Society 72:352 N 25 '50 20w

ROBERTS, HENRY L. Rumania; political problems of an agrarian state. 414p $6 Yale univ. press

333.3 Peasantry—Rumania. Land tenure—Rumania. Rumania—Politics and government 51-1853

In his Preface the author says: "The premise of this book is that an understanding of Rumania's recent history requires familiarity with the depressed status of its peasantry, whose plight has been a chronic source of alarm, anxiety, or despair since the time of Tudor Vladimirescu, who in 1821 raised a popular revolt against the boyars. . . With regard to the period covered, I have concentrated primarily on the years between 1922 and 1945. I have discussed only briefly the historical background and the important land reforms of 1918-21. . . While I have written at some length on events since the Communists came to power, I prefer to regard that section as a tentative postscript." Bibliography. Index.

"His presentation of the postwar period is most lucid and interesting. And his cogent remarks about the incompatibility of the concept of 'governments friendly to Russia' with the concept of their true independence should be read and pondered by all serious students of American foreign policy in the last decade." George Lenczowski
+ Am Pol Sci R 45:1216 D '51 370w

"Mr. Roberts has produced a superior and scholarly work. The dispassionate and realistic approach to the Rumanian dilemma is especially welcome at a time when the bulk of pseudo-historical writing on southeastern Europe is colored with political bias and outright propaganda." W. S. Vucinich
+ Ann Am Acad 276:177 Jl '51 450w
Foreign Affairs 29:678 Jl '51 20w
Manchester Guardian p4 S 14 '51 270w

"This solid volume will long remain an authoritative account of Rumania's agrarian and political problems in the two decades between the First and Second World Wars. Its influence, however, will not be limited to Rumania. Its results are of value for its neighbors behind the Iron Curtain: Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, Hungary, and Russia. All backward agricultural states, whether free or colonial, which like Rumania have been caught in the whirlwind generated by the Industrial Revolution, face similar problems in their efforts to preserve their political independence or even their national identities." R. J. Kerner
+ Sat R of Lit 34:32 Je 16 '51 750w

"An excellent case study of the development and the problems of an agrarian society in the world of industry and scientific technology in the twentieth century."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:180 Je '51 270w

Reviewed by R. J. Kerner
+ Yale R n s 40:759 summer '51 280w

ROBERTS, MRS IRMA. Jungle twins [il. by Kurt Wiese]. 127p $2.25 Coward-McCann 51-12698

"The story tells of Booj, a young, tailless monkey, and his twin sister, in the jungle where Booj goes to prove his right to be a Leader Monkey." Library J

"Although the monkeys' careful, text-book speech hardly reflects monkey 'character', this is a pleasant, genial book with a fascinating setting through which the author displays a first hand knowledge of jungle sounds, sights and smells. Skillful and appealing animal pictures aplenty by Kurt Wiese add to the attractiveness of the book."
+ — Kirkus 19:614 O 15 '51 140w

"Kurt Wiese's illustrations and the good, clear type make this an attractive book about jungle life that will appeal to the 8-12-year-olds or older children with reading difficulty. . . Recommended." Augusta Baker
+ Library J 76:1946 N 15 '51 70w

"This lively monkey story has a lot of animal talk, and some funny verses. The crocodile, elephant, giraffe, hippopotamus, and other creatures along the Zambesi River are handsomely drawn by Mr. Wiese. It is an amusing introduction to the African animals." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 N 18 '51 60w
Springf'd Republican p7C S 16 '51 70w

ROBERTS, KENNETH LEWIS. Henry Gross and his dowsing rod. 310p il maps $3 Doubleday

133.323 Gross, Henry. Divining rod 51-99

A record of the exploits of a Maine game-warden who is an expert with the dowsing rod. Henry Gross has had great success in locating water with a forked stick, called a dowsing rod, and Kenneth Roberts, who has seen him at work, explains how it is done, and relates some of his more spectacular accomplishments.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic 187:72 Ap '51 550w
Booklist 47:214 F 15 '51
Bookmark 10:107 F '51 50w

"I agree with Mr. Roberts. He states his case strongly. If you will read his book without a preconceived opinion, you will have an exciting adventure and are quite likely to line up with Henry and Mr. Roberts, too." Edmund Fuller
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ja 7 '51 470w
Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '51
Kirkus 18:741 D 15 '50 260w

Reviewed by Richardson Wright
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ja 7 '51 650w

"Kenneth Roberts is an accurate reporter. In all historical researches, he has been a meticulous digger for fact. His veracity cannot be questioned. Otherwise, credulity in his assertions about dowsing would be strained beyond repair." S. T. Williamson
N Y Times p6 Ja 7 '51 850w

ROBERTS, K. L.—Continued

"Clearly Mr. Roberts is not trying to perpetrate a hoax. He believes in the 'evidence' he has assembled, and because he is a professional writing man he sets it all out in readable and interesting form. As for what the reader, layman or scientist, may choose to think, that's up to him. For myself, I could wish that Mr. Gross just hadn't got involved with long distance map-dowsing, or with distinguishing rye from Scotch, or with the attempts to dowse the sex of babes unborn. All this and Bermuda too—well, it's a bit too much." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 5 '51 900w

"Henry Gross, thanks to the writer who has stood up for honesty in historical writing for over two decades, is incorporated now. He and his water-finding have got themselves into idiomatic English that crackles. The crusade is on to incorporate dowsing as the serious profession it has been. And even more vital to me as a poet, the cause of folklore as the basis of the science of living has been vastly advanced by this fine book." R. P. T. Coffin

+ Sat R of Lit 34:15 Ja 6 '51 700w

ROBERTS, MARY-CARTER. Abbot sisters. 370p $3.50 Doubleday

51-13378

Character studies of the four Abbot sisters: Maida, Lily, Bess, and Cissy, all spinsters except Bess, who marries against the family's wishes. The time is 1905 and thirty or more years thereafter.

"The novel, which has some of the proverbial structural weaknesses of the 'first,' nevertheless has power and strength. The writer should go far." Olive Carruthers

Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 N 18 '51 450w

"There's sense here, and sensibility, and an unrelenting fluoroscoping of force and frustration which should make a women's club panel of it—an irritant and a catalyst for indoor intelligentsia. An astringent which brings to light the assayable and the intangible of the spinster's lot."

Kirkus 19:497 S 1 '51 180w

"'The Abbot Sisters' is one of those novels which, read patiently through to the last line and put aside, begins to increase in stature as one reflects upon it." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 N 18 '51 450w

"One suspects that this is an early manuscript, published on the strength of Miss Roberts' successful pieces in The New Yorker. Relentlessly in earnest, it suffers from a querulous, almost vindictive tone, and a curiously morbid attention to a detailing of the malfunctions of the body. These attributes will hardly serve to forward Miss Roberts' reputation." Gertrude Buckman

— N Y Times p27 Ja 13 '52 120w

ROBERTS, OWEN JOSEPHUS. Court and the Constitution. 102p $2 Harvard univ. press

342.73 U.S.—Constitutional history. U.S. Supreme court 51-12388

"The three lectures in this volume are concerned with Sovereignty and the Power to Tax, Conflicts of Police Power, and the Fourteenth Amendment. Brought together under the title 'The Court and the Constitution,' they possess a somewhat obscure but discoverable unity. That unity is derived less from the subjects dealt with in the three lectures than from the unifying conviction of the lecturer." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Reviewed by L. T. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p21 O 21 '51 60w

Current Hist 21:229 O '51 60w

"Recommended for collections of constitutional law." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 76:1216 Ag '51 110w

"Historians of the Supreme Court will turn to this volume as a fruitful place in which to discover the general views of one of the most important figures on the Court during the critical decade of the '30s." M. D. Howe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 S 23 '51 1050w

San Francisco Chronicle p26 O 28 '51 130w

Springf'd Republican p10D O 7 '51 140w

ROBERTS, PATRICIA EASTERBROOK. Book of table arrangements with flowers, fruits and other decorative elements. 199p il col pl $2.75 Crown

642.7 Table. Floral decoration 51-10073

"The handsome, the bizarre, the ephemeral, and the enduring are used to enhance the pleasure of the table as the eye sees it. Accessories and essentials are listed and there is choice of ideas to suit any personality whether hearty, wholesome, sophisticated or glamorous. The pocketbook is not ignored for there are many budget arrangements. Illustrations, many in color; some of the material has appeared in magazines." (Library J) Alphabetical list of table arrangements.

Booklist 47:306 My 1 '51

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 76:964 Je 1 '51 70w

Wis Lib Bul 47:185 Jl '51

ROBERTS, RICHARD EMERY. Star in the West. 280p $3 Random house

51-12136

A novel of Arizona some forty years ago based on the life of the author's mother.

Booklist 48:32 S 15 '51

Kirkus 19:332 Jl 1 '51 130w

"Primitive living, gold prospecting, horses and shooting make this a true 'western'." M. P. McKay

+ Library J 76:1334 S 1 '51 110w

"Written as a romance in the first person, it falls short of reality through excess of quaint narration."

— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p26 D 2 '51 200w

"Narrated in a chatty, somewhat saccharine style, it will appeal to readers who enjoy a mildly adventurous, tepidly romantic story." J. M. Grant

Sat R of Lit 34:37 O 27 '51 250w

ROBERTSON, MRS CONSTANCE (NOYES). Golden Circle. 339p $3 Random house

51-13569

"Mrs. Robertson has chosen for the scene of her fast-paced novel Ohio in the spring and summer of [1863]. . . The historical events of this critical season lend themselves to vivid narration—the arrest of the Copperhead leader Vallandigham by a file of Burnside's soldiers; his deportation across the Confederate lines, and dramatic reappearance on Ohio soil to run for Governor; the Dayton riot . . . the exposure of a widely-ramified plot against the Union cause, which many thought had its connection with Lee's invasion and with the last desperate effort of Confederates abroad to swing France and England into intervention; and the final triumph of the Federal authority and of Governor-elect Brough. The author has heightened the effect by her fictional elements." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 48:3; 86 S 1 '51; N 1 '51

Bookmark 11:84 Ja '52 40w

Cleveland Open Shelf p28 N '51

"A substantial bit of story-telling together with a feeling for the political and psychological atmospheres of the time, and the place, this combines romance and action in straightforward treatment."

+ Kirkus 19:449 Ag 15 '51 190w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 D 9 '51 320w

"It is clear that Miss Robertson's statements are dependable. Her novel is soundly, even impressively, documented. She has re-created and made alive again the movement whose members called themselves Knights of the Golden Circle, and whose deity was Clement Vallandigham, Ohio Congressman and Democratic nominee for Governor." Margaret Widdemer

+ N Y Times p37 N 4 '51 500w

"So much historical fiction today is set in far-off times and places that it is refreshing to find a novel which makes full, careful, and realistic use of American history near our own time. Mrs. Robertson has made our period of sectional conflict specially her own. . . But of all her books this does most to make a special scene live again and to recreate a special atmosphere. . . No one who wants to know what life in the faction-torn Ohio of 1863 was like can do better than to read this vigorous book." Allan Nevins

+ Sat R of Lit 34:16 N 24 '51 650w

ROBERTSON, KEITH. Missing brother; il. by Rafaello Busoni. 220p $2.50 Viking 50-10388

Mystery story for older boys.

Booklist 47:225 F 15 '51

"Mr. Robertson has woven a plot that holds the reader in suspense to the end."

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 N 11 '50 110w

"Fast moving, with some good characterization, and enough real suspense to hold the interest of every boy or girl of twelve or older."

+ Horn Bk 27:35 Ja '51 80w

"This author's cool-headed, enterprising young men are about the most satisfactory heroes we know, and the mystery-adventure plot here has all the necessary ingredients."

+ Kirkus 18:519 S 1 '50 160w

"The hero is a real boy, the action is fast, and the story one that junior high boys will enjoy. Recommended." Elizabeth Johnson

+ Library J 75:2160 D 15 '50 70w

Wis Lib Bul 47:68 Mr '51

ROBERTSON, WANDA. Evaluation of the culture unit method for social education. 142p $2.50 Teachers college

372.83 Social sciences—Study and teaching
51-9076

"The purpose of Robertson's study is to promote understanding of the culture-unit method as used in the first six grades of the elementary school, in relation to the influence which other methods have had upon its development. A creditable attempt has been made to find the extent to which it is currently being used in American schools." (El School J) No index.

"This book performs a valuable service as an analysis of the culture unit, a report on its current usage, and a criticism of its effectiveness or ineffectiveness in developing desirable social concepts and attitudes. It is to be hoped, however, that the author and her associates will immediately face the imperative demand for a positive course of action." K. G. Ammerman

+ El School J 51:536 My '51 500w

"Dr. Robertson's work is most timely."

+ School & Society 72:432 D 23 '50 20w

ROBINSON, CLARK SHOVE, and GILLILAND, EDWIN RICHARD. Elements of fractional distillation; rev. and rewritten by Edwin Richard Gilliland. 4th ed 492p $7 McGraw

542.48 Distillation, Fractional 50-11072

"Fractional distillation, or the separation of mixtures of volatile compounds by boiling, is an important chemical technique not only in the laboratory, but in numerous chemical industries as, for example, petroleum refining. This work has been recognized as a standard text for nearly thirty years. It is intended for graduate students of chemical engineering, and it is also useful as a refresher to engineers at work in industry. A fair amount of new materials, including an expanded discussion of vapor-liquid equilibria, has been incorporated in this edition." (Library J) For third edition see Book Review Digest 1939.

"This book should be of interest to those who are engaged in the field of distillation as students, teachers, or practicing engineers. . . [It] should be of particular use as a textbook in advanced courses in distillation, but it will also be of value to the practicing chemical engineer." C. C. Monrad

+ Chem & Eng N 29:1055 Mr 12 '51 220w

Reviewed by L. H. Allen and others

Chem Eng 58:252 Ap '51 300w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 76:335 F 15 '51 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:6 Ja '51

ROBINSON, FRANK ALFRED. Vitamin B complex. 688p $9 Wiley

574.194 Vitamins A51-7962

"A digest of the current knowledge pertaining to thiamin, riboflavin, nicotinic acid, biotin, and the other vitamins in the Vitamin B group. The vitamins are discussed separately; and, generally speaking, information is provided on the following points for each one: history, chemical constitution, synthesis, properties, assay, physiological effects of deficiency, and animal and human requirements." (Library J) Index.

"The work is a monumental one. A very large literature has been reviewed and summarized. Nothing of substantial importance within the reviewer's knowledge appears to have been missed. As a reference work this book will be invaluable to many hundreds or perhaps thousands of workers engaged in the vitamin field. Every research group in biochemistry or nutrition will want to have a copy at hand and will be grateful to the author for having produced it. It is well indexed both by authors and subjects. The printing and binding are excellent. In writing such a book an author has the option of including a good deal of somewhat questionable matter from the literature or of being highly selective at some risk of error in judgment on his own part. Mr. Robinson has chosen the former, wisely perhaps in view of the unsettled state of much of the subject matter of which he writes. His choice involves a loss of readability on many pages of the book. It also thrusts upon the reader a responsibility for discrimination which he may be unprepared to exercise." R. R. Williams

+ — Am Chem Soc J 74:286 Ja 5 '52 1050w

"The information is presented very compactly, but references are made to all the pertinent literature. The book is suitable for use as a handbook or as a literature guide." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 76:1430 S 15 '51 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:63 Jl '51

ROBINSON, GEORGE O. Oak Ridge story; the saga of a people who share in history. 181p $3.50 Southern pubs.

976.873 Oak Ridge, Tennessee 50-11478

"This book, written by a young Southern newspaperman who has been a public relations man, and, before that, a security officer at Oak Ridge almost from its beginning, is a chronicle of the atomic capital's history up to the present date. It is illustrated with striking photographs by J. E. Westcott, official photographer for the Atomic Energy Commission. . . The book is written from a local viewpoint—the appendices concluding with an extensive list of civic organizations in Oak Ridge." N Y Times

---

Booklist 47:217 F 15 '51

"This book gives one the feeling of having lived through the hardships suffered by thousands in creating a city from farm land almost

ROBINSON, G. O.—Continued
as quickly as Athena was born from the forehead of Jupiter. The wisdom of Athena went into the building of the city and must continue in its operation for a successful end to the Oak Ridge Story." T. S. Gardner
+ Chem & Eng N 29:1776 Ap 30 '51 270w

"His story is marred by the inclusion of much technical discussion which has already been published elsewhere, but none the less it is a neat account of life at Oak Ridge from the pre-atomic days through to the present."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 F 11 '51 170w

"The impact of the atom on the Tennessee hill folk is not the Oak Ridge story, but it certainly is part of it, and Mr. Robinson has put a large portion of it on paper, in a fashion that will interest the general reader and be of value to historians and scholars." Michael Amrine
+ N Y Times p21 F 18 '51 380w

ROBINSON, GERTRUDE. Smoking Hoof; il. by Peter Burchard. 220p $2.50 Oxford
Horses—Legends and stories 51-12502

Timothy Tucker at fifteen wanted to be a soldier in General Washington's army. But because of a deformed shoulder he had to be content to be a fifer and scout instead. This story for grades six to eight tells of Tim's experiences and of his horse Smoking Hoof.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran
Atlantic 188:102 D '51 250w

Booklist 48:71 O 15 '51

"This is a thoughtful, well-told story with especial appeal for historically minded young readers." Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p20 O 21 '51 290w

Kirkus 19:534 S 15 '51 110w

"The style combines straightforward dignity with a lively spirit, and the content flatters the intelligence of boys of eleven to thirteen." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 S 23 '51 230w

"Not a single battle is described and personal combat plays but a minor role, yet the author maintains suspense and excitement along with an element of mystery. The descriptions of camp life and medical services are detailed and interesting. The characterizations are strong. Because it is based on careful research and genuine understanding, this book is as convincingly realistic as it is readable." R. A. Brown
+ N Y Times p50 O 21 '51 200w

ROBINSON, MABEL LOUISE. Strong wings; il. by Lynd Ward. 249p $2.75 Random house 51-11807

A novel for ages twelve to sixteen. The three teen aged Sayres find they must stay in their Maine summer cottage because their parents have not been able to conclude their business in England. The struggle to make a living for herself and her younger brother and sister is Connie's problem, which she manages very well.

Booklist 48:16 S 1 '51

Reviewed by Lucile Pannell
Chicago Sunday Tribune p19 N 11 '51 150w

Reviewed by E. C. Ince
Christian Science Monitor p13 S 13 '51 150w

"Honest rather than glamorous character portrayal, and a theme implying that a certain amount of insecurity makes young people self-reliant and helps them develop 'strong wings' give the book sincerity and strength." S. M. A.
+ Horn Bk 27:334 S '51 70w

"Delightful reading throughout."
+ Kirkus 19:325 Jl 1 '51 220w

"Maine's rugged countryside and seashore form the background for this worthwhile book. Recommended." A. M. Wetherell
+ Library J 76:1343 S 1 '51 80w

"Excellent story for girls. . . Miss Robinson handles background and characters equally well." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 S 23 '51 110w

"This is a richly patterned novel which draws much of its vigor from the ever-present sense of the sea and the land." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p30 S 9 '51 200w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 25 '51 60w

"This reviewer put down the new story of Mabel Robinson's with a feeling of disappointment. . . What is wrong with the story? Perhaps it is in the attitude of the Sayre children to the Maine people—an attiude that might have seemed natural thirty years ago but is not representative today. Perhaps it is the ending of the story when the three fly to England to join their parents with the same insecurity, the same lack of purpose, that characterized their stay in Maine."
— Sat R of Lit 34:64 N 10 '51 180w

Wis Lib Bul 47:221 S '51

ROBINSON, MABEL LOUISE. Writing for young people; jacket and portrait by Béla Dankovszky. 256p $2.75 Nelson
808.3 Authorship. Children's literature. Fiction—Technique 50-9106

"Although this is a new edition of a book first published in 1922, it has been so thoroughly revised that it is almost a new book. It is basically the same in point of view, but the illustrative material is taken from recent books, and the outdated booklists have been omitted. Growing from the author's course in writing for children, at Columbia University, it contains the practical sort of help students need in either writing or judging a book." Horn Bk

Horn Bk 27:116 Mr '51 80w

"Excellent library and writing class book."
+ Kirkus 18:443 Ag 1 '50 170w

"The first part of the book, on kinds of writing for children and young people, is the least able or interesting. . . However, when she gets down to the details of the craft, much of value is revealed. The final chapters on style and on 'the art of working,' are particularly invigorating. Here Miss Robinson talks of the life of the writer as the way of living she loves best, and what she has to say is sensible as well as inspiring." L. S. Bechtel
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 F 11 '51 320w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p12 Jl 29 '51 130w

ROBINSON, NORMAN HAMILTON GALLOWAY. Faith and duty; with an introd. by John Baillie. 150p $2 Harper
171.1 Faith. Sin. Christian ethics 51-10840

"Professor John Baillie, in his introduction to this book, gives a concise statement of what it is all about. It is concerned 'with the relation of the ethical affirmation of individual responsibility to the Christian affirmation of the universality of sin.' . . In the process of defining the problem the author discusses fully and critically the formulations put forward by such scholars as Brunner, Barth, Niebuhr, and Tennant; and this part constitutes a good survey of recent work on the subject. For his own solution of the problem Dr. Robinson turns to the idea of collective responsibility." Times [London] Lit Sup

"Faith and Duty is most successful in its useful and often acute critical comparisons of the various views examined. The whole work is written with stimulating vigor and in a clear, straightforward style." L. H. DeWolf
+ Christian Century 68:989 Ag 29 '51 750w

"It does not seem to me that Dr Robinson, for all the hard and subtle thinking he brings to the enterprise, really succeeds in making the doctrine of the universal, equal, and total sinfulness of man any more intelligible, or any less objectionable, than the moralist usually finds it. I venture to think that no one will succeed so long as it is assumed that the sense of 'sinful' in which it is an authentic religious insight that 'all men are equally and totally sinful' is a sense which implies the blameworthiness of the 'sinner.'" C. A. Campbell

+ — Hibbert J 49:195 Ja '51 1100w

Kirkus 19:272 Je 1 '51 180w

"As a whole the book is a carefully thought-out and well-argued presentation of a problem that has long puzzled theologians. The solution proposed is one that deserves to be very seriously weighed; and whether or not it finally proves convincing, it is good to have followed an argument so well considered and so ably set forth."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p73 F 2 '51 450w

ROBINSON, ROLAND INWOOD. Management of bank funds. 425p $5.50 McGraw

332.1 Banks and banking 51-715

"Basic purpose: to describe methods of achieving the most profitable employment of commercial bank funds consistent with safety, pitched at the level of the whys of policy formation. The view is that of the independent bank, which must attract and hold deposits, then employ them, along with its capital, in a carefully scheduled and controlled scheme of lending and investment. The varied forms of this conversion, how to promote and conserve the funds for profit and stability, are the subjects of the book." (Library J) Index.

"The unfolding of the argument is done so skillfully that the reviewer can do little except praise. The author's grasp of economic problems is so firm that involved language is avoided, so much so that the reader may easily be tempted to disparage the depth of the analysis. To those of this mind it may be well to recall that there are two kinds of clarity, that of the superficial and that of understanding, and that this book reveals the latter type of clarity. The author is not the kind of economist who would darken counsel 'till the student is lost in a bewildering maze of useless metaphysical abstractions.'" H. L. Reed

+ Am Econ R 41:712 S '51 1000w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 76:870 My 15 '51 80w

ROBISON, GERDA. Dark lady. 247p $3 Harper 51-3966

"The search for a missing brother takes an artist to a small Southern community where feeling against Northerners was still active in the early 1900's. A blighted romance intrigues the artist and in setting it right he also learns the truth about his brother's mysterious disappearance." Booklist

Booklist 47:382 Jl 1 '51

"'Dark Lady' is a book of more than ordinary allurement to anyone interested in a tale which is spun without ominous inevitability as well as with a vivid sense of the dark influences of places and persons." Fanny Butcher

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 17 '51 330w

"A carefully sustained drama of family pride and passions, of the destructive domination of a father, to which the somnolent, sequestered world of the bayou country lends a particular fascination."

+ Kirkus 19:192 Ap 1 '51 180w

Reviewed by Beatrice Sherman

N Y Times p15 Jl 22 '51 180w

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Jl 15 '51 270w

"This sense of overwhelming abundance, of lush characterization, color, and plot should make what is agreeably called 'a good movie.' It has already made a good book." Josephine Lawrence

+ Sat R of Lit 34:10 Je 9 '51 550w

Wis Lib Bul 47:189 Jl '51

ROCKWELL, MRS HELEN PENDLETON. Here's how; a journey through good food; introd. by William E. McKenney. 429p $3 Roy pubs.

641.5 Cookery

Recipes for good food obtained by the compiler on her travels in the United States and Canada. There are brief descriptive chapters by William McKenney telling how and where the recipes were obtained. Index.

Booklist 47:201 F 1 '51

"Not many recipes under each subject but the selection is unusual and always a little on the rich side so far as ingredients are concerned." K. T. Willis

Library J 75:2152 D 15 '50 40w

"The recipes are too numerous and the directions too few to make it practicable for everyone, but there are many excellent recipes and the book would serve well as a reference library for a good cook." Charlotte Turgeon

+ N Y Times p67 D 3 '50 50w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ja 25 '51 650w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter

Springf'd Republican p19A Ja 14 '51 210w

RODDEN, CLEMENT JAMES, and others, eds. Analytical chemistry of the Manhattan project. 748p il $6.75 McGraw

543.6 Chemistry, Analytic. Radiochemistry 50-11110

"A comprehensive presentation of the analytical methods and techniques that were employed in chemical analyses in connection with the development of the atomic bomb and related work of the Manhattan District Project. . . As might be expected, the longest chapter (157p) is the one devoted to uranium. The chapters are signed, and full literature references are included. Research reports as well as published books and periodicals are cited." N Y New Tech Bks

N Y New Tech Bks 36:5 Ja '51

"Since the volume is the record of analytical investigations necessary for the atomic energy development, it is a mixture of classic, new, and unpublished methods, and is not intended as a complete analytical compendium. The quality of the work reported varies; in some instances, methods no longer considered acceptable have been used, while for a few elements, standard methods which are well established receive no mention at all. Considerable judgment must, therefore, be used in utilizing the information supplied."

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:204 Je '51 200w

RODDIS, LOUIS HARRY. James Lind, founder of nautical medicine. (Life of science lib) 177p il $3 Schuman

B or 92 Lind, James. Medicine, Naval 51-1222

"It was an important day for the British Navy when in 1739 the Scottish doctor James Lind became a ship's surgeon. Lind spent his life among sailors and is here called the 'Nautical Hippocrates.' He was the first to develop a practical method of producing fresh water from sea water. Moreover, in a period when colonization was bringing new diseases to Europe, he advocated cinchino as an anti-malarial and outlined quarantine measures against typhus and other tropical diseases. . . Lind's greatest fame, however, is that in 1753 he published 'A Treatise on Scurvy' in which he proved that scurvy could be cured by citrus fruits." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

Kirkus 18:744 D 15 '50 160w

Reviewed by Ralph Colp

N Y Times p30 Mr 4 '51 370w

"The author has done an admirable job with the limited amount of material available." R. H. D.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 4 '51 500w

Sat R of Lit 34:32 Je 9 '51 250w

RODGERS, ANDREW DENNY. Bernhard Eduard Fernow; a story of North American forestry. 623p $7.50 Princeton univ. press

B or 92 Fernow, Bernhard Eduard. Forests and forestry—North America Agr51-517

"Prussian-born and trained, Bernhard Fernow was the first forester to practice in North America. Dating from the early Eighteen Eighties, his work foreran that of Gifford Pinchot. . . As the first Chief of the United States Forest Service, and again as head of the country's first professional school of forestry at Cornell, Fernow doubted his ability to cope with politicians. He yielded both posts calmly when politics came in. . . In the light of the long record here carefully unfolded and documented, there can be no doubt as to the extremely high quality of Fernow's professional contributions to the advancement of forestry in the United States and Canada." N Y Times

Reviewed by Russell Lord
N Y Times p9 S 2 '51 320w

"In tracing the career of Fernow, the book presents a rich background of details about forestry legislation, both state and federal, research in timber physics, forest influences and silviculture, and forestry education during a half-century. . . The book presents a wealth of information about forestry, but the reader may wish that it had been presented in a different pattern of organization."
+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 7:227 S '51 250w

RODGERS, RICHARD. King and I. See Hammerstein, O.

RODGERS, RICHARD. Rodgers and Hart song book; the words and music of forty-seven of their songs from twenty-two shows and two movies; with an introduction by Richard Rodgers; foreword by Oscar Hammerstein II; il. by Doris Lee; arrangements by Albert Sirmay; text by Margery Darrell. 243p $7.50 Simon & Schuster

784.8 Songs 51-13388

"A chronological arrangement of forty-seven songs—words and music—that resulted from perhaps the most gratifying collaboration in the history of musical comedy, with pictures by Doris Lee, an introduction by Mr. Rodgers and another by Oscar Hammerstein II, and informative synopses, notes, and lists by Margery Darrell." New Yorker

Booklist 48:81 N 1 '51

"Large and handsome book, which is not too large to lie flat on the music rack of your piano. Good and uncomplicated piano arrangements by Albert Sirmay, a running text by Margery Darrell, and whimsical illustrations [a few in color] by Doris Lee add to the attractiveness of the book." Edward Barry
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 25 '51 150w

Reviewed by Harold Rogers
Christian Science Monitor p15 D 13 '51 260w

"Good merchandise for immediate sale and a sure investment for the long pull."
+ Kirkus 19:516 S 1 '51 100w

Reviewed by C. K. Miller
Library J 76:2114 D 15 '51 100w

"Obviously such a book will take people back over some of the pleasantest moments they ever had in a theater. For Rodgers and Hart ignored all the tired old conventions of the musical comedy form, and brought a freshness and inventiveness to their shows which delighted a whole generation." W. K. Zinsser
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 N 25 '51 650w

Reviewed by Lewis Nicols
N Y Times p29 O 28 '51 550w

"It is in every way a triumph, and an especially welcome one for those who haven't managed to hang on to their old sheet music. . . and who are hereby given a chance to read again the complete verses and choruses of Lorenz Hart's lyrics. They turn out to be just as graceful, witty, tactful, and free from the struck attitude as they seemed when they first appeared."
+ New Yorker 27:155 N 3 '51 120w

"The volume is far more than a collection of forty-seven delightful pieces of sheet music. It is enriched with an informative text by Margery Darrell, who with just the right nostalgic note gives us the background of the collaboration as well as a retrospective picture of the times." Melville Cane
+ Sat R of Lit 34:30 D 15 '51 410w

RODMAN, SELDEN. Portrait of the artist as an American; Ben Shahn; a biography with pictures. 180p $6.50 Harper

B or 92 Shahn, Ben 51-13491

"Believing that Shahn can no more be explained in ideological than in purely esthetic terms, Rodman—who has written widely on art and poetry—digs back through the years for the well-springs of the man. His biographical chapters start with the present and move backward—the last sentence describes the artist's birth. . . Rodman criticizes as well as praises his subject; he shows, for instance, that the artist's friends upon occasion find him overaggressive; and he deplores what he calls Shahn's 'bitter political involvements.' The author has had the courage to draw no dogmatic conclusions." N Y Times

Booklist 48:124 D 1 '51
Bookmark 11:82 Ja '52 20w

"A sympathetic, intelligent and detailed biography of one of America's best known, and most criticized (largely on the grounds of his radicalism) artists."
+ Kirkus 19:468 Ag 15 '51 220w

"A desirable record of the working background of an important American artist as he chooses to be seen by his contemporaries. It is a book capriciously organized and written in a tone that is unconsciously ingenuous about our most disingenuous mannerist."
+ — New Repub 125:21 D 10 '51 100w

"Here is a unique experience—ranking emotionally beside the great artistic self-revelations, but differing from them in its strangely simultaneous objectivity. Neither Shahn nor any painter could have painted such an inside-outside self-portrait in words. Words may not be their business, but ideas and emotions certainly are, and this book is proof that at least one painter has plenty of both, with the luck, too, to find such an interpreter as Selden Rodman." Jay Leyda
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 D 23 '51 900w

"The lay-out of this copiously illustrated volume, with plates and text interwoven, is imaginative. Yet readers will wish that the book's designer had had the courage to break the rules by not insisting that all reproductions, except one of the two excellent color plates, stand upright on the page. . . Yet this mechanical fault does not detract fundamentally from this story of a meaningful life, evoked in all its complexity. Like some of the best American artistic biographies of the past Rodman's biography of Shahn is in itself a work of art." J. T. Flexner
+ — N Y Times p1 O 21 '51 1000w

"Long talks between [the author and his subject] quoted with almost Boswellian fidelity, give an effect of immediacy to the recital, and if they also sometimes give the book a certain air of superficiality, they are balanced, unobtrusively, by a good deal of research and a generally sound objectivity on the author's part."
+ — New Yorker 27:169 N 24 '51 150w
School & Society 74:287 N 3 '51 20w
Time 58:82 N 5 '51 450w

ROGERS, BRUCE ALLISON. Nature of metals 248p il $3 Am. soc. for metals; Iowa state college press

669 Metallography 51-10736

"Another book in a useful series published by the American Society for Metals primarily for the home instruction of workers in the metallurgical industries. It deals with the atomic structure of metal alloys and what happens to this structure when the material is subjected to heat, oxygen and corrosive substances, and deforming forces. The style is semi-technical. . . Bibliography." Library J

Booklist 47:341 Je 1 '51
Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 76:1134 Jl '51 90w
Wis Lib Bul 47:211 S '51

ROGERS, FRANCES. Mr Brady's camera boy; il. by Dudley G. Summers. 248p $2.75 Lippincott 51-11177

Timothy was a Southern boy, assistant to a traveling photographer. On the eve of the Civil war Timothy was stranded in Washington, and finally got a position with Mathew Brady, the famous photographer. The story is of the boy's meeting with Lincoln, Harriet Tubman, and others. For grades seven to nine.

"Extremely well done." M. F. Kieran
+ Atlantic 188:103 D '51 100w
Booklist 48:72 O 15 '51
Reviewed by A. B. McGuire
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 N 11 '51 190w
Christian Science Monitor p11 S 6 '51 70w

"A good yarn with period feel, adventure and the beginnings of romance, as well as providing a background of the early experimental days of photography."
+ Kirkus 19:323 Jl 1 '51 140w

"Appeal of story limited to the few interested in early photography. Historical background incidental, easy conversational style, but story not outstanding; lacks any great appeal to the adolescent today." R. C. Buell
+ — Library J 76:1717 O 15 '51 70w

"Perhaps the plot interest is diverted into too many channels, and the way Tim comes into contact with Lincoln is forced. Still, the attempt is worth while. Boys of junior high age will like to follow it up with the adult books of Brady's war pictures. Those who can will connect it with the exhibit current at the Library of Congress, of old American photography. The many pictures are competent and charming." L. S. Bechtel
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 N 11 '51 160w

"Young camera devotees will find amusement and interest in the descriptions of early techniques. A sprightly tale, spiced with humor and adventure." N. B. Baker
+ N Y Times p28 S 16 '51 180w

ROGERS, JOHN WILLIAM. Lusty Texans of Dallas. (Society in America ser) 384p $4.50 Dutton
976.4 Dallas, Texas 51-9077

The history of the founding and development of the city of Dallas, with special emphasis on the men and women prominent in the city's growth. Index.

Booklist 47:217 F 15 '51

"This is a delightful book—as genial, alert, informed, and honest as its versatile author. Few cities have been so fortunate in their biografers as this Texas metropolis, Dallas." Stanley Vestal
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 F 11 '51 420w
Kirkus 18:688 N 15 '50 170w
Reviewed by Sylvestre Vigilante
Library J 75:2074 D 1 '50 140w
Reviewed by Edward Angly
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ja 21 '51 1400w

"Mr. Rogers has unearthed many bits of early history in his research. He traces the city's history from Bryan's log cabin to the Neiman-Marcus department store. Churches, hotels, art, theatres, newspapers—all are covered exhaustively. . . The book has been selected for the Society in America Series. The choice is an excellent one, even to the title." Hoffman Birney
+ N Y Times p6 Ja 21 '51 470w

"Some of Mr. Rogers's customers will be disappointed that he has given such scant mention to such characters as the late Col. R. E. L. Knight and Dr. J. O. McReynolds; and he has completely ignored many important families. . . One more serious kick: Mr. Rogers, though he has in many ways an ingratiating style, seems utterly baffled by what to do with his commas. . . However, if for nothing else, Mr. Rogers deserves the thanks of everyone for resurrecting many of the lush and heartbreakingly rococo writings of the late Mrs. Hugh Nugent Fitzgerald, a society reporter of long ago whose prose gyrations must be read to be believed." Stanley Walker
+ — Sat R of Lit 34:15 Ja 20 '51 1100w

ROGERS, MRS LETTIE (HAMLETT). Storm cloud. 309p $3 Random house
51-359

Novel of China during the aftermath of an uprising in China in 1927. The third daughter of the wealthy Koo family is the heroine. Educated at Vassar the third Koo girl became a leader of the revolutionaries. The story describes her harried life as the result of her rebellion, until she eventually found peace.

Booklist 47:149; 220 D 15 '50; F 15 '51
Bookmark 10:233 Jl '51
Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Cath World 173:75 Ap '51 90w

"The author sees deeply into these people, the subtleties of their relationships, the common bonds which hold them, and she depicts them vividly, authentically, and with compassion." A. L. Bader
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 11 '51 400w
Reviewed by M. W. Stoer
Christian Science Monitor p13 F 21 '51 480w
Kirkus 18:664 N 1 '50 250w

"This novel, on a timely theme, even though frank in places, is for public libraries." H. R. Forbes
+ Library J 76:40 Ja 1 '51 90w

"An almost unbearably taut story. I suffered an added strain myself, wondering if she would let the action play itself out on its own terms. All I shall say here is that the reader is not bilked on the last page." J. J. Espey
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ja 28 '51 750w

"One of the best novels about China in a long time. . . All the characters are made of strong stuff, from Old Koo down to Tear Drop, the slatternly concubine of one of his sons, but Madame Koo is magnificent and unforgettable. 'Storm Cloud' is a vital, exciting novel written with sensitivity and understanding." M. J. Tweedy
+ N Y Times p4 Ja 28 '51 470w
Reviewed by D. K. Bestor
Sat R of Lit 34:30 Mr 17 '51 270w
Wis Lib Bul 47:63 Mr '51

ROGERS, MATILDA. First book of tree identification; phot. by Wynn Hammer. 95p $2.50 Random house
582.16 Trees—North America 51-10115

Identification data on thirty-one common trees of the United States and Canada. Contains photographs of branches and single leaf for each tree described, with a few pictures of fruits and bark of various trees. List of technical terms with definitions. Index.

Booklist 47:313 My 1 '51

"Book is filled with the most exciting leaf and branch photographs I have ever seen—at least one on every page. Recommended for all children's libraries." N. S. Chasteen
+ Library J 76:782 My 1 '51 100w

ROGERS, MATILDA—Continued

"Avowedly a primer, and a good one. . . Particularly revealing sidelights are thrown on each [tree], so that it inevitably acquires a certain personality as well as identity." R. S. Lemmon
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 My 27 '51 110w

"The whole emphasis is upon aiding the ordinary walker or traveler to identify, mainly from the leaves, the trees he is most apt to see. Beginners in nature study, both adult and children, will find this an invaluable introduction to a fascinating hobby." C. W. W.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 My 13 '51 80w

ROHRER, JOHN H., and SHERIF, MUZAFER, eds. Social psychology at the crossroads. (Okla. Univ. Lectures in social psychology) 437p $4 Harper

301.15 Social psychology

Symposium consisting of papers on general psychology, sociology, anthropology, and social psychology. Papers are grouped under six headings: Social psychology: integrating individual and social approaches; Biological factors and human behavior; Interaction in the cultural setting; Basic psychological functions; Group structures and individual roles; Human behavior in the social psychological frame of reference. Indexes.

Reviewed by R. E. L. Faris
Am Soc R 16:570 Ag '51 1150w

"Each of the contributors is a recognized expert in his field, and each paper is separately informative."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:295 S '51 300w

ROLFS, MARY JANE. No vacancy. 247p $2.75 Houghton

51-6721

Mamie Flanagan who ran the Shamrock, a California motel, had been in the business twenty years, and there was little she did not know about it. Mamie's common sense and her love for Mike, who leases the restaurant of the Shamrock, bring the novel to a happy ending.

Booklist 48:102 N 15 '51

"An effective story despite its tranquillity."
+ Kirkus 19:500 S 1 '51 100w

"The characters are real people and enlist interest. . . Very light but attractive tale." J. L. Ross
+ Library J 76:1804 N 1 '51 50w

"Mrs. Rolfs has run a motel herself and is, of course, completely familiar with her subject. . . 'No Vacancy' is a competently written book and an entirely sympathetic picture of the people who choose to operate a motel for a living." Betty Arnoff
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p30 D 2 '51 360w

"It is fun to go behind the scenes of any business, particularly in a warm-hearted story where the characters are not necessarily doomed to ruin. Mamie's love affair with Mike, the restaurant owner, is on the stereotyped side, but her knowledge of her means of livelihood make 'No Vacancy' an unusually interesting novel." Jane Cobb
+ — N Y Times p46 N 18 '51 360w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 D 3 '51 700w

Wis Lib Bul 47:255 N '51

ROLLINS, HYDER EDWARD, and PARRISH, STEPHEN MAXFIELD, eds. Keats and the Bostonians; Amy Lowell, Louise Imogen Guiney, Louis Arthur Holman, Fred Holland Day. 209p il $3.50 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 Keats, John 51-10971

An account of the Keats lovers of Boston during the last fifty years. The bulk of the space is given to Amy Lowell and a collector named Fred Holland Day, who had in his possession a series of letters from Fanny Brawne to Keats' sister, Fanny Keats de Llanos. Index.

Reviewed by A. C. Ames
Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Jl 15 '51 200w

Reviewed by W. P. Sears
Churchman 165:17 O 15 '51 110w

"This book will delight a small audience hugely. . . Recommended for large libraries and literature collections." Shirley Barker
+ Library J 76:860 My 15 '51 80w

"The letters are not of much intrinsic interest, but the whole story as told by Mr Rollins in his introduction provides a droll footnote to Keats's tragedy." H. I'A. F.
Manchester Guardian p4 O 2 '51 150w

"Complicated as the story is, it is coherently and even excitingly set forth and reveals aspects of a number of well-known Englishmen and Americans concerned in some fashion with Keats. But for the reader of less antiquarian taste what may well be most rewarding in this book is its picture of Day." E. E. Murdock
+ New Eng Q 24:404 S '51 700w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Je 10 '51 500w

"How the letters were finally released and published in England nearly fifty years from the time Señora de Llanos had 'lent' them to Day is the dénouement of the plot, I suppose; but the preliminary skirmishes, the intrigues, the mutterings of a chorus of scholars, lawyers, trustees and librarians—these make the entertainment rich and varied. It could have happened only in Boston." Dudley Fitts
+ N Y Times p4 My 27 '51 360w

"That the editing and commentary in 'Keats and the Bostonians' are models of thorough, urbane scholarship will surprise nobody familiar with Mr. Rollins's 'The Keats Circle' and 'Keats' Reputation in America to 1848.' Like those, this book is drawn mostly from the collection in the Houghton Library at Harvard." W. T. Scott
+ Sat R Lit 34:22 Je 16 '51 650w

Reviewed by H. W. Garrod
Spec 187:447 O 5 '51 500w

ROMANI, GEORGE T. Neapolitan revolution of 1820-1821. 190p $4 Northwestern univ. Graduate school, Evanston, Ill.

945.7 Naples (kingdom)—History—Revolution of 1820 50-10812

"The Neapolitan revolution of 1820-1821 does not loom large in the story of military-political upheavals of even modern Europe. It was, however, significant as the first direct challenge to Metternich's system for the pacification of Europe after 1815. . . Mr. Romani has written an account of the events in Naples, and of their international effects, from July, 1820, to March, 1821. He has drawn on a wide range of sources." Am Hist R

"Mr. Romani has written well. His story is thoroughly documented; a helpful map, an extensive bibliography, and a complete index contribute to the worth of his volume. It does not, however, add to its merit that it carried on the discredited contemporary rumor that the king could so freely violate his sworn fidelity to the constitution because of the pontifical absolution which Ferdinand had received for his oaths under duress." J. H. Brady
+ — Am Hist R 56:349 Ja '51 700w

"Well-balanced and well-written."
+ Sat R of Lit 34:53 Je 16 '51 160w

"Much of the fiction connected with the revolution and the constitutional government has been vigorously corrected in this volume. Extremely well done, it should serve as a cornerstone in the preparation of other much-needed studies concerning revolutionary Italy."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:59 Mr '51 240w

ROMANO, ROMUALDO. Scirocco; tr. from the Italian by William Jay Smith. 184p $2.75 Farrar, Straus .
51-7522

"Romualdo Romano's first novel is told in the first person by a puzzled schoolteacher who seeks the freedom to write a novel in Fascist Italy at war. He takes a job in a lone village in the Sicilian hills, where sex is scurrilous and filth affectionate, where radios blare and church-bells toll the boredom of life—until the scirocco blowing from the south whips up old energies and dashes new hopes to their timeless, quiet end with the dying out of the wind on the mountain slope." N Y Times

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 16 '51 410w

Kirkus 19:454 Ag 15 '51 150w

"Mis-titled except that the scirocco does blow. However little else happens, and what does is pretty dull... Should be skipped except in the all-inclusive collection." R. E. Kingery
— Library J 76:1703 O 15 '51 140w

"A disgusting novel about a disgusted school teacher who does nothing and cares for nothing except the relative cleanliness of hunting... But the novel is also a parable, economic and vivid, of the soul of man under Fascism." H. C. Webster
New Repub 125:26 D 10 '51 230w

"Romano's novel is a study in futilities. But it is too slight, too formless to be complete even as a study. One remembers only an atmosphere in which meaningless characters fail to move."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p40 D 2 '51 320w

"'Scirocco' is a lively reminder of the fact that in novels situation and setting are sometimes most convincing when developed with their own ruthless, inherent logic, without benefit of outside comment or extra sentiment. Mr. Romano's first novel is a work on a small scale, but the integrity of its style and execution is quite promising." Nancy Lenkeith
N Y Times p5 N 25 '51 500w

"There is no story, actually—only a chronicle of village life, which, during the three days that occupy the book, is disturbed by fire, adultery, birth, murder, abortion, and political intrigue. Still, Mr. Romano stresses his narrator's boredom and lethargy so consistently that he manages to make even all this activity seem banal."
New Yorker 27:77 D 22 51 120w

Reviewed by William Hogan
San Francisco Chronicle p11 D 9 '51 180w

"The manner in which this young storyteller at all times keeps the scirocco within his story is quite an accomplishment. There also is the description of a wildfowl hunt in the narrative which must have delighted Mr. Hemingway and is likely to spellbind others." Robert Pick
Sat R of Lit 34:15 D 22 '51 300w

ROMBAUER, MRS IRMA (VON STARKLOFF). Joy of cooking [new ed by] Irma S. Rombauer [and] Marion Rombauer Becker; il. by Ginnie Hofmann. 1011p $3.50 Bobbs
641.5 Cookery 51-11697

"This popular cookbook is expanded and revised, with new sections on frozen foods, pressure cookery, the use of the electric mixer, and high altitude cookery." (Booklist) For earlier edition see Book Review Digest 1936.

Booklist 48:34 S 15 '51

"An enlarged and vastly improved edition of the book that has become the final authority on food preparation in more than a million homes." Valerie Bowers
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 12 '51 170w

"In an age that applauds the 'complete package,' whether it be a table d'hôte dinner, a supermarket or the full and last word on growing gladiolus, Mrs. Rombauer produced an all-purpose cookbook that, according to many practical cooks, has never failed to fill a particular demand." Jane Nickerson
+ N Y Times p6 Ag 12 '51 800w

"'The Joy of Cooking' has become one of the classic American volumes on cookery. It has gone through printing after printing, and in 1943 was completely revised. Now a new edition is out, again revised, this time so extensively that the book had to be freshly set and enlarged. . . It is not possible here to list the changes and additions. . . For the most part, these are the result of the new and revolutionary freezing and other kitchen equipment that has come into use in the 1940s." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 23 '51 360w

ROMULO, CARLOS PENA. The united. 310p $3 Crown
51-11704

"The hero, Maj. MacKenna King, called Ken by his friends, is that well-known figure, the disapproving son of a rapacious Wall Street tycoon. Ken at first amounts to no more than a soldier returning from the wars, looking disinterestedly at the new U. N. building as the airport taxi passes by on its way down First Ave. Ken develops his interest in international affairs through the medium of beautiful girls. . . Much of the action and most of the talk in 'The United' takes place in and around the habitats of the diplomats in New York and in Paris." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 48:32 S 15 '51

Reviewed by Edmund Fuller
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 2 '51 320w

"Here is the first real novel woven around the United Nations of which this reviewer has heard, and it is a good one. It is good not merely as a story, but also as a work designed to explain what the United Nations is, how it works, why it is important, and why each of us should give it intelligent support and encouragement." J. G. Harrison
+ Christian Science Monitor p6 Ag 20 '51 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '51

Kirkus 19:307 Je 15 '51 150w

"Although apparently at ease with the American idiom, the author cannot make his characters rise above the stature of political contrivances. Chief interest is the insight afforded into the functioning and personalities of the U.N." A. J. Gaines
Library J 76:1223 Ag '51 130w

"Gen. Romulo, to whom news reporting is no strange field, does an expert job of putting on paper the atmosphere of delegates' lounges, assembly halls, conference rooms, even of the tony cocktail parties at which U. N. people have a habit of turning up. He is less successful in depicting some of the villains who are doing their best to upset the good work of the U. N. . . 'The United' is at its best when it devotes itself to principle." Herbert Kupferberg
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 19 '51 500w

"While all the characters are patently designed to fulfill the thematic roles for which they are created, the success of the book arises from the effective manner in which the author has succeeded—one way and another—in infusing the genuine breath of life into most of them." Henry Cavendish
+ N Y Times p4 Ag 19 '51 500w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 D 23 '51 350w

Reviewed by Siegfried Mandel
Sat R of Lit 34:18 N 17 '51 900w

Springf'd Republican p8C Ag 12 '51 210w

RONALD, JAMES. Man born of woman. 318p $3.50 Lippincott
51-11184

The story of a boy's search for love and a home. Quentin Gourlay was the son of an irresponsible Scotch so-called artist and the unglamorous daughter of an English manufacturer. Neither his father nor his mother was interested in Quentin and when his mother died his father shunted him off to one relative after another. Scotland, France, and England are the scenes of the novel, and Quentin's search finally is successful.

RONALD, JAMES—Continued

Booklist 48:13 S 1 '51

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Cath World 174:234 D '51 250w

"After a protracted bout with modern novels, it is a pleasure to read a story in which the author, altho clearly aware of the sordid aspects of life, is more interested in his characters than he is in their salacity." Ney MacMinn
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 S 9 '51 460w

"Call 'Man Born of Woman' an exercise in realism, symbolism, or what you like, the writer possesses the technical make-up of a master novelist. For observant treatment of locale, glance through the episodes the scene of which lies in Scotland; that is to say, in Glasgow and environs. Then for character, set your eye on Sarah Vine. If the book were a play, it would want a shrewd actress for that part." W. P. Tryon
+ Christian Science Monitor p5 Ag 30 '51 390w

"What might have been sticky sentiment or even tragedy is here quietly detailed through the full life stories of every character and the inevitable effect of character on action, in a rounded, 19th century tale."
+ Kirkus 19:305 Je 15 '51 250w

"A richly variegated and highly readable story." Mary Ross
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 S 23 '51 550w

"Interest in people is the tremendous gift that James Ronald has. It is that which makes his novels so thoroughly alive. 'Man Born of Woman' is the best Ronald novel this reviewer has read, and not because it is socially significant or burdened with current problems. It is simply alive, and its people meet human problems in a believable human way." Hal Borland
+ N Y Times p10 S 2 '51 250w

"The 'true' novel, according to one orthodox authority, is 'a single continuous narrative which sincerely and faithfully depicts the thoughts and actions of characters representative of real life in their appropriate setting.' Few novels published nowadays fulfill this comprehensive, if rather cumbersome, definition so solidly as does Mr. Ronald's unusually engaging work. . . He is as adept as Dickens at creating memorable characters—young Gourlay's lusty Aunt Bella is a person to remember. All too often novelists describe a character as being witty without providing any proof in dialogue. Mr. Ronald's Aunt Bella lives up to her billing." George Milburn
+ Sat R of Lit 34:20 S 1 '51 440w

ROOD, JOHN. Sculpture in wood. 179p il $5 Univ. of Minn.

736.4 Sculpture. Wood carving 50-9725

"A successful sculptor gives instructions for the serious student of wood sculpturing. Describes needed tools and their care, woods, finishes, and techniques, and gives a step-by-step description of the carving of two figures. Stories of his own experiences and digression into a discussion of the importance of art to America and the use of sculpture in home decoration add readability to usefulness." Booklist

Booklist 47:131 D 1 '50

Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 22 '51 40w

School Arts 51:adv N '51 80w

ROOS, ANN. Royal road; Father Serra and the California missions; with drawings by George Stewart. 243p $2.75 Lippincott

B or 92 Serra, Junipero—Juvenile literature. Franciscans in California. California—Missions 51-11178

"In simple, direct narrative suitable for adult or teen-age reading, Miss Roos tells the story of Father Junipero Serra's part in the founding of the California missions. In her portrayal of Father Serra she selects and gives emphasis to the characteristics that made Serra an administrator and organizer as well as scholar and missionary." San Francisco Chronicle

Booklist 48:128 D 1 '51

Bookmark 11:35 N '51

"A scholarly but unfortunately too academic an account of the work of Father Junipero Serra."
Kirkus 19:583 O 1 '51 200w

"Characters are well drawn and atmosphere and details of the period described with a quiet dignity. Recommended for ages 12-16." H. M. Brogan
+ Library J 76:2017 D 1 '51 80w

"An excellent new biography." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 N 11 '51 140w
+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 11 '51 250w

ROOSEVELT, FRANKLIN DELANO. Franklin D. Roosevelt's own story; told in his own words from his private and public papers as selected by Donald Day. 461p $4 Little

B or 92 U.S.—Politics and government 51-13942

Selections from Franklin D. Roosevelt's public and private papers, arranged "to let him give his own growth and development, to unfold his own social, economic and political credo." Index.

Booklist 48:143 D 15 '51

Kirkus 19:465 Ag 15 '51 190w

"The editorial task is apparently well done and the resulting volume is one that should appeal to those who want to know more about the late President but who do not want to tackle the collected works. . . Recommended." R. H. McDonough
+ Library J 76:1700 O 15 '51 100w

"Unregenerate critics of F.D.R. will complain that Day, with the zeal of the newly converted, has selected only excerpts from the papers which show his hero to best advantage. This criticism is valid, but nothing else could be expected from one who set out to confirm a preconceived thesis that 'this man could not be both a saint and a devil, a Messiah and a Judas Iscariot.' Day's book makes F.D.R. a saint and a Messiah." H. B. Hinton
N Y Times p18 N 4 '51 470w
Wis Lib Bul 47:253 N '51

ROOSEVELT, THEODORE. Letters; selected and ed. by Elting E. Morison; John M. Blum, associate ed. 8v v 1-2 800;801-1549p pl $20 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 (51-10037)

The first two volumes in a proposed eight-volume collection of the letters of Theodore Roosevelt. The period covered is from 1868, when the writer was ten years old, to 1900. Index.

"The scholarly quality of the work in these two volumes is apparent on practically every page. . . Roosevelt's letters reveal his prejudices and superficialities (to say nothing of his bad spelling), and they also portray an alert, many-sided, warm-blooded, and stimulating man." C. O. Johnson
+ Ann Am Acad 277:237 S '51 470w

Reviewed by Lloyd Morris
Atlantic 187:79 Je '51 1250w

Booklist 47:327 My 15 '51

"The epistolary collection is a bonanza mine of information for historians on economic, social, and political phases of the last quarter of the 19th century. It also offers fascinating reading for everyone interested in the evolution of one of the most arresting and complex personalities, one that inspired and entertained a generation of Americans and left its imprint on American institutions." A. S. Henning
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 22 '51 900w

"This remarkable collection will stand as a basic source for any further study of the first Roosevelt, or indeed of his times. It comprises 10,000 letters in eight volumes, two of which are now published. A mine for historians, it also holds gems for any reader willing to hunt a bit." Donovan Richardson
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 26 '51 950w

Reviewed by E. C. Kirkland
J Pol Econ 59:546 D '51 650w

"The Letters are well edited and of considerable value to research. Those written to contemporary historians are worth special attention. The index is extensive yet several omissions and incorrect references have been found." G. D. McDonald
+ — Library J 76:703 Ap 15 '51 180w

Reviewed by Max Beloff
Manchester Guardian p4 D 24 '51 500w

"This edition shows respect for both the subject and the reader but refreshingly avoids the danger of becoming merely a vast funeral urn with adulatory inscriptions. The numerous footnotes not only give useful information about the men and events discussed in the letters but are impartial in their judgments and sometimes witty in their illuminations. I have seldom come upon a more ambitious project in American history or one so intelligently and thoroughly carried out." M. R. Werner
+ Nation 172:374 Ap 21 '51 1350w

Reviewed by J. A. Garraty
New Eng Q 24:388 S '51 1050w

Reviewed by G. W. Johnson
New Repub 125:19 Jl 9 '51 1250w

"These two volumes enable us to fill out a picture of Roosevelt already familiar. There is, of course, much that is new without being important, just as there is much that is important without being new. There are a hundred colorful details; a hundred amusing anecdotes; a hundred rewarding confessions." H. S. Commager
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ap 22 '51 2650w

"Too many letters already published are reprinted in the first two volumes, particularly the ones to Cabot Lodge. In the main, however, the editing has been excellent. Biographical notes are supplied. As far as this reviewer can judge, objectivity has been maintained. Of major importance is the fact that the letters have been published in their entirety, and with all their mistakes. Theodore Roosevelt simply could not spell." H. F. Pringle
+ — N Y Times p3 Ap 22 '51 1150w

Reviewed by Edmund Wilson
New Yorker 27:132 O 20 '51 4450w

Reviewed by C. W. Weinberger
San Francisco Chronicle p24 Ap 29 '51 1300w

"While certain letters might have been summarized or laid aside, these two volumes are as essential to the narrative as the ones that will follow. They demonstrate how the youth developed into the man and the man into a leader of men." Harold Ickes
+ Sat R of Lit 34:13 Ap 21 '51 1300w

Reviewed by J. C. Sitterson
Social Forces 30:109 O '51 950w

Reviewed by W. G. Rogers
Springf'd Republican p12C Ap 22 '51 550w

Time 57:112 My 7 '51 600w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:228 S '51 310w

Reviewed by A. S. Link
Yale R n s 41:157 autumn '51 650w

ROOSEVELT, THEODORE. Letters; selected and ed. by Elting E. Morison; John M. Blum, associate ed. 8v v3-4 $20 Harvard univ. press
B or 92 (51-10037)

These volumes contain about 1700 of Theodore Roosevelt's letters, covering the period from 1901 when he became vice president to 1905 when he was president.

Booklist 48:84 N 1 '51

Reviewed by A. S. Henning
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 O 28 '51 1000w

Reviewed by Donovan Richardson
Christian Science Monitor p15 N 8 '51 900w

Current Hist 21:354 D '51 80w

"Work is highly recommended, yet it should be pointed out that it represents a necessary compromise in editorial policy, which tends to make it over-inclusive for general reading, and perhaps over-selective for the purposes of advanced research." G. D. McDonald
Library J 76:2004 D 1 '51 90w

"The office of President of the United States was becoming to Theodore Roosevelt, and therefore these two new instalments of his voluminous correspondence are more engaging as well as more significant than the previous two volumes, published last April and covering the years 1868-1900. . . During his term of office, covered by these letters, he remained intolerant of criticism except from close admirers, but he comes out as a man sure of himself without the necessity of being quite so cocksure." M. R. Werner
+ Nation 173:426 N 17 '51 1050w

New Repub 125:21 D 24 '51 100w

"Clearly here is one of the notable scholarly undertakings of our time, one which will do more to restore Theodore Roosevelt to his rightful place in the gallery of American statesmen than anything else, and one which illuminates a whole epoch of our history. In almost the last letter given here, Roosevelt writes to his brother-in-law, Douglas Robinson, 'Don't be misled by the fact that just at the moment men are speaking well of me. They will speak ill soon enough.' They would indeed, though not for the reasons that Roosevelt supposed. Perhaps these letters will bring a reconsideration of Roosevelt's merits and demerits." Henry Commager
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 N 18 '51 1550w

"With the appearance of the third and fourth volumes of their edition of Theodore Roosevelt's letters, Elting Morison and his co-editors have reached the half-way mark in one of the most interesting and important editorial enterprises of our time. There is much in these four volumes that is important only to those inquiring into special phases of political history; but an astonishingly large portion of the material can be browsed in with pleasure. The editing is informative and often witty; Roosevelt himself is regularly amusing, sometimes intentionaly so." Richard Hofstadter
+ N Y Times p3 O 28 '51 950w

New Yorker 27:66 D 29 '51 150w

"These new volumes of this magnificent collection form so integral a part of the vast plan that it is difficult to single them out, or to treat them as anything more than additional chapters in the great story begun last spring with the publication of the first two. . . The personal notes are thoroughly delightful, particularly the letters to his children, for Roosevelt, among his other accomplishments, was surely one of the best fathers in America." C. W. Weinberger
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 28 '51 1300w

Reviewed by George Mowry
Sat R of Lit 34:17 D 15 '51 800w

ROPKE, WILHELM. Social crisis of our time [tr. by Annette and Peter Schiffer Jacobsohn]. 260p $3.50 Univ. of Chicago press

330.1 Economic policy. Industry—Organization, control, etc. [51-15526]

For descriptive note see Annual for 1950.

Reviewed by Frank Munk
Am Econ R 41:962 D '51 850w

Reviewed by David Spitz
Am Pol Sci R 45:543 Je '51 2600w

Reviewed by W. F. Kennedy
Commonweal 54:14 Ap 13 '51 2050w

Foreign Affairs 29:666 Jl '51 50w

"Here is a statement of our social maladies that smacks of Ruskin's humanism and those romantic diatribes against the railroads when they first blackened England's countryside. . . Röpke is dreadfully concerned with the individual's plight in an overwhelming universe which thwarts personal fulfilment. He condemns the 'cult of the colossal' which permeates the capitalism of today just as he ridicules the answers offered by the 'complete collectivism' of communism. . . [He] tells us little that is new, though his curious blending of ideas will intrigue those concerned with major social problems." Harvey Levin
Nation 172:352 Ap 14 '51 500w

"This book deserves careful consideration not only by those with collectivist propensities, but also by proponents of historical liberalism. Few, if any, have carried their thinking through so successfully." Alfred Bornemann
+ Social Forces 29:455 My '51 260w

"Professor Röpke's book is surely one of the most penetrating analyses of the faults of both Communism and 'predatory capitalism' in existence. In addition, it contains a great many cogent and stimulating observations on a variety of related topics. . . Unfortunately, the chapters in which he attempts to provide a constructive program to counter the evils which he has so effectively denounced are, though interesting, only mildly impressive." B. F. Wright
+ — Yale R n s 40:345 winter '51 380w

ROSE, ARNOLD MARSHALL, ed. Race prejudice and discrimination; readings in intergroup relations in the United States. 605p $4.50 Knopf

325.73 U.S.—Race question 51-11305

Sixty readings on various phases of group antagonism, social conflict, prejudice, and irrational discrimination in the United States. The editor's aim was twofold: to provide a supplementary text in general college courses in intergroup relations; and to make a source book of basic literature for practitioners. Suggestions for further study. Index.

"In his selection and arrangement of readings, and his concise and excellent introductions to the five subdivisions, Rose has produced a well-integrated reader that can be used to advantage with any of the current textbooks in this field." V. J. Parenton
+ Am Soc R 16:886 D '51 550w

"The volume will no doubt be well received, but its reception will demonstrate once again the crying need for professors in institutions of higher learning and for practitioners in the field to evaluate the effectiveness of the work they are doing. . . Professor Rose would have improved the volume if he had included materials which would have challenged students to direct their attention to the intergroup problems in their own lives in the colleges and on the campuses where they are living and learning, and if he had first more clearly thought out the philosophy of education in accordance with which he would prepare his plan for the volume." M. P. Chworowsky
Ann Am Acad 278:220 N '51 600w

"This is an invaluable body of fact and opinion that will be useful to all who are concerned about social tensions and minority rights." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 68:918 Ag 8 '51 100w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 D 9 '51 90w

"This book is among the first to attempt a presentation of representative selections from the increasing mass of literature on problems of 'minority groups.' . . It is very likely that most students and teachers of this subject will find use for at least some of these selections. . . Because of its sterile approach to the subject, the choice and organization of its materials are probably not so stimulating as they might have been. Some users of the book may have to evaluate its content item by item according to the demands of their immediate problems." O. C. Cox
Social Forces 30:246 D '51 550w

ROSE, DONALD FRANK. Full house; il. by Jo Metzer. 256p $3 Lippincott

818 Journalists. Correspondence, reminiscences, etc 51-9876

The author of these rambling, anecdotal reminiscences is a Philadelphia newspaper columnist and the father of twelve children the full house of the title.

Booklist 47:249 Mr 15 '51

"Without the funnier effects of Cheaper by the Dozen (there are no theories, no eccentricities), this is pleasantly human and likeable."
+ Kirkus 19:44 Ja 15 '51 150w

"'Full House' is a seminar in everything from diaper technique to the maintenance of good relations with grandchildren, of which there were—when the book went to press—twenty-two. The author still doesn't know what possessed Henry Wadsworth Longfellow when he described the children's hour as 'a pause in the day's occupations.'"
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 Mr 25 '51 180w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal
Springf'd Republican p5D Mr 25 '51 210w

ROSEN, S. MCKEE. Combined boards of the second World war; an experiment in international administration. 288p $4 Columbia univ. press

940.531833 International cooperation. World war, 1939-1945—Economic aspects 51-9935

"A study of the efforts in World War II to mobilize the economic resources of the United Nations. It deals with the work of the Combined Raw Materials Board, the Combined Shipping Adjustment Board, the Combined Production Resources Board and the Combined Food Board. The functions of the Boards, their activities and procedures are discussed. In evaluating the experiences of the Boards Mr. Rosen draws several important conclusions with respect to future efforts in international administration." (Current Hist) Index

Reviewed by Harold Stein
Am Pol Sci R 45:1173 D '51 4500w

Current Hist 21:167 S '51 40w

"This is an important work of scholarship, which should be indispensable to any serious student of the administration of the last war." A. B. T.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 My 13 '51 50w

Reviewed by P. R. Levin
Sat R of Lit 34:45 N 24 '51 260w

"Officials interested in international administration will find this study valuable."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:169 Je '51 180w

ROSENAU, JAMES N., ed. Roosevelt treasury. 461p $5 Doubleday

B or 92 Roosevelt, Franklin Delano 51-11311

A composite volume amounting to a kind of biography, made up of excerpts from Franklin Roosevelt's speeches and writings together with excerpts of writings about him by both friends and critics. Short explanatory notes are inserted when it seems necessary by the editor.

Am Pol Sci R 45:908 S '51 70w
Booklist 47:400 Jl 15 '51
Reviewed by Walter Trohan
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Jl 15 '51 870w
Kirkus 19:223 Ap 15 '51 180w
Reviewed by H. S. Taylor
Library J 76:1136 Jl '51 140w

"Not a collection of unified portrait but a rapidly moving picture taken from constantly changing angles." Lloyd Morris
+ New Repub 125:20 S 3 '51 180w

"For busy readers it skillfully telescopes thousands of pages and gives the good grain within the compass of a moderate sized volume." G. F. Whicher
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 S 16 '51 110w

"The Roosevelt 'Treasury' contains no new material. Yet the brilliance of the editing, providing in rapid counterpoint views of Roosevelt from many different angles, furnishes in the end a variable and vivid characterization of that remarkable person. If it is not the total picture, it is, in many respects, the most comprehensive picture that has yet appeared." Arthur Schlesinger Jr.
+ N Y Times p3 Je 24 '51 900w

"Perhaps the best evaluation of the book may lie in the fact that, for all the changes of witnesses and writers, the Roosevelt story moves through it clearly, dramatically, and always interestingly. The changes of pace and people serve not merely an editor's but a storyteller's purpose in this good book about a great man." Jonathan Daniels
+ Sat R of Lit 34:30 Jl 14 '51 650w

ROSENBERG, ETHEL. Uncle Julius and the angel with heartburn. 247p $3; readers' ed pa $1 Simon & Schuster
51-10007

More stories about the people in the author's earlier book: Go Fight City Hall (Book Review Digest 1949). Uncle Julius at eighty-one still likes his Frieda's cooking, the result is heartburn and bicarbonate of soda. One night in the kitchen he meets an angel afflicted in the same way, and the two are pals at once.

Booklist 47:330 My 15 '51

"There's the warm humor of character and situation, the sharp bite of lively dialect and the tender mellowness of old age, all here again for those who were pleased by the earlier book."
+ Kirkus 19:76 F 1 '51 170w
Reviewed by Richard Match
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ap 15 '51 550w

"Written in Second Avenue idiom, this book has passages that are touching and others that are extremely funny. It is a worthy companion to the author's 'Go Fight City Hall.'" Rex Lardner
+ N Y Times p15 Jl 22 '51 300w

"Highly characteristic speech reported with its full flavor but not caricatured, gives another memorable dimension to an affectionate family portrait which is richly funny but which never overplays its humor." Pamela Taylor
+ Sat R of Lit 34:43 Je 9 '51 190w

"The new book is a little spottier than the previous one, but contains many humorous and heartwarming passages and chapters, loosely woven into novel form but deftly characteristic of one segment of Jewish life in Brooklyn and Kramer's Corner in the Catskills." A. N. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p6D Ap 29 '51 170w

ROSENHEIM, MRS LUCILE G. Dancing heart. 183p il $2.50 Messner
51-9817

Anne, the daughter of artist parents, is suddenly orphaned at fifteen. She is obliged to leave New York and live with an aunt in a small midwestern town. The story describes her efforts to persuade her conventional aunt that dancing is her life, and the results which bring happiness to both of them. For older girls.

Booklist 47:298 Ap 15 '51
Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Je 3 '51 140w
Kirkus 19:64 F 1 '51 110w

"Very real story of today which teen agers will enjoy. Recommended for children's and young people's collections." G. M. Cogswell
+ Library J 76:717 Ap 15 '51 70w
Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Jl 22 '51 250w

"Probably because Miss Rosenheim has taught many teen agers to dance she has drawn a convincing portrait of a young dancer. She has also written a warmly sympathetic story of human relationships." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p38 Ap 1 '51 120w
Wis Lib Bul 47:126 My '51

ROSINGER, LAWRENCE KAELTER. India and the United States: political and economic relations. 149p map $2.75 Macmillan
327.73 India—Foreign relations—U.S. U.S.—Foreign relations—India 50-9441
For descriptive note see Annual for 1950.

"The author is a staff member of the American Institute of Pacific Relations; the book is issued under the auspices of the Institute and is a worthy addition to its long list of valuable contributions." D. G. Mandelbaum
+ Am Hist R 56:350 Ja '51 60w

"There are separate chapters on Nehru's policy of neutrality; domestic economic policy and its effect on relations with the United States; Indonesia; Kashmir and the United Nations; and the place of India in the British Commonwealth. Mr. Rosinger meticulously refrains from expressing his own opinion on these matters, and limits himself to a careful presentation of the facts. The result is a valuable and illuminating contribution to our understanding of the place of India in world affairs." L. A. Mills
+ Am Pol Sci R 45:268 Mr '51 210w
Reviewed by [illegible]
Ann Am Acad 274:209 Mr '51 500w

"A discreet but competent study of Indian-American relations, particularly since the Second World War."
Foreign Affairs 29:508 Ap '51 10w
Reviewed by E. C. Lindeman
Survey 87:40 Ja '51 220w

ROSINGER, LAWRENCE KAELTER, and others. State of Asia: a contemporary survey; issued under the auspices of the American Institute of Pacific relations. 522p $5 Knopf
950 Asia—East (Far East) 51-11245

"A survey made by a number of experts on the Far East, including Richard Adloff, formerly of the State Department; Shirley Jenkins, who was one of the editors of Far Eastern Survey; Virginia Thompson, author of books on southeast Asia; and Owen Lattimore and his wife, Eleanor. The analyses are all up to date, and each provides enough historical background to enable the reader to understand the political and economic situations involved. Maps." New Yorker

Booklist 48:8 S 1 '51
Bookmark 11:32 N '51 20w

"A new study of Asia in which great pains have been taken to give every appearance of scholarly objectivity. The title is misleading, for the study is limited to East Asia." Kenneth Colegrove
− Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Jl 15 '51 600w

ROSINGER, L. K.—Continued

"Unlike some of his less competent colleagues, Mr. Rosinger apparently realizes that neither he nor any one else is qualified to survey recent events in the whole of the vast region stretching from India to Japan. He himself has contributed three chapters to the book—a good introductory survey, an excellent chapter on China, and a somewhat less satisfying one on India. Each of the other major Far Eastern areas, except for Ceylon and the Soviet Far East, is treated by a recognized authority on that area. . . The chapters are factual rather than interpretative, and their general quality is good." H. C. Hinton

+ Commonweal 54:338 Jl 13 '51 440w

Foreign Affairs 30:166 O '51 20w

"Not a book that will give confidence that the West can disentangle selfish interests from the ultimate cause of peace. But a book that informs, challenges, and disturbs as we need to be disturbed."

Kirkus 19:241 My 1 '51 340w

"A convenient, reliable sourcebook for the most important facts concerning one of today's hottest trouble-spots." H. P. Linton

+ Library J 76:1126 Jl '51 100w

"The authors of the individual chapters of this book are qualified authorities. All have profited from first-hand experience in the countries concerned. The result is the clearest and most informative account of post-war developments in Asia yet published. 'The State of Asia' is an indispensable source and reference book for those concerned with world affairs. Each chapter is a careful condensation of a wealth of data in very readable form." R. L. Walker

+ N Y Times p3 Je 24 '51 750w

New Yorker 27:36 Je 23 '51 140w

Reviewed by S. K. George

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 12 '51 650w

"The authors of 'The State of Asia,' having told their narrative, have held interpretation to a minimum. Within the limits of a single volume they could hardly have done otherwise. Yet this imposed reticence will be a major disappointment to many readers; for while these pages raise many questions, they supply few answers." P. H. Clyde

+ — Sat R of Lit 34:46 Ag 4 '51 1050w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:279 S '51 280w

"Under the able editorship of Lawrence K. Rosinger, who contributes three chapters (a summary Introduction, China, and India), and twelve associates, each a recognized authority, the principal features of the great transformation wrought in Asia is detailed in competent studies of individual countries. . . The areas unfortunately omitted from the book are Ceylon and Soviet Asia. . . A more important defect of the book is the superficiality of Mr. Rosinger's introductory chapter, which summarizes major Asian trends." Milton Sacks

+ — Yale R n s 41:128 autumn '51 600w

ROSS, ALF. Constitution of the United nations; analysis of structure and function. 236p $3 Rinehart

341.1 United nations (organization). Charter

"[The] professor of international law at the University of Copenhagen, has written a thoughtful analysis of the structure and functioning of the United Nations, covering its growth to the year 1949." Ann Am Acad

Am Pol Sci R 45:923 S '51 10w

"The book is a handy and relatively brief commentary on the origins, organizational structure, and functions of U. N." D. F. Fleming

+ Ann Am Acad 277:229 S '51 330w

Booklist 47:323 My 15 '51

School & Society 73:336 My 26 '51 20w

ROSS, FRANK XAVIER. Guided missiles. 186p il $2.75 Lothrop

623.74 Rockets (aeronautics) 51-9783

"An understandable account of the development and use of guided missiles. Rockets, torpedoes, robot planes, space ships and missiles of the future are explained. Peace time as well as military [use] is given consideration." (Wis Lib Bul) No index.

Booklist 47:313 My 1 '51

Bookmark 10:185 My '51

Kirkus 19:156 Mr 15 '51 170w

"Recommended." M. I. Ross

+ Library J 76:1035 Je 15 '51 140w

"Authoritative and very fascinating." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 My 13 '51 110w

"As in his 'Young Peoples' Book of Jet Propulsion,' he has chosen his material carefully and told it well." G. O. Blough

+ N Y Times p18 Jl 15 '51 20w

Sat R of Lit 34:72 N 10 '51 90w

Wis Lib Bul 47:85 Ap '51

ROSS, FRED E. Jackson Mahaffey. 308p $3 Houghton

50-11539

"The hero is a sort of North Carolina version of Mike Fink, Paul Bunyan, and Robin Hood rolled into one. . . At 26, Jackson, who could make an honest living on his 200 acres if he wanted to, has yet to earn a law-abiding dollar. Not that he didn't have funds; he did. . . He turned a sheriff's raid on an illegal cockfighting session into a good thing by stealing the best gamecock that ever stepped into a North Carolina pit, doing a little plain and fancy feather-plucking and then licking the legal owner twice for substantial stakes. But do not get the impression that Jackson is merely a crooked bully. Precisely the reverse is true. He is personable, likable, insouciant, quick to help a friend and just as quick to dispatch an enemy." Chicago Sunday Tribune

"The laughing, devil-may-care hero with the roguish gleam in his eye and a superb disdain for the letter of the law has appealed to me from my 'Robin Hood' days to the present. As a result, and tho I realized he deserved nothing more than his comeuppance, I took Jackson Mahaffey to my heart. It has been years since I have had so much fun following anybody around in the pages of a book." V. P. Hass

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 21 '51 420w

Kirkus 18:663 N 1 '50 160w

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge

Library J 76:181 F 1 '51 110w

Reviewed by Coleman Rosenberger

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ja 21 '51 1350w

"The novel works hard to create an almost legendary giant of mischief, but Mr. Ross doesn't quite bring it off. Jackson, flourishing like any number of green bay trees, is a little too tough for the sensitive reader. One knows from the first that he'll win the girl, the big cockfight, and a local election—thus proving that the wages of sin is total triumph, and that country life in North Carolina can be pretty rough for anyone who gets in his way." Charlotte Capers

N Y Times p20 Ja 21 '51 340w

"You'll finish his novel shaking your head a little to clear it after Mahaffey's fantastic doings, but willing to admit you've been gorgeously entertained." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 6 '51 700w

Reviewed by C. M. Brown

Sat R of Lit 34:33 F 24 '51 130w

"Succeeds in giving a jugful of lively entertainment to a world smothered with serious literature." Richard Henchey

+ Springf'd Republican p10C Ja 21 '51 240w

+ Wis Lib Bul 47:89 Ap '51

ROSS, ISHBEL (MRS BRUCE RAE). Journey into light; the story of the education of the blind [with a foreword by Helen Keller]. 390p $4 Appleton

371.91109 Blind—Education and institutions
51-9859

A detailed study of the blind and their education thru the ages, and of the men and women who have occupied outstanding places in the development of education for the blind. Among those whose stories are told are Didymus of Alexandria, John Milton, Denis Diderot, Maria von Paradis, Valentin Hauy, Louis Braille, Laura Bridgman and Helen Keller. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 47:289 Ap 15 '51

Bookmark 10:182 My '51 30w

Reviewed by J. A. Clark
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 13 '51 210w

"'Journey Into Light,' has been carefully written by an able writer. It is well documented and contains an excellent bibliography. Its approach is vigorous and positive." Elizabeth Yates
Christian Science Monitor p15 Je 14 '51 650w

"An unsentimentalized survey which has both interest and inspirational value."
+ Kirkus 19:91 F 1 '51 190w

"Recommended." W. K. Harrison
+ Library J 76:775 My 1 '51 70w

Nation 172:333 Ap 7 '51 30w

"Miss Ross is a very good writer, indeed, and a good organizer of her material. The best of this book is the quality of its writing and its arrangement. . . Blind readers will occasionally wince at expressions like 'afflicted' for 'going blind' and the term 'fellow sufferer.' . . Most disturbing, from the very title on through the book, are the terms 'darkness,' 'dark world,' 'midnight' and so on, together with the synonymic use of 'light' for sight [which] pervades the book. . . All in all, it is a pity Miss Ross's scholarship in this field does not match her industry; hers might have been the most valuable book of its kind." Hector Chevigny
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Mr 25 '51 850w

"An able journalist, novelist and biographer, Miss Ross will be remembered best for her history of women in newspaper work 'Ladies of the Press.' In this book she proves once again her talent for mating a sharp sense of the important detail with the magic of mood." Lucy Freeman
+ N Y Times p14 Ap 15 '51 420w

"From her general treatment of the history of blindness, Miss Ross moves with deep fascination, compassion and insight into the lives of some of the moving forces in that saga, tells how they helped change the world of the blind, and then comes finally to the contributions by libraries, books, museums and organizations like 'The Lighthouse,' whose beacons dot the world today." Don Pitt
+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 1 '51 700w

"The biographical technique employed by Miss Ross is literarily effective in most of her chapters. In those covering the developments of the last fifty years, however, the pattern is sometimes seriously warped. Striking errors of omission distort the facts." K. E. Maxfield
+ — Survey 87:395 S '51 280w

"Well organized, well indexed, and supplied with a splendid bibliography, the material should be of interest not only to the social worker but also to the general reader."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:169 Je '51 280w

Wis Lib Bul 47:183 Jl '51

ROSS, SAM. Port unknown. 282p $2.75 World pub.

51-10179

Story of the members of the crew of an oil tanker crossing the Atlantic in a convoy in 1943.

"Out of his own experiences in World War II, Sam Ross has distilled this taut tale of one old rust bucket in the American merchant marine. It is a good novel and, occasionally a strong one and if there is little in it to distinguish it from a dozen others that is because the story of one convoy in that conflict was the story of all of them. Even so, 'Port Unknown' was worth writing and certainly it is worth reading." V. P. Hass
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 24 '51 400w

Kirkus 19:33 Ja 15 '51 230w

"The author, by telling his story undramatically, makes it more compelling because more real, and the total effect is of an honest tale well told." E. L. Acken
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Jl 1 '51 400w

"Mr. Ross' economical style is tailor-made for the mood of a ship under way. Yet his new novel wears an improvised air, as if there had been a sudden decision to wrap up accumulated war notes and personality observations." James Kelly
N Y Times p16 My 6 '51 230w

ROSS, ZOLA HELEN. Reno crescent. 299p $3 Bobbs

51-1195

Historical novel about Nevada in the 1860's. Abigail Hunter who came to Nevada in a covered wagon in 1860 is the heroine. In the course of her strenuous life she owns a newspaper, a sheep ranch, and a saloon; she is loved by three men, and has a child by one of them; she is involved in murder and scandal but manages to make her way in spite of them.

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Jl 15 '51 100w

Reviewed by Lily Van Ameringen
N Y Times p17 F 18 '51 170w

"In telling Abigail's story, Miss Ross has written an A-1 action yarn, packing into it all of the excitement and struggle that a new community experiences. The way of life that belonged to the young State of Nevada has never been recorded with more gusto." J. V.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Mr 18 '51 350w

"If anything saves 'Reno Crescent' from utter banality it is the way in which Miss Ross shares and communicates her heroine's enthusiasm for Nevada—for the early stages of its towns, the beauty of its desert. . . No one who has been reading fiction for the past twenty years can help remembering that Edna Ferber wrote this type of novel first and that Bess Streeter Aldrich wrote it better." D. K. Bestor
Sat R of Lit 34:29 Mr 3 '51 230w

ROSSI, ANGELO. Russo-German alliance, August 1939-June 1941. 218p $2.75 Beacon press

940.5324 Russia—Foreign relations—Germany. Germany—Foreign relations—Russia 51-5123

"Study of German-Soviet relations during the crucial period between 1939 and 1941." (Foreword) Index.

Foreign Affairs 29:669 Jl '51 10w

Reviewed by A. J. P. Taylor
New Statesman & Nation 40:343 O 7 '50 800w

"The special value of this book is its readability, its brevity, its use of short quotations from innumerable, divergent sources all bearing upon one particular point. This is scientific research of the highest order. This is also a fascinating political whodunit. . . The story is, of course, familiar. Yet nowhere else has it been told so well, so concisely, so dispassionately and backed with such painstaking research into every conceivable source of accurate information." Peter Blake
+ N Y Times p14 Ap 22 '51 550w

ROSSINI, FREDERICK DOMINIC. Chemical thermodynamics. 514p $6 Wiley

541.36 Thermodynamics. Chemistry, Physical and theoretical 50-9790

"Written for graduate students in chemistry and professional chemists. The treatment assumes that the reader will be familiar with calculus and with basic chemistry, including physical chemistry. Because of the importance of chemical thermodynamics in both laboratory and industrial chemistry, the book should be added to chemical collections used by professional chemists, even though it is primarily a textbook. Author is head of the Department of Chemistry of the Carnegie Institute of Technology." Library J

"For those chemists who have had physical chemistry, the book should prove to be an excellent text in chemical thermodynamics. Most chapters in the book can be useful to chemical engineers who, in solving complex problems in industries, have to use lots of empirical relations including generalized correlations not discussed extensively in this book." J. Chin Chu

+ Chem Eng 58:263 Ja '51 1000w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 75:1831 O 15 '50 90w

"A fresh presentation of current chemical thermodynamics. It is well arranged and clearly written."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 35:85 N '50

ROSSITER, CLINTON LAWRENCE. Supreme court and the Commander in chief. 145p $2.50 Cornell univ. press

353.03 U.S. Supreme court. War and emergency powers 51-10308

In his Preface the author says: "I have often thought that the true study of our systems of government begins with these points of contact—between President and Congress, Congress and Supreme Court, and Supreme Court and President. . . This study is directed to the third of these relationships. It attempts to show how the Supreme Court, in deciding several hundred cases involving the scope of the national war powers, has interpreted the President's status and authority as commander in chief." Table of cases. Index.

Reviewed by C. O. Lerche

Am Pol Sci R 45:905 S '51 310w

"This little book is a precious gem invaluable to those who would know the essential constitutional law on this subject." W. E. Binkley

+ Ann Am Acad 277:233 S '51 270w

Reviewed by A. E. Sutherland

Harvard Law R 65:373 D '51 1000w

"Apparently the book manuscript was in the hands of the printer before the recent discussion in Congress as to legislative restriction of the number of troops to be sent abroad; for Mr. Rossiter does not give specific consideration to the issue or to the debate. However, with wisdom and succinctness he passes on both the constitutional and the practical issues." T. R. Powell

+ N Y Times p23 Ap 29 '51 320w

"It offers an incisive, plain-spoken, and well-documented analysis of the war powers of the President of the United States as they have been interpreted by the Supreme Court."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:289 S '51 250w

ROTHERY, AGNES EDWARDS (MRS H. R. PRATT). Italian roundabout; il. by Albert Orbaan. 197p $2.75 Dodd

914.5 Italy—Description and travel—Juvenile literature 50-10891

A travel book for boys and girls, aged ten or older. The trip begins with Naples and goes on to Rome, the hill towns, Florence, Siena, Genoa, Bologna, and Venice. "The past history of Italy and of the men who made it are brought in where their work still stands, but the book dwells on the present rather than on the past." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

Booklist 47:226 F 15 '51

"Recommended for all libraries and social studies classes." Harriet Morrison

+ Library J 76:341 F 15 '51 70w

"The writing lacks the savor of some of Miss Rothery's earlier books, but the material is intrinsically interesting and helps to fill a gap on the travel shelves." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p22 F 11 '51 130w

"Boys will particularly enjoy her vivid description of the Palio—the famous horse races in Siena—while girls will like the chapter on the romance of Dante and Beatrice and of Petrarch and Laura. . . This is a book to read before you go and to take along with you. It is illustrated with attractive black-and-white sketches."

+ Sat R of Lit 34:38 Ja 20 '51 240w

Wis Lib Bul 47:68 Mr '51

ROTMANS, ELMER A. Drafting simplified. 397p $3.75 Delmar Publishers, Inc, Orange St & Broadway, Albany 7, N.Y.

744 Mechanical drawing

"An introductory textbook primarily suited for use in trades schools and vocational classes in high schools. It deals with the fundamentals of mechanical drawing and with practice in the drawing of machine parts. The exposition is exceptionally detailed and is accompanied by a generous number of illustrative drawings. In the latter sections of the book the student is introduced to the elementary principles of some advanced techniques such as isometric drawings. The author is Chairman of the Drafting Department of the Edison Technical Industrial High School in Rochester, New York." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 76:119 Ja 15 '51 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 35:87 N '50

ROULSTON, MRS THOMAS HENRY. See Hillis, M.

ROUNDS, GLEN. Hunted horses; il. by [the author]. 154p $2.25 Holiday

Horses—Legends and stories 51-12853

"A vigorous tale of wild horses of the West led by an Appaloosa stallion. Their constant struggle against their natural enemies—wolves, famine, snow—is heightened by a new and deadlier enemy, hunters in airplanes. The story sweeps to a powerful climax when the Appaloosa makes a heroic escape from the destroyers." N Y Times

Booklist 48:150 D 15 '51

Horn Bk 27:419 D '51 50w

Kirkus 19:441 Ag 15 '51 90w

"Some boys may enjoy, but this is recommended for light purchase only." M. D. Read

Library J 76:1946 N 15 '51 60w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 N 11 '51 90w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell

N Y Times p38 O 14 '51 70w

"Told in a vigorous, almost poetical prose, this is a tale that boys and girls who care for horses will read and remember."

+ Sat R of Lit 34:66 N 10 '51 130w

ROUNDS, GLEN. Whitey and the rustlers. 32p il $1.25 Holiday

51-10677

Whitey was a small cowboy who longed for a new saddle. He has two steers given him by his uncle and he hoped to sell them for enough to buy the saddle. Rustlers were at work in the vicinity and Whitey's steers were among those stolen. This story for ages seven to ten tells what Whitey did to help capture the rustlers.

"A fine cowboy story for 7 to 11 year olds, who just can't get enough of western tales.

Glen Rounds' dry humor and lively black and white drawings lift this one out of the ordinary." P. G.
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Ap 29 '51 110w

"The real thing and good fun. Good remedial reading item."
+ Kirkus 19:183 Ap 1 '51 100w

"This book is a welcome addition to those for the older boy whose reading ability is below average. The clear, large type makes for easy reading." E. C. Alexander
+ Library J 76:880 My 15 '51 70w

"Its value in book form is in Mr. Rounds' style and humor, and exact details, and in his truly funny black and white pictures." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ap 8 '51 120w

"Like all the Whitey stories this is authentic in flavor and illustration." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p30 Ap 22 '51 120w

"Little boys like to have their own cowboy stories, and this one is for them."
+ Sat R of Lit 34:42 My 12 '51 150w

ROUNDS, RUTH. Saint Santa Claus; il. by Mabel Jones Woodbury. 128p $2.25 Dutton

Christmas stories 51-6889

"Traveling alone to join his parents, Barry, an American boy, survives a plane crash in the Swiss Alps. He and a little French girl are befriended by a monk, Brother Klaus, who guides them to the nearest village. Many puzzling things happen on that journey, but the reader senses before Barry does that his guide is really St. Nicholas—not the one we know best, but a fifteenth-century Swiss saint." N Y Times

Booklist 48:90 N 1 '51

"A charming Christmas tale." Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p41 D 2 '51 150w

"A moving story with not a trace of sentimentality, this is truly enchanting Christmas material."
+ Kirkus 19:391 Ag 1 '51 110w

"There is beauty in the description, reality in the people and story, and surely anyone who reads it, adult or child, will feel as though he had gone through a wonderful spiritual experience. Group of 10-year-olds to whom I read this were enchanted." Phyllis Fenner
+ Library J 76:1714 O 15 '51 70w

"Despite a frequently coy style, there is a genuine spiritual quality in this story, as well as suspense, and it also gives us glimpses of the festival as celebrated by the Swiss." E. L. Buell
+ — N Y Times p48 D 2 '51 130w

ROVERE, RICHARD HALWORTH, and SCHLESINGER, ARTHUR MEIER, 1917- . The general and the President and the future of American foreign policy. 336p il $3.75 Farrar, Straus

B or 92 MacArthur, Douglas. U.S.—Foreign policy. Korea—History—War and intervention, 1950- 51-13869

"The General is Douglas MacArthur, and this book is [a study] of the political schism that developed in this country last April when Mr. Truman recalled him from Japan. It is also a reëxamination of American foreign policy and, to a certain extent, a brief for it." (New Yorker) Index.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 188:95 D '51 650w

Booklist 48:124 D 1 '51

"Because it pretends to be impartial this is a book to be digested with large amounts of salt. Better still, push it away." Walter Trohan
— Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 18 '51 240w

"Authors Rovere and Schlesinger have done a masterful piece of work in their appraisal of General Douglas MacArthur, their analysis of the events leading up to his historic dismissal last April 11, and their appreciative elucidation of U. S. foreign policy under the Truman administration. This collaborative achievement is all the more remarkable considering the brief elapsed time since the conclusion of the Senate inquiry into the MacArthur recall and the present publication." Donald McDonald
+ Commonweal 55:202 N 30 '51 1300w

"An excellent job is done of recreating the atmosphere of the emotional orgy that swept the country in April, 1951. From this springboard, the authors trace the highlights in the well-known and not-so-well-known life of General MacArthur. They find much to praise, but an equal amount to censure heavily. Armed with facts and documents, this work will cause a howl of anguish to go up among the MacArthur backers." M. K. Hammond
Current Hist 21:294 N '51 360w

"A revealing and disturbing book."
Kirkus 19:513 S 1 '51 320w

"A controversial book on a controversial subject, but absolutely essential reading for all knowledgeable citizens." A. J. Gaines
Library J 76:1562 O 1 '51 140w

"Rovere and Schlesinger have written a witty, ironic recapitulation of the zany controversy arising from MacArthur's ouster, put some facts about the General into focus, and accurately identified the 'new isolationism' represented in his 'go it alone' philosophy. MacArthur emerges from these pages as something less than the all-conquering figure he has created in his own imagination." Willard Shelton
Nation 173:378 N 3 '51 1200w

"Few works on so serious a subject can have been written with more gayety and verve. The result is a shrewd, concise, witty book." W. V. Shannon
+ New Repub 125:20 D 17 '51 800w

"Those who are seeking a sober appraisal of General MacArthur, a serious effort to disentangle fact from legend in his career and personality, will not find them in the first part of this book. . . [The second part] is done with care and an attention to detail which make it a valuable condensation of the voluminous testimony taken at the hearings; and, above all, the MacArthur who emerges is neither a caricature nor a divinity." H. W. Baehr
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 O 28 '51 1100w

"The book is a potpourri of good and bad. It gets at major facets of the MacArthur character which the eulogists have missed wholly. It presents new and authentic materials effectively. Yet in dispelling old myths it creates new ones. . . There are many passages in this book where the reporting is splendid. Still, the young man wanting to know how to write so that he can whittle a great man down to any desired dimension could use this as a model. Not since Sir Andrew Macphail went to work on Field Marshal Sir Henry Wilson has there been anything like it." S. L. A. Marshall
N Y Times p7 O 28 '51 1900w

"A conspicuously well-written critical study. . . One of the major accomplishments of the book is its effective disposal of the notion that we have no foreign policy. The authors have written an extended biographical sketch of the General, trying to make some sense out of his legend and bring him into historical focus—not an easy job with a man who is constantly blurring his own image—and the result is probably the most cogent portrait of MacArthur in print."
+ New Yorker 27:141 O 27 '51 160w

Reviewed by J. M. Minifie
Sat R of Lit 34:15 O 27 '51 1050w

ROWEN, JOSEPH R., and BLANKERTZ, DONALD FREDERIC. Profitable retail advertising. 285p il $4 Ronald

659.1 Advertising 51-3499

"Presentation of the basic principles and practices of advertising from the merchant's point of view. The various elements are stated briefly and simply, illustrated by more than one hundred advertisements which are critically analyzed to illustrate sound and unsound practices.

ROWEN, J. R.—Continued
Contents: 'Before You Advertise'; 'A Plan of Attack'; 'When You Advertise: A choice of Methods'; 'How To Advertise'; 'After You Advertise: A Follow-Through'. Selected bibliography." Library J

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 76:1130 Jl '51 60w

"If you are in retail advertising, this book should prove to be a good investment." C. D.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 S 9 '51 220w

ROWLEY, HAROLD HENRY, ed. Old Testament and modern study; a generation of discovery and research. 280p $6.50 Oxford

221 Bible. Old Testament

"Dr. Rowley has gathered together an international team of scholars to report progress in the various departments of Old Testament research during the last thirty years, to record significant changes in scholarly opinion, and to indicate the directions in which investigation is now being carried out. The editorial introduction gives a bird's-eye view of what the book covers." Manchester Guardian

"The book deserves not only the highest praise but reading by every interested person, be he layman or minister, professional or amateur scholar." F. A. Levy
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 O 14 '51 300w

Christian Century 68:1513 D 26 '51 70w

"Anyone who wants to be taken over the whole field of Old Testament studies under expert guidance will find here exactly what he requires." T. W. M.
+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 3 '51 190w

"Highly informative volume of more than 400 pages; it may not be suited to the mental digestion of the non-specialist reader, but it is an unmatched work of reference. With Dr. Rowley as editor it was a foregone conclusion that the book would be irreproachable bibliographically; but the team of contributors, however impressive in their learnedness, are not uniformly successful in combining the needs of a readable essay with a determination to omit nothing of significance: Professors North and Eissfeldt do, however, show that the combination is possible."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p505 Ag 10 '51 600w

ROWNTREE, BENJAMIN SEEBOHM, and LAVERS, GEORGE RUSSELL. English life and leisure. 482p $4 Longmans

914.2 Great Britain—Social conditions. Leisure 51-14191

"The original idea behind this book was to find out what recreational facilities the people of York needed in order to make the best use of their leisure, but gradually the plan widened into an inquiry into the whole question of how the English people do, in fact, actually spend their leisure time. The inquiry is thorough, unsensational, factual, though inspired by high ideals, and in some parts disturbing. It begins with a couple of hundred case histories chosen from all classes of the community." Christian Science Monitor

"This laborious, interesting, and, I repeat, unsensational work is a valuable contribution to sociological knowledge." Harold Hobson
+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Jl 5 '51 320w

Reviewed by Donald Attwater
Commonweal 54:427 Ag 10 '51 1500w

Reviewed by Charles Madge
New Statesman & Nation 41:656 Je 9 '51 1200w

"What one gets is a composite picture of the average Briton (in this case from England and Wales) without any retouching. There is some moralizing, for although the authors boast that they are not 'exceptionally virtuous' or narrow-minded, they are reformers as well as students, and they are certainly entitled to draw conclusions and pass judgments. The picture is drawn up with extraordinary skill and thoroughness." H. L. Matthews
+ N Y Times p6 Ja 6 '52 800w

"The author of Poverty by turning now to study leisure has rendered a new service to his country in provoking thought on fundamental social and political issues." Beveridge
+ Spec 185:755 Je 8 '51 1800w

"It is a relief to turn back from grave, almost terrifying, problems and lose oneself for an hour in mere contemplation of the inexhaustible richness and variety of life as displayed in the 'Case Histories.' This is in some ways the most remarkable and instructive section of the whole book: one can think of no comparable piece of work—certainly none that can have been so well done."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p349 Je 8 '51 3600w

ROWSE, ALFRED LESLIE. England of Elizabeth; The structure of society. (Elizabethan age, v 1) 546p pl $6.50 Macmillan

942.055 Great Britain—History—Elizabeth, 1558-1603 51-4102

"The author has planned a portrait of the Elizabethan age and this is the first of two volumes. Here we have the structure of the society of the period. The personality of the great queen permeates the book. It was she who made the English realize that public service was the greatest social virtue and Mr. Rowse says that 'her age is not dead . . . but alive . . . and within us.' From the Land, the author takes us through the development of Towns, Government, Administration and Law to the Church and Catholics and Puritans. . . Fine photographs, good notes and index make this a useful book." Library J

Booklist 47:399 Jl 15 '51

"The England of Elizabeth is an important book, because, based on a very wide range of secondary authorities as well as much original research, it achieves a new integration. Particularly good use is made of research in local history." J. B. Conacher
+ Canadian Hist R 32:161 Je '51 800w

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 27 '51 450w

Reviewed by Harold Hobson
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 5 '51 140w

Reviewed by Leila Flower
Christian Science Monitor p9 Je 6 '51 400w

"It is in many ways a fine achievement, resembling one of those fascinating Elizabethan pictures wherein something is happening everywhere at once. Mr. Rowse has a great gift for selecting effective incident and quotation; his interests are wide; he writes with zest; his reading is vast; and he knows his England from end to end. This book will be of great use to anyone interested in the age, though it will mean more to those who have already a fair knowledge." G. B. Harrison
+ Commonweal 54:291 Je 29 '51 600w

Current Hist 21:94 Ag '51 70w

"Scholarly and well-documented but written in a lively style that will make it go down easily with the interested layman."
+ Kirkus 19:95 F 1 '51 170w

"Because the style is simple and graceful many younger students—and definitely the 'common reader' of history will enjoy this when they might find Neale or Tawney too scholarly. For all libraries." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 76:512 Mr 15 '51 190w

"Based on wide reading, enthusiastic and vivacious, it makes an important contribution to our knowledge of an epic age." R. H. Tawney
+ Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 6 '51 800w

Reviewed by Alfred Harvage
Nation 172:567 Je 16 '51 1000w

"Certainly Mr. Rowse will not please everyone. His style is highly personal, sacrificing the older virtues of firmness and clarity to a vivid, intemperate, sometimes irritating impressionism. It is sometimes arch, sometimes angular, sometimes shrill. His intellectual arrogance at the expense of 'sub-human' people, . . . his disapproval of his own Cornish people; and, by contrast, his worship of Philistine high spirits, his romantic admiration of the English, the successful, the upper classes—all these characteristics may well at first deter the intending reader. . . Mr. Rowse's study is, in my opinion, in spite of these objections, by far the best and most scholarly account of Elizabethan society." H. R. Trevor-Roper

+ — New Statesman & Nation 41:42 Ja 13 '51 1200w

Reviewed by S. C. Chew
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Je 24 '51 1300w

"Mr. Rowse tells us in considerable detail all those things which a romantic and even a narrative historian leaves out. He supplies the framework around which the house of history is built. The cornices and the painting he leaves to others." T. C. Chubb
+ N Y Times p4 Jl 8 '51 600w
New Yorker 27:76 Jl 28 '51 130w

Reviewed by C. W. Weinberger
San Francisco Chronicle p21 Je 10 '51 800w

Reviewed by Garrett Mattingly
Sat R of Lit 34:8 Jl 28 '51 900w

Reviewed by W. H. Beyer
School & Society 74:117 Ag 25 '51 1600w

"Mr. Rowse is obviously a man of 'imperfect sympathies.' Indeed, he makes no secret about it: his dislike of the Puritans is profound and uncompromising. . . In the same way, and perhaps for the same reason—'imperfect sympathies'—Mr. Rowse sees nothing in what A. O. Meyer calls the Blutzeit of English Catholicism save wrongheadedness and waste. . . One last point. There is a sort of idolatry in Mr. Rowse's approach to the great Queen. . . But enough of criticism. It would be churlish and foolish to dwell on what may appear to be defects and forget the undoubted merits of this striking contribution to literature. There is no section of the book that is not illuminated by the writer's massive knowledge, his pungent and lively wit, and his penetrating insight. Mr. Rowse has assembled much that is new, and a good deal of what is already familiar, in an unusual context; and what is familiar is as refreshing as what is new. . . Scholars and students alike will give it a most friendly welcome." J. B. Black
+ — Spec 184:704 D 15 '50 1100w
Times [London] Lit Sup p793 D 15 '50 4050w
Wis Lib Bul 47:164 Je '51

ROY, GABRIELLE (CARBOTTE). Where nests the water hen; tr. from the French by Harry L. Minsse. 251p $3 Harcourt
51-13143

Two stories about simple people living far from civilization in Manitoba. The heroine of the first section of the book is Mamma Tousignant, who created a real home for her husband and their many children, in their island home in the Little Water Hen River. The other story is about the beloved Capuchin, Father Joseph-Marie, whose knowledge of twenty languages was needed in his scattered parish.

Booklist 48:58; 66 O 15 '51
Bookmark 11:60 D '51 30w

"If this had been written by almost anyone except Miss Roy, I would have had nothing but praise for it. The characters are human and warm; the writing is entertaining and lyrical. It is, in fact, a thoroughly fine job—but it still left me feeling let down. The pastoral idyll seemed more like a delightful fairy tale than a picture of real life. Miss Roy's earlier story of the Montreal slums was not nearly so charming—but it was a far more penetrating study of human motives and emotions." Edith Fowke
+ — Canadian Forum 31:211 D '51 350w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
+ Cath World 174:312 Ja '52 240w

"A rare book that will lift the heart with its innocent gayety and warm the mind with its wisdom." Mildred Walker
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 D 30 '51 500w

"In such a region, as in this book, character is everything. Here it is warm, human, endearing, and fundamental. While it is such, either in art or in life, the perilous air and the bombs signify nothing. The translation is excellent." Robert Wichert
+ Commonweal 55:75 O 26 '51 470w

"A loving portrait which has not quite the substance, action-wise, of her earlier The Tin Flute (1947), this commutes charm and understanding."
+ Kirkus 19:585 O 1 '51 160w

"A refreshing book, recommended for all public libraries." R. B. Robertson
+ Library J 76:1703 O 15 '51 80w

"The other stories have appealing simplicity and modesty and compelling interest. The book carries the warmth and sincerity and charm of its chief characters. It is like Mamma Tousignant herself, who, whether at home or on one of her highly relished journeys, disposed the people about her to become aware that they had reasons for being happy." Mary Ross
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 O 21 '51 440w

"By refusing to relate l'affaire Tousignant to the larger conflict, [the Manitoba Schools Question of 1889], she sacrifices depth and focus; when the schoolroom closes and she turns her attention almost exclusively to Father Joseph-Marie, the dramatic force of Luzina's fight is wasted. What remains is a gentle, affecting vignette of a single family—so remote as to deny identification, and lacking the force majeur which could have made this pleasant book an important one." Stuart Keate
+ — N Y Times p32 O 28 '51 370w
Wis Lib Bul 47:255 N '51

RUBISSOW, GEORGE A. House of life. 381p il $4 Ricardo press, 121 W. 63d st, N.Y. 23
133 Cosmology 51-11360

"Expressing his philosophy of life, a highly educated American engineer and world traveler 'challenges' us to a human understanding of man. He builds a 'House of Life' upon certain 'guideposts.' He admits (p. 206) that many doctors and scientists may censure his criticism of certain items. Illustrated; unusual style, sometimes difficult; superscientific vocabulary." Library J

"Librarians should know about it; suggest they make their own appraisals or await reader-demand." J. M. Scherr
Library J 76:1126 Jl '51 70w

"George Rubissow is described as engineer, inventor, philosopher, connoisseur of music, world-traveler and student of civilizations. Certainly one has rarely encountered so many subjects treated within the space of a single work nor so much of fact and fancy hurtled together. A tropical exuberance marks matter and style. Out of the welter of hyphenated words, capital letters, exclamation marks and sentences broken by dots or printed like Imagist poetry emerges, however, an original theme."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ag 5 '51 200w

"Blunt, terse, 'The House of Life', nonetheless, is a book of direct, clear prose. Mr. Rubissow seems to have written in a spirit of honest inquiry in an ambitious search for the truth and better living, striving to achieve freedom from fear and freedom from want." G. A. Panichas
Springf'd Republican p12C Ag 26 '51 380w

RUDNICKI, ADOLF. Ascent to heaven; translated by H. C. Stevens [decorations by Mieczyslaw Piotrowski]. 204p $2.50 Roy pubs [51-22490]

Four short stories translated from the Polish. They are about Jews during the Warsaw occupation by the Germans, and are told from the Jewish viewpoint.

RUDNICKI, ADOLF—Continued

Kirkus 19:160 Mr 15 '51 100w

"Not essential for most libraries." W. K. Harrison
Library J 76:705 Ap 15 '51 70w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield
Manchester Guardian p4 My 25 '51 160w

"In spite of artistic weaknesses, his book carries an impact that leaves one spent with feeling. Some of its effect to be sure, lies in the nature of his material, grim and horrible and heart-breaking. But a good deal of it is rooted in the quality of his writing, sentient, emotional and realistic. He is a Jew writing of Jews and he bites strongly into the bitter core of their precarious lives." Rose Feld
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ap 22 '51 550w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ag 5 '51 140w

RUESCH, JURGEN, and BATESON, GREGORY. Communication; the social matrix of psychiatry. 314p $4.50 Norton

616.8 Communication and traffic. Psychology, Pathological. Social psychology 51-4272

"The basic thesis of the study is that communication is the matrix in which all human activities are embedded, and that only by communication can psychiatric therapy occur. An analysis of the communication process, and a demonstration of the thesis that the verbal and nonverbal procedures of psychiatrists are designed to improve the processes of communication of their patients serve as the groundwork for a detailed discussion of the basic psychological characteristics of American culture, and of the ways in which these characteristics have affected the nature and development of psychiatric practices and thinking in this country." (U S Quarterly Bk R) Bibliography. Index.

"Though carefully elaborated and highly provocative, the system as a whole is susceptible to certain criticisms. (1) Any systematic theory assumes—contrary to empirical fact—that relationships in the empirical world are logical. (2) Contradictorily, the authors view communication and information as the result of mechanisms within the separate, private, biological individuals, and they argue that cultures produce common communication systems among their members." G. J. Hinkle
Ann Am Acad 278:220 N '51 500w

Time 58:78 O 8 '51 270w

"Particularly valuable is this keen analysis of the fundamental premises and orientation of present-day American psychiatrists and of the recent trends in psychiatric thinking."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:299 S '51 250w

RUGG, HAROLD ORDWAY, and BROOKS, B. MARIAN. Teacher in school and society; an introduction to education. 530p il $3.60 World bk.

371.1 Teaching. Teachers

"An introductory textbook for college students who are planning to become teachers. The first part presents the role of the teacher in the school, the American school system, the community, and the profession. The second part deals with the work of the teacher with the pupils—their learning, growth, and development." Booklist

Booklist 47:169 Ja 1 '51

School & Society 72:335 N 18 '50 30w

RUKAVINA, KATHALEEN (STEVENS). Jungle pathfinder; Central Africa's most fabulous adventurer. 299p $3 Exposition

B or 92 Africa, Central. Stephenson, John Edward 51-3673

"Man of mystery, center of many rumors and scandals, John Stephenson lived for years in the interior of Northern Rhodesia with his two native wives and eight children, managing a citrus plantation, acting as champion of the rights of the natives and mediator between native and white civilizations. This [is the] story of his life from the time he entered the bush as a representative for Cecil Rhodes, to the present." Booklist

Booklist 47:292 Ap 15 '51

"It is no small feat to present sympathetically a man who 'went native,' in the abhorred phrase, yet the author has recreated her setting so convincingly that her man rings true and emerges as a person well worth knowing. Incidentally, she has told in brief northern Rhodesia's romantic story, which spans little more than our half century." Margaret Hubbard
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 My 6 '51 600w

"Since it took the author fourteen years to produce this book, it seems a pity to report that it is somewhat inconsequential. However, those who enjoy reports of the jungle and of men who become kings or even gods may find their pleasure in it." S. T.
N Y Times p19 Ap 29 '51 180w

Reviewed by Hassoldt Davis
Sat R of Lit 34:19 N 10 '51 310w

RUKEYSER, MURIEL. Selected poems. 111p $1.50 New directions

811 51-12264

"This volume presents a representative selection of the poetry of one of America's . . . younger poets. The selection was made by the poet herself, and has been chosen from all of her previous volumes of published verse, beginning with Theory of Flight in 1935 and coming up to her recent long poem Orpheus." Publisher's note

Booklist 48:33 S 15 '51

Reviewed by Gerald McDonald
Library J 76:2116 D 15 '51 70w

"Studied either historically or for immediate pleasure, this swift-moving and rich volume shows Muriel Rukeyser's grasp of the essential, her practice of positive speech." Richard Eberhart
+ N Y Times p30 S 23 '51 370w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan
New Yorker 27:151 N 3 '51 140w

Reviewed by Lawrence Ferling
San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 18 '51 70w

RULE, JOHN THOMAS, and WATTS, EARLE FRANCIS. Engineering graphics. 298p il $3.75 McGraw

510.84 Mechanical drawing. Graphic statics 51-5996

"The main topic in this engineering college textbook is the use of graphical methods in representing data and finding solutions to engineering problems. Drawing techniques are covered also, but from viewpoint of the engineer rather than the draftsman. Heart of the book is in chapters on such topics as vector geometry, graphical scales, periodic curves and graphical calculus. The first-named author is Head of the Section of Graphics in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology." Library J

Eng N 147:48 S 27 '51 300w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 76:1938 N 15 '51 80w

RUNCIMAN, STEVEN. History of the crusades; 3v; v 1, The first crusade and the foundation of the Kingdom of Jerusalem. 377p il maps $5 Cambridge

940.18 Crusades (51-10801)

"Deals with the whole history of the First Crusade, down to the establishment of the Frankish kingdom of Jerusalem." (New Statesman & Nation) This is the first in a proposed three volume series. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 47:326 My 15 '51

Reviewed by W. P. Sears
Churchman 165:16 My 15 '51 90w

"Steven Runciman is a scholar of Byzantine history and his weighty knowledge in this field has influenced the tenor of the present work. Its easy and vivid style should not hide the fact that it is based on most careful studies, not only of the Western sources, but also on Greek, Arabic, Persian, Armenian, Syrian, and Hebrew material, and on a very thorough evaluation of the modern works in this field." Max Fischer
+ — Commonweal 54:410 Ag 3 '51 750w

Reviewed by C. R. Cheney
Manchester Guardian p3 F 23 '51 330w

"Mr. Runciman's learning is deep, his presentation clear, his style firm and graceful. He has the gift of occasional irony." H. R. Trevor-Roper
+ New Statesman & Nation 41:250 Mr 3 '51 1250w

"Mr. Runciman's subject is a noble one, and he is admirably prepared to treat it nobly. He has had experience as a research historian; he possesses the necessary knowledge of the various languages in which the basic documents are written. . . Moreover, he is an artist expert in shaping his material into one comprehensive design. His gift of characterization, touched with an irony so subtle as to be almost indiscernible, is notable, and even more remarkable is his mastery of a narrative style whose lucid flow is never rendered turbid by any straining after rhetorical effects." S. C. Chew
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ap 15 '51 1350w

"This book is written in the clear, staid language of a professional historian and is not dressed up for the general reader. It is not dry as dust, either. And since, with Baldwin's reign just beginning and Bohemond a prisoner in Anatolia, we stand at the threshold of even greater events, we can be glad there will be two volumes more." T. C. Chubb
+ N Y Times p14 Je 17 '51 600w

Reviewed by T. S. R. Boase
Spec 185:419 Mr 30 '51 700w

"In the first volume of the three that he intends to devote to the Crusades Mr. Runciman has resisted the temptation to look much beyond the domain of external action. . . In approaching the First Crusade, however, he is no doubt wise to confine himself in the main to a political and military narrative; for even that cannot be accomplished without taking in a vast panorama in space and time."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p125 Mr 2 '51 2450w

RUNES, DAGOBERT DAVID, ed. Hebrew impact on western civilization. 922p $10 Philosophical lib.
296 Jews—Civilization 51-102

"This symposium deals with the creative and cultural influence of the Jew in the major fields of modern civilization. It is edited with the collaboration of 17 scholars, of whom some are Jews and some are not." (School & Society) Index.

"The work under review is a blot upon American scholarship and a disgrace to the publishing business. It does not deserve serious consideration." K. S. Pinson
— Am Hist R 56:940 Jl '51 380w

"Contributions of Jewish thinkers, artists, and scientists are taken out of context—it is their 'contributions' that count, and the more Nobel Prizes the better. No serious attempt is made to account for the great efflorescence of Jewish intellectual contributions in the last few centuries. The assessment of the Hebrew impact on Western civilization still remains to be written." Marshall Sklare
— Am Soc R 16:432 Je '51 320w

"The number of definitely bad chapters is so large as to place both editor and publisher in the position of accounting for the reasons why they allowed a book of this kind to be printed. Whatever the reception of the volume may be by laymen, most social scientists will be so repelled by the features of naïveté, irresponsibility, subjectivity, and bad editorial work incorporated in the book, that they will have little motivation to examine the chapters that display merit. These are, to repeat, by Bernard, Karpf, Roth, Ferm, and Leidecker." Melville Jacobs
— + Ann Am Acad 275:206 My '51 650w

"Here is an immense amount of material that would make a pretty heavy dose for reading straight through but is important to have at hand for reference." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 68:466 Ap 11 '51 220w

"If the non-Jewish reader will forget for a while his surprise at being called 'a pagan' by Dr. Runes, as well as overlook some of the doubtful compliments paid the non-Jewish world in the editor's preface, he will soon realize that he has a great experience before him as he begins to immerse himself in this book. . . This volume should be studied with careful attention and interpreted with humble appreciation. It may well play a major role in the drama of 'Jewish-Christian Reconciliation.' " K. M. Chworowsky
+ Churchman 165:13 Mr 1 '51 650w

"Despite its many inaccuracies, distortions, and lack of balance, its poor English in spots and its dull listing of names of men and books, this volume can serve a useful purpose. It does contain a wealth of information about Jews, much of it not known to the general reader; most of it scattered in different books, magazine articles, and other sources of information. It provides a suggestive bibliography at the end of each chapter and will prove a great help to the serious student searching for source material." M. J. Cohen
— + Crozer Q 28:269 Jl '51 600w
Foreign Affairs 29:666 Jl '51 20w

"The book is unevenly edited and not all the articles read as smoothly as they should, nor do they present equally valuable information. . . From the reference standpoint there is a great deal of biographical information compiled in one volume with an adequate index to make the book a useful library tool." H. L. Roth
Library J 76:408 Mr 1 '51 150w

Reviewed by Eric Werner
Music Lib Assn Notes 8:354 Mr '51 600w

"Though this is not its avowed purpose, this book will be read most widely and appreciated most highly by liberal Christians and, of course, by Jews, especially the deracinated ones. . . Not only an antidote, but a stimulus and a challenge." Joshua Kunitz
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Ap 1 '51 500w

"Some of the eighteen treatises, dealing with the Jews' contributions to science, medicine, literature, art, the dance, and so on, are highly readable. Others, however, are overstuffed with inconsequential facts and read like lengthy encyclopedia articles. . . Hence, this reader preferred such well-written and fascinating chapters as Hebraic Foundations of American Democracy, Jewish Cultural Influence in the Middle Ages, The Fountainhead of Western Religion, to the more ambitious but less successful endeavors of some authors, who tried to give, within the framework of a single article, enough information for a full-sized book." Alfred Werner
+ — N Y Times p25 F 4 '51 470w

"The volume, comprising a dozen and a half essays by nearly as many authors was poorly conceived and even more poorly executed and merits little but negative criticism." J. C. Hurewitz
— Pol Sci Q 66:633 D '51 300w

"The whole approach of the book, while it contains a lot of valuable reference material, seems to rest on a dubious, outdated and possibly apologetic assumption." I. B.
San Francisco Chronicle p19 F 18 '51 190w

"This large book has far less value than it should, it is full of errors, both major and minor. It is, in part, out of date. In many of its essays there is merely a listing of names; often of non-Jews rather than Jews, and in a few instances of anti-Semites who, in this book, are considered to have been Jews. There are also glaring omissions." H. U. Ribalow

RUNES, D. D.—Continued

— Sat R of Lit 34:26 Ag 25 '51 440w

School & Society 73:15 Ja 6 '51 40w

Reviewed by H. W. Odum
Social Forces 29:451 My '51 80w

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek
Social Studies 42:371 D '51 300w

Springf'd Republican p6D F 25 '51 300w

"The idea which gave birth to this volume was a happy one. It is to be hoped that this compilation will find its way into the hands of those who can help lift men above the prejudices that are often born of ignorance." D. de Sola Pool

+ Survey 87:296 Je '51 550w

RUSH, BENJAMIN, 1745-1813. Letters; ed. by L. H. Butterfield. (American philosophical society. Memoirs) 2v 1295p il map set $15 Am. philosophical soc; Princeton univ. press

B or 92 Physicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. U.S.—History—Revolution 51-11569

"Dr. Benjamin Rush—eminent physician, doughty conversationalist, and tireless friend of the human race—was a famous man in the first generation of our national history. He was the first citizen of Philadelphia when that city was the intellectual capital of the country. . . Mr. Butterfield's edition comprises a selection of some 650 letters from more than sixty institutional and private sources, and very few of these have been previously published in satisfactory form or been readily available." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

Am Pol Sci R 45:1213 D '51 10w

Reviewed by C. L. Ver Steeg
Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 S 23 '51 140w

Reviewed by Paul Hutchinson
Christian Century 68:1409 D 5 '51 500w

"The collection will be valued most, perhaps, as a sourcebook for intellectual and social history and for biographical sidelights. The editing is extraordinarily complete and, in the best sense, it is sympathetic." Dumas Malone

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Jl 29 '51 1200w

"The letters are absorbing reading. In general, they lack, perhaps, the gracious sparkle of Jefferson's or the broad generosity of Franklin's, or indeed the incisive acerbity of Adams'. The general reader, of course, will be most interested in Rush's incisive and colorful comment on the manners and customs of his time. . . In spite of their occasional acerbity these are the letters of a liberated man: that quality breathes forth from every page." H. F. Graff

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 5 '51 700w

"His letters are a continual fascination. His style is vigorous and lively in the extreme, and the range of his interests is so wide that it is impossible to pick up either of these large volumes without finding at once a letter of compelling and provocative interest. Of course, it will be immediately apparent that this latest venture of the Princeton University Press into large-scale collections of letters is a treasure house for historians, social, political, military and medical, of the formative years of America. . . It is impossible to praise too highly the quality of the editing and the general appearance of these volumes." C. W. Weinberger

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Jl 29 '51 850w

"Mr. Butterfield has performed his editorial task unobtrusively and almost impeccably, and he has also provided an introduction that handles firmly and judiciously the many controversies of the physician's career. In addition to its worth as sheer good reading, this collection of over 650 letters (of which two-thirds are printed for the first time) provides one of the basic sources for the study of American culture from 1761 to 1813." Carl Bridenbaugh

+ Yale R n s 41:131 autumn '51 900w

RUSH, WILLIAM MARSHALL (MARK LAYTON, pseud). Wild horses of Rainrock; decorations by Ralph Ray, jr. 236p $2.50 Longmans
51-11623

The trials of young Dan Gordon, an easterner trying to adjust to western living on his uncle's Montana ranch. For grades seven to nine.

Booklist 48:38 S 15 '51

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst
Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 N 11 '51 130w

Horn Bk 27:335 S '51 60w

Kirkus 19:296 Je 15 '51 150w

"Excellent story, fine ranch life, and a very appealing hero. Boys and girls in their teens will certainly enjoy this." M. D. Read

+ Library J 76:1237 Ag '51 60w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 N 11 '51 90w

"An authentic and fast-moving story of men and horses." Marjorie Burger

+ N Y Times p20 N 11 '51 120w

"A stirring story. . . The atmosphere and background are particularly good."

+ Sat R of Lit 34:66 N 10 '51 60w

School & Society 74:112 Ag 18 '51 30w

Wis Lib Bul 47:221 S '51

RUSSELL, BERTRAND ARTHUR WILLIAM RUSSELL, 3d earl. Impact of science on society. 64p $2 Columbia univ. press

504 Science—Philosophy. Sociology 51-9936

The three Matchette lectures delivered at Columbia University in November 1950. Contents: Science and tradition; Effects of scientific technique; Science and values.

Reviewed by A. C. Garnett
Ann Am Acad 276:166 Jl '51 460w

Booklist 47:268 Ap 1 '51

Kirkus 19:87 F 1 '51 110w

"He is not attempting to blueprint a brave new world, but these lectures do contain many solid suggestions for improving man's lot. It is the work of a rational mind and suggests that man may be closer to resolving certain basic dangers to his future existence than he realizes." J. H. Berthel

+ Library J 76:512 Mr 15 '51 120w

Reviewed by J. R. Newman
New Repub 124:18 Mr 26 '51 1250w

"The three brief lectures which make up this book represent, for the most part, Mr. Russell's old thoughts on old themes. Readers of his other works on the scientific outlook and on politics and morals will find here little that is new, but they will find an unpretentious and lively summary of his most characteristic ideas on the role of science in society." Charles Frankel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 My 6 '51 500w

Reviewed by Saul Colin
N Y Times p10 Ag 5 '51 340w

New Yorker 27:120 Ap 7 '51 320w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 Je 10 '51 180w

Reviewed by W. C. Smith
Springf'd Republican p10D Ap 15 '51 350w

Reviewed by B. C. Gruenberg
Survey 87:238 My '51 80w

Reviewed by J. R. Killian
Yale R n s 40:725 summer '51 350w

RUSSELL, BERTRAND ARTHUR WILLIAM RUSSELL, 3d earl. Unpopular essays. 175p $2.50; readers ed pa $1 Simon & Schuster

104 Philosophy 51-1876

"A this year's Nobel prize winner writes about man, nature, civilization, science, religion, politics, superstitions, mores, God and philosophy in these eleven essays, eight of which are new." Kirkus

---

"These essays display in concentrated form, Russell's characteristic qualities—the wit, crispness, and lucidity of his prose; the vigor of his intellect, the grace with which he wears his erudition; and, above all, his undeviating rationalism." C. J. Rolo
+ Atlantic 187:80 Ap '51 420w

Reviewed by F. A. Levy
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Jl 15 '51 250w

"Urbanity, wit, lucidity, and incisive irony, combined with high moral sincerity, are characteristics we expect in the essays of our greatest living philosopher, and we find them here in abundance. We find also the usual cavalier treatment of historical ideas and the willing, almost wanton, sacrifice of fact to rhetorical brilliance. Russell is never the man to let mere literal accuracy impede the turning of a graceful phrase." D. N. Morgan
+ — Ethics 61:241 Ap '51 600w

Foreign Affairs 30:156 O '51 10w

"These essays will be unpopular, not because a leading philosopher here embraces an anti-philosophy, which is a curious mixture of commonsense and prejudice, but because nothing is holy to him." F. H. Heinemann
Hibbert J 49:183 Ja '51 150w

"Mr. Russell is an erudite, talented and witty writer, and a controversial figure in educational circles. Here is his personal philosophy, presented, for the most part, with philosophic calm, though he takes occasional bites at Plato, Aristotle, and some more modern."
+ Kirkus 19:21 Ja 1 '51 160w

Reviewed by J. H. Berthel
Library J 76:512 Mr 15 '51 130w

Reviewed by D. M. Emmet
Manchester Guardian p4 O 10 '50 400w

Reviewed by J. R. Newman
New Repub 124:18 Mr 26 '51 1250w

Reviewed by R. H. S. Crossman
New Statesman & Nation 40:594 D 9 '50 190w

"Mr. Russell has written a set of sermons which make their point by refusing to sermonize, a series of adventures in moral philosophy which are serenely irreverent about much that is called moral or goes under the name of philosophy. Mr. Russell pursues his theme, with that combination of grace, lucidity, and high spirits which is almost unique with him. . . To be sure, Mr. Russell occasionally simplifies to the point of inaccuracy. . . There are also times . . . when his talent for presenting unequivocal alternatives leads him to neglect what are still, even for Mr. Russell, the imponderables of complex political issues. But these are, after all, the defects of his virtues." Charles Frankel
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Mr 4 '51 1400w

"These essays, for all mischievous asides and gamin-like thrusts, are, for the most part, serious and convincing; as writing they are marked by grace, lucidity and distinction. . . If often he is sharp and cold, he has what is rarer than warmth, an unwavering concern for justice and truth." Irwin Edman
+ N Y Times p6 Mr 4 '51 900w

"There is nothing very fresh or striking in Russell's essays, and one or two of them are unquestionably trivial, but all of them are genial, witty, and of course, wonderfully lucid." R. H. Rovere
+ — New Yorker 27:113 Ap 7 '51 600w

"There are those who deplore what they would call Russell's tendency to dissipate his energy in such writing. I cannot agree. A mind of the first order if it happens to be owned by a good human being will naturally take an interest in what is going on outside its province; and because it is known to be of high order its pronouncements will carry weight. And rightly, too. In bringing his pen to bear on the issues of his day Russell is following in the steps of his godfather, John Stuart Mill, and a more persuasive example there could hardly be. 'Unpopular Essays' is a 'popular' book, but the marks of an acute and independent mind are on every page." Brand Blanshard
+ Sat R of Lit 34:11 Mr 3 '51 1250w

Reviewed by Maurice Cranston
Spec 184:372 O 6 '50 900w

Reviewed by W. C. Smith
Springf'd Republican p10D Ap 15 '51 190w

"Bertrand Russell's essays are unpopular not because they offend our cherished prejudices but because they are written by a man spitting in the eye of the world. Such a gesture is often valuable; we should be the poorer without Swift and a dozen others; it is perfectly tolerable in a philosopher such as Schopenhauer; but from a rationalist, a sturdy agnostic, a political scientist, a sociologist, an old Liberal, a progressive, a genial, flashing, original thinker such as Bertrand Russell—no, then it is intolerable."
— Times [London] Lit Sup p663 O 20 '50 1650w

RUSSELL, BERTRAND ARTHUR WILLIAM RUSSELL, 3d earl, and others. See Impact of America on European culture

RUSSELL, MRS CHARLOTTE (MURRAY). Cook up a crime. 192p $2.50 Doubleday 51-12482

Detective story.

"This is a smart brand of deliberate hilarity with murder." Drexel Drake
Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 O 7 '51 100w

Kirkus 19:337 Jl 1 '51 60w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
N Y Times p29 S 30 '51 20w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p20 S 23 '51 40w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff
Sat R of Lit 34:76 N 17 '51 30w

RUSSELL, JAMES EARL. Federal activities in higher education after the second World war. 257p $3.75 King's Crown press

378.73 Education and state. Colleges and universities—U.S. 51-10814

"Explores the expanding role of the federal government in the field of higher education—the nature, scope and impact of its activities. The analysis is confined to a single year, 1947. Half of the volume is devoted to a description of specific educational activities, exclusive of research, carried on by the federal government. The remaining half views critically the performance of the federal government when itself acting as an educator, its complex and unorganized relationships with nonfederal higher education, its impact on the program and policies of educational institutions, and its tendency to assume greater and greater responsibility for underwriting higher education without formulating any policy with regard to it." Am Pol Sci R

Reviewed by L. M. Young
Am Pol Sci R 45:904 S '51 200w

Reviewed by P. R. Mort
Sat R of Lit 34:32 S 8 '51 450w

School & Society 73:287 My 5 '51 20w

"A comprehensive factual report combined with a philosophical treatment of some of the basic issues pertaining to the relationship of the federal government to institutions of higher learning, this book will be of special value to members of boards of trustees, administrators of colleges and universities, governmental officials directly concerned with the programs in operation, and legislators."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:265 S '51 170w

RUSSELL, RICHARD JOEL, and KNIFFEN, FRED BOWERMAN. Culture worlds. 620p il maps $6 Macmillan

910 Geography 51-10542

"This work is designed as a college text for a year's introductory course in the regional geography of the world. It is intended to serve not only the needs of prospective geography majors but has the broader objective of providing sound background for students in the social sciences and in many other fields." Am Soc R

"The use of the terms 'culture' and 'culture world' is a bit inconsistent and has the effect of placing countries such as the United States and England into different 'culture worlds' while placing Ecuador and the United States in the same 'culture world.' This is because in reality contiguous geographical areas were used rather than cultural, except as the two tended to coincide. This inconsistency does not detract greatly from the work as a text in regional geography, however, and it is undoubtedly one of the best available." N. L. Whetten

+ — Am Soc R 16:738 O '51 280w

School & Society 73:255 Ap 21 '51 50w

RUTLEDGE, NANCY. Easy to murder. 191p $2.50 Doubleday

51-10862

Mystery story.

"Offensively ruthless woman in stirring and violent melodrama." Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ag 12 '51 60w

Kirkus 19:167 Mr 15 '51 60w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Je 17 '51 90w

"A frantic melodrama, sketchily unconvincing in its background of politics and journalism, patently contrived in its conventional manipulation of black-and-white cardboard characters, and so crassly overwritten as to be unbelievable from start to finish." Anthony Boucher

— N Y Times p14 Jl 8 '51 60w

New Yorker 27:140 My 19 '51 100w

"If you can believe in Onalee you'll believe anything."

— San Francisco Chronicle p12 Je 3 '51 60w

"Not this one." Kathleen Sproul

— Sat R of Lit 34:45 Jl 21 '51 60w

RUXTON, GEORGE FREDERICK AUGUSTUS. Life in the far West; ed. by Le Roy R. Hafen; with a foreword by Mae Reed Porter. 252p pl $3.75 Univ. of Okla. press

917.8 West—Description and travel. Frontier and pioneer life 51-1678

The adventures of a young English adventurer in the American west in the 1840's. The book was published in serial form in Britain in 1847-48. This is a new edition of Ruxton's book, illustrated with reproductions of the work of a contemporary artist, Alfred Jacob Miller. Index.

Reviewed by R. C. Ewing

Am Hist R 56:1006 Jl '51 230w

Booklist 47:331 My 15 '51

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ap 29 '51 450w

Reviewed by J. F. Dobie

N Y Times p14 Mr 11 '51 550w

"'Life in the Far West' must be taken as truth, and Mr. Hafen's interesting speculations in his appendix on the identities of two characters, Killbuck and La Bonté, in no way invalidate the genuineness of Ruxton's account. This is the way it was, in all truth. And those who want to know what life was like on that early American frontier will find no better record anywhere." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ap 3 '51 600w

RYAN, HARRIET FITTS. Mother of the groom; il. by Louis Priscilla. 184p $2.50 Longmans

51-12265

A novel about a mother's reactions to the marriage of her only son. Martha was a practical, intelligent woman, and she was determined not to be sentimental. Her story of the rush to get ready for the big event is interspersed with reminiscences of Jim as a child.

Booklist 48:50 O 1 '51

"In spite of an imitative title and situation, this, with its unpretentiousness, is pleasing entertainment."

+ — Kirkus 19:333 Jl 1 '51 130w

"Mrs. Ryan is neither as accomplished a writer nor as deft a humorist as is Mr. Streeter, and the comparison is not to her advantage. Also her angle is a more homely and personal one; the comedy or the poignancy depend more on the reader's sympathetic, shall we say 'sister feeling,' for the chief character than upon any intrinsic general humor in the situations. But almost every woman will understand. . . 'Mother of the Groom' is a pleasant, warm-hearted book about pleasant, folksy people. Their name isn't Bartlett, but Legion. And those who know them (and are them) will find Mrs. Ryan's book thoroughly enjoyable." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 34:21 O 20 '51 600w

"It is a straight, nostalgic account of a mother's reaction to her son's wedding, written in a vein of sentiment laced with humor." J. F. S.

+ Springf'd Republican p10B S 30 '51 300w

RYAN, JOHN JOSEPH. The Maggie Murphy. 224p $3 Norton

639.22 Fishing—Alaska 51-1749

Two boys just out of high school decided to try their luck fishing for salmon in Alaska. They fixed up a derelict boat, and set out with only about $40 in cash apiece. This is their account of the hardships and rewards of their trip.

Booklist 47:268 Ap 1 '51

"'The Maggie Murphy' is more than harebrained adventure. It is a picture of a curious life. . . It is an unruly area of a mechanized civilization, and the reader may well be grateful to the Maggie Murphy for a voyage into it." H. W. Baehr

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Mr 18 '51 650w

Reviewed by R. L. Neuberger

N Y Times p23 Je 24 '51 300w

"An engaging story dead certain to entertain, if not to appall. And should you be planning a similar trip to the land of large tomatoes and enterprise, you'll not want to miss this well-charted account of what to expect along the way." C. E. M.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 22 '51 320w

Springf'd Republican p12C Ap 22 '51 180w

RYAN, JOHN JULIAN. Beyond humanism; towards a philosophy of Catholic education. 193p $3 Sheed

377.82 Roman Catholic church—Education. Church schools and colleges 50-10910

"This book is a distillation of the author's experience during the last five years as lecturer and writer on education, especially as General Advisor to the College Workshop at Catholic University." (Publisher's note) In it he discusses such subjects as: The Catholic concept of the main obstacle: Catholic concept of the student; The Catholic concept of the teacher; The mastering of a liberal art; The cultivation of practicality; The requirements of morale-building; The position of the fine arts.

"John Julian Ryan's work on the idea of a Catholic college had an especially good chapter on the teacher. This new work is on the same idea, and is a much better work. It has the faults and also the virtues of the earlier work. The faults are that the author is not a notably orderly or disciplined thinker, and when the reader has covered one chapter, in a sense he has covered all: there is no very decisive progress, no clear outline to develop. But the virtues, which are much more developed in the new work, easily outweigh any faults." L. R. Ward

+ — Commonweal 53:355 Ja 12 '51 650w

Reviewed by Robert Bierstedt
Sat R of Lit 34:44 Ap 21 '51 210w

Springf'd Republican p10D Ap 15 '51 80w

RYDER, JOHN DOUGLAS. Electronic fundamentals and applications. 806p $9; to schools $6.75 Prentice-Hall

621.38 Electronics 50-11721

"A substantial textbook for upperclass students of physics or electrical engineering. It is based on the author's Electronic Engineering Principles (1947) [Book Review Digest 1948] but much new material has been added. Basic physical principles, tube characteristics and fundamental circuits are now all covered. The author is Head of the Department of Electrical Engineering in the University of Illinois." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 47:170 Ja 1 '51
N Y New Tech Bks 36:7 Ja '51

RYPINS, STANLEY ISRAEL. Book of thirty centuries; an introduction to modern study of the Bible. 420p $7 Macmillan

220.6 Bible. Whole—Criticism, interpretation, etc. 51-6810

History of the Bible and biblical scholarship thru the centuries, written mainly for the reader who does not know Greek and Hebrew. The author is professor of English in the College of the City of New York. Indexes.

"An author more detached than Dr. Rypins, while remaining genuinely benign, it is impossible to conceive. He is quite at home in the tongues fundamental to literary study of the Bible, ancient and modern. He is familiar with Jewish, Protestant, and Catholic translations and with the doctrines that are linked to certain passages. . . While the use of alien type faces has run up the price of his book, Dr. Rypins has handled his material so that the intelligent reader limited to English can get along perfectly." L. T. Heron

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 O 7 '51 220w

Christian Century 68:1513 D 26 '51 90w

"The book is buttressed by voluminous and careful references and complete bibliography. It is a book which will be of particular interest to Biblical scholars."

+ Kirkus 19:274 Je 1 '51 180w

"By means of transliteration and copious translations of pertinent passages the author has been successful in this exposition for the general reader. . . The vernacular versions of the Bible, especially the English and modern English translations, are treated in much detail. The annotation is extensive and the bibliography ample." R. P. Breaden

+ Library J 76:1216 Ag '51 140w

Reviewed by J. W. Culver
Springf'd Republican p14C O 28 '51 350w

S

SACK, ALBERT. Fine points of furniture; early American; foreword by Israel Sack; introd. by John Meredith Graham II. 303p il $4 Crown

749.211 Furniture 50-11156

Illustrations of American period furniture: chairs; tables; clocks; highboys; bureaus; sofas; beds; etc. Each is designated as good, better, or best. Text is brief. There is a chapter on reproductions, and an outline on basic requirements of a genuine piece. No index.

Booklist 47:202 F 1 '51

"A pictorial guide, with 800 fine illustrations, to the evaluation and selection of early American furniture. But the photografs and descriptions are so excellent that any serious craftsman in the art of home cabinet making will treasure this book for its wealth of suggestions and ideas." William Yates

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ap 29 '51 70w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '51

"Nice to know standards and ideals of excellence even though one may have a sneaking liking for an old piece, long in the family, not quite up to blue ribbon quality." A. S. Plaut

Library J 76:411 Mr 1 '51 120w

SACKS, JACOB. Atom at work; il. by George R. Cox. 327p $4 Ronald

541.2 Atomic energy. Isotopes 51-9384

"Written by a man who is both an M.D. and a Ph.D., and in unique position to observe atomic progress at Brookhaven National laboratory, this book is a readable survey of present prospects of uses for atomic energy. It is illustrated with photographs and with drawings by George R. Cox, whose dramatic and accurate representations of 'nonrepresentational happenings' have become well known in the field of atomic education." (N Y Times) Index.

"This book is written in an understandable style which makes it enjoyable reading. It is highly recommended for those who are interested in an over-all picture of modern thought concerning the atom expressed in nontechnical language." R. C. Bacon

+ Chem & Eng N 29:2512 Je 18 '51 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '51

"A fine book which is well described by its title. . . [It] is not mathematical, but it is written in such a way as to make the reader work." Anthony Standen

+ Commonweal 53:571 Mr 16 '51 200w

"The style is not distinguished, but it is easy to read. The book should prove widely useful." R. R. Hawkins

Library J 76:525 Mr 15 '51 100w

"A factual work for study and reference."

Nation 172:161 F 17 '51 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:18 Mr '51

"This is an ideal book to give to young persons or to anyone else interested in the workings of science. Considering its title, the book might have told more of the use of radiation in industry—Dr. Sacks gives it only nine pages—but at least he completely avoids blue sky conjecture on the power obtainable from a uranium lump 'the size of a pea.' He has avoided also the temptation to write another 'gee-whiz book' on the new forces, and has admirably fulfilled his mission of producing an authoritative volume for the general reader. It can also serve as a college text in survey courses." Michael Amrine

+ N Y Times p10 F 11 '51 410w

" 'The Atom at Work' is recommended to students, teachers, and laymen who can take their science straight." J. E. P.

+ Sat R of Lit 34:32 Ap 28 '51 300w

School & Society 73:48 Ja 20 '51 50w

ST GEORGE, MRS ELEANOR. Dolls of three centuries. 205p il $4.50 Scribner

649.55 Dolls 51-13769

Photographs and descriptions of dolls in several well-known collections, and articles on different makes of dolls. There is a chapter on Mrs Grace Putnam, originator of the Bye-lo Baby and one on doll carriages manufactured in Ludlow, Vermont. Index.

Booklist 48:96 N 15 '51

Bookmark 11:79 Ja '52 20w

"Even if you've always thought a doll was just something to go under the Christmas tree, you'll find these 205 pages of description and photografs fascinating. . . Human interest stories about designers and owners give even the casual reader a new respect for the role of dolls in preserving the creativeness and the traditions of a people." F. D. Heron
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 N 25 '51 60w

"An excellent reference work on lesser art of greater charm."
+ Library J 77:52 Ja 1 '52 80w

SAINTSBURY, DANA. Squirrel that remembered; il. by [the author]. 60p $2 Viking

Story of a family of squirrels living in Central Park. The central character is Grandma Nutcracker who has come from England in a doll's trunk. For ages six to nine.

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 N 4 '51 130w

"This story is sensitively written and illustrated; and has a quiet kind of beauty and humor that makes it worth rereading." J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews
+ Horn Bk 27:331 S '51 70w

"Good fun for the children who know the ways of squirrels and especially those in our parks. Delightfully illustrated."
+ Kirkus 19:388 Ag 1 '51 100w

"Sensitive story of squirrels in Central Park with nice line drawings by the author. Recommended." Anne Izard
+ Library J 76:1572 O 1 '51 40w

Reviewed by Marjorie Fischer
N Y Times p42 O 7 '51 100w

SALE, WILLIAM MERRITT. Samuel Richardson: master printer. 389p $5 Cornell univ. press

655.142 Richardson, Samuel. Printing—Great Britain 50-10768

"For the student of eighteenth-century bibliography and for the student of Richardson's novels, this book is indispensable. It is the most complete study available of an eighteenth-century printer, contains a list of some five hundred books from Richardson's press, and demonstrates the usefulness of a catalog of eighteenth-century printers' ornaments." U S Quarterly Bk R

"This work is not a biography but rather, as the title implies, an examination of the evidence available regarding Richardson's career as a printer. As such, however, it adds importantly to our knowledge of the man who spent more than thirty years in the printing industry and rose to eminence therein before he turned to the writing of the voluminous works that won him rank as the earliest and one of the greatest of English novelists." Austin Wright
+ Mod Philol 48:274 My '51 950w

Times [London] Lit Sup p412 Je 29 '51 1050w

"Professor Sale has accomplished his threefold purpose: to provide a story, as complete as possible, of an eighteenth-century printer and his press, to present a method by which the work of other presses may be studied, and to 'trace the growth of a press under the direction of a man who so conducted his affairs as to become independent of the whims of booksellers.' "
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:22 Mr '51 300w

SALINGER, JEROME DAVID. Catcher in the rye. 277p $3 Little

51-4713

Just before Christmas young Holden Caulfield, knowing that he is to be dropped by his school, decides to leave early and not report home until he has to. He spends three days and nights in New York city and this is the story, in his own words, of what he did and saw and suffered.

Reviewed by Harvey Breit
Atlantic 188:82 Ag '51 360w

Booklist 47:401 Jl 15 '51

"Not only do some of the events stretch probability, but Holden's character is iconoclast, a kind of latter-day Tom Sawyer or Huck Finn, is made montonous and phony by the formidably excessive use of amateur swearing and coarse language." Riley Hughes
— Cath World 174:154 N '51 160w

"Here is a novel about a 16 year old boy which is emotional without being sentimental, dramatic without being melodramatic, and honest without being simply obscene." Paul Engle
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Jl 15 '51 400w

Reviewed by T. M. Longstreth
— Christian Science Monitor p7 Jl 19 '51 600w

Kirkus 19:247 My 15 '51 270w

"This may be a shock to many parents who wonder about a young man's thoughts and actions, but its effect can be a salutary one. An adult book (very frank) and highly recommended." H. L. Roth
+ Library J 76:1125 Jl '51 90w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel
Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 10 '51 20w

Reviewed by Ernest Jones
Nation 173:176 S 1 '51 490w

"The final scene in The Catcher in the Rye is as good as anything that Salinger has written, which means very good indeed. So are a number of other episodes. But the book as a whole is disappointing, and not merely because it is a reworking of a theme that one begins to suspect must obsess the author." A. L. Goodman
+ — New Repub 125:20 Jl 16 '51 550w

"This is an odd, tragic and at times an appallingly funny book, with a taste of its own." Jocelyn Brooke
New Statesman & Nation 42:185 Ag 18 '51 120w

"Recent war novels have accustomed us all to ugly words and images, but from the mouths of the very young and protected they sound peculiarly offensive. There is probably not one phrase in the whole book that Holden Caulfield would not have used upon occasion, but when they are piled upon each other in cumulative monotony, the ear refuses to believe." Virgilia Peterson
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Jl 15 '51 900w

Reviewed by James Stern
N Y Times p5 Jl 15 '51 800w

Reviewed by S. N. Behrman
New Yorker 27:71 Ag 11 '51 2750w

"Mr. Salinger's novel is funny, poignant, and in its implications, profound. It is literature of a very high order. It really is." Lewis Vogler
+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Jl 15 '51 750w

"This is a book to be read thoughtfully and more than once." Harrison Smith
+ Sat R of Lit 34:12 Jl 14 '51 1100w

"Intelligent, humorous, acute and sympathetic in observation, the tale is rather too formless to do quite the sort of thing it was evidently intended to do." R. D. Charques
+ — Spec 187:224 Ag 17 '51 230w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal
Springf'd Republican p5D Jl 22 '51 220w

Time 58:96 Jl 16 '51 470w

Times [London] Lit Sup p561 S 7 '51 150w

SALOMON, IRVING. Retire and be happy. 205p $2.95 Greenberg

179 Retirement (from work) 51-10344

Advice addressed to men who are uncertain or unhappy about retirement. Partial contents: Should you retire; Some misconceptions; Age for retirement; Making your retirement successful; Have a philosophy; Ride a hobby, take your pick; Health in retirement; The wife's place in retirement.

Booklist 47:322 My 15 '51

Reviewed by L. T. Heron
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 27 '51 270w

Management R 40:316 My '51 40w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 8 '51 700w

SALOUTOS, THEODORE, and HICKS, JOHN DONALD. Agricultural discontent in the Middle West, 1900-1939. 581p $6.75 Univ. of Wis. press

338.1 Agriculture—Economic aspects. Agriculture—U.S. 51-4287

"Historical treatment of agrarian unrest in the twentieth-century United States. It is the story of how American agriculture formulated its objectives and gained the political power that it has used so effectively during the past decade. . . Beginning with an exploration of the causes of unrest, the authors trace the tumultuous course of the farm movement through the inflation of World War I, the subsequent depression of the early twenties, and the great depression of the thirties to the outbreak of World War II." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 47:396 Jl 15 '51

Reviewed by Russell Lord
N Y Times p25 S 16 '51 400w

"The only important limitations of this study are the failures to discuss the relation of the farmers to the movement in the nineteen-twenties for public power and fertilizer projects, and to provide a bibliography. The hundreds of interesting citations would have been immensely more valuable collected in one grouping, with some comment on the sources."
+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 7:280 S '51 200w

SAMACHSON, DOROTHY. Let's meet the ballet. 200p il $4 Schuman

792.8 Ballet 51-13493

"The author reveals in both words and pictures how ballets are born, rehearsed, and finally presented in all their glamour and beauty. Many of the photographs are rare and unfamiliar to ballet fans." (Publisher's note) The author has designed this book "to serve as a guide for teen-agers young and old, and for adults who would like to learn more about [ballet]." Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:128 D 1 '51

"Recommended for general dance and theatre collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 76:1810 N 1 '51 20w

"This is a well planned, absorbing book." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 D 9 '51 230w

"When her children attended their first ballets and began to ask questions, Dorothy Samachson found no book that would answer them. So she set about writing one herself, and a first-rate job she has made of it. . . Though this is a book for the older younger set, it is not in the least condescending in tone, and there are large numbers of adults who will find it enlightening." John Martin
+ N Y Times p52 O 21 '51 290w

"Factually the book is dependable. Dorothy Samachson is an accompanist and student of the dance who obviously loves the subject." R. K.
+ Sat R of Lit 34:68 N 17 '51 280w

SAMPSON, HENRY, ed. World railways, 1950-51; a survey of the operation and equipment of representative rail systems. 648p il $25 Rand McNally

385 Railroads

"Here in one volume is gathered together data on the railway systems of 73 countries, illustrated with more than 700 photographs and more than 200 maps and diagrams. Nations are arranged by continents. Each country has a separate section (the United States takes up almost a third of the volume) which begins with a map of its railroads and in most cases a historical survey together with a resume of present status." San Francisco Chronicle

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 76:1938 N 15 '51 210w

"In spite of some characteristic modern difficulties in getting detailed information from East Europe, it is, for a first edition, strikingly complete in its records." H. D. N.
+ Manchester Guardian p4 Mr 30 '51 40w

"One of the happiest events to occur in the field of railroad literature in many a year has just quietly taken place. . . Titled 'World Railways,' it has been compiled and edited by Henry Sampson . . . as a companion volume to 'Jane's Fighting Ships' and 'Jane's All the World's Aircraft,' and it carries on the tradition of well-selected data well presented. Its effect upon those interested either vocationally or avocationally in the subject of railroads is not easily to be gauged. Judging by the enthusiastic reaction of ship and airplane fanciers to the successive editions of the Jane's volumes, rail fanciers may be so affected by the appearance of the initial volume in this new series as to require some slight medical attention." Ruth Teiser
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 19 '51 550w

"In spite of its doubtless only temporary incompleteness, World Railways is a handsome publication which will be welcomed by the railwaymen and railway enthusiasts of all nations."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p233 Ap 13 '51 480w

SAMUELSEN, RUBE C. Rose Bowl game. 299p $3.50 Doubleday

796.33 Football 51-12108

"The story of the Pasadena Rose Bowl and its famous football games, its inception, development as a business enterprise, and accounts of the games played with a complete list and full data on players and scores." Library J

Booklist 48:27 S 15 '51

Reviewed by Robert Cromie
Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 S 2 '51 70w

Kirkus 19:310 Je 15 '51 120w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 76:1340 S 1 '51 30w

"A Pasadena sportswriter who has been associated with the Rose Bowl game in various promotional and publicity capacities has here set down a tremendously interesting, remarkably complete history of that game." Don Mankiewicz
+ N Y Times p10 Ag 26 '51 440w

"It is a highly readable saga of broken bones, luck, flaming tempers, courage, ticket wrangles, 'over-emphasis,' gate crashers, humor, high pressure salesmanship, pageantry and sportsmanship." R. H. Dillon
San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ag 26 '51 500w

SANBORN, FREDERIC ROCKWELL. Design for war; a study of secret power politics, 1937-1941. 607p $5 Devin-Adair

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations. World war, 1939-1945—U.S. 51-9176

"The basic contention of the book is that a President of the United States ought to consult freely and publicly with the Cabinet and Congress before making foreign engagements of any consequence. The author expresses the belief that the U.S. should follow more nearly the pattern of Britain, where foreign policy decisions generally are made only after a thorough airing in Commons, and where the prime minister is always directly accountable to the elected representatives of the people. The book is heavily documented, with numerous quotations from public records and other books, as well as excerpts from the speeches, diaries and publications of notables at home and abroad." (Springf'd Republican) Index.

"Mr. Sanborn's scholarly and vigorous work is a worthy addition to the existing literature which exposes the bankruptcy and falsity of the assumptions on which Franklin D. Roosevelt drew the American people into a costly and futile war." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 F 18 '51 550w

Reviewed by Gordon Craig

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Ag 19 '51 950w

"After reading Mr. Sanborn's book, this reader continues to believe, with a great many other people who never voted for Roosevelt or supported the New Deal, that we went reluctantly into World War II under his leadership —backed by Congress—in order to defend ourselves against a very real danger of being the next victim of Axis conquest." S. F. Bemis

N Y Times p3 F 18 '51 800w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 Ap 1 '51 380w

Springf'd Republican p8C F 11 '51 440w

SANDBURG, CARL. Complete poems. 676p $6 Harcourt

811 50-11502

For descriptive note see Annual for 1950.

Bookmark 10:57 D '50 30w

"Now that Sandburg's poetry of fifty years is brought together so that one can conveniently compare the earliest with the latest and with what came between, it appears that the change has been very slight. He has no 'periods.' . . It is superfluous to remark that Sandburg at his best is a great imaginative artist with words. . . A Nobel prize for literature would become him better than some who have received it." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 68:48 Ja 10 '51 650w

Reviewed by Gerald McDonald

Library J 76:49 Ja 1 '51 110w

"It is moonshine based on a sound semi-folk tradition, with shrewd common sense, fun, and music thrown in."

+ New Yorker 27:123 Mr 10 '51 100w

Reviewed by W. C. Williams

Poetry 78:345 S '51 2550w

Reviewed by Robert Brittain

San Francisco Chronicle p12 D 24 '50 900w

Wis Lib Bul 47:20 Ja '51

SANDBURG, CARL, ed. New American songbag. 107p il $2.50; pa $1.50 Associated music pub, inc, 25 W 45th st, N.Y. 19

784.4 Folk songs, American 51-175

"Fifty songs in all, about forty percent reproduced from The American Songbag [Book Review Digest 1927, 1928] and the others taken from other sources, and adapted by Carl Sandburg. Larger size although slimmer than the original American Songbag." Booklist

Booklist 47:222 F 15 '51

"The book will probably prove indispensable, though collections owning the first Songbag may regret the duplications." P. L. Miller

Library J 76:518 Mr 15 '51 130w

Reviewed by George Korson

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 8:558 Je '51 360w

Reviewed by Abee Niles

Nation 173:57 Jl 21 '51 300w

"Mr. Sandburg's poetic and understanding mind has never been more intuitive and sure than in his selection of the twenty-five or more songs which are his new and particular contribution to this anthology." Carl Carmer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ja 21 '51 900w

SANDERS, IRWIN TAYLOR. Making good communities better; a handbook for civic-minded men and women; with selected guideposts by seventeen authorities. 179p il maps $2 Univ. of Ky.

323.35 Community life 50-14726

"Professor Sanders has translated his own experience as a social scientist into a practical, easy-to-read guide to community improvement, and an impressive array of nineteen additional experts has teamed up with him to supply guideposts on twenty-one special problems in community organization." Sat R of Lit

"There is good balance of values and general breadth to Making Good Communities Better. The book is useful to anyone involved in a leadership capacity in any voluntary association. However, many statements are so obvious, elementary, and general in character that at times reading becomes rather tedious for those who have basic organization experience and understanding. For those who do not have the understanding, there is probably insufficient material to give them any real knowledge." W. M. Phillips

Ann Am Acad 276:142 Jl '51 550w

"A valuable handbook in social engineering that begins and ends on a positive note. . . Universities and libraries are filled with writings in social research, but only rarely does the social scientist come up with anything in simple, clear-cut language that tells the average community leader how worthwhile community programs can be made to function successfully in the realities of life. Professor Sanders has done this and done it admirably." R. W. Poston

+ Sat R of Lit 34:16 Mr 3 '51 320w

"Although this volume was planned and written from the point of view of the specialist in the field of sociology and is addressed primarily to community workers and group leaders interested in social action for community betterment, teachers and school administrators will recognize many of the tenets and problems of community planning as closely related to situations they frequently meet in school life." N. B. Henry

School R 59:498 N '51 700w

SANDERS, THOMAS HENRY. Effects of taxation: on executives. (Harvard univ. Graduate school of business administration. George F. Baker foundation. Publications) 229p $3.25 Harvard univ. Division of research

336.24 Executives. Taxation—U.S. Old age pensions 51-11540

"Volume 4 of the School's general study of effects of taxation on business. This book deals with taxes and their effects on the executives' efforts, the integrity and duration of their active business careers, their retirement, and their struggles to achieve personal financial competence." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by Leo Fishman

Ann Am Acad 278:213 N '51 300w

"While not exhaustive, this study contributes much to present knowledge of the relationship between business and taxation."

+ Columbia Law R 51:925 N '51 200w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 76:1568 O 1 '51 40w

"Executive, tax legislators, and the public alike will profit from this much-needed understanding of the present and future effect of taxes on executives and, through them, on the whole economy made available by Professor Sanders." L. R. Boulware
+ Management R 40:713 N '51 650w

SANDERSON, IVAN TERRANCE. How to know the American mammals. 164p il $2.50 Little 599 Mammals 51-12825

A field guide book, or identification manual, describing briefly (from a paragraph to two pages) the mammals of the United States and Canada. Many illustrations including line drawings by the author and full color plates by Louis Agassiz Fuertes. Index.

Booklist 48:26 S 15 '51
Bookmark 11:59 D '51 20w

Reviewed by Bob Becker
Chicago Sunday Tribune p33 D 2 '51 40w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 30 '51 50w

"This little handbook is excellent and useful in every way. . . For all children's libraries." N. S. Chasteen
+ Library J 76:1947 N 15 '51 70w
San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 21 '51 130w

"As a manual of the subject, Mr. Sanderson's volume is below the standard of usefulness set by such an indispensable little work as the 'Field Book of American Mammals' by Harold Anthony. . . It must also be judged by comparison with the best that the author himself has shown that he can do. In Mr. Sanderson's case that is a high standard. But one would not always know from reading these pages that the author possessed a wealth of field experience. Rather does he sound like a well-trained museum lecturer taking a crowd of us from one handsomely mounted specimen to another, pausing before each to deliver a lucid, reliable, brief account." D. C. Peattie
+ — Sat R of Lit 34:14 N 3 '51 700w
Wis Lib Bul 47:210 S '51

SANDOZ, MAURICE YVES. On the verge; il. by Salvador Dali. 127p $4.50 Doubleday 50-11654

Four stories, all of them about madmen of varying degrees. Contents: The tsantsa; Mr. Rabbi; The trap; On the verge.

Kirkus 18:583 S 15 '50 160w

"Set in very large type, but not recommended as bedtime reading for convalescents." E. F. Walbridge
Library J 75:1903 N 1 '50 70w

"Sandoz has had peers, but not many, and for a really apt reviewer, page Mr. Poe." L. T. Nicholl
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 D 24 '50 420w

"If he made this translation himself (he has written at least one book in English), Sandoz has done a spanking good job. Only a few clichés and a few exclamatory sentences, which sound a bit naïve in English, hint at the non-native hand. Even these could have been deliberate." Horace Reynolds
N Y Times p29 N 19 '50 360w

"This is one of those books frankly designed to end up on coffee tables in modernistic studios, or discreetly gracing corporation waiting rooms. It is the third in a series of successful collaborations between Sandoz, who writes quietly macabre tales, and Dali, whose style is admirably suited to illustrating them." D. F.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ja 7 '51 300w

SANDYS, NICHOLAS. Starset and sunrise. 202p $2.50 Sheed
51-12360

First person narrative of the life of Marjorie Chatham, born to an English gypsy couple, educated in a Catholic convent, making her way to film stardom by being the mistress of many men. Eventually a change of heart takes place, Marjorie returns to the church, and at the end of her story is dying of tuberculosis after trying to prepare herself to play the role of a saint.

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
— Cath World 174:155 N '51 140w

"Sandys has drawn freely on his considerable experience as an actor for the rich background of this novel. One of its merits is the satisfying subtlety with which his own contempt for the politics, strut, and false grandeur of the movies shines through Marjorie's enthusiastic account." Sister Mariella Gable
+ Commonweal 54:581 S 21 '51 470w

"Mr. Sandys keeps his heroine credible and amusing while presenting the inside workings of motion picture studios with a great deal of authority." J. C. C.
+ Springf'd Republican p5C S 23 '51 40w

SANFORD, MRS AGNES MARY (WHITE). Oh, watchman! 217p $2.75 Lippincott
51-9040

Tim Lawrence was just out of a veterans' hospital, where he had been for months. On the night of his return he went to a dance without his brace, fell and broke his leg again. Then he was back in the hospital, this time with his morale in bad shape. The story is of his recovery thru the love of a nurse, and the help of a visiting Gray Lady.

Booklist 47:238 Mr 1 '51

"Religion has been aware of this therapy for a long time. It is a pleasure to see it crystallized into sustained and intelligent narrative form. A good many novels of this nature have appeared during the last 20 years, but most of them are hopelessly sentimental. They fail in both the requirements of sound fiction and sound religion. Here is a novel that succeeds at both points. To read it is to feel very much better about life in general." Clarence Seidenspinner
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 F 25 '51 450w

"The significance of the idea carries over, and for those who are ready for it, is self-applicable. But the manner of the telling is sometimes artificial, and the characters—particularly the Grey Lady and the Jewish boy who has made the system his own—are almost too good to be true. A book to watch, however, and one which has constructive power."
+ — Kirkus 18:660 N 1 '50 260w

"Inspiring, hopeful novel through which both men and women of draft age, especially, may find courage." E. P. Nichols
+ Library J 76:40 Ja 1 '51 80w

" 'Oh, Watchman!' presents a case history in the guise of fiction, its appeal being mainly to those interested in the ideas that the author outlined in 'The Healing Light.' "
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 Ja 14 '51 130w

Reviewed by Edward Fenton
N Y Times p23 Ap 8 '51 120w

SANFORD, TRENT ELWOOD. Architecture of the Southwest; Indian, Spanish, American. 312p pl maps $6 Norton
720.979 Architecture—Southwest 50-10641

"For two thousand years the American Southwest has been the scene of a continuous building tradition. This is the story of the cliff dwellings and pueblos of the pre-Spanish Indians; of the Spanish conquest and the building of missions, churches, and presidios; of the westward expansion of the Americans with highways and cities. The book, which covers Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, and California,

SANFORD, T. E.—Continued
describes the architecture of this region and the peoples who have made it one of the most fascinating parts of the United States, architecturally and historically." (Publisher's note) Chronological summary. Lists of pueblos and missions. Index.

Booklist 47:152 D 15 '50

"Recommended." A. S. Plaut
+ Library J 76:600 Ap 1 '51 80w

"Handsome and readable but more like a guidebook than the systematic account which the title seems to promise."
+ — Nation 171:709 D 30 '50 30w

Reviewed by Hubert Herring
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 F 11 '51 370w

"With lively joy in his materials Mr. Sanford has written an informal book that is more of a history than a geography, more of a geography than a guide book, and yet more of a guide book than a pure commentary on the architecture of the American Southwest." Paul Horgan
+ N Y Times p20 Ap 1 '51 600w

"His text is informal and packed with facts and descriptions in the pleasant manner of the travelogue rather than the precise style of an architectural treatise. For those interested in the subject it's the most nearly complete and best volume to be had." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ja 29 '51 200w

Reviewed by Wayne Andrews
Sat R of Lit 33:10 D 9 '50 650w

SANGER, ARTHUR, and SANGER, LUCILLE. Cabochon jewelry making. 128p il $3.50 Bennett
739.2 Jewelry 51-9857

General instructions for either amateur or professional craftsman; including specific directions for making over a hundred articles. Illustrated by photographs and drawings. Index.

Booklist 47:269 Ap 1 '51

Bookmark 10:156 Ap '51 30w

"The text is sound and generally intelligible; the designs are above the average in attractiveness and artistry and the methods are correct, if at times somewhat cumbersome." Russell MacFall
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 Ap 29 '51 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:37 My '51

"The hobbyist who finds pleasure in making beautiful and worth-while articles, and who has a minimum of knowledge of the use of small hand tools, will find this book of great value in his work."
+ School Arts 50:adv My '51 130w

SANGER, FRANCES, pseud. See Lau, J. S.

SANSOM, WILLIAM. Face of innocence. 253p $3 Harcourt
51-11664

"In essence, this novel describes the hazardous ground-swells of a middle-class marriage that seems on the surface to be a conventional and unmarred success. The narrator of the book is himself a novelist and the method of narration is the confiding armchair one reminiscent of Mr. Somerset Maugham. The focal point of the novel is the wife's character and her inability to tell the truth." Times [London] Lit Sup

---

"Sansom, I believe, writes as ably as anyone writing in English today. His language is quietly distinctive, effortless, and exact. He sees with an unstrained and a fresh eye. He has superb control of his material and he doesn't try what he can't do. Maybe that is the reason he hasn't written a great novel. So far his works have been minor ones. But this modest phenomenon is pleasing within the current context of egomania." Harvey Breit
+ Atlantic 188:84 S '51 250w

Booklist 48:13 S 1 '51

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Cath World 174:154 N '51 160w

"What makes 'The Face of Innocence' so much more than an anecdote of amorous intrigue is precisely the quality which gives Mr. Sansom's fiction its remarkable freshness and richness. In all Mr. Sansom's fine novel there is not a careless or expendable phrase or sentence." Milton Crane
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Jl 29 '51 430w

Reviewed by Ruth Chapin
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 16 '51 430w

"Generally, Mr. Sansom's preoccupations about the essence of reality, and the degree to which real people face it, do not succeed in making themselves serious or important. His fine epithetical skill, his unusual capacity for communicating the moods, the words, the actions which result from locus are misused, rather like the talent of a piano virtuoso who plays scales all night long. The whole, as far as this story is concerned, is not at all equal to its parts." George Miles
Commonweal 54:508 Ag 31 '51 500w

Kirkus 19:356 Jl 15 '51 210w

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge
Library J 76:1223 Ag '51 90w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield
Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 27 '51 70w

"William Sansom remains the most intelligent and promising of the younger English writers. One puts down 'The Face of Innocence,' his second novel, feeling, as one felt after 'The Body' and after 'South,' that another time he will surely bring off what he is trying to do. For 'The Face of Innocence' is not a very good novel. Its great virtues, like the virtues of the books which preceded it, lie somewhere outside fiction, with the essay, with the best travel writing, sometimes with poetry." Ernest Jones
Nation 173:136 Ag 18 '51 1050w

Reviewed by A. L. Goodman
New Repub 125:20 S 17 '51 250w

"When we have examined it, The Face of Innocence is seen to provide, under its engaging surface, a second layer of more profound entertainment, of subterranean implications, of irony and sadness. Given so much, readers will display the natural greed of their kind in expecting more; something more sustained if not more profound; a more solid adherence between the two layers; a novel purged of devices and artificiality, hesitations and faults of style. Judged at the level which Mr. Sansom has on occasion attained, The Face of Innocence is a faulty novel." J. D. Scott
+ — New Statesman & Nation 41:538 My 12 '51 650w

"Mr. Sansom is very, very good. Such is his facility that while we are immersed in his story we are liable to feel that it is all much more meaningful than it really is. It is only after we have finished the novel that we begin to suspect that it is, at best, a welterweight. However, I imagine that very few readers will be inclined to quibble about this. It is all too seldom these days that one comes across a man who can tell a rattling good story and write like the devil." J. J. Maloney
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ag 12 '51 750w

"Happily for his people and this reader Mr. Sansom tempers a highly civilized wit with a lowly human understanding, salts his locales with sharp, evocative authenticity, and binds all together with a writing skill that includes constructing sentences that have the delicacy and strength of suspension bridges. Toward the end of 'The Face of Innocence,' when the story begins to level off, its skimming pace does give the impression of beginning to plod a little." Alice Morris
+ — N Y Times p4 Ag 12 '51 700w

Reviewed by Anthony West
New Yorker 27:110 S 8 '51 500w

"This is not remote clinical study; it is rather a portrait every reader can recognize. . . All of this Mr. Sansom does with the deceptive ease of an accomplished virtuoso, with the lovely clarity and vividness of style that has made him the fine writer he is. If you've been feeling, as a lot of people have, that the novel is suffering a decline into the second rate, then try 'The Face of Innocence.' You'll find your faith in the contemporary novel rewarded." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ag 9 '51 950w

Reviewed by Harrison Smith
Sat R of Lit 34:13 Ag 11 '51 750w

Reviewed by Barbara Worsley-Gough
Spec 185:566 Ap 27 '51 260w

Time 58:110 Ag 13 '51 380w

Times [London] Lit Sup p257 Ap 27 '51 600w

Wis Lib Bul 47:216 S '51

SANTAYANA, GEORGE. Dominations and powers; reflections on liberty, society and government. 481p $4.50 Scribner

320.1 Political science 51-10642

"Santayana's reflections on Dominations and Powers is a final survey on human affairs by an unillusioned naturalist. A Power is any action which results from the natural unfolding of the needs and interests of an animal organism in its supporting environment. A Domination, from the point of view of a particular center of interest, is any alien and hostile Power which imposes its rule for its own advantage. The relation and interplay between Powers and Dominations are examined in three Orders: the Generative Order of family, custom and traditions; the Militant Order, which embraces all voluntary organizations like parties and churches and armies; and the Rational Order, in which, by distinguishing between liberating and oppressive expressions of interests, we find a basis for social criticism and justification." (N Y Times) Index.

Atlantic 188:87 Jl '51 250w

Booklist 47:301; 322 My 1 '51; My 15 '51

Bookmark 10:230 Jl '51 20w

Reviewed by J. W. Lane
Cath World 173:394 Ag '51 240w

Reviewed by M. A. Fitzsimons
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 13 '51 900w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '51

"The book is a lasting memorial to the distinguished philosopher-poet."
+ Kirkus 19:199 Ap 1 '51 180w

"This book is not likely to become a university textbook. It is on the whole a little too cynical. But we would all get out of it a lot of wisdom and good sense." Lord Lindsay of Birker
Manchester Guardian p4 S 18 '51 900w

Reviewed by Adrienne Koch
New Repub 125:20 S 10 '51 750w

Reviewed by Leonard Woolf
New Statesman & Nation 42:384 O 6 '51 650w

"'Dominations and Powers' is obviously one of Santayana's major efforts. Though apparently completed quite recently and published in his eighty-eighth year it is both vast in scope and written no less than conceived in his grandest manner. In its nearly five hundred closely printed pages his admirers will find dazzlingly illustrated again that special combination of close reasoning, poetic eloquence, and sharp wit which have compelled even his philosophical opponents to acknowledge him as the greatest philosophical writer of our times. And if his detractors will discover also what they regard as an inhuman detachment, an arrogant assumption that he is above and beyond the hopes and fears as well as the obligations of other men, that is only another indication that the new work flows from the pen which composed its predecessors." J. W. Krutch
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 My 6 '51 2100w

"Santayana has held a unique position in American philosophy. His mixture of robust common sense and poetic insight has been a refreshing tonic to his more technical colleagues even when they found the articulations of his thought elusive. He does not so much explain things as reveal them. His writings have puzzling historical overtones, which are not exactly historical, and difficulties that baffle even sympathetic interpreters. Not inappropriately, he has been called by Baker Brownell 'the Mona Lisa of philosophy.' It is as a moral philosopher that his intent is clearest and his wisdom both deep and suggestive. Yet even here he is to be enjoyed as a serene commentator on the past rather than as a reliable guide in the present." Sidney Hook
+ N Y Times p1 My 6 '51 2000w

"There is certainly no book on political philosophy remotely like this in its lordly and patrician detachment, in its setting of politics in the grand context of matter and spirit, in its relating of government to the great forces in nature and to the delicate intimacies of spirit. . . About strictly contemporary problems, Santayana makes some shrewd guesses, some fantastically inaccurate ones, and he says much that is innocent, irrelevant, or uninformed. . . For all its serene air of being above the battle, this is not a book without prejudices. . . . But despite these limitations of fact and feeling, the book has towering impressiveness." Irwin Edman
New Yorker 27:78 Ag 25 '51 2400w

"Santayana is not easy reading. None of his works is easily scanned, and even ordinarily rapid readers are frequently brought to a full stop, or even sent into reverse. Nevertheless the depth of his thought, the perceptive and luminous quality of his prose, and above all, the breadth of his grasp of all the factors that motivate and explain human activity are so very evident in the hard core of truth that underlies even the most difficult passages that a careful reading of this great work can only bring a full appreciation of the essential brilliance of Santayana." C. W. Weinberger
+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 My 27 '51 900w

"The rumor has been about for years that 'the old man eloquent' of American philosophy was preparing a statement of his views on politics. . . The long-awaited statement is now before us. In range and volume it goes beyond anything that was expected. . . The atmosphere is pure Santayana. The detachment from the world is as marked as ever, the philosopher is ruminating in his tower over a scene where he has no commitments, contemplating it all with his characteristic mixture of amusement, compassion, and disdain. . . But the writer's very aloofness from all the governments and cultures he discusses makes his appraisals fresh and illuminating, and there is the wealth of wise and finely phrased obiter dicta that his vast resources always provide." Brand Blanshard
+ Sat R of Lit 34:10 My 12 '51 950w

Reviewed by Michael Oakeshott
Spec 187:578 N 2 '51 800w

Time 57:109 My 7 '51 1050w

Times [London] Lit Sup p637 O 12 '51 4000w

SANTEE, ROSS. Hardrock and silver sage [il. by the author]. 224p $3 Scribner

51-12538

Novel about the Nolans—Pop, Tommie and Robin, in the years around 1910. The scene is Arizona, and the gentle, peace-loving father is a hardrock miner. Illustrated by the author.

Booklist 48:66 O 15 '51

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '51

Kirkus 19:406 Ag 1 '51 120w

"Well recommended to adults and young people." L. R. Etzkorn
+ Library J 76:1334 S 1 '51 130w

SANTEE, ROSS—Continued

"The many wonderful sketches add a dramatic interpretation of the varied moods. Santee can give you a tiny human being against the great spaces of desert, mesa, and sky, as can no one else. His bucking broncos, the pet pig, a 'mushog,' the wild geese at dawn, all take your imagination even farther than his vivid words. His books are something quite unique in today's fiction." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 O 21 '51 500w

"Short or long, Ross Santee's stories always have a deceptive simplicity; but they are as direct and as quietly subtle as his etchings and drawings. . . The story's background is full of authentic color, which Santee handles with his familiar restrained skill. . . The present novel, despite its painfully bad title, is the best book Ross Santee has written." Hal Borland

+ N Y Times p22 S 30 '51 550w

SARA, DOROTHY, ed. Bride's encyclopedia; contributors: Dorothy Lindner [and others]. 310p $3 Crown

640 Home economics. Etiquet 51-11011

Tho designated for brides this is suitable for any young or inexperienced home maker. Consists of a collection of articles by various hands, arranged under such headings as: Etiquette for the newly married; The new hostess entertains; Budgeting for happiness; Interior decorating—for now and later; Good hints for good housekeeping; Food facts; Sewing for your house and wardrobe; Home nursing and first aid; Beauty and charm.

Booklist 47:358 Je 15 '51

Reviewed by K. T. Willis
Library J 76:2008 D 1 '51 40w

Reviewed by J. W. Culver
Springf'd Republican p11D Je 24 '51 350w

SARBAN, pseud. See Wall, J. W.

SARGENT, STEPHEN STANSFELD. Social psychology; an integrative interpretation. 519p $4.50 Ronald

301.15 Social psychology 50-7928

"This book is an introductory text in social psychology, designed to acquaint students with basic facts, principles, and applications in the field. The first three parts, emphasizing socialization of the individual, personality dynamics, and social interaction, are intended to provide the theoretical framework of the subject. Part IV is concerned with interpreting important social phenomenon and social issues." Pref

"The anthropologist will find this a useful source book for securing leads on areas of behavior largely neglected in studies of other cultures such as the process of communication, social roles and motivation. He will also find perceptive comments on recent anthropological theories in the field of personality and culture. For those unfamiliar with the more recent developments in the field of social psychology, this book will prove a useful resource." R. H. Useem

+ Am Anthropol 53:124 Ja '51 170w

Reviewed by F. E. Hartung
Am J Soc 56:607 My '51 800w

"Nobody will expect an introductory text to present new insights. But if this reviewer were to teach a course in social psychology tomorrow, he would choose this text as an intelligent, clear, and concise exposition of this complex field." J. H. Bunzel

+ Am Soc R 16:427 Je '51 400w

School & Society 71:336 My 27 '50 20w

Reviewed by W. L. Kolb
Social Forces 29:217 D '50 250w

Reviewed by H. E. Jensen
Social Studies 42:37 Ja '51 280w

SARLES, WILLIAM BOWEN, and others. Microbiology; general and applied. 493p il $4.50 Harper

589.95 Micro-organisms. Bacteriology 51-3180

"A textbook explaining the principles of bacteriology over a wide field, indicating applications to industry, agriculture, and the home. An intelligent presentation with comprehensive and concise descriptions which has reference value also." Booklist

Reviewed by R. S. Breed
Am J Pub Health 41:1015 Ag '51 300w

Booklist 47:324 My 15 '51

SAROYAN, WILLIAM. Rock Wagram. 301p $3.50 Doubleday

51-9937

"A fast-flashing montage of a screen star's life, this shows Rock Wagram at two stages of his career, before he enters the Army in 1942, and in 1950, when the marriage, of which he had dreamed so much, has completely smashed." Kirkus

"While it represents a laudable attempt to deal with the tragic, Rock Wagram strengthens my conviction that there is no other novelist in the same echelon of talent as Saroyan who can pack so much silliness between the covers of a book." C. J. Rolo

— Atlantic 187:78 Ap '51 420w

Bookmark 10:184 My '51 50w

"Rock Wagram is a sick, desperate parody of a book by William Saroyan, written by a man who is an emotional and intellectual bankrupt and who has nothing whatever to say." Riley Hughes

— Cath World 173:234 Je '51 240w

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 18 '51 550w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Janeway
Christian Science Monitor p9 Mr 31 '51 600w

Kirkus 18:659 N 1 '50 190w

"In this confusing (both as to construction and style) novel . . . Saroyan seems curiously dated in his subject material and his approach to the problem." George Freedley

Library J 76:180 F 1 '51 150w

" 'Rock Wagram' is a considered commentary upon human life. It has seriousness, humor, dignity. It is not entirely a finished or successful work, but it is nevertheless well worth a careful reading." Gene Baro

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Mr 25 '51 750w

Reviewed by Nelson Algren
N Y Times p5 Mr 18 '51 450w

New Yorker 27:103 Mr 24 '51 130w

Reviewed by William Hogan
San Francisco Chronicle p22 Mr 15 '51 600w

"There can be no question that Mr. Saroyan is sentimental, yet at times—unfortunately few in this book—he can write a scene so wildly and gloriously sentimental that it becomes absurd and even ungrateful to say, 'Saroyan is sentimental.' As to the italicized ruminations there can be little question that they are occasionally trenchant. . . There can also be little question that a good many of these ruminations to anyone who does not fly on Mr. Saroyan's special beam are downright nonsensical and not in the least profound." John Brooks

Sat R of Lit 34:13 Mr 24 '51 800w

SAROYAN, WILLIAM. Tracy's tiger; drawings by Henry Koerner. 143p $2.50 Doubleday

51-13965

"A short fable about love, with a whimsical and inconsistent tiger for a hero and two ingenuous young people, Thomas Tracy and Laura Luthy, for the lovers." New Yorker

Booklist 48:126 D 1 '51

Reviewed by Chad Walsh
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 18 '51 400w

Reviewed by Elizabeth McLaughlin
Christian Science Monitor p13 Ja 3 '52 450w

Kirkus 19:456 Ag 15 '51 170w

"Mr. Saroyan has left room for everybody to enjoy Tracy, even a man who has never heard of Freud. As for Tracy's tiger, this is to remind you that when your tiger, like your slip, is showing, you are the last to know it." Thomas Sugrue
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 N 18 '51 550w

"This is prattle with a bite to it. A twinkling playlet with sly jabs at human pretense, vanity, self-delusion. A little boy's world where illusions cause no raised eyebrows and big ideas are suggested by a casual wave of the imagination. Some readers may feel that Saroyan pathos is close to bathos and that these are the mannerisms of an adult sprite who is anxious to prove he can still shake a leg. Nevertheless, 'Tracy's Tiger,' with congenial pen and ink sketches by Henry Koerner, is worth the time it takes." James Kelly
N Y Times p5 N 11 '51 320w

New Yorker 27:161 N 10 '51 30w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p20 D 18 '51 800w

"It is all supposed to be very delightful, moving, and of course meaningful. There are undoubtedly many readers who will continue to discover these qualities flowering in the sugary atmosphere of Mr. Saroyan's fables. The rest of us will have to settle for the occasional witty conceit and happy turn of phrase which the author still throws off now and then. The drawings of Harry Koerner have a genuine charm." E. J. Fitzgerald
Sat R of Lit 34:72 N 17 '51 320w

Springf'd Republican p41A D 9 '51 80w

SARTRE, JEAN PAUL. Troubled sleep; tr. from the French by Gerard Hopkins [Eng title: Iron in the Soul]. (The roads to freedom, v3) 421p $3.50 Knopf

50-58029

The third in a four-volume series of novels about modern France. This book describes the reactions of a group of people to the news of the fall of France in June, 1940. For earlier books in the series, Age of Reason, and Reprieve, see Book Review Digest 1947.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 187:88 F '51 440w

Reviewed by Edmund Fuller
Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ja 28 '51 450w

Reviewed by Ruth Chapin
Christian Science Monitor p11 F 1 '51 850w

"A powerful and compelling book and a grim reminder."
Kirkus 18:682 N 15 '50 240w

"Readers not repelled by Sartre's detailed account of some ignoble and squalid behavior in this 'paradise of despair' will find the novel to be a psychological and historical commentary of considerable power." H. W. Hart
Library J 75:2150 D 15 '50 90w

Reviewed by H. I'A. Fausset
Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 4 '50 230w

Reviewed by Paolo Milano
Nation 172:136 F 10 '51 1000w

"The virtues of Sartre are superbly exemplified in Troubled Sleep. He deals with world problems from a seriously taken philosophical viewpoint. He is a historian and a topnotch reporter; he is a psychologist who can pink a man or woman in a few deft phrases; he is a born story-teller; he is a poet-dramatist whose settings and dialogue are fiercely graphic." Jacques Le Clercq
+ New Repub 124:21 My 28 '51 800w

Reviewed by John Raymond
New Statesman & Nation 40:304 S 23 '50 650w

"No recent French writer has been more successful with so difficult a theme. Camus's humanity is as penetrating but lacks Sartre's warmth, while Gide, where he struck a similar chord, as in 'The Immoralist,' had less to say, though he said it, admittedly, more gracefully. Finally, it may be interesting to observe that Sartre often communicates his message better in fiction than in straightforward exposition." Frederic Morton
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ja 21 '51 1400w

"Outside of Sartre's work it would be difficult to find more unpleasant scenes than in his latest novel, but within his work it would be impossible to find so good a novel. . . The skillful novelist, who is also a dramatist and a philosopher of no mean importance, again uses the same techniques of simultaneity and of stream of consciousness, broken by vivid dialogue. Yet there is less artifice here than in the earlier volumes." Justin O'Brien
+ N Y Times p5 Ja 21 '51 650w

Reviewed by Brendan Gill
New Yorker 26:101 F 10 '51 1400w

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 4 '51 450w

"The best novel yet written on the Promethean events of June 1940. No other book gives such insight into the anguished feelings of the French as they passed from apathy to consciousness of their dignity as men revolting against fate, accepting their solidarity with other men—wretched, but lucid and free fighters. The translation, which had to expurgate the text here and there, is commendable, but the rendering of the title, 'La Mort dans l'Ame' is at best a distortion. The presentation of the book is worthy of all praise." Henri Peyre
+ Sat R of Lit 34:9 Ja 20 '51 900w

"Iron in the Soul is partly successful undoubtedly. An almost uncanny feeling of the immensity of human life comes off it at times. But not always. The method has severe limitations. Why, for instance, should one ever stop going on and on and on like this? And yet if one doesn't stop, how wearisome it all becomes, how it begins to defeat its own end, as in the last section of the book where monotony reduces Brunet's experiences almost to insignificance." Robert Kee
+ — Spec 184:224 Ag 18 '50 310w

Time 57:84 F 5 '51 650w

"The confident assertion of M. Sartre's publishers that a reader need not be familiar with the earlier volumes to appreciate Iron in the Soul requires some qualification. References are made to unexplained previous connexions between most of the characters, and the relevance of some figures introduced and then neglected can be understood only by reference to the earlier volumes. It is true, however, that Iron in the Soul has a unity of its own; the whole book is a passionate, powerful, ironic analysis of the psychology of defeat."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p513 Ag 18 '50 480w

SATURDAY EVENING POST (periodical). Cartoons; ed. by John Bailey. 190p $3 Dutton

741.5 Caricatures and cartoons 50-13744

"Approximately 200 cartoons published in the Saturday Evening Post during the past five years, representing the work of 62 cartoonists and varying in humor according to taste." Booklist

Booklist 47:57 O 1 '50

"Here are some thoroughly enlivening sketches of the American scene which should have their place in the humor section."
+ Kirkus 18:495 Ag 15 '50 80w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 D 3 '50 130w

Reviewed by Allan Worth
San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 26 '50 80w

Wis Lib Bul 46:19 O '50

SAUER, JULIA LINA. Light at Tern Rock; il. by Georges Schreiber. 62p $2.50 Viking 51-13389

Ronnie and his Aunt Martha agreed to spend the first two weeks of December at the Tern Rock lighthouse, in order to give the regular keeper a holiday. Aunt Martha and her husband had lived at the lighthouse fourteen years, so she knew the ropes. The first two weeks were fine, but the 15th of December came and went and no returning keeper. The story is of Ronnie's disappointment and Aunt Martha's reaction to a Christmas spent on Tern Rock. Grades 4-6.

Booklist 48:72 O 15 '51

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p41 D 2 '51 150w

"Tells a beautiful story." E. C. Ince
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 4 '51 80w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '51

+ Horn Bk 27:416 D '51 90w

Kirkus 19:388 Ag 1 '51 160w

"Julia L. Sauer has again captured in words the delight of a perfect moment." Alice Fedder
+ Library J 76:1641 O 15 '51 50w

"Recommended." B. M. Gantt
+ Library J 76:2014 D 1 '51 90w

"This is a fine short story for boys and girls of about ten to twelve and a most unusual Christmas one to read aloud to a sea-loving family." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 N 4 '51 180w

"This is a quiet story, lacking in action, and will be chiefly appreciated by thoughtful readers who are receptive to its poetic sense of the sea." E. L. Buell
N Y Times p48 D 2 '51 110w

"As in her 'Fog Magic,' Miss Sauer's wording sets an atmosphere that is strongly reinforced here by Georges Schreiber's beautiful drawings."
+ Sat R of Lit 34:56 N 10 '51 160w

Wis Lib Bul 47:260 N '51

SAUNDERS, ARETAS ANDREWS. Guide to bird songs; descriptions and diagrams of the songs and singing habits of land birds and selected species of shore birds. rev & enl ed 307p $3 Doubleday

598.2 Bird song. Birds—U.S. 51-10766

"'The greater part of this new edition is printed from the original plates, and therefore unchanged. New material, treating species that were not in the original edition, is added at the back of the book.'—Preface. New material omits descriptions of the birds, and gives only songs or call notes. Includes some shore birds and hawks." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1935. Index.

Booklist 47:403 Jl 15 '51

"The book is a most useful field guide for both beginner and expert in the identification of bird songs." A. C. Ames
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Je 3 '51 140w

Kirkus 19:220 Ap 15 '51 220w

Wis Lib Bul 47:161 Je '51

SAUNDERS, EDITH. Prodigal father. 257p il $4 Longmans

B or 92 Dumas, Alexandre, 1802-1870. Dumas, Alexandre, 1824-1895. Duplessis, Marie 51-12376

"'Triple biography' of the Alexandre Dumas, père and fils, and of the courtesan Marie Duplessis who, as 'La Dame aux Camèlias,' was to become a part of nineteenth-century literary tradition." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"Miss Saunders has an eye for individuality or perhaps it is just a scrupulousness for accuracy. The information is deftly assembled and though dramatised, it is not melodramatised. The nostalgia is sustained and a bull-fight benevolently thrown in to make up the weight." Anthony Curtis
+ New Statesman & Nation 42:502 N 3 '51 550w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 S 16 '51 170w

"The book suffers from a lack of continuity. Too many extraneous characters are introduced, often to the detriment of the main theme, but on the whole the book makes entertaining reading." Frances Winwar
+ — N Y Times p12 S 30 '51 350w

"It all makes, as might be expected, lively and fairly absorbing reading, especially since the author has plunged herself into the fustian background of the era, which she presents with a sensible amount of detachment."
+ New Yorker 27:120 S 29 '51 120w

Spec 187:584 N 2 '51 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p646 O 12 '51 900w

SAUNDERSON, MONT HARRIS. Western stock ranching. 247p il $5 Univ. of Minn.

636.2 Live stock. Agriculture—Economic aspects Agr50-469

"This book covers ranching, from land use to keeping books. The author, an economist from the U. S. Forest Service, confines himself to presenting the facts and avoids the controversial problems of the public lands except for a mild statement of the issues." San Francisco Chronicle

Booklist 47:152 D 15 '50

San Francisco Chronicle p30 D 10 '50 80w

"This is a sober, skilled discussion of ranch economics that will be most distressing to devotees of Hopalong Cassidy. . . Such a handbook for ranchers has been needed for a long time. It should also be of interest to the considerable group of doctors, lawyers, and 'merchant chiefs' who are constantly threatening to 'throw it all up, buy a ranch, and settle into the bucolic bliss' of raising livestock." R. W. Howard
+ Sat R of Lit 34:29 My 5 '51 270w

SAW, RUTH LYDIA. Vindication of metaphysics; a study in the philosophy of Spinoza. 174p $2 Macmillan

199.492 Spinoza, Benedictus de. Metaphysics

"Miss Saw, who teaches at the University of London, asserts that the philosophy of Spinoza is both true and important and that it can serve in addition, in the words of her title, as a 'vindication of metaphysics' against the current detractors of that discipline." Sat R of Lit

Sat R of Lit 34:37 S 22 '51 160w

"Dr. Saw presents Spinoza mainly in her own terminology and from her own point of view. Although she has evidently meditated on Spinoza long and appreciatively, we may have some doubts about this method. Spinoza is so outstanding a figure that he seems to demand an exposition in his own terms before criticism or modification begins; here the distinction is not made sufficiently clear between what Spinoza actually held and what Dr. Saw accepts from Spinoza."
Times [London] Lit Sup p297 My 11 '51 450w

SAYERS, MRS FRANCES (CLARKE). Ginny and Custard; il. by Eileen Evans. 128p $2 Viking 51-13570

Story of a little New York girl who spent a year in Los Angeles with her father and mother, and her beloved cat named Custard.

Booklist 48:150 D 15 '51

"I enjoyed the story of Ginny; and the book left with me a feeling of really having had a happy time myself in Los Angeles, so well does Mr. Sayers picture the city." J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews

+ Horn Bk 27:331 S '51 90w
Kirkus 19:438 Ag 15 '51 90w

"Many who enjoyed 'Sally Tait,' the story of a nine-year-old in Texas, will find this companion book even better. Californians will enjoy Ginny's comparisons with New York, and vice versa. Mrs. Sayers, the distinguished head of children's work for the New York Public Library, brings together on the pages her understanding of children, her love of books and people of all sorts, and her affection for many aspects of California." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 N 11 '51 230w

"Mrs. Sayers could not write a sentence that did not have charm. Her people, as always, are just the kind we would like to know. The book, as a whole, however, seems to lack the inspiration of 'Sally Tait' and 'Tagalong Tooloo.' And Ginny's day-by-day doings do not seem quite as delightful as Sally's. It is a beautifully made book with just right black-and-white line drawings." Phyllis Fenner
+ — N Y Times p30 N 11 '51 150w
San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 11 '51 100w
Wis Lib Bul 47:260 N '51

SAYRES, PAUL, ed. Food marketing. 335p il $5 McGraw 658.9414 Marketing. Food industry and trade 51-556

"Twenty-two leaders of the food industry tell how the nation's biggest and most complex business works, and why." (Subtitle) Partial contents: The world's biggest business, by Paul Sayres; Mass marketing arrives, by L. A. Warren; Independents on the band wagon, by Patsy D'Agostino; Super markets are here to stay, by W. H. Albers; The contributions of the regional chains, by L. P. Shield; What about wagon route selling? by W. A. Gerbosi; Wholesalers modernize and merchandise, by Nathan Cummings; How today's food manufacturer sells his goods, by J. S. Johnson; Advertising tells the story, by Walter Weir; An industry behind the meat counter, by Wesley Hardenbergh; Frozen foods: a marketing case history, by G. L. Mentley. Index.

Booklist 47:268 Ap 1 '51
Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 76:871 My 15 '51 110w

SCANDINAVIAN plays of the twentieth century; 3d ser; tr. from the Swedish by Henry Alexander and Llewellyn Jones. 195p $3 American-Scandinavian foundation; Princeton univ. press
839.508 Scandinavian drama—Translations into English (44-40224)

"Three plays are preceded by an introduction explaining the dramatist's technique. Contents: The Swedenhielms, by Hjalmar Bergman; Let man live, by Pär Lagerkvist; The condemned, by Stig Dagerman." Booklist

---

Booklist 48:62 O 15 '51
Sat R of Lit 34:34 S 29 '51 320w

SCANLAN, ROBERT H., and ROSENBAUM, ROBERT. Introduction to the study of aircraft vibration and flutter. 428p il $7.50 Macmillan
629.13236 Vibration (aeronautics) 51-10864

"An introduction to a specialized though highly important aspect of aeronautical engineering. It is designed as a first book in the subject and therefore it deals mainly with classical theory and problems. However, there is a chapter on sweptback wings and some discussion in the appendices of analysis of vibration and flutter under conditions of compressible flow. The mathematics employed includes matrix algebra. The book is suited to upperclass and graduate engineering students and to professional engineers in need of an introduction to this special field. The bibliography runs to twenty-two pages." N Y New Tech Bks

---

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 76:1134 Jl '51 100w
N Y New Tech Bks 36:33 My '51

SCARNE, JOHN. Magic tricks. 256p il $2.95 Crown
793.8 Tricks. Conjuring 51-12004

"Illustrated instructions on preparation, patter, and performance of 200 general magic tricks which involve the use of simple equipment. Feats of mind reading, hypnotism, and fortunetelling are included." Booklist

---

Booklist 48:97 N 15 '51
San Francisco Chronicle p21 N 25 '51 150w

SCHACHNER, NATHAN. Thomas Jefferson; a biography. 2v 1070p il $12 Appleton
B or 92 Jefferson, Thomas 51-13987

This biography of Thomas Jefferson is based on all the documentary evidence recently brought to light. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:124 D 1 '51
Reviewed by Avery Craven
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 N 25 '51 500w

"The biography itself, over a thousand pages of text and documentation, is an amazing compilation of fact, which for sheer informational value alone will make it indispensable for any library of American history. It is perhaps unfortunate that the great compression necessary even in a study of these dimensions has left little opportunity for literary expression and extended interpretation of many of the main events. The text is literally fact after fact and while it may not make for entertaining reading in the sense of Sandburg's Abraham Lincoln, it is extremely interesting, superlatively informative and has the highly desirable quality of great objectivity. . . It is regrettable that a scholarly attainment such as this biography, which is certain to remain a definitive work, could not have been provided with more carefully prepared and detailed references." Herbert Cahoon
+ — Library J 76:1927 N 15 '51 250w

"An extremely well written narrative that consistently holds reader-interest by action, color, drama and irony. . . Nevertheless, the Schachner 'Jefferson,' in spite of manifold virtues of detail, does not add up to a successful biography of the great Virginian. And here is a paradox. If this book had been published as recently as ten years ago it could then have been described as the 'most comprehensive,' and the 'most scholarly life' of Jefferson yet written." Douglass Adair
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 D 9 '51 1300w

"Mr. Schachner's account, while not an original study or an independent appraisal, is a story clearly told. . . In our time when so much has been done on the subject of this biography, it is a legitimate expectation that the reader of a new study will encounter not only a well-written chronological account of Jefferson's life but an illumination of the areas of his personality and career that were hitherto marshy, imperfectly known, or downright obscure. This expectation is not entirely appeased by Mr. Schachner's study." Adrienne Koch
N Y Times p6 D 2 '51 1150w
New Yorker 27:73 Ja 5 '52 160w

"Two substantial and well-written volumes, that cannot fail to interest and instruct the general reader." C. M. Wiltse
+ Sat R of Lit 34:17 D 15 '51 800w

SCHACK, WILLIAM, ed. Manual of plastics and resins, in encyclopedia form; ed. with the cooperation of members of the Society of plastics engineers; advisory board: Russell B. Akin [and others]. 547p il $10 Chemical pub. co.

668.403 Plastics—Dictionaries and encyclopedias 50-12902

"A reference book for the desks of technical librarians and practically everyone else whose interests or work require information from time to time on plastics materials." N Y New Tech Bks

"This publication in the form of a brief encyclopedia covers rather well the technology of plastics and resinous materials. The author has had the help of a large number of experts in this field. Selected bibliography is given for certain highly technical subjects. The descriptive matter for the terms discussed is clear, concise, and relatively accurate. An extensive list of American, foreign, and obsolete trade names is given in the back of the volume together with charts on machining data for the various types of plastics." F. W. Reinhart

+ Chem & Eng N 29:2953 Jl 16 '51 120w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:12 Ja '51

SCHACKNE, STEWART, and DRAKE, N. D'ARCY. Oil for the world. 128p il $2.50 Harper

665.5 Petroleum 50-10842

Summary of the subject of oil, how it is formed geologically, how found, drilled, transported, and used.

Booklist 47:176 Ja 1 '51

"The authors are Standard Oil men, but the book is a conscientious outline of the whole industry, and no mention is made of any commercial company." W. McG.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ja 28 '51 110w

SCHAPIRO, JACOB SALWYN. World in crisis; political and social movements in the twentieth century. 429p $5 McGraw

909.82 World politics. Twentieth century 50-12049

This analysis of recent trends in social, economic and political events is an attempt to answer the questions of the mid-twentieth century: why has the world been divided into two camps, what can be done about it? The author is professor of history, emeritus, in the City College of New York. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by C. F. Mullett

Am Hist R 56:629 Ap '51 400w

"While Schapiro says nothing which is new and which has not been said by others (especially by Hans Kohn), whatever he says is presented ably. The work is done with the artist's broad brush rather than with the historian's microscope and fine pencil. He has assembled numberless historical facts in a coherent pattern; hence the work has value by presenting contemporary history in a readable and meaningful formula." J. S. Roucek

+ Ann Am Acad 273:282 Ja '51 440w

Canadian Forum 31:44 My '51 260w

Reviewed by E. C. Helmreich

Current Hist 20:35 Ja '51 1350w

"The theme of the book is that the hope of the world lies in social democracy under American leadership. The passionate sincerity with which the author hews to this theme and lets the chips fall where they will is precisely the quality that turns a monument of scholarly analysis into a work of living scholarship." Felix Grendon

+ Nation 172:39 Ja 13 '51 1250w

"The author writes as a historian and he treats all that is past—even that which is only a few years or months past—as history. The result is, at its best, a way of putting into perspective events which have seemed formless and disconnected. But the price of this gain is the temptation to make sweeping judgments upon developments too recent and tentative to have taken final shape." August Heckscher

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 F 4 '51 450w

"This is a heartening book to read in a confused and critical hour. It reminds us how much we have at stake, how clear-cut the issues are despite all blurring of the outlines, how strongly our democratic foundations stand despite the global convulsions of the last few decades." Geoffrey Bruun

+ Sat R of Lit 34:13 F 3 '51 650w

Reviewed by Hans Kohn

+ Survey 87:93 F '51 270w

SCHAPPES, MORRIS URMAN, ed. Documentary history of the Jews in the United States, 1654-1875; ed. with notes and introductions by [the editor] pref. by Joshua Bloch. 762p $6 Citadel

296 Jews in the United States 50-58013

"This book represents the product of years of intensive research in an area of American historiography, so far sadly neglected by most writers. . . In the 159 documents that comprise the study, the editor illustrates effectively many aspects of Jewish life—social, economic, political, religious, legal, cultural, and philanthropic—from colonial times to the era of reconstruction. A considerable number of these sources are printed here for the first time. Mr. Schappes has also provided 170 pages of careful notations, including a wealth of biographic, bibliographic, and other pertinent data. Each of the documents is preceded by introductory comments which form the unifying frame for the whole and tie it together." (Am Hist R) Index.

Reviewed by Frank Rosenthal

Am Hist R 56:902 Jl '51 500w

"Those who are not frightened by many dry documents, written quite frequently in quaint English, will discover a large mass of fascinating material. . . The book is extremely valuable for its documentation, for the 170 pages of scholarly notes, and for its many illuminating comments by the editor. But it must be read with care." H. U. Ribalow

+ Sat R of Lit 34:11 Ag 25 '51 600w

School & Society 73:111 F 17 '51 40w

SCHARFF, ROBERT. Plywood projects for the home craftsman. 180p il $3.95 McGraw

684 Carpentry 51-5499

"In this book the various available types of plywood are described, then general operations such as gluing, nailing, joint treatment and bending are discussed. Six chapters are devoted to specific projects. In these there are directions and some working drawings. Finally, there is a chapter on various methods of finishing plywood." Library J

"Should prove useful in practically any public library, even though many home craftsmen will wish that more working drawings had been included." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 76:1939 N 15 '51 100w

"It all sounds like fun." E. J.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 19 '51 60w

SCHARY, DORE. Case history of a movie; as told to Charles Palmer. 257p il $3 Random house

791.4 Moving pictures 50-10530

"[An account] of how one movie was made. The movie, 'The Next Voice You Hear,' was produced by Schary for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and he takes you through every imaginable step in its production." N Y Times

Booklist 47:152 D 15 '50

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 D 10 '50 270w

Kirkus 18:624 O 1 '50 150w

"Brilliantly written and clear analysis. . . Highly recommended for both circulation and reference collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 75:2014 N 15 '50 30w

"You will find the book a fascinating study of the way Hollywood's top professionals behave on the job." James Hilton
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 Mr 18 '51 750w

"If you like movies, and even if you don't, you will probably be entertained, to say nothing of encyclopedically instructed, by this account. . . Always [the author] retains a clear head for what needs clearing up, a sharp eye for color, and an ear for Hollywood speech that is extraordinary. . . To this reviewer, it gives a picture of movies that is almost definitive, with a singularly candid viewpoint." J. M. Cain
+ N Y Times p3 N 5 '50 500w

"There isn't much doubt that it will be read with profit in Mr. Schary's home territory. . . But before accepting Mr. Schary's total view one must remember his atypicality. His method of operation has not yet been generally accepted, although men like Mankiewicz, Zanuck, Kramer, and Brackett have been making themselves felt of late, with refreshing results in the theatres. And even Mr. Schary accepts the dictum that movies are made primarily for the under-thirty audience." Hollis Alpert
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:27 D 16 '50 550w

School & Society 72:448 D 30 '50 30w

Reviewed by Arthur Knight
Theatre Arts 35:2 Mr '51 300w

SCHEINFELD, AMRAM. New You and heredity; with special editing in the medical genetics sections by Morton D. Schweitzer, and additional aid by others; il. by the author. 616p $5 Lippincott

575.1 Heredity 51-9156

"The original volume published in 1939, selected by the 'Scientific American' as one of the 20 leading popular science books of the half century, has been revised and amplified, with three-quarters of the text entirely new and more than 40 new drawings, photographs and charts. Latest findings on inheritance are covered." (Springf'd Republican) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1939. Bibliography. Index.

"This is an outstanding example of the successful popularization of a difficult subject." S. L. Washburn
+ Am Soc R 16:577 Ag '51 650w

Booklist 47:190 Ja 15 '51

"If clinical, this is always readable and applicable, sometimes personal, sometimes anecdotal, and is based on the most recent statistical data available in the fields of social (Kinsey) and medical research."
+ Kirkus 18:629 O 1 '50 160w

"A very readable book for the high school library and one which should find a place in public and college libraries as well." Nathaniel Stewart
+ Library J 75:2151 D 15 '50 110w

"Without doubt the best available discussion of this all-important subject for the layman."
+ New Repub 125:21 S 17 '51 60w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 F 25 '51 120w

"This is a splendid book, a masterpiece of popular scientific writing. Amram Scheinfeld is not a great stylist but he is a distinguished clarifier of difficult scientific subjects. His book is on human genetics—an extremely important subject, which every well-educated person should have firmly in his grasp." Ashley Montagu
+ Sat R of Lit 34:12 Mr 24 '51 550w

Springf'd Republican p8B Ja 7 '51 120w

SCHELLING, THOMAS C. National income behavior; an introduction to algebraic analysis. 291p $4.50 McGraw

339.3 Income 51-2247

"A one-semester course not requiring any previous mathematical training, to serve as an introduction to mathematical method and as an analytical survey of national-income behavior which is presented as the resultant of interacting relationships. Discusses wage-price and other distributive problems, international-income, and dynamic problems of investment and inventory behavior. Bibliographical references." Library J

Reviewed by H. M. Somers
Am Econ R 41:964 D '51 800w

"It will require a well-trained specialist to appreciate the economic significance of many of Schelling's results, especially those derived from the solution of numerous simultaneous equations and including large numbers of coefficients whose values are undetermined. In short, like most skeletons, this one is short of flesh. The reader must also be his own statistician or econometrician. Schelling's algebra has run well ahead of his statistics as well as his economics." M. Bronfenbrenner
Ann Am Acad 278:214 N '51 650w

"The entire book is at a high level of competence. It is one of those rare 'elementary' books which present original material here and there (not all of what is new in print in this book has existed in oral form), and which will be suggestive to advanced students as well as to less advanced ones. It demonstrates that there is no royal road to mathematics or economics; though it is lucid, it is compact and exacting; it must be studied, not read." E. E. Hagen
+ J Pol Econ 59:550 D '51 700w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 76:871 My 15 '51 60w

SCHERCHEN, HERMANN. Nature of music [tr. from the German by William Mann]. 193p $3.75 Regnery

780.9 Music—Philosophy and esthetics [51-6406]

"A collection of essays and jottings. [The author] begins with an essay on the history of acoustics, an annotated catalogue of seventeenth-century French scholar-scientists, whose succession culminates in the figures of Joseph Sauveur ('the Newton of acoustics'), Fontenelle and Rameau. The second essay deals with Bach's music and contains a full analysis of the final chorale of the Art of Fugue. . . The third essay deals with Beethoven, his extension of the language of music and his novel use of the instruments of the orchestra." (Times [London] Lit Sup) No index.

"Perceptiveness, sensitivity to musical meaning, courage to let the sensory experience take over and the intellect retire, exquisite taste—these qualities mark the strength of this unusual book. . . A measure of [the author's] naivete as an historian lies in the first paragraph of the introduction where he says that the real significance of the 18th century lies 'in the fact that then for the first time music achieved complete maturity.' But don't let a weak frame-work deprive readers of Scherchen's understanding of the world of sound. Well translated from the German of the 1946 Winterthur (Swiss) edition. Many of the musical illustrations are small and lack clarity." C. K. Miller
+ — Library J 76:1426 S 15 '51 150w

Reviewed by Andrew Porter
New Statesman & Nation 41:375 Mr 31 '51 250w

"This is a strange book which the celebrated conductor has launched upon the musical world. From a strictly rational and, for that matter, musicological point of view its whole outline and texture appear almost disarmingly improvisational or perhaps, as Edward Dent in his enlightening preface puts it, even bewildering. Nevertheless, the reader who does not mind fighting his way to the depths of Scherchen's investigation and is willing to jump over centuries and fill in the gaps with conclusions from his own background will be rewarded by an abundance of stimulating suggestions." Rudolph Reti
+ Sat R of Lit 34:29 D 15 '51 370w

SCHERCHEN, HERMANN—Continued

"Mr. William Mann's translation represents a severe pruning of the original German and the result is fluent and readable English; but no translation will persuade the English reader to do more than pick his way gingerly through this mass of suet in search of the few, rather small, plums."
Times [London] Lit Sup p224 Ap 13 '51 700w

SCHERF, MARGARET. Green plaid pants. 186p $2.50 Doubleday 51-11444

Detective story.

Kirkus 19:237 My 1 '51 70w

"One of those high-spirited and occasionally amusing mysteries which on the whole are something of a strain on the reader."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Jl 29 '51 120w

"Though some of Margaret Scherf's earlier books have seemed a trifle chaotic and even a trifle cruel, this latest one is grand fun—fine frenzied nonsense on Anglo-American relations, the woes of interior decorating, and the foibles of people in and out of love. Murder and smuggling are stirred in only to make the mixture a little more agreeably absurd." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p13 Jl 29 '51 110w

"A cheerful, if unlikely, story, fair enough for those who prefer the emphasis on comedy rather than on bloodshed."
New Yorker 27:68 Jl 7 '51 120w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p21 Jl 8 '51 70w

"Delightfully screwy, casually plausible." Kathleen Sproul
+ Sat R of Lit 34:36 Ag 11 '51 60w
Springf'd Republican p5D Jl 29 '51 80w

SCHEVILL, JAMES. Sherwood Anderson; his life and work. 360p il $4 Univ. of Denver press

B or 92 Anderson, Sherwood 51-10225

A biography of Sherwood Anderson in which the author has tried to sift out the legend about his subject in order to get at the man himself. A selected bibliography. Index.

Bookmark 10:182 My '51 30w

"A fine, unbiased biography of an author whose style, material, and personal life were the subject of much controversy during the now fabulous Twenties." M. P. Corcoran
+ Cath World 174:79 O '51 210w

Reviewed by H. N. Smith
Nation 172:472 My 19 '51 550w

"Though Mr. Schevill's defense of Anderson breaks down, his portrait does not. The Sherwood Anderson who emerges from these pages is not a tragic figure, but he is a pathetic one—a struggling dreamer whose moments of complete illumination were few. But out of those few came at least one book, and a handful of stories, which have taken their rightful place on the slowly growing shelf of American classics." Delancey Ferguson
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 S 16 '51 600w

"This full-scale biography has the particular excellence of presenting all the most forceful and influential—and wonderfully conflicting—opinions of Sherwood Anderson (1876-1941), and his work. In the course of that scholarly and arduous exploration Mr. Schevill occasionally turns up material that makes Anderson look foolish. More frequently, perhaps, he merely allows Anderson's most fervent admirers and most virulent detractors to look equally like fools." Charles Poore
+ N Y Times p21 Ap 8 '51 480w

"A coherent and understanding life story. It is less arresting than the legend—the small-town poor boy who became a successful manufacturer and then, one night, walked out of that life into Chicago's bohemia and became a great writer—but it makes a lot more sense. The critical portions are sound but a little pedestrian."
+ — New Yorker 27:141 Ap 14 '51 150w
Springf'd Republican p10D Ap 15 '51 430w
Time 57:116 Ap 16 '51 280w

SCHILDER, PAUL. Psychoanalysis, man and society; arranged by Lauretta Bender. 382p $4 Norton

131.4 Psychoanalysis. Psychology, Pathological 51-6358

"Before his untimely death in 1940, Paul Schilder was one of the country's most brilliant psychoanalytical psychiatrists. Fortunately he left many scientific papers, and this volume is a collection of some of them, edited by his wife and associate, Lauretta Bender. The book supports Dr. Schilder's conviction that while 'psychiatry is addressed primarily to the individual and his specific problems,' it must 'not see the individual as an isolated unit, but as a part of the community.' The result is a study of the individual in relation to society from the viewpoint of a psychoanalyst." N Y Times

"Since the papers were written for professional readers, they are not intended for a reader unfamiliar with the language and theories of psychoanalysis." D. W. Fiske
Chicago Sunday Tribune p17 O 7 '51 450w

"It is stimulating, pungent and direct." F. G. Slaughter
+ N Y Times p18 O 28 '51 300w

"Although Dr. Schilder's work as a whole is somewhat damaged by a faulty understanding of Marxism and by his eclecticism, his individual essays remain illuminating and seminal for anyone concerned with those as yet virginal frontiers where, it is assumed as well as hoped, the disciplines of sociology, psychoanalysis, and cultural anthropology will eventually meet." A. F.
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 11 '51 400w

SCHIRMER, MATHILDA, ed. Latin-American leaders; il. by Dirk Gringhuis. (Americans in action) 185p $1.60 Beckley-Cardy

920 South America—Biography

"Supplementary material on the lives of ten Latin-Americans who have made great contributions to the civilization and development of Latin America. Contents: Miguel Hidalgo y Castilla; Francisco de Miranda; José de San Martín; Bernardo O'Higgins; Simón Bolívar; Antonio José de Sucre; José Bonifácio de Andrada e Silva; Domingo Faustino Sarmiento; José Martí; Eloy Alfaro. Grades 6-8." Booklist

Booklist 47:261 Mr 15 '51

"As all of these lives are written to pattern, literary distinction is lacking, but the vigorous presentation of Latin-America's fighters for freedom (Bolívar, San Martín, Martí, etc.) should create real interest. Sturdy binding. Recommended for ages 9-12." A. B. McCreary
+ Library J 76:416 Mr 1 '51 70w
School & Society 73:64 Ja 27 '51 30w
Wis Lib Bul 47:125 My '51

SCHLATTER, RICHARD BULGER. Private property; the history of an idea. 283p $2.50 Rutgers univ. press

335.01 Property. Natural law 51-4256

A discussion by an American historian of the history of the idea of personal property. Index.

"Scholarly and valuable book." Norman MacKenzie
+ New Statesman & Nation 41:568 My 19 '51 600w

"A scholarly discussion." I. B.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 S 30 '51 50w

"The book is addressed to those who have understanding without any considerable knowledge of the subject. It is historical, expository, didactic; it does not attempt to make any original contribution to political theory. The dangers of this sort of approach are well known. The attempt to shed light on problems may lead to over-simplification, which does not so much explain the problem as explain it away. Such books act as a substitute for thinking instead of as an encouragement. Professor Schlatter has steered skilfully clear of these dangers. His language and his argument are clear, but he does not belittle his subject. He illuminates but does not eliminate."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p489 Ag 3 '51 3650w

SCHLESINGER, ARTHUR MEIER, 1888- . American as reformer. 127p $2.25 Harvard univ. press
301.1535 Reformers. Social problems. U.S.—Social conditions 50-14677
For descriptive note see Annual for 1950.

"It is always the occupational disease of the reviewer to criticize the author for not having written a different book. Even though it contains less than a hundred pages of text, we can be glad for this one and use it to stimulate thinking about America and about reform and reformers." David Riesman
+ Am J Soc 56:597 My '51 600w
Am Pol Sci R 45:240 Mr '51 50w

"As Professor Schlesinger states things, they seem very simple indeed, and he usually selects instances familiar not only to the student but also to the general reader. But a careful rereading of the little book reveals his conclusions on some very controversial points." Preston Slosson
+ Ann Am Acad 273:222 Ja '51 290w

Reviewed by J. H. Titus
Churchman 165:15 My 15 '51 80w
Current Hist 20:104 F '51 60w
Foreign Affairs 30:160 O '51 10w

"His material is, for the most part, familiar. . . Less familiar is the author's wise and felicitous handling of the material. This relatively short essay covers and relates a remarkable number of topics." Louis Filler
+ New Eng Q 24:113 Mr '51 650w

"The scholar, turning to Mr. Schlesinger's work for new light on the history of American reform movements, will be disappointed. While the author has at no point concealed his opinions, he has not advanced a thesis to explain American reforms and reformers, nor has he provided the material from which such a thesis might be developed. On the other hand, The American as Reformer is a highly effective reminder of the importance of reform in the American past and of the threats to this tradition in our troubled present." H. C. Syrett
+ Pol Sci Q 66:157 Mr '51 240w
Times [London] Lit Sup p255 Ap 27 '51 850w

SCHLEY, STURGES MASON. Dream sinister. 280p $2.50 Morrow 50-10642
Detective story.

Bookmark 10:110 F '51 10w

Reviewed by Edith Fowke
Canadian Forum 31:214 D '51 90w

Reviewed by Drexel Drake
Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ja 7 '51 60w
Kirkus 18:572 S 15 '50 50w

"A colorful and well written mystery with tremendous suspense."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 D 31 '50 200w

"Here is an intricately plotted, smoothly written, steadily moving yarn. Toby is an intelligent, entertaining sleuth, surrounded by believable cohorts and a lively gang of crooks. All in all, a well-above-average thriller." Hillis Mills
+ N Y Times p17 D 31 '50 130w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 17 '50 90w

"Pretentious but better than most."
Sat R of Lit 33:44 N 25 '50 70w

SCHLOAT, G. WARREN. Milk for you [phot. by the author]. 74p $2 Scribner
637.1 Milk—Juvenile literature. Dairying—Juvenile literature 51-10039
Photographs and a few cartoons with simple running text give a clear explanation for young readers of how milk is made in a cow's body, how it is cared for on the farm and in the bottling plant and how it reaches the consumer, cold and fresh, just twenty-four hours after the cow has been milked.

Booklist 47:316 My 1 '51
Bookmark 10:208 Je '51

"For all children who have at some time asked the question, 'where does milk come from' and who won't take a terse 'cow' for an answer."
+ Kirkus 19:126 Mr 1 '51 100w

"Recommended for grades 4-6." E. C. Alexander
+ Library J 76:714 Ap 15 '51 60w

"The photographs are both handsome and very interesting. The Schloat boys appear often, but so do plenty of older people who work on this long process, from herdsman to laboratory assistant. The happy ending is a party with ice-cream. It really answers all a child's questions about how the milk comes and probably the first time, as to many details." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 My 27 '51 140w

Reviewed by G. O. Blough
N Y Times p18 Jl 15 '51 50w
Wis Lib Bul 47:192 Jl '51

SCHMEDDING, JOSEPH. Cowboy and Indian trader. 364p il $5 Caxton ptrs.
B or 92 Frontier and pioneer life—West 51-9436
"Describes life and people on the Southwestern ranges as they were 50 years ago. Mr. Schmedding was a cowboy in the days of the vast, unfenced open ranges and later an Indian trader when the job meant complete isolation in regions inaccessible to the white man." San Francisco Chronicle

"Good books of memoirs by old-timers are rare. . . Here we have a good one, a big fat book of detailed and racy reminiscences by a man who succeeded in two of the most interesting careers possible in the southwest." Stanley Vestal
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 4 '51 400w

"Definitely regional and documentary."
Kirkus 18:686 N 15 '50 150w

Reviewed by R. L. Neuberger
N Y Times p9 S 2 '51 380w

"The book is extremely interesting and is made more so by its many rare photographs, including some of the Hopi Snake Dance, taken before the Government placed a ban on the taking of pictures of the ritual." Lewis Vogler
+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Mr 24 '51 90w

"The period covered in Schmedding's reminiscences is the first quarter of the twentieth century—a point in Western history which has not been overworked. He writes with modesty and authenticity. There is an excellent selection of photographs."
+ Sat R of Lit 34:34 Ag 18 '51 220w

SCHMIDT, PAUL. Hitler's interpreter; ed. by R. H. C. Steed. 286p $4 Macmillan 327.43 Germany—Foreign relations. Hitler, Adolf 51-13145
"Everyone who frequented international conferences before the war was familiar with Dr.

SCHMIDT, PAUL—Continued
able interpreter on the German Foreign Office staff. His experience extended from the early days of the Weimar Republic to the end of Hitlerism; all that is covered in Dr. Schmidt's original German, but the editor of this volume, Mr. R. H. C. Steed has done wisely in confining it to the Hitler régime." (Spec) Index.

Reviewed by Melchior Palyi
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 18 '51 170w

"Dr. Schmidt's 'secrets' make entertaining reading. But his secret admiration for Hitler; for Göring's happy-go-lucky ways; for Mussolini's clear brown eyes and Roman chin—these are the real secrets which the author betrays. And these disclosures are most significant; they show a way of thinking which the West must remember has changed but little since the war. Actually Hitler's interpreter is an even better, altho unwitting, interpreter of the German people, an interpretation which bears reading and watching." Godfrey Sperling
Christian Science Monitor p9 O 13 '51 600w

Current Hist 21:357 D '51 100w

"The cuts in this, for an English reader intolerably prolix, book can only be welcomed. Equally welcome would have been a proper revision of the story by the author or the editor. Some glaring inaccuracies were pointed out in my previous review, but no notice has been taken of it by anyone concerned in producing the English edition." L. B. N.
Manchester Guardian p3 My 1 '51 150w

Nation 173:573 D 29 '51 40w

Reviewed by A. J. P. Taylor
New Statesman & Nation 41:278 Mr 10 '51 350w

Reviewed by G. A. Craig
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 D 16 '51 1450w

Reviewed by J. H. Lichtblau
N Y Times p3 O 7 '51 900w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 25 '51 230w

Reviewed by H. B. Kranz
Sat R of Lit 34:14 N 24 '51 550w

"This is a book of great interest and real importance, throwing valuable light on the tortuosities of German policy in the years when domestic events in Germany were hidden behind the battle-front. Incidentally it is very well written. Whether the translation is the work of Dr. Schmidt himself or his editor is not made clear." Francis Gower
+ Spec 185:320 Mr 9 '51 650w

Reviewed by Donald Derby
Springf'd Republican p41A D 9 '51 420w

"The book is well translated and altogether competently brought out; there are, however, rather more cuts than the preface suggests, and these cuts reduce the background value, which was necessarily unique; this was, after all, the first memoir from a professional interpreter, an involuntary, if not precisely passive, witness of a thousand 'top-secret' scenes."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p144 Mr 9 '51 120w

SCHNEIDER, DAWN E. Correlated art. 196p 88il col il $3.50 Int. textbook

372.5 Art—Study and teaching. Drawing—Instruction 51-11386

"The elementary grade teacher who teaches all subjects has little time for planning interesting activities, yet she knows that the social studies are fertile fields of education. This book is written to help such teachers in their work—add color, creativeness, and vitality to their social studies programs. The main themes introduced in this book are the community, foreign lands, classical periods, recreation, etc. But these are merely suggestions—points of departure—not ends in themselves. This emphasis on sound art principles leaves the teacher and children free to use their own ideas and interpretations." School Arts

"Altho this book is designed for the use of elementary school teachers there is no reason that parents will not find it most valuable in giving direction and thought to the often aimless and repetitive drawings of their children." Gary Sheahan
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 S 16 '51 130w

"Well-written text."
+ School Arts 51:10a S '51 110w

"A practical book for practical persons. Recommended."
+ Wis Lib Bul 47:162 Je '51

SCHNEIDER, HERMAN. Everyday machines and how they work; pictures by Jeanne Bendick. (Whittlesey house publication) 192p $2.50 McGraw

643.6 Machinery—Juvenile literature. Household appliances—Juvenile literature 50-10875

Simple explanations illustrated with simple, diagrammatic drawings which show the fundamental principles of how fountain pens write, how a coffee percolator works, why the toaster and waffle iron get hot and the electric bulb gives light, etc.

Booklist 47:143 D 1 '50

"Mr. Schneider knows all the answers and presents them in simple, clear language, with illustrations and diagrams to aid in the understanding of young readers. It is a highly usable and fascinating book which curious readers of any age will find of interest." A. L. Shea
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p17 Mr 18 '51 140w

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 13 '50 30w

"This is a fascinating book, for the author writes with clarity and with a light touch, and the illustrations add to both. Even a non-machine-minded reader, such as this reviewer, finds it hard to put the book down."
+ Horn Bk 27:42 Ja '51 120w

"A sure favorite for a large audience of budding scientists, even those who may never go farther than changing a bicycle tire; and a must for school libraries."
+ Kirkus 18:561 S 15 '50 240w

"Recommended for all libraries. Suitable for ages ten and up." E. T. Dobbins
+ Library J 75:2160 D 15 '50 70w

"It is not a book to help an adult make repairs, but one to make you more respectful of household appliances and less mystified by them. Probably suitable for junior-high age." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 F 18 '51 230w

"The amusing and informative drawings on every page contribute greatly to a clear understanding of the hundreds of devices that are so much a part of modern living." H. B. Lent
+ N Y Times p30 F 18 '51 140w

Sat R of Lit 34:48 F 17 '51 90w

SCHNEIDER, HERMAN. Everyday weather and how it works; pictures by Jeanne Bendick. (Whittlesey house publication) 189p $2.75 McGraw

551.5 Weather—Juvenile literature 51-12144

A book to help the young reader to "understand why" about all kinds of weather, with simple experiments and directions for building weather bureau instruments and keeping records.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran
Atlantic 188:101 D '51 420w

Booklist 48:17 S 1 '51

Reviewed by J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews
+ Horn Bk 27:337 S '51 70w

Kirkus 19:295 Je 15 '51 180w

"Recommended to all libraries." E. T. Dobbins
+ Library J 76:1817 N 1 '51 80w

"Here is everything the average adult would like to know, put in text and attractive sketches understandable to boys and girls of about ten to twelve. Once a teacher of aero-dynamics, Mr. Schneider now is science supervisor for New York City elementary schools. We hope he will insist on a school edition of this excellent book, and see that it is made part of elementary science teaching." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 S 9 '51 80w

N Y Times p42 N 4 '51 180w

"Attractive book."
+ Sat R of Lit 34:72 N 10 '51 100w

SCHNEIDER, HERMAN, and SCHNEIDER, MRS NINA. Plants in the city; pictures by Cynthia Koehler. (Nature in the city ser) 96p $2.50 Day

580 Botany—Juvenile literature. House plants—Juvenile literature 51-12854

A combination of botany and window gardening for grades four to seven. Line drawings show how to experiment with various plants from grapefruit and canary seeds to geraniums and several types of ivy. Includes lists of plants suited to different types of light. Index.

Booklist 48:72 O 15 '51

+ Kirkus 19:580 O 1 '51 170w

"Natural history books often seem to leave the city child out in the cold. Here at last, is a nature story book for city children. Cynthia Koehler's illustrations are clear and charming, the format attractive. This is the first in a 'Nature in the City' series. For all children's libraries in cities with populations of over 40,000." N. S. Chasteen
+ Library J 76:2014 D 1 '51 80w

"Interested parents will find many useful suggestions for beginners at indoor gardening. . . The pictures are fine, especially the final ones showing which windows, according to light, will grow which plants best. . . The integration of beginning botany is excellent." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 O 21 '51 140w

Reviewed by D. H. Jenkins
N Y Times p34 N 11 '51 130w

Springf'd Republican p14C O 28 '51 110w

SCHNEIDER, HERMAN, and SCHNEIDER, NINA. You among the stars; il. by Symeon Shimin. [56p] $2.25 Scott, W.R.

523 Astronomy—Juvenile literature 51-11793

This book is made up of colored lithographs and simple text. "Provides an introduction for children to the science of astronomy. It explains in simple terms about the round earth, the force of gravity, the sun and moon, the other planets, the stars and the Milky Way." (Springf'd Republican)

Booklist 48:38 S 15 '51

Reviewed by J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews
Horn Bk 27:337 S '51 50w

Kirkus 19:389 Ag 1 '51 130w

"Very clever presentation of our place in the universe, simply done for children. . . Recommended for all libraries working with elementary school ages." E. T. Dobbins
+ Library J 76:1433 S 15 '51 80w

"A striking picture book. . . It is beautiful in both text and art work, and really suitable for the very young." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 S 9 '51 100w

"The Schneiders have again produced a book that treats appropriate scientific material in a clear, simple and lucid manner." G. O. Blough
+ N Y Times p32 N 11 '51 60w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead
New Yorker 27:189 D 1 '51 70w

"An elementary astronomy that will appeal to little children."
+ Sat R of Lit 34:54 N 10 '51 60w

"Not at all complicated, it is for the youngster as soon as he or she becomes interested and curious about these wonders, and the illustrations are really helpful."
+ Springf'd Republican p12C Ag 26 '51 70w

SCHOEN, MAX. The man Jesus was. 271p $3 Knopf

232.9 Jesus Christ—Character 50-8980

For descriptive note see Annual for 1950.

"For Christians this book, by a scholar trained in the Jewish Orthodox faith as a rabbi, should prove an exciting experience, and it is all of that. . . Neither Jews nor Christians will be able to read this book with relish, but it may cause both Jews and Christians to ponder over the question: Who was this man Jesus, and what did he try to teach men?" S. R. Harlow
+ Christian Century 68:17 Ja 3 '51 1150w

Reviewed by J. I. Daniel
Churchman 165:16 Mr 15 '51 160w

"In spite of its shortcomings, Schoen's book is a worth-while addition to the literature on Jesus by Jewish authors." E. P. Blair
+ J Religion 31:151 Ap '51 300w

"It is a delight to read a religious book that is not only scholarly but well written and easily read. However, the thesis of the book will not be widely accepted either by the author's fellow Jews or by Christians."
+ — Sat R of Lit 34:45 F 10 '51 190w

SCHOENBERG, ARNOLD. See Schönberg, A.

SCHOFF, LEONARD HASTINGS. National agricultural policy; for all the people of the United States. 153p $2.50 Harper

338.1 Agriculture—U.S. 51-9192

Prepared for the Columbia University seminar on rural life. It contains a proposal for a corrective agricultural program and a national policy planned for all types of rural areas. Index.

"The largest single section of the book deals with rural areas of low income, and it is here that the treatment, while not presenting very many new ideas, will be found most satisfying by the majority of informed readers." M. R. Benedict
+ Ann Am Acad 276:161 Jl '51 550w

Booklist 47:200 F 1 '51

"A clear, readable proposal."
+ Bookmark 10:107 F '51 30w

Current Hist 20:172 Mr '51 80w

"Brilliant analysis of the basic economic and social problems confronting rural America today plus Dr. Schoff's recommendations for a long-range national policy to halt the trend toward bureaucratic control and perpetual subsidy." R. W. Howard
+ Sat R of Lit 34:29 My 5 '51 400w

"Students interested in American agricultural problems and remedies will find this book faithful in presenting the facts, complimentary and critical of proposed and tried remedies, and perhaps favorably impressed and critical of constructive suggestions presented herewith. It makes interesting reading." S. H. Hobbs
+ Social Forces 30:117 O '51 500w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:155 Je '51 220w

SCHOLZ, JACKSON VOLNEY. Fullback for sale. 256p $2.50 Morrow

51-11624

Three boys in college on football scholarships resent the power of the alumnus subsidizer of the team. This story for ages 11 to 14 tells what they did about it.

Booklist 48:72 O 15 '51

Kirkus 19:354 Jl 15 '51 130w

"Characterization and plot lack conviction somehow. The football is good." Lillian Morrison
Library J 76:1717 O 15 '51 80w

SCHOLZ, J. V.—Continued
Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 D 16 '51 40w
Springf'd Republican p14C N 4 '51 120w

SCHONBERG, ARNOLD. Style and idea. 224p $4.75 Philosophical lib.
780.4 Music 50-8187
For descriptive note see Annual for 1950.

Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 3 '51 220w

"I am personally very glad to have these fifteen pieces—long and short, good and bad—gathered together under one cover. Their concentrated form has forced me to arrive at a clearer picture of Schoenberg, the Man, than I had previously managed to pick up from reading a fair number of his essays at different times and in different places." R. S. Hill
+ — Music Lib Assn Notes 8:167 D '50 900w

"Schoenberg's collection of essays leaves an impression of dedicated seriousness, of a composer faithfully working out his inspirations." Andrew Porter
+ New Statesman & Nation 41:375 Mr 31 '51 250w

"One had not realized how completely Schoenberg himself had been living up to the role of prophet. . . Yet this attitude does not, as one might assume, make Schoenberg himself tiresome. He is quite different, in this respect, from his followers; one could hardly even call him fanatical. As an admirer of Schoenberg's music, with its broken pathos and tragic passion, I had never supposed him the pedant that vulgar reputation makes him. But I was not prepared to find in these essays a personality so vital and direct, so pungent and shrewd, so human in its relation to the world, and so stimulating in its rare combination of realism and inspiration." Edmund Wilson
+ New Yorker 27:133 Ap 14 '51 550w

"Style and Idea is valuable chiefly for the long essay on 'Composition with twelve tones.' One may think that in the not very distant future all music must inevitably be written in this style; one may think that 12-note music is an arbitrarily horrible noise; or one may think something between these two extremes. Whatever one's view, however, there can be no question of the interest of this authoritative statement from the master himself. It is written lucidly and in tolerable English. . . The only other considerable essay in this book is that on Brahms the Progressive, which is less original than it claims in its general approach to Brahms's rhythmic and tonal adventurousness, but makes, by the way, many acute points about classical tonality and form."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p198 Mr 30 '51 1400w

SCHOONMAKER, FRANK. Dictionary of wines; ed. by Tom Marvel; il. by Oscar Fabrès. 120p $2.50 Hastings house
663.203 Wine and wine making—Dictionaries 51-5504

"A pocket encyclopedia of everything pertaining to wines, American and European. Names and terms with brief but clear explanations are arranged in alphabetical order." N Y Times

---

"In a country where interest in wine is growing but where it is not the tradition, as it is in Europe, for the wine shopkeeper to have a knowledge as well as a love of his wares, this book should prove very serviceable. It should educate him and through him his customers in what to look for and what to expect in wine and other alcoholic beverages." Charlotte Turgeon
+ N Y Times p19 Jl 15 '51 100w

"The modest appearance of this little volume should not give one the idea that it isn't an important work; actually, more sound, useful information is packed into its hundred and twenty pages than is to be found in many a pretentious oenological treatise."
+ New Yorker 27:87 Ag 25 '51 160w

"A little book which ought to do at least something toward making the American see that wine is not the complicated matter he's been led to believe, that the use of wine is a very pleasant thing, and that the whole business is not as difficult as he thought it was after all. Which will be all to the good." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 28 '51 750w

Reviewed by Lawton Mackall
+ Sat R of Lit 34:14 D 29 '51 370w

SCHOONOVER, LAWRENCE. Golden exile. 392p $3.50 Macmillan
51-10226

Guy de Brunne was exiled from thirteenth century England by an unscrupulous abbot who had his eye on Guy's newly inherited estates. Guy was not to return as long as water flowed downhill. After many adventures in Palestine and Cambodia Guy actually found a river which flowed uphill and his lands were saved.

Booklist 48:13 S 1 '51
Bookmark 10:184 My '51 40w

"This is a lusty, colorful, exciting novel. It may not be history, but it's fine entertainment." Richard Blakesley
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ap 15 '51 300w
Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '51

"Fast paced narrative—thoroughly readable but not very important as a contribution to historical scholarship."
Kirkus 19:77 F 1 '51 210w

"A spine-thrilling story. But don't expect 'history,' nor quibble over anachronisms, nor wonder at lightning-speed acquisition of languages and a medicine chest that produces enough drugs to equip a modern hospital." R. W. Henderson
Library J 76:597 Ap 1 '51 80w

Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 My 6 '51 450w

"'The Golden Exile' lacks some of the coherence of Mr. Schoonover's previous story, 'The Gentle Infidel,' but none of the headlong action." Richard Match
N Y Times p22 Ap 8 '51 330w

"Mr. Schoonover has done it again. His novels contain all the ingredients required of a popular historical novel. His latest reeks powerfully of adventure, swashbuckling, suspense, hairbreadth escapes, violence, and in some measure of history—that is, just enough history to provide an atmosphere in which men can do the most audacious things and get away with it." John Cournos
Sat R of Lit 34:43 Ap 21 '51 240w

SCHOOR, GENE. General Douglas MacArthur; a pictorial biography. 46p $2 Field, R.
B or 92 MacArthur, Douglas 51-3314

A brief biography of General MacArthur followed by an "album" of over 125 photographs ranging in time from cadet days at West Point to the meeting with President Truman at Wake Island and the war in Korea to January 1951.

Booklist 47:327 My 15 '51

Reviewed by Gil Blades
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 22 '51 80w

"Gene Schoor's 'pictorial biography' contains more than 125 photographs. Through the lens of the camera, Gen. MacArthur has eluded the fate of old soldiers; he won't just fade away. Here the eye can follow his career from West Texas Military Academy and West Point to Korea and the Wake Island conference. As a figure in the news, the five-star general has not done badly since." George Conrad
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 My 20 '51 180w

"It is unfortunate that most of the pictures are faded but in this respect they add a note of authenticity to a book otherwise lacking in distinction." D. D.
N Y Times p25 Je 17 '51 250w

Reviewed by G. A. Panichas
Springf'd Republican p26A My 6 '51 180w

SCHRADE, LEO. Monteverdi: creator of modern music. 384p il $6 Norton

B or 92 Monteverdi, Claudio

A study of this Italian composer (1567-1643) who has been called "the creator of modern music." "In this book, the attempt has been made to interpret the music of Monteverdi as an integral unity in which the life of genius, the problem of art, and the phenomenon of culture flow together to produce one of the most felicitous accomplishments in the history of music." (Pref) The author is Professor of the History of Music, Yale university. Bibliography. Index.

Bookmark 10:166 Ap '51

"Highly recommended." C. K. Miller
+ Library J 76:329 F 15 '51 130w

Reviewed by Granville Hill
Manchester Guardian p4 O 9 '51 270w

"This book should be in every library. It is full of pertinent information and sound judgment." Hans Tischler
+ Music Lib Assn Notes 8:336 Mr '51 1150w

Reviewed by Cecil Smith
New Repub 123:21 D 18 '50 40w

Reviewed by Andrew Porter
New Statesman & Nation 42:442 O 20 '51 390w

"Though there is little about Monteverdi's private life in this excellent book, we learn many indispensable things about his art. The discussions of the composer's relationship to the older Italian and Dutch composers and to his baroque successors, of his battles for polyphonic development of the madrigal form, and the complex investigations of the texture of Monteverdian music, are highlights of the book." H E. Jacob
+ N Y Times p22 N 26 '50 450w

"In attempting a new study Leo Schrade, leading musicologist at Yale, set himself a formidable task. In minor points he takes issue with Prunières, Redlich, and others, but the real originality of the treatment lies in the interpretation of Monteverdi's music as an integral whole, in which the phenomena of genius, esthetics, culture, philosophy, and history united to bring about a supreme achievement. Though the book adds nothing to our knowledge of the composer's life, it enriches our understanding of his art." K. O. Hoover
+ Sat R of Lit 34:50 Ja 27 '51 420w

"The great value of Dr. Schrade's book is precisely the striking clarity with which it shows the unfolding of a great musical personality. Although the author presents comparatively little new material, by combining minute technical analysis with attention to the relevance of the isolated detail in the larger social and artistic environment, he has brought the whole picture of Monteverdi's contributions to the art of music into sharper focus than has hitherto been done."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:16 Mr '51 300w

SCHRIFTGIESSER, KARL. The lobbyists; the art and business of influencing lawmakers. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 297p $3.50 Little

328.368 Lobbying 51-12266

A study of lobbying in Congress from its beginnings in the 1820's to its present complicated part in the process of legislation. Bibliography. Index.

Atlantic 188:98 N '51 110w

Booklist 48:24 S 15 '51

Reviewed by Walter Trohan
Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 S 23 '51 500w

"Mr. Schriftgiesser cites facts and figures to make a compelling case for his demand that far more information be made public about lobbying." Roland Sawyer
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 S 11 '51 700w

Current Hist 21:356 D '51 70w

Kirkus 19:380 Jl 15 '51 300w

Reviewed by J. E. Brown
Library J 76:1331 S 1 '51 100w

Reviewed by H. H. Wilson
Nation 173:330 O 20 '51 700w

"Karl Schriftgiesser has a greater reputation for hitting hard than for aiming carefully; but in this book he is keenly desirous of not being misunderstood. He exposes numbers of shoddy fellows with evident satisfaction, but his real aim is to describe the adjustment of our two principles, which he does to a nicety. The result is the most valuable book he has as yet turned out." G. W. Johnson
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 S 9 '51 1050w

"It is unfortunate that Schriftgiesser, who is capable of quite vivid and dramatic exposition, has handled this subject as though he were writing a committee report or a thesis. For what he has laid out here is a thorough, thoughtful and, on the whole, objective study of one of the most important political phenomena of the times. It needs to be read by a great many more people, in and out of public life, than are likely to be attracted by its pedantic tone." Cabell Phillips
N Y Times p3 S 9 '51 650w

"A lively, opinionated, and thoroughgoing survey."
+ New Yorker 27:133 S 15 '51 250w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 N 18 '51 230w

Reviewed by Lindsay Rogers
Sat R of Lit 34:21 S 15 '51 850w

Springf'd Republican p7C S 16 '51 180w

"A carefully documented research production." Hillier Kreighbaum
+ Survey 87:438 O '51 1000w

Wis Lib Bul 47:210 S '51

SCHUMPETER, JOSEPH ALOIS. Imperialism and social classes; tr. by Heinz Norden; ed. with an introd. by Paul M. Sweezy. 221p $3 Augustus M. Kelley, Inc, 31 E 10th St, N.Y. 3

304 Imperialism. Class distinction A51-4379

"Schumpeter's sociological essays, one on imperialism and the other on social classes, are here translated into English for the first time. They were published in German in 1919 and 1926, respectively, but have been little read and less referred to by American scholars. The appearance of this volume testifies to the growing interest in both subjects in this country." Pol Sci Q

"As one whose native language is German, this reviewer feels it necessary to point out that the style of the English translation is not simply adequate but superior to the original. . . Current studies of social stratification, of managerial decision-making, and of leadership will profit from Schumpeter's sociological writings. As essays in the construction of a social theory, his work will long be remembered, whether or not his conclusions are accepted." Reinhard Bendix
+ Am J Soc 57:198 S '51 1000w

Am Pol Sci R 45:611 Je '51 20w

Foreign Affairs 29:667 Jl '51 30w

"I wish to express my admiration for the skill with which Mr. Norden has rendered the often difficult and grammatically complex German text into readable, clear, lucid English. Mr. Sweezy has contributed a short introduction which gives in a brief space the necessary data on the essays and a restrained and yet highly sympathetic appraisal of the author and his over-all contribution to social science. In many ways this book is the most appropriate memorial to Schumpeter that has so far been published." B. F. Hoselitz
+ J Pol Econ 59:360 Ag '51 2250w

SCHUMPETER, J. A.—Continued

"In a country where many economists consider themselves demeaned when they even admit that they know any sociology, it is refreshing to have these two essays from the pen of an economist who not only knew sociology but contributed to it. . . The translation reads well, and Dr. Sweezy has checked it with the original for accuracy in transmitting the original meaning. Obviously, not all who read these essays will agree with them; but no one can fail to be impressed by the originality and cogency of the ideas." H. B. Davis

+ Pol Sci Q 66:465 S '51 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p454 Jl 20 '51 420w

SCHUMPETER, JOSEPH ALOIS. Ten great economists from Marx to Keynes. 305p $3.75 Oxford

330.1 Economists 51-3200

"The virtue of these essays, written over forty years, lies in evaluation of the ten economists' contributions by one who had a wide knowledge of economic literature of the period and ability to discover elements of greatness in them. Marx and Böhm-Bawerk receive longest treatment, with Pareto, Taussig and Keynes next, Marshall, Mitchell and Fisher somewhat less, Menger and Walras, least. Short notices of Knapp, von Wieser and Bortkiewicz are appended." Library J

Reviewed by F. K. Mann
Ann Am Acad 278:209 N '51 500w

Booklist 47:339 Je 1 '51

"Since nearly all the articles are memorials or obituaries, and since Schumpeter knew all of the men but Marx personally as fellow economists, the essays are an admirable blend of biography and critical analysis." P. W. F.

+ Canadian Forum 31:138 S '51 270w

Reviewed by Melchior Palyi
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ag 19 '51 240w

"In spite of the tortuous style, apparent even in translation, these essays offer insight that will repay reading by students of the history of economics. Recommended to supplement general histories of economic theory." Walter Hausdorfer

+ — Library J 76:865 My 15 '51 110w

"The first of these ten essays, on Marx, is abstracted from Schumpeter's classic 'Capitalism, Socialism and Democracy.' Even if the paper on Marx were not a masterpiece of searching scholarship, it would be compelling today because of its objectivity, which is at once so difficult and so necessary. . . After the essay on Marx the most rewarding chapters are those on Marshall and Keynes." Eliot Janeway

+ N Y Times p3 Jl 8 '51 750w

"The general reader may find parts of this book not too easy reading, but on the whole the volume is a fine introduction to a number of different viewpoints in economics." I. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Jl 22 '51 100w

SCHURMACHER, EMILE CARLOS. Nothing's sacred on Sunday. 243p $3 Crowell

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 51-2640

"These further experiences by the author of Knee Pants [Book Review Digest 1950] tell of his extraordinary and often hilarious assignments as reporter for The American Weekly. Following the love life of two penguins, a girl lion tamer, the white slave racket, a sword swallower, and even ghosts made his days tiring but exciting." Library J

Booklist 47:197; 325 F 1 '51; My 15 '51

"An inside picture of a national 'scandal sheet', this is often amusing and generally entertaining in its diverting account of the office and its characters as well of the assignments covered."

+ Kirkus 19:21 Ja 1 '51 150w

"This behind-the-scenes picture of a weekly magazine is entertaining, diverting, superficial. Recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 76:405 Mr 1 '51 60w

"'Nothing's Sacred on Sunday' is a gem of revelation and irreverence, a collection of good newspaper yarns that happen to be true, and a first-rate study of certain aspects of sideshow journalism to which the public has become allergic." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 My 13 '51 550w

SCHURR, SAM H., and MARSCHAK, JAKOB, eds. Economic aspects of atomic power; an exploratory study; pub. for the Cowles commission for research in economics. 289p maps $6 Princeton univ. press

621.48 Atomic energy 50-10814

"It is seldom that an economic study of an industry, especially a study of this length, is published before the industry exists. . . In this work, the economics of the application of atomic power to such industries as aluminum, cement, glass, iron and steel, railroad transportation, and residential heating are expertly though theoretically analyzed. There is a long bibliography. The study was sponsored by the Cowles Commission for Research in Economics." Library J

Reviewed by J. L. Fisher
Am Econ R 41:994 D '51 1150w

Booklist 47:184 Ja 15 '51

Reviewed by R. L. Ehrenfeld
Chem & Eng N 29:1992 My 14 '51 380w

"The work is called an exploratory study—and that's what it is. The author's probes go deep however and the book is not wanting in some very shrewd guesses with regard to comparable costs of, and predictions for, atomic power."

+ Chem Eng 58:284 F '51 450w

"It is the tentative and controversial nature which makes the book important. Here at last, in one place, is gathered most of the relevant economic information (well footnoted) concerning atomic energy, and the observations of one research group. Other workers, by changing assumptions, may come to different conclusions, resulting eventually in a well-balanced estimation of the economic effects of atomic energy. This book deserves the critical attention of economists, engineers, editorial writers, businessmen, and public officials." R. L. Allen

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 2 '51 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '51

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 76:120 Ja 15 '51 100w

"The Cowles Commission study is a very welcome one, indeed. But in substantially neglecting the above arguments, in tending to minimize the problems which plague underdeveloped areas, thus presenting just the optimistic viewpoint, in short in failing to achieve a well-balanced approach, it does not fill the void as an exploratory study should." Walter Isard

Nation 171:657 D 16 '50 1000w

New Repub 124:21 F 5 '51 70w

"This study will be more interesting than useful until the day—perhaps not far distant—when some country announces it has built the first large-scale atomic power unit. . . At present, in spite of the fact that it is scholarly and businesslike, it has a little of the flavor of a Baedeker for the traveler to the moon. Such a traveler's guide could include many true things and much informed speculation—but so far no one has been there." Michael Amrine

N Y Times p3 D 31 '50 850w

"If many of the figures given are mere projections, the analysis of industrial problems is thorough and imaginative." William Whitman

+ Sat R of Lit 34:47 Ja 20 '51 800w

"Throughout the book the treatment of the subject is realistic and practical. The authors, both experienced in the atomic energy field, give as careful consideration to the limitations of atomic power and the obstacles to be overcome in its development as to the more exciting aspects of its future possibilities."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:45 Mr '51 240w

SCHURZ, CARL. Charles Sumner: an essay; edited by Arthur Reed Hogue. 152p $2.50 Univ. of Ill. press

B or 92 Sumner, Charles 51-1560

"After the death of Carl Schurz in 1906, the main bulk of his papers went to the Library of Congress, but several bundles of letters and other material remained with the Schurz heirs, whence they came into the hands of Paul Steinbrecher of Chicago. The Library of Congress collection had the incomplete second draft of Schurz' essay on Sumner, but it was not known that a completed first draft existed until Professor Hogue discovered it, in 1948, among the Chicago papers. The present volume consists of the second draft as far as it goes—from Sumner's birth through the 'Trent Affair' in 1861. The remaining thirteen years of Sumner's life are covered by the text of the first draft." New Eng Q

Current Hist 21:96 Ag '51 70w

"Mr. Hogue's work is consistently fine. He has deciphered an almost illegible manuscript (of which a facsimile page is given) with patience and accuracy; he has spliced the two drafts with skill; he has written an interesting Introduction and suggestive notes. . . Professor Hogue has performed a true service in making available a suggestive estimate of a righteous man." Craig Wylie

+ New Eng Q 24:81 Je '51 70w

San Francisco Chronicle p23 Je 10 '51 240w

"The essay is at once provocative and disappointing. For his memoir Schurz neglected his own rich recollections of the Massachusetts Senator and wrote instead a condensation of Pierce's biography. His sketch is important, therefore, not for any new information it gives about Sumner but for Schurz's almost incidental judgments on the Senator's character." David Donald

Sat R of Lit 34:46 Je 16 '51 650w

SCHWAB, DAVID E. Story of lace and embroidery. 96p il $3.25 Fairchild

746.2 Lace and lace making. Embroidery 51-10366

"In this short book the development and appreciation of lace-making, particularly of the distinctive handwork types which were made in Italy, France, Belgium, Spain, and England from the sixteenth to the nineteenth century are outlined. About six pages are devoted to an historical account of embroidery by hand and machine. The Leavers lace machine and the Schiffli embroidery machine are touched upon briefly, but there is no technical exposition of machine lace production such as Golec and Armstrong's Leavers Lace (1949). The glossary includes descriptions of many 'Real,' and modern laces, with emphasis on the historical aspects of the type names. A feature of the book is the number of excellent illustrations—about twenty photographs of old laces that are now museum pieces, and an almost equal number of types of handmade lace that are being duplicated by machine." N Y New Tech Bks

"The factual material is presented in a well-planned, interesting manner, and the many illustrations have been selected with discrimination." D. H. Barton

+ J Home Econ 43:727 N '51 130w

"With its pleasantly written text and clear illustrations this small volume will appeal to all librarians who have answered questions on handmade treasures or 'Schiffli' imitations. . . As useful as the standby tomes and expendable as take-home material. Author—industrialist is recognized authority on this 'queen of the textiles.' Several copies recommended." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 76:964 Je 1 '51 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:37 My '51

SCHWALJE, EARL GEORGE, and SCHWALJE, MARJORY. Cezar and the music-maker; il. by Nicolas. 77p $2.50 Knopf 51-11072

Story of a boy of the Philippine Islands and his pet monkey. Cezar's heart was set on owning a mouth organ and after several disappointments he got it. For ages 8 to 10.

Booklist 48:110 N 15 '51

"A captivating story, drawn from Mr. Schwalje's experience in the Philippines during the war and told with his wife with sympathy and great charm. Young readers will love Cezar and Coco's gay adventures, made even more real to them by Nicolas' fascinating two color illustrations." P. G.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 11 '51 170w

Kirkus 19:482 S 1 '51 130w

Reviewed by L. G. McCusker

Library J 76:2124 D 15 '51 50w

"The pictures are by Nicolas, very distinguished and funny, but to our mind many are spoiled for younger children by the imposed second color." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 N 4 '51 90w

"Both Mr and Mrs Schwalje are currently teaching school and it is clear from their direct, easy-to-read style that their daily experiences with children have not been wasted. . . Unfortunately the book lacks emotional warmth because of incomplete characterization. The reader sees and even hears Cezar but seldom feels with or for him. The illustrations are lively but so highly sophisticated that they underline the adult detachment and objectivity which make the total of this book less than the sum of its parts." L. R. Davis

+ — N Y Times p28 N 11 '51 180w

SCHWARTZ, BENJAMIN ISADORE. Chinese communism and the rise of Mao. 258p $4.50 Harvard univ. press

951.04 Mao, Tsê-tung. Communism—China. China—History 51-12067

"The present volume, by a scholar associated with Harvard University's Russian Research Center, is an effort, largely successful, to present the background of communism's success in China by analyzing the conflicts and issues which rent the present ruling party in Peking during the Nineteen Twenties and early Nineteen Thirties, i.e., until Mao Tse-tung became its master." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

"This is an excellent book: a solid, pioneer study, and the most useful and reliable guide we have in a difficult and much neglected field. Without doubt it will enrich and leave its mark on studies of Chinese Communism for years to come." J. M. H. Lindbeck

+ Am Soc R 16:892 D '51 550w

Booklist 48:29 S 15 '51

Reviewed by Walter Simmons

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 O 7 '51 370w

Reviewed by L. S. C. Smythe

Christian Century 68:1281 N 7 '51 950w

"Here is a study not to be overlooked by any serious student of Chinese communism. One only wishes its meticulously documented conclusions could reach a far wider audience than the book itself is likely to. This is sound, objective, penetrating analysis, equally far removed from Edgar Snow on the one hand and Freda Utley on the other." Robert Peel

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 S 5 '51 600w

Current Hist 21:227 O '51 60w

Kirkus 19:314 Je 15 '51 250w

SCHWARTZ, B. I.—Continued

"[The author's] extensive use of Chinese sources makes this work the most completely documented study of Chinese Communism yet to appear." R. C. Howard

Library J 76:1217 Ag '51 140w

"Mr. Schwartz's book is unfortunately not an easy one to read. He is so close to his subject and knows it so well that he forgets his reader is probably unacquainted with the many names and events whose significance he does not explain. Many of the theoretical distinctions which he makes are understandable only to the reader well-versed in Communist dialectics and the history of the Communist movement. There are also occasional minor points on which the work might be questioned." R. L. Walker

Nation 173:243 S 22 '51 1300w

"It would be easy enough to quarrel with some of the minor theses in this book. . . But these are not important matters. What is important is that we should be grateful that the work has been done, and done so well. It is certainly the best book on the Chinese Communists that has appeared since Red Star over China." Robert Payne

+ — New Repub 125:18 N 5 '51 1400w

"Schwartz's study has launched what we can hope will be a new flow of serious scholarly work on recent and current Chinese history. It is starting late. We can only hope it will not be too late to be of signal use in the development of more productive American thinking and behavior in relation to China in the years to come." H. R. Isaacs

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 S 2 '51 1050w

Reviewed by Harry Schwartz

N Y Times p3 S 2 '51 750w

"A book by and for scholars, it contributes valuable material to our knowledge of the other team." E. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 N 18 '51 220w

SCHWARTZ, ESTHER K., and KOOPERMAN, RUTH. Hamburger cook book; 200 distinctive ways of using ground beef to achieve greater variety in the daily menu. 213p il $2.50 Abelard

641.5 Cookery (meat) 51-97

"In collaboration with Ruth Kooperman ES has produced 200 recipes for using ground beef. Some will say 'Hamburger is hamburger —why paint the lily?' This is not for them; for here we have every idea developed from hamburger petite to serve with cocktails and the baby's first hamburger to the penny-pinchers and some accessories that go well with hamburgers." Library J

Reviewed by K. T. Willis

Library J 75:2153 D 15 '50 50w

Springf'd Republican p8B Ja 7 '51 70w

Wis Lib Bul 47:20 Ja '51

SCHWARTZ, HARRY. Russia's Soviet economy. (Prentice-Hall economics ser) 592p maps $6.65; to schools $5 Prentice-Hall

330.947 Russia—Economic conditions 51-254

"Young Syracuse professor describes historical and ideological background, and then tackles economic plan, the very core of Russian economic policy. This is followed by a balanced report on traditional fields of economic activity, such as industry, agriculture, transportation." Library J

Am Pol Sci R 45:915 S '51 20w

Reviewed by F. L. Schuman

Ann Am Acad 278:236 N '51 500w

Booklist 47:357 Je 15 '51

Reviewed by Melchior Palyi

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Je 24 '51 180w

Reviewed by H. C. Hinton

Commonweal 54:98 My 4 '51 200w

Current Hist 21:96 Ag '51 50w

"Highly recommended—also as a reference work." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 76:408 Mr 1 '51 100w

"Harry Schwartz is a scholar who has devoted years of study to the Russian economy. To call his report a textbook is scarcely fair, because the clarity of its writing makes it superior to most volumes read only by those compelled to do so in order to qualify for a degree. Nevertheless it was written to inform, not to attack or to defend." George Soule

+ Nation 173:214 S 15 '51 1100w

Reviewed by B. B. Seligman

New Repub 125:20 N 5 '51 900w

"This is a thoughtful and informed account. . . Avoiding all dogmatic extremes, Professor Schwartz has painted a sober and often sobering picture of the rapid growth of Russia's industrial might. And he has frequently enlivened his tale with incidents of bureaucratic mishaps derived from the Soviet press." P. E. Mosley

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p38 D 2 '51 800w

"This most timely survey outlines all aspects of Soviet economic life. . . Mr. Schwartz, member of the Board of Russian Studies at Syracuse University now on leave to The New York Times, is known for his factual reporting on Soviet economic affairs." Abram Bergson

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 15 '51 800w

"The author of this eminently readable volume, professor of economics at Syracuse University on leave with the New York Times, has written what aims to be a textbook for a course in Soviet economics. Yet the wealth of material contained in his book makes it stand far above the run-of-the-mill college compendium, not the least because of its thorough documentation, including articles in periodicals Russian as well as English." O. R. Reischer

+ Pol Sci Q 66:450 S '51 1000w

"The true value of this book lies in its solidly informative presentation of the Soviet economic machine and its pernicious effects upon the individual human Russian. A lucid introductory essay is contributed by William Henry Chamberlin." David Hecht

+ Sat R of Lit 34:8 S 29 '51 600w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:262 S '51 200w

"It has never been more important than it is today for thoughtful citizens to understand the present and potential strength of the Soviet economic system, and it has never been more difficult for the conscientious scholar to penetrate to the essential facts. Neither ignoring the numerous obstacles to exact knowledge nor overlooking the pitfalls of Soviet statistics, Professor Schwartz has brought together in one coherent volume a mass of well-selected information on all aspects of the Soviet economy." P. E. Mosely

+ Yale R n s 41:140 autumn '51 500w

SCHWARTZ, IRVING. Every man his sword. 307p $3; pa $1 Doubleday

51-10227

"This is the story of a particularly horrible lynching in the Southern town of Jemimah, and the violent way it backfired on the complacent or brutal inhabitants of that town." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Reviewed by Henry Cavendish

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Jl 22 '51 420w

Reviewed by A. W. Taylor

Churchman 165:16 N 15 '51 100w

Kirkus 19:133 Mr 1 '51 150w

"This first novel does not oversimplify the various forces at work, and the suspense and tension of the story are strong, but, at the same time, it lacks the emotional subtlety and depth to give full impact to its shocking events."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 6 '51 280w

Reviewed by Charlotte Capers

N Y Times p17 Je 3 '51 120w

"As a psychological study of a murderer the book is weak, for Mr. Schwartz has sacrificed a complete characterization in the interests of mystery and suspense. But as a voice raised against the evils of persecution and intolerance it is compelling and powerful. The introduction of perversion and adultery in the already adequate violence of the theme seems to me, however, to be employing horror for horror's sake." S. H. Hay

Sat R of Lit 34:36 Je 23 '51 420w

SCHWARZ, SOLOMON M. Jews in the Soviet Union; foreword by Alvin Johnson. 380p $5 Syracuse univ. press

296 Jews in Russia. Jews—Political and social conditions 51-5293

"In the first part of the book Dr. Schwarz exhaustively analyzes Communist doctrine on minority nationalities in general, and on the Jewish people in particular; the history of the Soviet treatment of the Jewish community since the coming to power of the Bolsheviks in 1917; the successive Soviet programs for solving the Jewish problem; the story of the province of Birobidzhan; and the present situation of the Jews in the Soviet Union. In the second part of the book, the author makes a study of the evidences of antisemitism in the USSR from the first years of Communist rule until today." (Publisher's note) Index.

Reviewed by Solomon Grayzel
Ann Am Acad 278:237 N '51 700w

"The book is hard reading, but doubtless will stand as one of the most authoritative works on the subject." Gilbert Twiss
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 S 2 '51 260w

Reviewed by E. S. Pisko
Christian Science Monitor p9 N 28 '51 700w

"A superb piece of scholarship embodying exacting research, the book inevitably illuminates a good deal more than the limited terrain of its specific inquiry." James Rorty
+ Commonweal 54:602 S 28 '51 1000w

"Well written, thoroughly documented work, interesting with regard to Jewish question, also sheds light on Soviet policy and minority problems in general. Recommended for public and educational libraries." H. H. Bernt
+ Library J 76:1336 S 1 '51 110w

Reviewed by Max Beloff
Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 28 '51 450w

"His book is written dispassionately, on documentation from original sources. For the time being, it can be called the definitive study on the subject." Hans Kohn
+ New Repub 125:19 N 19 '51 650w

"A work of solid scholarship, this book contributes much to our knowledge of a significant phase of life in the U.S.S.R. The author writes with an authority born of long intimacy with his special subject, as well as with the whole complex of Bolshevik ideology and practice." Avrahm Yarmolinsky
+ N Y Times p3 Ag 19 '51 1000w

"Mr. Schwarz has written a scholarly book for those who wish to know the truth about Soviet policy toward minority groups, as well as for those who want further insight into the perverse crankings of the Communist mind." Earl Raab
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 19 '51 480w

"Both Dr. Schwarz, for his calm and carefully documented work, and the American Jewish Committee for its sponsorship, are to be congratulated on making available to the public this first really comprehensive, well-balanced study of the treatment of minorities in the Soviet Union." A. K. Herling
+ Survey 87:496 N '51 600w

SCHWED, FRED. Pleasure was all mine; the journal of an undisappointed man; with drawings by Walt Kelly. 260p $2.95 Simon & Schuster

B or 92 51-10973

Reminiscences, for the most part humorous, of the author's life at school, college and home, from the age of sixteen until he was in his forties.

"Mr. Schwed has his wit, to be sure, but he is happiest when he can build up a humorous situation and, at long last, cap it with a fine gag. Bridge players will be pleased by his account of a typical evening's play of his bridge club; personally, I vote with James Thurber, who long ago proclaimed his lack of interest in any bridge game not played by the Marx brothers." Milton Crane
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Je 3 '51 380w

"There is a lot of information in this book, very little of it useful but much of it funny." Herbert Kupferberg
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Je 17 '51 600w

"This book, as it proceeds through the roster af Mr. Schwed's friends, is proof that most human beings say at least one delightful thing in a lifetime, and it is sound practice to put all your friends' good ones in the notebook for your reminiscences." Harry Gilroy
+ N Y Times p13 Jl 22 '51 180w

"This book of reminiscences stands head and shoulders above the average offering of its type."
+ New Yorker 27:119 My 26 '51 200w

SCHWEITZER, ALBERT. Animal world; jungle insights into reverence for life; tr. and ed. with an introduction by Charles R. Joy. 207p $3 Beacon press

591.5 Animals, Legends and stories of. Ethics 50-10843

The four parts of the book are: Impressions of an Alsatian child; Africa and its animals; Animals and ethics; Reverence for life. In the second section are selections from Schweitzer's writings about animals. In Animals and ethics, he traces the development of ethics in India and China, and criticizes the lack of it in the West. In the final section he discusses his own ethical position. Biographical data. Index.

Booklist 47:170 Ja 1 '51

Reviewed by A. C. Ames
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 24 '50 410w

Christian Century 67:1524 D 20 '50 150w

Reviewed by C. L. Willard
+ Churchman 165:18 Ap 1 '51 150w

Reviewed by Alan Devoe
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 Ap 22 '51 120w

"The section on Africa and its animals makes the book worthy of a place in every nature lover's library. . . 'The Animal World of Albert Schweitzer' is a rare and fascinating combination of animal lore and the honest, clear thinking of a man whose ideas may mark a milestone in a strife-rent society. Charles Joy's introduction sets the stage well and Richard Bartlett's drawings are exquisitely done." H. S. Pearson
+ N Y Times p4 N 26 '50 420w

SCHWEITZER, ALBERT. Music in the life of Albert Schweitzer; with selections from his writings by Charles R. Joy. 300p il $4 Beacon press

B or 92 Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 51-10277

"Dr. Joy sets a twofold purpose for this book on one aspect of the many-sided Schweitzer. The first is to tell the story of Schweitzer as a minister of music, and the second to present 'biographical and autobiographical, historical and critical and technical' writings by Schweitzer on music which have not previously been available in English. Dr. Joy's brief, chronological account, focused on Schweitzer's musical experiences and training, much as the book's title would suggest, is interspersed with essays, articles and excerpts from books written by Schweitzer himself. In effect it is a kind of chronologically ordered anthology." (Christian Century) Index.

SCHWEITZER, ALBERT—Continued

Booklist 47:398 Jl 15 '51

"There is much interesting material in the selections from Schweitzer's writings. The discussions of the musical life of Germany and France around the close of the 19th century and the early years of the 20th present such famous names of Schweitzer's contemporaries as Widor, Saint-Saëns, Cosima Wagner. . . One weakness, which in the mind of this reviewer seems important, may be pointed out. Actually, since the excerpts selected for the book are limited to those 'hitherto unavailable in English,' the choice of title is somewhat misleading." Arrand Parsons

+ — Christian Century 68:686 Je 6 '51 750w

Reviewed by E. W. Harris
Churchman 165:15 Jl '51 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '51

Kirkus 19:244 My 1 '51 150w

Reviewed by Herbert Kupferberg
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 S 16 '51 280w

"The selections are somewhat repetitive, and they include some that are of interest only to Schweitzer devotees. . . Taken all together these selections tell us of an extraordinarily gifted and good man from whom we have much to learn. The translation does not read badly. But the editor-translator makes Bach a chorister 'at the boarding-school of the lycée,' at Lüneburg . . . he calls the unfinished three volumes of the Widor-Schweitzer edition of Bach's organ works 'three more volumes of Bach's choral compositions'; and he imagines that Mühlhausen in Alsace, where Schweitzer went to school, and Mühlhausen in Thuringia, where Bach once served as choirmaster, are the same place." Arthur Mendel

+ — Sat R of Lit 34:21 My 26 '51 550w

Wis Lib Bul 47:165 Je '51

SCHWEITZER, ALBERT. Paul and his interpreters; a critical history [tr. by W. Montgomery]. 252p $3.50 Macmillan

227 Bible. N.T.—Epistles. Paul, Saint 51-10193

"With the publication of 'Paul and His Interpreters,' at long last we have an American edition of one of Dr. Schweitzer's most basic books. When he finished his 'Quest of the Historical Jesus' back in 1906, this great New Testament scholar then turned his attention to the problems of Paul and the letters. Dr. Schweitzer was particularly concerned with the problem that has troubled all thoughtful historians of the first age of Christianity. What is the relationship between the teachings of Jesus and the apparently different doctrines set forth by Paul in the letters? Furthermore, how did the doctrines of the early church fathers develop out of the theology contained in the Pauline letters?" Chicago Sunday Tribune

---

Reviewed by Clarence Seidenspinner
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Je 3 '51 360w

"Difficult, but rewarding reading." J. F. Davidson

+ Churchman 165:17 D 1 '51 190w

Reviewed by G. A. Panichas
Springf'd Republican p9B My 20 '51 130w

SCHWIEBERT, ERNEST GEORGE. Luther, and his times; the reformation from a new perspective. 892p il $10 Concordia

B or 92 Luther, Martin. Reformation 50-11670

"A comprehensive picture of the German reformation, with Luther in his rightful place as the central figure, and with others taking major roles in the dramatic story." (Churchman) Bibliographical notes. Index.

Reviewed by G. C. Sellery
Am Hist R 56:863 Jl '51 500w

Reviewed by John Evans
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 D 10 '50 450w

"The author writes in the tradition of the great Preserved Smith, and his studies have uncovered much original material not normally available. . . This is a solid and reliable piece of scholarship and well worth careful reading." R. C. Miller

+ Churchman 165:17 Ja 1 '51 140w

"One of the most interesting features of Schwiebert's volume is the liberal use of photographs, woodcuts, drawings, and maps scattered throughout the entire book. Of special interest is the thirty-two-page section which presents an excellent album of photographs of the people and places of note connected with the Reformation story. . . The study of Luther is a thoroughly documented work which, with its rather extensive Bibliography, will prove to be a valuable and treasured addition to the library of any individual who desires to have a handy, but reasonably complete, reference book on the Lutheran Reformation in Germany within the scope of Luther's own lifetime." G. E. Arden

+ J Religion 31:217 Jl '51 700w

SCHYBERG, FREDERIK. Walt Whitman; tr. from the Danish by Evie Allison Allen; with an introd. by Gay Wilson Allen. 387p $5 Columbia univ. press

B or 92 Whitman, Walt 51-10116

A survey of Danish opinion of Whitman, whom many Europeans consider America's finest poet. The author begins with a study of American life in 1850, and analyses Whitman's life thru a detailed consideration of the various versions of Leaves of Grass. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 47:345 Je 1 '51

Reviewed by Carlyle King
Canadian Forum 31:210 D '51 270w

"An important contribution to literary scholarship."

+ Kirkus 19:144 Mr 1 '51 220w

Reviewed by G. D. McDonald
Library J 76:1029 Je 15 '51 140w

Reviewed by Richard Chase
Nation 172:591 Je 23 '51 950w

"In making available in this country Frederik Schyberg's study of Walt Whitman, Professor and Mrs. Allen have done a valuable service. Schyberg, Danish literary critic who died last year, published Walt Whitman in Copenhagen in 1933. This, the first English edition of the book, is a partial revision of the original, although the main argument is said to remain unchanged. Unchanged also regrettably, are two other items: the Bibliography, which would have profited from being brought up to date, and Dr. Schyberg's habit of relying on italics for emphasis, which is as disconcerting as a bad case of hiccups. The book as a whole, however, is well-presented: Professor Allen's introduction is clear and helpful; Mrs. Allen appears to have done a very able translation." E. D. Rostow

+ New Eng Q 24:383 S '51 550w

"The Whitman who emerges from Schyberg's study is not a prophet or a social reformer, but a great lyric poet; not a self-confident athlete but a lonely, groping and sometimes bewildered man. Now that Mrs. Allen's lucid translation makes it accessible, no future biographer can ignore this book. More important, no reader of Whitman can fail to gain from it a new and deeper understanding of 'Leaves of Grass' and its author." Delancey Ferguson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 O 28 '51 850w

"These are the two main values of Mr. Schyberg's book: his searching examination and evaluation of the changes made by Whitman in successive editions of 'Leaves of Grass' and his assessment of Whitman both as a symptom and as an influence in world literature. I know of no critic who has achieved either task with greater verve and brilliance. The book, however, has the defects of its qualities. . . More than once we feel that his enthusiasm has run away with his critical sobriety." David Daiches

+ — N Y Times p4 Ap 1 '51 1050w

"An excellent translation [which] is an important addition to Whitman scholarship and appreciation." Oscar Cargill
+ Sat R of Lit 34:16 Je 9 '51 600w

SCOGGIN, MARGARET CLARA, ed. Edge of danger; true stories of adventure. 298p $3 Knopf

910 Adventure and adventurers 51-11091

A group of true adventure tales written by authorities in their field. They are divided into Men against Animals, and Men against the elements. Partial contents: Danger, by R. C. Andrews; Episode of the bushmaster, by R. L. Ditmars; Boma, by T. J. Waldeck; The four killers, by Clyde Beatty; Mountain rescue, by S. H. Young; Flying the lid of Hades, by B. R. Hubbard; Men overboard in the Antarctic, by A. J. Villiers; Ellsberg to the rescue, by Edward Ellsberg.

Booklist 48:106 N 15 '51
Bookmark 11:61 D '51

Reviewed by Vernon Ives
Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 D 16 '51 110w
Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '51

"Miss Scoggin's wide experience in discovering what young people like to read is apparent in this exciting collection of well-written, true stories of adventure." J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews
+ Horn Bk 27:426 D '51 90w
+ Kirkus 19:444 Ag 15 '51 120w

Reviewed by L. T. Bulman
Library J 76:2127 D 15 '51 90w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p35 N 11 '51 90w

"It is a collection that will be invaluable to those working with older boys and girls; the teen-agers themselves will read it enthusiastically." Eugenia Garson
+ N Y Times p42 N 4 '51 170w

SCOTT, ERNEST FINDLAY. Lord's prayer; its character, purpose, and interpretation. 126p $2.25 Scribner

226.9 Lord's prayer 51-440

"There is hardly a book that deals with the 'paternoster' in critical and historical terms. This does. Scott discusses Jesus' own conception of the prayer, compares the variant versions in the gospels, explains its background in Jewish worship and Jesus's ministry, and 'exegetes' each section of it." (Churchman) Index.

"A new book by E. F. Scott is always a welcome event, especially when he deals not only with historical research but with the meaning and significance of the New Testament for faith. Dr. Scott has brought to the task of interpretation of the Lord's Prayer the mature results of his scholarly research and his life's accumulated fund of Christian experience." E. H. Wahlstrom
+ Christian Century 68:560 My 2 '51 500w

"As a whole, the book is perhaps more pious than critical, but its value to preachers and students is considerable because it draws learning as well as devotion in to focus upon a central element of Christian prayer." Joseph Fletcher
Churchman 165:16 Je '51 190w

"The book is perhaps as much homilectical and devotional as it is critical. In fact, some sections almost give the impression of sermonic origin. There is no documentation or bibliography, and very frequently points of view and interpretations that are debatable are simply stated as fact. Undoubtedly a scholar of Dr. Scott's ability is well aware that some of the generalizations he makes must break down, and that several of his interpretations are open to other treatments. In discussing the Lord's Prayer a good deal of material on the life and teachings of Jesus is included, and it is here that much of the treatment is without substantiation, giving the author's view only." P. S. Ellis
Crozer Q 28:260 Jl '51 500w

"In his retirement, Prof. Scott is giving his readers the fruit of a long and useful life of scholarship. This book on the Lord's Prayer is especially welcome for we have had all too few critical and historical studies of this familiar prayer, one of the great bequests to us of Jesus Christ."
+ Kirkus 19:56 F 1 '51 120w

Reviewed by Paul Ramsey
N Y Times p18 Jl 22 '51 130w
Times [London] Lit Sup p359 Je 8 '51 360w

SCOTT, HARRY ALEXANDER. Competitive sports in schools and colleges. 604p $5 Harper

371.74 Sports 51-10737

"Dr. Scott's broad experience in the administration of non-professional athletics, coupled with his scholarship, make him a spokesman on the subject of scholastic sports. Problems of discipline, expansion or retrenchment, administration, placating the Alumni, and allocating funds, [all] these are dealt with." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 47:357 Je 15 '51

"Recommended for larger libraries."
+ Wis Lib Bul 47:162 Je '51

SCOTT, JAMES MAURICE. Hudson of Hudson's bay; il. by Astrid Walford. 176p $2.50 Schuman

B or 92 Hudson, Henry—Juvenile literature 51-10797

A story biography describing Henry Hudson's four voyages of discovery, for ages eleven to fifteen.

Booklist 47:333 My 15 '51
Bookmark 10:158 Ap '51
Horn Bk 27:254 Jl '51 90w

"This fine biography of the seventeenth century explorer is a model for juvenile biographies—accurate and exhaustive in research, informal and vigorous in style and with a healthy respect both for the subject and the alertness of the reader."
+ Kirkus 19:65 F 1 '51 180w

"Told in an accurate, informal, and vigorous style. . . Recommended." M. L. Turk
+ Library J 76:607 Ap 1 '51 70w

"This is honest, informative, useful biography. The author's style with such mannerisms as 'you must bear in mind' and 'one thing you will want to know' may seem patronizing to some readers." M. C. S.
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 My 13 '51 140w

"Cheerfully admitting that there is a great deal which we do not know about Henry Hudson, Mr. Scott has produced an uncommonly interesting book about the great explorer." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p26 My 13 '51 80w

"The author is himself an Arctic explorer and mountaineer, and he has performed a tour de force in building such a lively narrative on such meagre facts." Gwendolen Freeman
+ Spec 184:663 D 8 '50 130w

SCOTT, JUDITH UNGER. Pattern for personality; il. by Ruth K. Macrae. 191p $2.50 Macrae Smith co.

136.7354 Girls 51-10626

"Dependable counsel on some of the most common difficulties young girls face today, by the author of Manners for Moderns. Family adjustment, school problems, social behavior and the future are covered in an informal, gay style sure to appeal to the teen-age girls." Booklist

Booklist 47:366 Je 15 '51
Kirkus 19:156 Mr 15 '51 110w

SCOTT, J. U.—Continued
"Excellent advice to girls. . . Told in author's pleasing style, it should be popular with 7th and 8th grades as well as older girls. Recommended for 7th grade through high school." G. E. Cartmell

+ Library J 76:1035 Je 15 '51 60w

"Spritely, sensible handbook for the girl who wants advice on the many problems youth is heir to." M. C. S.

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 My 13 '51 80w

N Y Times p22 Ag 19 '51 120w

SCOTT, SALLY. Little Wiener; pictures by Beth Krush. [48p] $1.75 Harcourt

Dogs—Legends and stories 51-9548

Little Wiener was a small nondescript dog who started out to be a dachshund and didn't make it. But he was smart. The story is of Little Wiener's morning walk in which his dog friends Dumb Jumbo and Lovely Lulu got into trouble, but Little Wiener came out on top. For ages 5 to 8.

Reviewed by A. L. Shea

Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 Ap 1 '51 150w

"With its large type, good pictures and funny story, it is one of the most delightful easy-to-read books I have seen for a long time." J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews

+ Horn Bk 27:178 My '51 150w

"Recommended." Juanita Walker

+ Library J 76:605 Ap 1 '51 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 My 13 '51 80w

"If he weren't so essentially nice, Little Wiener would seem just a little too smart. As it is, his story is satisfying, as full of comic action as a cartoon movie." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 11 '51 140w

Springf'd Republican p8C Mr 4 '51 100w

Wis Lib Bul 47:91 Ap '51

SCOTT, MRS SALLY. Rip and Royal; pictures by Beth Krush. 58p $1.75 Harcourt

Dogs—Legends and stories 50-10047

Royal was a serious minded collie who needed a job to do, but he lived in the city where there were no sheep or cows to herd. Rip was a lively little cocker spaniel, who lived in the country, but was too flighty to attend to farm duties. This story for grades two to four shows how a little girl solved their difficulties.

"[This] story of a beautiful and obedient collie, and an engaging but disgraceful cocker, is both amusing and touching."

+ Atlantic 186:101 D '50 50w

Booklist 47:104 N 1 '50

+ Horn Bk 27:30 Ja '51 80w

Kirkus 18:608 O 1 '50 130w

"The story is both touching and lively, nicely illustrated by Beth Krush." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 7 '51 110w

"An excellent title for 2nd to 4th graders."

+ Wis Lib Bul 47:27 Ja '51

SCOTT, THURSTON, pseud of GEORGE THURSTON LEITE and JODY SCOTT. Cure it with honey. 212p $2.50 Harper 51-13890

Mystery story.

Kirkus 19:414 Ag 1 '51 80w

"Highly satisfactory simply as melodrama. It's sharply and vigorously told. It has all the currently requisite sex and violence, but legitimately integrated into the story and theme." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p54 N 25 '51 90w

"A glossary of underworld slang is provided, but even so the idiom gets fairly baffling from time to time."

New Yorker 27:192 N 17 '51 100w

"The style is exactly suited to the raw actuality of the subject; suspense and pace are excellent, and altogether this is a thriller to impress you—but not to give to your grandmother. The authors are to be congratulated on finding a new and living theme. Evidently they are not planning to run it into the ground, since they are now working on a period suspense-novel about Francois Villon. The skill displayed in 'Cure It With Honey' should make the forthcoming book one to which we may look forward." L. G. O.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 18 '51 420w

"Nice icing—plain cake." Sergeant Cuff

Sat R of Lit 34:45 N 24 '51 30w

SCOTT, WILLIAM RUFUS. Apple that Jack ate; paintings by Charles G. Shaw. $1.50 Scott, W.R.

"Here is a red apple on a bowl at Jack's house. The repetitive narrative, following the familiar pattern, takes the story back and back, beyond the store, the truck, the crop, the barn, back to the blossom and the bee, the seed, the earth." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Kirkus 19:390 Ag 1 '51 90w

"Recommended only for libraries that can afford to have it prebound." M. E. Martignoni

Library J 76:1341 S 1 '51 70w

"At six or seven, the large type makes a pleasant, easy reader. Mr. Shaw's clear, bright pictures in four colors are exactly right." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 N 11 '51 140w

"The type is large and clear, the paintings full of delightful details and reproduced in full color. The market where the apple was bought deserves long study for its array of fruit and vegetables, its kindly grocer weighing the apples, its cat, and its two small boys. The orchard in sun and rain is lovely in design."

+ Sat R of Lit 34:54 N 10 '51 90w

Wis Lib Bul 47:257 N '51

SCRIPPS, EDWARD WILLIS. Damned old crank; ed. by Charles R. McCabe. 259p $3.50 Harper

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 51-10365

"A self-portrait" of the American newspaper giant, E. W. Scripps, head of the Scripps-Howard newspapers, drawn from his unpublished writings.

Booklist 47:328 My 15 '51

Bookmark 10:206 Je '51 30w

Reviewed by John Randolph

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 13 '51 310w

"Assuredly, this is a book to be recommended with discretion. It should not be offered to the self-righteous, to the puritanical, even to the conventionally correct. Above all, it should be most carefully kept away from the humorless. But to all jovial sinners it will be a refreshment and a delight." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ap 29 '51 1300w

" 'Damned Old Crank' is weightier than its title implies, an important as well as a fascinating book." Max Eastman

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 29 '51 1200w

"He was a bad writer, and these jerky, unrelated chapters have little to recommend them except honesty and salty eccentricity."

— + New Yorker 27:126 My 12 '51 160w

"This book, made up of selections from his random writings, is in my opinion the most penetrating and interesting document on journalism, its opportunities and its failings, that has ever been published in this country. Most books on journalism or journalists confine themselves to homilies, dramatics, and anecdotes. This is an essay in skepticism and a legacy of important experience which no student of the subject should fail to read carefully." M. R. Werner

+ Sat R of Lit 34:19 My 12 '51 800w

Time 57:115 Ap 30 '51 900w

Wis Lib Bul 47:159 Je '51

SEABRIGHT, LAWRENCE H. Selection and hardening of tool steels. 263p il $5 McGraw

672 Tool steel 50-11763

"A compact reference book designed as a systematic guide to the composition and properties of the commercially available tool steels. Information on the heat-treatment and working of the individual steels is included also. The book will be useful to tool designers, metallurgists and other technically trained people whose work requires an understanding of tool steels. In the 'Index to Tool Steels,' steels marketed under trade names are identified and the names of the suppliers are given." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 76:335 F 15 '51 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:16 Ja '51

SECHRIST, MRS ELIZABETH (HOUGH), comp. Poems for red letter days; il. by Guy Fry. 349p $3.50 Macrae Smith co.

821.08 Poetry—Collections. Special days 51-14010

A collection of poems for seasons, months, holidays, religious days, birthdays, and special days and weeks celebrated in the schools. Indexed by author, title, and first lines. Grades 6-9.

Booklist 48:131 D 1 '51

Kirkus 19:394 Ag 1 '51 130w

"Should by all means be recommended. . . [Book has] an attractive format, good binding, and a compiler with integrity, humor, and common sense." Mary Strang

+ Library J 76:2014 D 1 '51 60w

"A new anthology which will be very popular with schools and libraries." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p35 N 11 '51 90w

SEDILLOT, RENE. History of the world in three hundred pages; tr. from the French by Gerard Hopkins [Eng title: Bird's eye view of world history]. 320p $2.95 Harcourt

909 History, Universal 51-10309

Selective history of the world from prehistoric times to the machine age. Each chapter is devoted to a "people." The author is editor of La Vie Française. Maps on end papers. Index.

Booklist 47:326 My 15 '51

Bookmark 10:182 My '51 30w

"The art of simplifying all knowledge and bringing it in abbreviated and integrated form within the comprehension of the most modest intellect reaches a high-water mark when it succeeds in encompassing universal history in 300 pages of good, large, readable type. It should be said that M. Sédillot does not accomplish quite all that the title suggests. He might have applied the term 'pattern or framework' or, as Mr. Wells had it, 'outline' for his highly condensed review of selected civilizations. But unquestionably he packs in a remarkable compendium of information, which he presents with an awareness of dramatic values that infuses life and action into long-buried ages." Henry Sowerby

+ — Christian Science Monitor p9 My 2 '51 550w

Kirkus 19:171 Mr 15 '51 150w

"Interesting experiment in condensation of historical data and tendencies undertaken by the editor of La Vie Française, important French, economic journal. Attractive volume, well translated by Gerard Hopkins, and should be stimulating for general reader baffled by the complexities of universal history and especially for young people bored by the dullness of mere factual instruction. . . Recommended for general purchase." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 76:596 Ap 1 '51 90w

"Outlines of history are common enough, but I know of no other serious modern attempt to get the whole human story into three hundred pages of rather large type. Most theories of history could be expounded in less, but this is a narrative which undertakes to tell a story rather than merely to reveal a lesson and to give, moreover, due consideration to economic and social as well as political phenomena." J. W. Krutch

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Jl 15 '51 950w

"This French author has emulated the men who inscribe the Lord's Prayer on the head of a pin. He has compressed his history of the world into a brief book. . . Incredible as it may seem, he has done this with great success and with little essential left out. . . Naturally he will not satisfy everyone. The specialist will disagree with some of his interpretations and even the ordinary Anglo-Saxon reader may find an undue French bias. . . Still, he is a Frenchman and is entitled to think like one." T. C. Chubb

+ — N Y Times p15 My 6 '51 470w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Je 17 '51 290w

"The narrative does at least hint at the most important developments in world history, and this is no small achievement. Anybody with a good general knowledge of the subject is bound to admit this is a good 'refresher' book." Donald Derby

+ Springf'd Republican p20A My 13 '51

Wis Lib Bul 47:163 Je '51 260w

SEEGER, MRS RUTH PORTER (CRAWFORD). Animal folk songs for children; traditional American songs; il. by Barbara Cooney. 80p $2.50 Doubleday

784.4 Children's songs. Folk songs, American 50-11074

A collection of forty-three American folksongs adapted for children's singing. The majority of them are fresh notations from traditional singing, as found in the field recordings in the Archive of American folk song in the Library of Congress, a few are reprinted from other collections.

Booklist 47:208 F 1 '51

Bookmark 10:110 F '51 10w

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 18 '50 90w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '51

"This is a jolly book sure to bring laughter and fun whenever it is used. Mrs. Seeger is a musician and a student of folklore, as her interesting introduction testifies. Moreover, she is also a teacher and a parent and has used the songs with many children."

+ Horn Bk 27:41 Ja '51 160w

Kirkus 18:724 D 15 '50 150w

"Like the author's American Folk Songs for Children [Book Review Digest 1948] this is an excellent collection of traditional American songs." Clara Adams

+ Library J 76:55 Ja 1 '51 80w

"Mrs. Seeger is a scientific folklorist as well as a skillful musician, an artful teacher, and a practicing mother of four children. . . The illustrator, Barbara Cooney, has a way with all beasts of the field and fold. Her black and white drawings present a happy, harum-scarum world." D. G. Howard

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 8:388 Mr '51 350w

"All who own 'American Folk Songs for Children,' by this editor, agree with Virgil Thomson's review: 'This is a dream book for both children and parents. . . full of joy and jokes and human variety.' His words apply equally to her new book." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 D 31 '50 300w

SEEGER, R. P. C.—Continued

"Some of the forty-three songs in this collection will be familiar to children, but most of the volume is new enough to recommend itself to parents, teachers and just plain gift-givers. . . The piano parts are simple and Mrs. Seeger has been very generous with the verses. Those adults who prefer guitar or mandolin accompaniment will have little difficulty with the arrangements. And the nice thing is that the book is handy for children of all ages, whether they play the music themselves or have the music played to them." Thomas Lask
+ N Y Times p18 Ja 7 '51 230w

"This is a book that will be an asset to schools and kindergartens. It can bring endless pleasure to a family. The songs are easy to learn and practically impossible to forget."
+ Sat R of Lit 34:39 Ja 20 '51 230w
U S Quarterly Bk R 7:33 Mr '51 60w
Wis Lib Bul 47:66 Mr '51

SEEHAFER, EUGENE FRED, and LAEMMAR, JACK WILLIAM. Successful radio and television advertising. 574p il $6.50 McGraw
659.14 Radio advertising. Television in advertising 51-2828

"Written by a university professor and an advertising agency man, to show how the American businessman can utilize the American system of radio and television as a vital tool of successful selling. Broad range of subject matter from a description of the system of stations and networks, live and canned programs, selecting, testing programs, program ratings, deciding when to use radio and/or television." Library J

Reviewed by Winifred Baum
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 S 30 '51 20w
Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 76:871 My 15 '51 90w

SEELEY, MRS MABEL (HODNEFIELD). The stranger beside me. 272p $3 Doubleday 51-12483

A story of marriage. Carl Reiss is driven by an ambition to reach the top in the department store where he worked; Christine his quiet, efficient wife, had made a success of both her job and her marriage. Christine's tragedy was a birthmark on her neck, but she had won her battle and was a well-adjusted person; Carl's tragedy was that he was not capable of the success he wished.

Booklist 48:50 O 1 '51

"The plot outline indicates an intriguing story because basically the author does have hold of a dramatic idea, but fails to utilize the possibilities she has created for character contrast." Betty Swords
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 O 7 '51 300w
Kirkus 19:360 Jl 15 '51 180w
Reviewed by George Conrad
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 S 16 '51 380w

"Mrs. Seeley's main point—that if a wife is more successful than her mate, he rebels in one way or another—is well taken. But one wishes that she could have found a more tasteful way of putting it." Joyce Geary
N Y Times p21 S 16 '51 140w

"In 'The Birthmark' Hawthorne's skill created a tale of wincing horror and fascination. Mrs. Seeley's variation on the theme only succeeds in being distasteful and tedious." Ray Pierre
Sat R of Lit 34:40 O 6 '51 270w

SEID, RUTH (JO SINCLAIR, pseud). Sing at my wake. 391p $3.50 McGraw 51-10229

Character study of a woman in search of maturity. Cathy, after an insecure childhood, married Ken who was desperately in need of confidence. By degrees the marriage went to pieces, despite both parents' love for their son. After the divorce Cathy went back to her work and made a sucess of that, but not of her search for love. Not until the death of her ex-husband and her realization of her son's need of her did Cathy grow up.

Reviewed by August Derleth
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 22 '51 450w
Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '51

"The author does not deal with a social problem this time, but with an intensely personal problem—and in very personal, intimate, and at times brutally frank, terms. . . A difficult book for the reader, whose sympathies for Catherine wear thin long before the end. But a more maturely realized story than Wasteland, though it has less impact."
Kirkus 19:75 F 1 '51 210w

"An absorbing, skillfully presented portrait of a woman who let sex problems ruin her own life and the lives of all those near and dear to her. . . Recommended." Anne Whitmore
+ Library J 76:705 Ap 15 '51 80w
Reviewed by David Tilden
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ap 8 '51 440w

"In 'Wasteland,' Jo Sinclair covered the harsher outlines of psychiatric research with compassion and understanding. In her new novel she is the same sure compelling storyteller, delving into the morbid behavior patterns of her adult problem children. However, now the psychiatric message shows like a lighthouse. Her protagonists, for all the wealth of detail lavished on them, are frankly so many parts of an absorbing case history." Jane Martin
N Y Times p22 Ap 8 '51 320w

"Catherine's tormented existence enlists the reader's sympathy and pity, but it is difficult to accept the fate that denied her all contact with simpler, braver lives. Granting the insistence of the book's jacket on the 'modern' aspects of Miss Sinclair's second provocative novel, the facts remains that emotional and spiritual hunger are very old pains: somewhere at some time Catherine Ganly would under normal circumstances have witnessed a demonstration of the laughter and love by which a marriage endures." Josephine Lawrence
Sat R of Lit 34:25 Ap 7 '51 500w

SEIFERT, ELIZABETH (MRS JOHN GASPAROTTI). Miss Doctor. 280p $3 Dodd 51-9877

Story of a young doctor and the two men in her life—the older, experienced man who has been her mentor and friend from her student days, and the young, handsome blundering newcomer in the hospital who appeals to her helping instincts.

"Miss Seifert obviously knows her way around hospitals. Obviously, too, she knows her way around the rental-library spectrum of human emotions." Robert Hagy
N Y Times p19 My 13 '51 90w

"Miss Seifert's hospital background—though submerged—is excellent. Her characterizations are interesting. Yet she does little in this story but extol the advantages of 'sophistication,' as exemplified by Dr. Cowan. The popularity of her books is surprising, for she incessantly belittles the audience for which she writes." C. N. Govan
— + Sat R of Lit 34:44 Jl 14 '51 200w

"A light novel of pleasing interest." J. F. S.
Springf'd Republican p10D Ap 15 '51 50w

SEIGNOBOSC, FRANCOISE (FRANCOISE, pseud). Jeanne-Marie counts her sheep. [32p] il $2 Scribner 51-9415

A counting book for the very young. Jeanne-Marie thinks about what she will buy when Patapon, her sheep, has a lamb. Then she goes on and plans on all manner of other things which could be hers when there are more lambs.

Booklist 47:261 Mr 15 '51

Bookmark 10:134 Mr '51 10w

"It is a delightful addition to the very simple picture books which this artist has given the beginning readers' shelf." A. L. Shea
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p17 Mr 18 '51 150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '51

"The gayest, most childlike book of the spring for little children is Jeanne-Marie Counts Her Sheep." A. C. Moore
+ Horn Bk 27:94 Mr '51 40w

Reviewed by J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews
Horn Bk 27:101 Mr '51 80w

Kirkus 19:58 F 1 '51 110w

"Delightful picture book." M. E. Martignoni
+ Library J 76:526 Mr 15 '51 40w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 My 13 '51 330w

"It is so charming that young arithmeticians probably won't mind the realistic ending—just one lamb, after all." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p30 F 25 '51 140w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead
New Yorker 27:171 D 1 '51 50w

Sat R of Lit 34:40 Ap 21 '51 170w

Wis Lib Bul 47:123 My '51

SELSAM, MILLICENT (ELLIS). Play with vines; il. by Fred F. Scherer. 63p $2 Morrow

581.5 Climbing plants 51-5643

Describes the various means by which vines climb. Chapters include twining vines, leaf climbers, tendril climbers, and root climbers and weavers. For grades four to seven.

Booklist 48:38 S 15 '51

Kirkus 19:395 Ag 1 '51 90w

"Recommended for all children's libraries, especially school and nature libraries." N. S. Chasteen
+ Library J 76:1434 S 15 '51 50w

"Youngsters who do not care about gardening may be lured into an intelligent interest in growing things by these books, and most of their experiments can be tried in city or country, indoors or out. They are fine for schools and for children's classes at botanic gardens." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p28 N 11 '51 80w

"It is a detailed story of the habits of common vines: how they grow, what they feed on, how you can watch and check their growth through experiments that are simple and unfailingly fascinating. The illustrations are lovely in design."
+ Sat R of Lit 34:73 N 10 '51 60w

SELTZER, LAWRENCE HOWARD, and others. Nature and tax treatment of capital gains and losses. 554p $7.50 Nat. bur. of economic res.

336.243 Capital gains tax 51-5126

"With present tax rates, many business men believe that the only way left to make a fortune is through capital gains. But just what are capital gains and how do they differ from ordinary income in a legal sense? What steps are taxpayers taking in order that they may report profits as capital gains rather than as ordinary income? These and many related questions are discussed in this new study of an important tax question." Management R

Management R 40:724 N '51 70w

"A comprehensive and thorough survey." P. H. Wueller
+ Pol Sci Q 66:625 D '51 500w

SELWYN, ARNOLD. Retail jeweller's handbook and merchandise manual for sales personnel. 4th ed 422p il col pl $10 Chemical pub. co.

739.2 Jewelry 50-11117

"A comprehensive treatise dealing with every aspect of the jeweller's trade. Although written for the specialist, it covers an extremely wide range of subjects and affords a valuable and authoritative reference source. Historical notes, hall-marking, standards, over 300 illustrations and colored plates, design and fashion notes, innumerable charts and tables, as well as manufacturing information. Only minor changes evident between various editions. An English book." Booklist

---

Booklist 47:158 D 15 '50

N Y New Tech Bks 36:10 Ja '51

SENDREY, ALFRED. Bibliography of Jewish music. 404p $12.50 Columbia univ. press

781.971 Music, Jewish—Bibliography 50-11111

"The bibliographical entries, numbering more than 10,000, fall into two large groups, lists of books and articles about Jewish music and musicians, and lists of the musical compositions themselves. A well-organized table of contents will make it possible for the reader to find quickly the important literature about music in ancient Israel, music of the ghetto, music of the Reform Synagogue, Jewish musical education, Jewish composers, and the like. The user of this book will also be able to locate readily the traditional chants, settings of Kol Nidre, Jewish theatrical music, Zionist songs, and children's songs, among others." U S Quarterly Bk R

"This is a major effort; indeed, a pioneer work. While many individual or specialized bibliographies of the various periods and aspects of Jewish music are extant, it is undoubtedly Dr. Sendrey's merit to have compiled a comprehensive bibliography that contains almost all printed material that bears direct or indirect relation to the topic of the title. The work is so well organized that one almost wishes there were not so many sub-divisions and sub-headings." Eric Werner
+ — Music Lib Assn Notes 8:353 Mr '51 750w

"A sound and comprehensive bibliography, this book should do much to satisfy the growing interest in Jewish music and musicology. . . Monumental in its scope, this book is, not unexpectedly, flawed by some minor errors which will no doubt be rectified in later editions, and it lacks a subject index. It will, nevertheless, be a valuable reference tool and an indispensable basis for future scholarly work in its field."
+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 7:213 Je '51 270w

SERANNE, ANN, pseud. See Smith, M. R.

SEREDY, KATE. Gypsy; written and il. by [the author]. 62p $3 Viking

Cats—Legends and stories 51-12377

A picture story book about the life of a cat named Gypsy, from birth to the day when she herself had a family of kittens.

Reviewed by M. F. Kieran
Atlantic 188:102 D '51 40w

Booklist 48:38 S 15 '51

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 11 '51 30w

Reviewed by J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews
+ Horn Bk 27:424 D '51 80w

Kirkus 19:386 Ag 1 '51 100w

"An outstanding book." E. E. Frank
+ Library J 76:1710 O 15 '51 60w

"The pictures, to my taste, are not very successful. Probably it will appeal to most cat lovers over ten, and as a gift for adults." L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 S 30 '51 50w

SEREDY, KATE—Continued

"The large pictures on every other page amplify the story as well as illustrate it. Some of these are a little sentimental, others oversoft, but the best have caught the gawkiness and the grace of a kitten on the move." E. L. B.

N Y Times p28 S 16 '51 70w

"This is a book for art lovers as well as cat lovers. Each page is a faithful study, each a triumph of design."

+ Sat R of Lit 34:70 N 10 '51 110w

Wis Lib Bul 47:218 S '51

SESSIONS, ROGER HUNTINGTON. Musical experience of composer, performer, listener. 127p $2.50 Princeton univ. press

780.4 Music 50-10912

"A discussion (originally delivered as six lectures at the Juilliard School of Music in the summer of 1949) by one of our ranking composer-teachers. He analyses the roles of composer, performer, and listener—the three specialists whose functions formerly were handled by the musician himself. The days when the composer was his own interpreter and when there was no formal audience being over, Sessions undertakes to analyze and evaluate the situation which confronts us now." Library J

Booklist 47:202 F 1 '51

Christian Century 68:466 Ap 11 '51 400w

"For the musician, the book is well nigh essential reading; but the layman, as the author beautifully puts it, 'needs not to acquire facts but to cultivate senses,' will often be confronted with a set of technical presuppositions with which he may be unable to cope." K. G. Roy

Christian Science Monitor p8 Ja 6 '51 650w

Reviewed by C. K. Miller

Library J 75:2154 D 15 '50 80w

"The author's presentation of his ideas is not always a model of consistency. One reads at one spot that musical notation is well-nigh perfect, capable of setting down the subtlest ideas, and at another that notation is inexact. Once it is said that composers set down all the musical symbols needed by performers; elsewhere it is noted with more truth that composers are often careless and inaccurate in the use of such symbols. These tiny inconsistencies, however, do not prevent the book from being the best presentation there is of the most familiar philosophies and feelings of the finest musicians of this period. . . Many people will be interested in reading this book, even those who qualify neither as composer, performer, nor listener. There is little doubt, with the present differential between musical literacy and verbal literacy that Sessions' book will sell more copies than the scores of his symphonies, even though the language of the latter may be a more precise one." Henry Cowell

+ — Music Lib Assn Notes 8:168 D '50 1600w

"A professor of musical composition at the University of California, and one of our distinguished academic musicians as well as a serious and important creative artist, Sessions has arrived at his knowledge and his articulateness by sweat and patience. He is equipped by temperament with a blunt honesty that makes him intolerant of fraud and subterfuge. . . Some of his conclusions are revelatory, and most of them are thought-provoking." Cecil Smith

+ New Repub 123:20 D 18 '50 400w

Reviewed by V. I. Seroff

N Y Times p29 Ap 29 '51 700w

Reviewed by Jacques Barzun

Sat R of Lit 34:18 Jl 28 '51 1050w

Reviewed by Victor Prahl

Springf'd Republican p8C My 27 '51 420w

"The book is disappointing because it is elementary, jejune and pedestrian."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p435 Jl 13 '51 160w

"This book should be of interest, in one way or another, to all readers who are genuinely interested in music. Mr. Sessions expresses himself with moderation, perhaps too much moderation, in a literary style which, once in a while, is overly self-conscious."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:16 Mr '51 240w

SETON, ANYA (MRS HAMILTON CHASE). Foxfire. 346p $3 Houghton

50-11177

Story of the marriage of a cultured Eastern girl and a mining engineer who is one quarter Apache. Tho deeply in love, when marriage means living in an isolated mining town and sharing her husband's interest with his work, Amanda in her craving for better things nearly wrecks the relationship but an adventurous trip into a mysterious lost valley brings understanding and happiness.

Booklist 47:166; 174 Ja 1 '51

"Miss Seton does not romanticize the West; neither does she portray it in terms of naturalism. The clash, too, between the effete East and the silent, uncompromising, virile West is conveyed in appropriate action. The book's melodramatic climax does not wholly detract, at least in the persuasive moment of reading, from its adult appeal." Riley Hughes

+ — Cath World 172:393 F '51 210w

"Anya Seton, who has written some pretty good novels has written here the scenario for a grade B western. I say grade B because, except for the title which may be original for all I know, there isn't an original thought in the book. It has been months since I have seen such a complete inventory of cliches blended into a single volume." V. P. Hass

— Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 14 '51 240w

"The dramatic momentum here, the situation which sharpens sympathy, should make this successful stuff."

+ Kirkus 18:663 N 1 '50 180w

"Not many authors succeed so well as Mrs. Seton in combining adventure and romance in a modern setting. Above all it is the driving and relentless pursuit for a treasure which keeps the people and the episodes at pitch throughout. Good reading for the mature teenager as well as the seasoned borrower of fiction." Nathaniel Stewart

+ Library J 76:40 Ja 1 '51 110w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ja 7 '51 500w

"Anya Seton's new novel is written with sufficient skill to make for easy reading, and is equally easy to forget. She describes the Southwest with affection, but her story is totally lacking in originality." Jane Cobb

— + N Y Times p26 Ja 14 '51 120w

New Yorker 26:94 Ja 20 '51 60w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p15 F 4 '51 500w

"This is for no apparent reason under-pressure writing, hurried, repetitious, and pedestrian. Let up hope for fresher fields another time for Miss Seton, author of that fine novel of New England 'The Hearth and Eagle.'" C. M. Brown

— Sat R of Lit 34:14 F 10 '51 190w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p16A Ja 28 '51 240w

Wis Lib Bul 47:26 Ja '51

SETON-WATSON, HUGH. East European revolution. 406p maps $5.50 Praeger

940.55 Europe—Politics. Russia—Foreign relations 51-5987

"'The purpose of this book is both to describe and to analyze the sovietization of Eastern Europe.' Part I 'Background' covers, in different and shorter presentation, similar ground as author's earlier book on Eastern Europe (1945), sketching social structure, parties and politics. Part II 'Axis New Order and Resistance' leads to main part 'Sovietization'. Author describes work as 'intermediate between journalism and history.' " Library J

Reviewed by L. S. Stavrianos
Am Hist R 56:889 Jl '51 380w

"It is to be regretted that the author did not provide a more systematic bibliography in view of the great importance of his subject. Be that as it may, The East European Revolution should be read by all who seek a basic knowledge and understanding of the developments which actually led to Soviet-Communist domination of this area. It might well be read as a complement to Hamilton Fish Armstrong's Tito and Goliath." H. N. Howard
+ Ann Am Acad 278:239 N '51 550w

Reviewed by F. H. Soward
Canadian Hist R 32:268 S '51 280w

"In spite of some new material which, along with highly questionable interpretations, was taken, to a large extent, from Namier's Diplomatic Prelude, the survey of Hitler's conquest of Eastern Europe remains inadequate. But much better is the discussion of the Axis New Order, of the resistance movements, and of the relations between great and small allies during the war, and by far the most valuable part of the book is that which explains the post-war sovietization of both small allies and former Axis satellites." O. Halecki
+ — Cath World 174:75 O '51 550w

Christian Century 69:45 Ja 9 '52 100w

Reviewed by Ernest Pisko
Christian Science Monitor p9 Ja 9 '52 600w

Reviewed by N. S. Timasheff
Commonweal 54:627 O 5 '51 400w

Current Hist 21:166 S '51 50w

Foreign Affairs 29:676 Jl '51 50w

Reviewed by Kurt Schwerin
+ Library J 76:959 Je 1 '51 120w

Reviewed by A. J. P. Taylor
Manchester Guardian p4 O 24 '50 350w

"This is an extremely valuable book, one that should be read by any man who might expect one day to play a part in the revival of an independent Eastern Europe. It is refreshing to find a work on current world affairs that is free of clichés, bombast, oversimplification and omniscience. This is excellent and readable history." J. C. Harsch
+ New Repub 125:20 Jl 16 '51 800w

Reviewed by A. J. P. Taylor
New Statesman & Nation 40:478 N 18 '50 700w

"For a book so rich in content, this one seems to be remarkably free of errors of fact or interpretation." Emil Lengyel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Ag 26 '51 800w

"With this book Hugh Seton-Watson, now a lecturer in Modern History at Oxford University, establishes himself as the outstanding authority on the satellite countries of Eastern Europe." D. A. Schmidt
+ N Y Times p6 Je 10 '51 800w

"Mr. Seton-Watson is to be congratulated on this admirably competent and useful piece of work. . . Mr. Seton-Watson has a downright way with him. His new book, while showing some marks of haste, is none the less scholarly, and it is written with a determined integrity which will be evident to readers who may not agree with his every conclusion: it is likely to count as the standard work on the subject for a long time to come." Elizabeth Wiskemann
+ Spec 184:576 N 24 '50 750w

SEVENTEEN (periodical). Seventeen reader; stories and articles from Seventeen magazine, selected and edited by Bryna Ivens. 310p il $2.75 Lippincott

808.8 American literature—Collections
51-1421

An anthology of stories and articles selected from Seventeen magazine. For older boys and girls.

Booklist 47:239 Mr 1 '51

Bookmark 10:134 Mr '51 10w

Kirkus 19:66 F 1 '51 90w

"Would have preferred more stories and poems and fewer articles, but recommend as sure-fire for teen-age girls." B. W. Schein
+ Library J 76:531 Mr 15 '51 80w

"All in all, the book is a contemporary report on a continuing condition—that of being a young girl." M. L. B.
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 17 '51 200w

"High school girls will find in this collection . . . something more than the usual advice on everyday matters. There are, quite rightly, those ever-necessary articles dealing briskly with make-up, clothes, entertaining and the perennial problems and ethics of social life. What gives this book its tonic quality, however, are those articles which prod the reader into thinking more clearly about her future and her responsibilities." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p30 F 18 '51 150w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter
Springf'd Republican p30A Mr 18 '51 120w

SEVERN, CATHERINE. Reckless heart. 251p $3 Doubleday
51-11770

Portrays a West Virginia family, living in shabby gentility in the days just before World war I. The gentle, loving mother, Lisbee, the beautiful older daughter, and the moody, defiant father are the chief characters; the other daughter of the family is the narrator. The first love affair of Lisbee, which almost ended in disaster, provides the plot.

"A moving story of a mother's stanchness, tenderness, nobility in the midst of an erratic husband's essential shallowness, and a flighty daughter's efforts to find herself thruout the outbursts of her 'reckless heart.' " Henry Cavendish
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 12 '51 450w

Kirkus 19:279 Je 1 '51 200w

"In spite of some unevenness in both characterization and plot, the story is interesting and appealing. An addition to the 'lighter vein' department." E. P. Nichols
+ Library J 76:1223 Ag '51 70w

Reviewed by S. T. Williamson
N Y Times p12 Ag 5 '51 320w

"Occasionally Mary Cullen's recollections of her own experiences and emotions are moving and real, but for the most part I find the characters in this novel unconvincing, and the novel itself disorganized and undistinguished." S. H. Hay
— + Sat R of Lit 34:36 S 1 '51 390w

SEWELL, ELIZABETH. Dividing of time. 249p $2.75 Doubleday
51-9566

"The first-person story involves the soul-search for beauty in a Civil Service world of efficiency, utilitarianism and drabness. The unusual provocation of the novel emerges from its complex method—in which time is divided not only forward and backward but in different dimensions each instant. This division amounts to a schizophrenia in which the narrator does the Civil Service routine in one self—while the other self goes in search of the love and beauty." N Y Times

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Cath World 173:393 Ag '51 110w

Reviewed by J. F. Nims
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Jl 1 '51 650w

"Psychological symbolism is always rather intangible, but this is a delightful account of the vagaries of a roving mind not at one with itself and full of wild whimsies and fancies." L. E. Cannon
+ Christian Century 68:561 My 2 '51 220w

SEWELL, ELIZABETH—Continued

"A beautifully written first novel by a fresh and promising if still somewhat undisciplined talent."
+ Kirkus 19:34 Ja 15 '51 160w

Reviewed by H. I'A. Fausset
Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 13 '51 100w

Reviewed by Harvey Swados
Nation 172:351 Ap 14 '51 290w

Reviewed by Kate Simon
New Repub 124:21 Je 11 '51 330w

Reviewed by John Raymond
New Statesman & Nation 42:163 Ag 11 '51 270w

"The author is a young Englishwoman who received her A. B. at Cambridge before the last war, and after the war returned there (in book and actuality) for further degrees. It is not surprising to learn that her chief research has been in poetry. . . There are moments of cutting insight in the self-analysis of this novel, rare in a first book. Miss Sewell is now at work on another novel, which will probably go ahead of this one, now that the salutary but almost too great preoccupation with self has been written away." L. T. Nicholl
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ap 8 '51 500w

"Against an autobiographical background of three wartime years in London, Miss Sewell has written a first novel of more than usual interest. . . In a world becoming progressively more bureaucratic, any sincerely motivated search for love and beauty takes on a new importance." Samuel Withers
+ N Y Times p28 Ap 1 '51 210w

"It might be pointed out that what Miss Sewell has done is to put in allegorical terms what sounds a great deal like a psychoanalytical experience. However, there is nothing clinical or of a case history in her fluid, poetic style. She is a highly-talented writer, who has the gift of many children of mixing dreams with reality, of personalizing desires and of giving an aura of wonder, magic and mystery to every-day experiences." I. B.
San Francisco Chronicle p11 My 27 '51 350w

"Her language is simple, appropriate, and beautiful; she has a brilliant style. It is more a matter of stilling the mind to her mood of reflection, of traveling on in trust and alert attention in order not to miss the nuances. 'The Dividing of Time' has the flavor, depth, freshness, and sunny clarity of an earlier work . . . 'Phantastes,' by George MacDonald." Evelyn Eaton
+ Sat R of Lit 34:52 Ap 14 '51 450w

Reviewed by Tangye Lean
Spec 187:138 Jl 27 '51 120w

"The book hovers between Kafka and Dorothy Richardson and its chief merit is that it gives a perfectly accurate impression of the mind of a very young woman."
Times [London] Lit Sup p561 S 7 '51 160w

SEYBOLD, ETHEL. Thoreau; the quest and the classics. 148p $3 Yale univ. press

B or 92 Thoreau, Henry David. Classicism
51-1771

"This study began as an investigation of the facts of Thoreau's classicism. But when it was possible to say exactly what kind of classicist Thoreau was, there arose a second question: why was he a classicist at all? When a man who defined the cost of a thing as the amount of life one had to give in exchange for it was willing to spend 'youthful days and costly hours' in classical study, it may be assumed that for some reason he found the classics indispensable. The investigation became then an attempt to find that reason by locating in his classical reading the specific foci of his interest and establishing their relationship to the experiences of his life and thought." Pref

"The limitations of this study are tremendous. Its saving features are the appendices: the list of classical books Thoreau used, the compilation by author of his quotations from the classics, and the index of classical quotations, references and allusions. Miss Seybold's diligence in the unpublished manuscripts, like the clues in her text that are waiting to be seized, go unrewarded, because she has too narrowly construed Thoreau's interest in the classics as an 'antiquarian obsession.'" Sherman Paul
— + New Eng Q 24:400 S '51 440w

Reviewed by Maxwell Geismar
New Repub 124:24 My 7 '51 600w

"This is a work as much of devotion as of scholarship. A fine enthusiasm permeates it and carries over to the reader." J. T. Winterich
+ Sat R of Lit 34:30 Je 30 '51 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p527 Ag 24 '51 650w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:142 Je '51 270w

SHABAD, THEODORE. Geography of the USSR; a regional survey. 584p maps $8.50 Columbia univ. press

914.7 Russia—Description and travel
51-9701

"[This] volume might be termed a specialist's Baedeker on the U.S.S.R. The heart of it is a detailed regional description of the U.S.S.R.: republic by republic, province by province, and city by city. All the major territorial-administrative districts are covered and information provided regarding their population (where possible), economic importance and production, transport connections, and ethnic composition. No such comprehensive survey with such wealth of detailed information, place by place, has ever before been available in English." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

Am Pol Sci R 45:584 Je '51 60w

Reviewed by M. J. Proudfoot
+ Ann Am Acad 276:174 Jl '51 650w

Booklist 48:9 S 1 '51

Foreign Affairs 30:163 O '51 20w

"Highly recommended for reference collections." H. H. Bernt
+ Library J 76:598 Ap 1 '51 150w

"The great utility of this volume derives from the fact that with it at hand, a writer, editor, teacher, intelligence specialist (to whom this volume can be particularly recommended), or anyone else concerned with the U.S.S.R. can quickly look up the salient facts about any community of important size in that country. Mr. Shabad's basic card index from which he worked contained about 10,000 place names. . . This reviewer regrets that such an outstanding work of scholarship comes without any footnotes, useless adornments to some works, but essentials for anyone who would follow in the author's pioneering footsteps." Harry Schwartz
+ — N Y Times p17 Mr 11 '51 600w

"This laborious work should be of great interest to intelligence authorities. It has, however, a number of serious disadvantages, which reduce the value of the assembled material when put in the form of a textbook. . . What we have in this book is a glorified gazetteer. Shabad's familiarity with Soviet place names and Russian toponomy means that much of interest is included, but the student of the Soviet Union will prefer to use the Geography of the USSR as a reference book, not as a text." W. A. Hance
+ — Pol Sci Q 66:616 D '51 480w

"The 55 full-page maps which accompany the text are extremely good, and there are population tables, a good index and a selected bibliography." R. H. D.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 Ap 15 '51 160w

"The amount of information is suggested by the sixty pages of double-column index. Such data are invaluable for the specialist, but encyclopedias are not always interesting. It is no discredit to say that 'Geography of the U.S.S.R.' is not the book for the general reader who wants an evaluation of Soviet potentials. It is rather a reference volume of definitive value for the critical student." G. B. Cressey
+ Sat R of Lit 34:32 Je 16 '51 750w

"This is perhaps the most systematic, accurate and up-to-date geography of the Soviet Union available in English."
+ School & Society 73:142 Mr 3 '51 20w

Reviewed by P. E. Mosely
Yale R n s 41:141 autumn '51 350w

SHAFER, BURR. Through history with J. Wesley Smith. $2 Vanguard

741.5 Caricatures and cartoons 50-10989

Cartoons and captions show up the stupidity of the J. Wesley Smiths of the world about the facts of history from prehistoric times to the present. Appeared first in Saturday Review of Literature.

Booklist 47:171 Ja 1 '51

"Drawing and caption harmonize so merrily in these cartoons that one is reluctant to separate them. In most instances, the divorce would be wantonly unjust."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 F 25 '51 170w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ja 21 '51 160w

"For my money it's the happiest thing that has happened to encourage general interest in history since H. G. Wells's 'Outline.' " F. A. Clarvoe
+ Sat R of Lit 33:33 D 2 '50 380w

SHALLIT, JOSEPH. Lady, don't die on my doorstep. 252p $2.50 Lippincott 51-940

Mystery story.

Kirkus 18:738 D 15 '50 70w

"Here's a mystery which deals with an underworld fringe, but unlike many of this type, succeeds in making most of the characters credible."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 Mr 25 '51 150w

Reviewed by Margery Oakes
N Y Times p18 My 6 '51 90w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 4 '51 80w

"Good—if swallowed without thinking."
Sat R of Lit 34:40 Mr 10 '51 60w

SHALLIT, JOSEPH. Yell bloody murder. 220p $2.50 Lippincott
51-11204

Detective story.

Bookmark 11:85 Ja '52

"This has titillating summer resort atmosphere, snappy characterizations, volatile action, and an enjoyable hero sleuth." Drexel Drake
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 N 18 '51 110w

"A breathless exhilarating run around the place which ought to keep you busy enough to be content." James Sandoe
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 O 28 '51 130w

"I predict a rapid rise in popular favor for the Philadelphia detective Dan Morrison if his creator, Joseph Shallit, can keep on turning out stories as brightly unhackneyed as Yell Bloody Murder." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p30 O 28 '51 130w

"Fair enough mystery and good entertainment value." L. G. Offord
+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 O 21 '51 60w

"Not a must." Sergeant Cuff
Sat R of Lit 34:76 N 17 '51 40w

SHAMOS, MORRIS H., and ROTH, SIDNEY G., eds. Industrial and safety problems of nuclear technology; with contributions by P. C. Aebersold [and others]. 368p il $4 Harper

621.48 U.S. Atomic energy commission. Nuclear physics. Radioactivity—Safety measures 50-11302

"Lectures and panel discussions presented at New York University's Conference on Industrial and Safety Problems of Nuclear Technology in January 1950, co-sponsored by the Atomic Energy Commission. Contributors are leaders in industrial development, nuclear research, radiation medicine and casualty insurance. Devoted to constructive nonmilitary uses of atomic energy in its application to industry, agriculture, medicine, it represents an effort to adjust modern civilization to the impact of this new potent and as yet little-understood force." (Library J) No index.

"This is not a handbook giving answers to problems in a specific way. . . It is a timely report of progress to orient newcomers to the ranks of radioisotope users and industrialists who wonder what effect nuclear energy may have on their business." W. H. Ray
+ Am J Pub Health 41:463 Ap '51 330w

Booklist 47:170 Ja 1 '51

"A surprising amount of information of a practical nature is packed into the book, supplying answers to many questions confronting practitioners in many fields peripheral to this one. For the most part the treatment of all of the material is quite simple and should be easily intelligible to reasonably well-equipped technologists and scientists in collateral fields." Abel Wolman
+ Chem & Eng N 29:1446 Ap 9 '51 300w

Chem Eng 58:284 F '51 200w

"For the intelligent layman." J. E. Cross
Library J 76:47 Ja 1 '51 100w

Management R 40:103 F '51 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:13 Ja '51

SHANKLAND, ROBERT. Steve Mather of the National parks; introd. by Gilbert Grosvenor. 326p il map $4 Knopf

B or 92 Mather, Stephen Tyng. National parks and reserves—U.S. 51-10310

Biography of our first director of the National Parks service, who started the service, organized it, and ran it for fourteen years. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 47:345 Je 1 '51

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Je 3 '51 500w

Reviewed by R. R. Brunn
Christian Science Monitor p7 Je 28 '51 500w

Kirkus 19:22 Ja 1 '51 70w

"Recommended." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 76:513 Mr 15 '51 150w

Nation 172:525 Je 2 '51 60w

"Mr. Shankland has told a warmhearted story of Mather and the parks; told it with enthusiasm and directness. His sense of humor tempers what, in the hands of only too many writers on conservation subjects, might well have become merely laudatory or dull." Stewart Holbrook
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ap 22 '51 650w

"On the whole, this book tells the story of Steve Mather and the parks with a wealth of detail and appreciation. It does not go very deeply into the story of Mather as a man, though it sketches in his background and early business experience. He gave prodigally of his energy and generously of his wealth to advance the parks, and in doing so he made firm friends and bitter enemies." Hal Borland
+ N Y Times p16 Ap 22 '51 450w

"Robert Shankland has told Mather's story with zest, humor and a great deal of sympathy and understanding." R. H. Dillon
+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 My 6 '51 700w

SHANKLAND, ROBERT—Continued
Springf'd Republican p26A My 6 '51 500w
U S Quarterly Bk R 7:228 S '51 220w

SHARP, MARGERY (MRS GEOFFREY CASTLE). Lise Lillywhite. 274p $3 Little 51-13571

"Miss Lillywhite, seventeen years old, beautiful, bland, ingenuous, and apparently defenseless, arranges her future to suit herself, in spite of all the intrigues and blandishments of her relatives. She is adept in the art of never seeming to defy or disobey, and it is upon her mastery of this art that Miss Sharp builds her novel, which progresses from suitor to suitor, until the destined one is reached." New Yorker

Booklist 48:3; 86 S 1 '51; N 1 '51
Bookmark 11:34 N '51 30w
Reviewed by Olive Carruthers
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 4 '51 400w
Cleveland Open Shelf p28 N '51

"It is a charming tale with a surprise ending, and some subtle twists characteristically Margery Sharp. Modern, a blend of sophistication and simplicity, and while not top drawer Sharp, delightful time passing for the ladies."
+ Kirkus 19:448 Ag 15 '51 340w

"Margery Sharp handles all generations and all types with her usual skill and produces for many feminine readers in all libraries a pleasant novel." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 76:1703 O 15 '51 80w

"A charming piece of 'light fiction.'" Elizabeth Jenkins
+ Manchester Guardian p5 O 26 '51 80w
Reviewed by Jocelyn Brooke
New Statesman & Nation 42:648 D 1 '51 170w

"A very acute and searching study of snobberies. . . Miss Sharp writes so well that 'Lise Lillywhite' is a wholly successful novel—successful in the proper sense that it does just what it sets out to do and does it expertly." James Hilton
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 O 28 '51 750w

"The plot is unimportant. Miss Sharp's wise eye is shrewdly cocked at English society. She is a satirist who uses contrast to its full effect . . . in 'Lise Lillywhite,' placing Innocence, disturbing and attractive, against the background of an England full of racketeers, black marketeers, shady characters, and a handful of the bewildered Old Guard, ruined, and powerless now to impose their standards on the world. It is good material for Miss Sharp's urbane wit and for us it is good entertainment." Evelyn Eaton
+ N Y Times p36 N 4 '51 360w
New Yorker 27:138 O 27 '51 70w

"This time Margery Sharp follows the pattern of contemporary manners in a decorous minuet style with no kicking of an antic heel. But she hasn't lost her capacity to turn a saucy phrase or to promote a ready chuckle. She is pretty much entrenched in the love-and-laugh-at-humanity school, no doubt about it, and 'Lise Lillywhite' is as good a confirmation of this as one wants." J. V.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 N 25 '51 650w

"'Lise Lillywhite' is in the good Sharp tradition—and I mean Sharp with a capital letter and a small 's' both. Whether it is as good as 'Cluny Brown' and 'The Nutmeg Tree' and 'Britannia Mews' is immaterial, irrelevant, and all those other legal adjectives. It is enough that it is in the same vein of amusing, light fiction, done with a deft hand and a pleasure to read." R. C. Benet
+ Sat R of Lit 34:15 N 24 '51 750w
Reviewed by Marghanita Laski
Spec 187:718 N 23 '51 180w
Times [London] Lit Sup p705 N 9 '51 240w

SHARP, SAMUEL L. New constitutions in the Soviet sphere. 114p pa $1 Foundation for foreign affairs
342.4 Central Europe—Constitutional law
50-3734

"In this booklet Mr. Sharp contributes to our understanding of government and politics in the Soviet sphere by presenting 'an examination of the historical background, a brief history of the development of the concept of New or People's Democracy with examples of its application in practice, and a discussion of specific constitutional problems in some of the countries concerned'. . . The appendices, which constitute over half of the book, contain the texts of the new Hungarian Constitution, the Constitutional Act of Poland, and the Polish Declaration of Rights and Liberties; there is also a table comparing the provisions of the new constitutions of Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, and Yugoslavia." Ann Am Acad

Am Pol Sci R 44:1052 D '50 50w

"The principal value of this book lies in Mr. Sharp's treatment of postwar constitutional developments in the countries of eastern Europe, particularly Poland, Czechoslovakia, and Hungary, and his analysis of the concept of New Democracy." C. J. Schneider
Ann Am Acad 272:286 N '50 420w

SHAW, GEORGE BERNARD. Buoyant billions, Farfetched fables, and Shakes versus Shav. 138p $3 Dodd 822
51-10463

"Buoyant Billions is a rambling charade about a young world-betterer who ends up bettering only himself by marrying a rich man's daughter. . . Farfetched Fables, which reads like an outline of another Back to Methuselah, is Shaw's idea of what will happen after the world's present civilization is destroyed. . . Shakes Versus Shav is a puppet play in which he restates his half-serious, half-mocking claim to being the Shakespeare of his own day." Time

Booklist 47:342 Je 1 '51

"No one will accept these as being anything but an example of Shaw in his dotage. However, Shaw in his dotage is superior to most dramatists you can mention. Recommended for large drama and theatre collections." George Freedley
Library J 76:868 My 15 '51 30w
Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
Nation 172:565 Je 16 '51 500w

"The overemphatic old talker sometimes loses his train of thought. And yet there is something impressive about this final volume of plays, turned out by Shaw in his nineties. It is interesting and satisfying to see evidence that so old a brain can go on thinking with animation almost to the last moments of consciousness. It lends a certain plausibility to Shaw's conception of the discarnate vortices; and it can almost make one believe that the intellect—this is a theme that runs through the whole volume—has, to some degree, mastered already the power of liberating itself from the body." Edmund Wilson
New Yorker 27:101 Je 2 '51 600w
Time 57:118 My 14 '51 750w

SHAW, IRWIN. Troubled air. 418p $3.75 Random house
51-11045

"Clement Archer, director of a popular radio program, was ordered to fire five actors only suspected of Communism. They were his best friend Victor Herres; the Jewish composer Pokorny; Stanley Atlas, Negro funnyman; Frances Motherwell, beautiful, wealthy, flagrantly unprincipled; Alice Weller, a widow with one son. He asked for two weeks in which to help them clear their names. During that time the appalling realism of American Fascism mutilated Archer's attempts, causing suicide, destruction and evil triumphant within a whited sepulchre of democracy." Library J

"It is an ably written and very skillfully plotted piece of fiction, charged with ascending tension and a strong element of surprise." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 188:86 Jl '51 350w

Booklist 47:382 Jl 1 '51

Bookmark 10:232 Jl '51 50w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 173:390 Ag '51 320w

Reviewed by Kelsey Guilfoil

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Je 10 '51 360w

"A deepening and tightening of the basic conception, a more vital integration of brilliant single scenes and dialogue, would, at least for this reviewer, make a more satisfying novel. But of integrity of purpose there is no question." Ruth Chapin

+ — Christian Science Monitor p9 Jl 7 '51 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '51

Reviewed by Joe Dever

Commonweal 54:339 Jl 13 '51 400w

Kirkus 19:191 Ap 1 '51 230w

"Here is truly an astringent warning, presented with unassailable maturity of style and thought. Required reading." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 76:960 Je 1 '51 120w

"That the political novel is difficult to shape has been the discovery of many writers since 1945. . . Shaw is aware of the problem, of course, and meets it by introducing subsidiary themes. . . But since the fusion is incomplete, the secondary elements seem irrelevant, posing still another problem. So exacting is the form of the political novel that for successful examples one must still turn to Dostoevsky, Kafka, and Malraux." Stephen Stepanchev

Nation 172:592 Je 23 '51 600w

"The defects of the Troubled Air are literary; its virtues are the virtues of the mind. Shaw brings to bear upon his problem a sophisticated intelligence and an expert grasp of native Communist machinery and mentality. . . The writing is lathered up with a lot of wisecracking drivel—an accurate reproduction of smart-world patios, I am sure, but depressing nonetheless—but it is also studded with shrewd observations and provocative insights." David Goldknopf

+ — New Repub 125:21 Jl 2 '51 550w

"'The Troubled Air' is Irwin Shaw at his characteristic best, seizing passionately on a vital social issue and presenting it with a firm grasp not only of the intellectual and moral values but of the many kinds of human beings it involves. If at times it seems too smart and well-machined these are faults not difficult to overlook in so mature a novel on so urgent a theme." Milton Rugoff

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Je 10 '51 1200w

"Shaw's attitude toward Archer is not clear. Though vivid, dramatic and highly readable, 'The Troubled Air' reflects the limitations of the New York world it describes. It fails to suggest that despite and beyond Clement Archer's experience a traditional Americanism still exists—not terrorized, not ready to make this country over in the image of its totalitarian enemy." R. G. Davis

N Y Times p8 Je 10 '51 600w

Reviewed by Anthony West

New Yorker 27:109 Je 16 '51 1450w

"In his new novel Shaw shows his talents at their sharpest. He has written a story here that has all the marks of the expert, and that will have great emotional impact upon even the most hardened reader of fiction. That he can do this and still have his novel remain only a pamphlet in the larger sense, is the measure of his talent. Good as the book is, it is still a spoonful of message, and even if the message is one that should be heeded, the novel falls short of top quality for the reason that this shows too plainly." J. H. Jackson

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p20 Je 11 '51 1150w

"Irwin Shaw's best work is still in the short story—this is the medium that allows his particular gifts of observation and sentiment to appear to their best advantage. . . This is not to say that 'The Troubled Air' is without interest. Indeed, I am inclined to believe that nothing Mr. Shaw might write could be wholly lacking in interest of one kind or another. For one thing, he always does observe and always does feel, and even when he is facile in observation and sentiment he is not insincere. And then he has established himself in a position which guarantees at least the historical or sociological or cultural interest of whatever he writes." Lionel Trilling

+ — Sat R of Lit 34:8 Je 9 '51 1000w

Time 57:116 Je 11 '51 320w

"The Troubled Air is the best American novel about Communism that has yet been written." Paul Pickrel

+ Yale R n s 40:768 summer '51 270w

SHAW, LAU, pseud. See Shu, C.

SHAW, RALPH ROBERT. Literary property in the United States. 277p $6 Scarecrow press

655.673 Copyright 50-11418

"'This book attempts to determine from the primary sources—the American court records—just what literary property is; what it is intended to protect; why; how; and for whom; the extent to which these goals have been achieved; and what, if anything, may be done about it.'—Preface. A thorough investigation that should be of great value to authors, publishers, or others dealing with the printed word. Problems of international copyright are not treated." Booklist

Booklist 47:216 F 15 '51

"There are many suggestions in the book that seem ill advised or even dangerous to me. . . But there is also much that is valuable and provocative in Mr. Shaw's book. . . Certainly, of his main thesis, that the law needs revision, there is no doubt." Margaret Nicholson

+ — Library Q 21:222 Jl '51 1350w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:180 Je '51 300w

SHAY, MRS EDITH (FOLEY), and SHAY, FRANK, eds. Sand in their shoes; a Cape Cod reader. 364p $3.50 Houghton

974.49 Cape Cod, Massachusetts. American literature—Collections 51-10627

An anthology of writings about Cape Cod from the earliest seventeenth century to the present. Excerpts are arranged under such headings as: the first comers; life in the old colony; independency; the present ruinous and unhappy war, 1811-1814; the business of the sea; the captain's table; and after three centuries.

Booklist 47:343 Je 1 '51

Bookmark 10:206 Je '51 30w

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 17 '51 550w

"To the true lover of the Cape, this book is for picking up, for browsing through, to go back to time and again. For that poor one who must hie himself inland in the winter, a copy of this book would be a rare companion. To those who truly have the Cape's 'sand in their shoes,' indeed, who have had it in their hair and in their clothes, who have lain on a dune to watch the wind-blown grass draw perfect circles in the sand, this book will be a compendium of pleasure." H. B. Ellis

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 31 '51 500w

"Here is a book that those of us who have our roots in the dunes will recognize as the classical core of Cape Cod's literature. It is a sound and sizable anthology whose editorial comment is warm-hearted, friendly, and wise. Here, too, is an anthology that dares to include the early accounts of the Cape without modernizing them cheaply, that even has the courage to combine literature with food recipes!" Elizabeth Reynard

+ New Eng Q 24:412 S '51 500w

SHAY, E. F.—Continued

"'Sand in Their Shoes' gives you an idea of why such numbers of people find an enduring fascination in the Cape and come here to settle or to spend every minute that can be spared, filling their shoes with sand and feeling that they belong, even if no native Cape Codder will admit it." Richardson Wright

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Je 3 '51 700w

"The book is an extraordinarily rich one. . . Here not many aspects of the Cape have gone unrecorded, and the only lack, a rather astonishing one, is the failure to include a section or at least an essay on the art which has found fertile ground in the Cape sand. . . The painters who have come to make their home on the Cape have formed an important and respected group among American artists. And I am disappointed that little has been included about the Portuguese, Finns and Bravas who have come to the Cape and made a place there. However, even with these omissions the Shays have compiled about the best possible Cape Cod Reader." Harry Sylvester

+ — N Y Times p6 Je 3 '51 550w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Jl 22 '51 230w

Springf'd Republican p5D Je 17 '51 350w

Wis Lib Bul 47:163 Je '51

SHAYON, ROBERT LEWIS. Television and our children. 94p $1.50 Longmans

791.4 Television broadcasting 51-9732

"These chapters appeared first as series of articles in Christian Science Monitor during September 1950. It is written for parents, teachers or anyone genuinely concerned with the relationship of children to television, in particular, and also the other mass media of communication—radio, newspapers, books, movies, etc. Author's intention is to make available to general reader knowledge long familiar to the expert." Library J

Bookmark 10:156 Ap '51 30w

Reviewed by A. F. Klein

Canadian Forum 31:95 Jl '51 180w

Reviewed by Larry Wolters

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 11 '51 300w

"Anyone who is worried about the impact of television will welcome this little book. Mr. Shayon's analysis of the problem doesn't make the worrying any easier, but he helps give it direction and focus. He states the leading questions." R. D. McCann

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Mr 24 '51 420w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell

Churchman 165:16 My 1 '51 110w

"Mr. Shayon speaks from a background of sound child psychology. He uses recent studies and surveys to support his statements. Television and Our Children is a first book in this area. It is an excellent statement of conditions as they are. It would be especially useful to community groups and educational organizations initiating a movement to revamp the quality of television and other mass media programs." K. W. Kinyon

+ J Home Econ 43:727 N '51 280w

Kirkus 19:84 F 1 '51 150w

"Volume should prove both useful and popular to group for whom it is intended." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 76:325 F 15 '51 80w

"Robert Lewis Shayon, the author of this timely brochure, is justly famous in radio. He is one of the two or three most imaginative, most creative radio directors in the country. But now Shayon is a critic." Saul Carson

+ New Repub 124:22 Mr 5 '51 550w

Reviewed by Marc Rivette

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Mr 21 '51 100w

Reviewed by Edward Stasheff

Sat R of Lit 34:31 Je 30 '51 1200w

School & Society 74:223 O 6 '51 40w

SHEA, NANCY BRINTON. Air force wife. 362p $3 Harper

358.4 U.S. Air force. Etiquet 51-229

"With insight into the psychological problems peculiar to the men who fly, an Air Force wife offers common-sense advice to both officers' and airmen's brides on all phases of Service life in assignments at home or abroad." (Bookmark) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 47:215 F 15 '51

Bookmark 10:156 Ap '51 40w

"It is a handbook of importance to the service wife . . . for the detail and facts are well assembled."

+ Kirkus 18:687 N 15 '50 140w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ja 13 '51 90w

Wis Lib Bul 47:84 Ap '51

SHEEAN, VINCENT. Indigo bunting; a memoir of Edna St. Vincent Millay. 131p $2.50 Harper

B or 92 Millay, Edna St Vincent 51-13495

"This book is an appreciation of an aspect in the life of Edna St. Vincent Millay which reflects as much as any other the essence of her nature and her poetry—her extraordinary relationship with the birds." Publisher's note

Booklist 48:84 N 1 '51

Bookmark 11:33 N '51 20w

"It is unkind to be critical of a labor of love; yet one must mention certain weaknesses of this memorial. First, it is overlong. . . One resents the specious intensity of certain passages; Mr. Sheean, one suspects, is not nearly so breathless and defenseless before beauty as he claims. His good, serviceable prose becomes at times embarrassingly elegant. . . Edna Millay deserves a better memorial and Mr. Sheean owes his readers a better book—no matter what its subject. Yet admirers of Miss Millay must be grateful to him for a few brief and sympathetic glimpses into her later years." R. L. Lowe

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 4 '51 450w

Reviewed by Ruth Chapin

Christian Science Monitor p5 D 27 '51 140w

Cleveland Open Shelf p27 N '51

"A perceptive, sensitive, scholarly study, in part a very personal record, in part an analysis of the peculiar qualities of her genius."

+ Kirkus 19:514 S 1 '51 150w

"Mr. Sheean's admiration for her genius, her scholarly knowledge of the poetic art and the writings of poets of all ages, and her rare charm induced him to write a lovely book. Highly recommended for all libraries." H. R. Forbes

+ Library J 76:1563 O 1 '51 90w

Nation 173:360 O 27 '51 160w

"Ostensibly this unusual and extremely interesting little book is the memoir of a poet. In some part, indeed, that is what it actually is for it contains both a criticism of Miss Millay's work and some of the facts of her life. But it is also, and more importantly, a fragment of the author's own spiritual autobiography." J. W. Krutch

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 O 21 '51 1650w

"In spite of Sheean's somewhat naive approach to his subject, he has done a likeness which in the larger sense is true portraiture. He does not make the point that even knowledge, of which Edna Millay had a considerable store, did not deprive her of that innocence which was the simple spirit and substance of something he took to be more formally mystic. None the less, he does reflect faithfully and with dignity a good part of the light and warmth given off by one of the most remarkable personalities in American poetry." Raymond Holden

+ N Y Times p7 O 21 '51 750w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter

Springf'd Republican p6D D 30 '51 420w

SHEED, FRANCIS JOSEPH, comp. The Mary book. 411p pl $4 Sheed

232.931 Mary, Virgin 50-10126

A collection of articles, stories, poems, and pictures about the adoration of the Virgin Mary.

Reviewed by N. K. Burger

N Y Times p51 N 12 '50 140w

"A better book for a Christmas gift to a Catholic friend can hardly be imagined." E. M. T.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 D 24 '50 70w

SHEEHY, MAURICE STEPHEN. Head over heels; a guide for the better self. 178p $2.75 Farrar, Straus

248 Christian life 51-11771

"Through many examples taken from his experiences as a Chaplain in the Pacific Theatre of World War II, the author demonstrates how the love of God has affected the lives of scores of young men who came under his personal supervision." Library J

Kirkus 19:561 S 15 '51 100w

"A simple, straightforward and honest confession of faith." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 76:1217 Ag '51 90w

Reviewed by J. W. Chase

N Y Times p38 S 23 '51 130w

Reviewed by O. J. Aldrich

Springf'd Republican p14C O 14 '51 160w

SHEEN, FULTON JOHN. Three to get married. 310p $3 Appleton

173.1 Marriage 51-11008

"A presentation of the attitude of the Roman Catholic Church to the nature and problems of marriage. It is not so much a 'marriage guide' as the term has come to be popularly used, as an illustration of the meaning of marriage. For the third person of this book's title is God." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"A book destined for an intellectual Catholic market, and a receptive non-Catholic market."

Kirkus 19:174 Mr 15 '51 280w

"Bishop Sheen, National Director of the Society for the Propagation of the Faith, is a master of the simple declarative sentence and the categorical statement, and their usage in this his latest book is of high value in giving clarity and precision to his presentation."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Jl 15 '51 360w

"The current state of marriage is such that many will look to this book for help who are not of Monsignor Sheen's religious persuasion. And help they will find. . . The work is replete with fruitful analogies, but it is less rich in direct illustrative material. For example, one with problems of marital adjustment would find scant help from the author's concluding series of highly stylized —if not fanciful—vignettes, involving for the most part marriages of members of the nobility." J. A Pike

+ — N Y Times p4 Je 3 '51 600w

SHELLABARGER, SAMUEL. Lord Chesterfield and his world. 456p $5 Little

B or 92 Chesterfield, Philip Dormer Stanhope, 4th earl of 51-14196

"This book was published by Macmillan Company, Toronto, in 1935 under the title, Lord Chesterfield. An examination of the text now published by Little, Brown shows that the handful of changes made are negligible—a word here, a phrase there. There is no new material." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"Dr. Shellabarger keeps in the foreground the intimate connection between Chesterfield's conduct and teaching, and the rationalism of his time. While not a rationalist himself, Shellabarger appreciates the fine fruits of the Age of Reason almost as keenly as he deplores its confining cynicism. His book is at times repetitious; occasionally it strikes a sententious note; and I find myself wincing at the profligate use of exclamation marks. But this is marginal. Dr. Shellabarger's biography is an enjoyable and illuminating picture of a life whose impresario was worldly ambition." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 188:92 D '51 550w

Booklist 48:124 D 1 '51

Bookmark 11:83 Ja '52 30w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 D 16 '51 270w

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds

Christian Science Monitor p5 D 27 '51 600w

"In a style that would not be out of place in that century of great English prose, Dr. Shellabarger presents a constantly engaging picture of an extraordinary man and the extraordinary age of which he was both a product and a fashioner. It is a richly satisfying study." P. V. Farrell

+ Commonweal 55:260 D 14 '51 550w

Kirkus 19:521 S 1 '51 210w

"Libraries owning the book since 1935 can estimate their need for another edition. Other librarians will find it a searching, well-documented account of the man who was essayist, letter-writer, politician, diplomat and representative par excellence of 18th century England at its best and at its worst." R. B. Robertson

+ Library J 76:1702 O 15 '51 80w

"The faults of the book are minor: occasionally the background is so lurid that it looks technicolored; a sprinkling of clichés; a patronizing tone toward rationalism. These hardly matter in a book that is so shapely, thorough, and readable."

+ — Nation 173:529 D 15 '51 200w

"In spite of all his artistry, Mr. Shellabarger cannot make Chesterfield sympathetic. . . However repellent this may be, Chesterfield cannot be dismissed as an unimportant figure. Both his life and his letters are the essence of a significant aspect of his time. A good biography was needed and this book fills the need. It also confirms the inescapable conclusion about Chesterfield that Johnson reached: 'His letters betray no want of abilities, but the bad use he has made of them.' " H. W. Liebert

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R pl N 18 '51 1200w

"There is no denying that Shellabarger makes out a powerful case and it would be no bad thing for scholarship if something like his passionate involvement in the issues raised were more common than it is." J. W. Krutch

+ N Y Times p5 N 4 '51 1150w

"Mr. Shellabarger's portrait is thoughtfully written, and he is scrupulously fair, despite his obvious sympathy for the loutish son, but his prose would have profited from more study of His Lordship's."

+ New Yorker 27:166 N 24 '51 120w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 25 '51 400w

Time 58:63 D 31 '51 600w

SHEPARD, HAROLD HENRY. Chemistry and action of insecticides. 504p il $7 McGraw

632.951 Insecticides 51-3427

"A compact work suited especially to quick reference use in agricultural and technical libraries and in the offices of county agents.

SHEPARD, H. H.—Continued
Insecticides currently of importance are described as to their sources, chemical nature, uses, and toxicity. Special attention is given to toxic effects upon plants and animals. The chapters are essentially résumés of published literature including patents, and references to this literature are given both in the text and in the chapter bibliographies. The author is on the staff of the United States Department of Agriculture." N Y New Tech Bks

---

Booklist 47:341 Je 1 '51

"The book is well written and will be a valuable aid to chemists, entomologists, and others interested in the chemical control of injurious insects." H. L. Haller
+ Chem & Eng N 29:4316 O 15 '51 200w

"One of the authorities in the field of insecticides has produced a book intended for both reference-shelf and classroom use. Insecticides are discussed in a very logical manner, starting with the inorganic materials which have longest been used and bringing the reader up-to-date." G. W. M.
+ Chem Eng 58:358 S '51 200w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 76:1134 Jl '51 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:37 My '51

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:324 S '51 150w

SHEPARD, ODELL, and SHEPARD, WILLARD ODELL. Jenkins' Ear; a narrative attributed to Horace Walpole. 474p $3.50 Macmillan

51-9818

"Taking the War of Jenkins' Ear (1739-41) as the starting point, a group of men assembled at Strawberry Hill relate how their lives were made wretched by this unnecessary war. Among them is a mysterious Jacobite, who may have been Bonnie Prince Charlie, himself. The book is in the form of a letter written by Horace Walpole in the year 1755, and proceeds, with 18th century deliberation and many digressions and ramblings." Library J

"I think the story, which has much of natural vigor, is handicapped by a lack of direction and slowed by the too self-conscious mannerisms of the narrator." Edward Weeks
Atlantic 187:74 Ap '51 180w

Booklist 47:54; 255 O 1 '50; Mr 15 '51

Bookmark 10:185 My '51 40w

"'Thou shalt not bore' was the unwritten law of Strawberry Hill, and the reader who relishes history with literary backgrounds and illusions will find that the Shepards observe that law as they extend the dimensions of mere fact to embrace history's romantic and gallant spirit." Riley Hughes
+ Cath World 173:232 Je '51 300w

"The quality of this book is high. Some of the separate narratives embedded in it, such as the voyage of the ill fated Wagner, are splendid of themselves. Yet the highly elaborate structure is, as a whole, confusing and frequently tedious." Edmund Fuller
+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 1 '51 370w

"Its style, so superbly sustained, is its triumph. The novel is 'written' as Henry James meant the word, not overwritten, nor in any purple sense, but simply as continuous music to the mind as it perceives the story being conveyed with all the resources of our orchestral language, piccolo included. The range is wide, from butterfly wit, through pathos, to the tremendous picturings of disaster and on into the subtlest nuances of the spirit." T. M. Longstreth
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 29 '51 1200w

"There's enormous research and scholarship here, but the mannered style of the telling, the ramifications of Walpole's deliberate digressions, while lending a note of authenticity may well deter the average reader from the sheer labor of following the narrative. For the scholar of the period, it offers recompense."
+ Kirkus 18:534 S 1 '50 380w

"The various stories, which are not without interest, are left like assorted pieces of laundry, flapping on the line of Jenkins' Ear. It is too long, and too loosely constructed." J. L. Ross
Library J 75:1662 O 1 '50 110w

"It is all very fanciful, and it suggests that when the Shepards depart from history they overstep the line between the imaginative and the bizarre. Yet on the whole the story holds up well." Henry Commager
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ap 8 '51 1400w

"An interesting and reasonably exact job of literary counterfeiting, crowded with enough bizarre history to fill a half dozen romances." Richard Match
+ N Y Times p5 Ap 1 '51 550w

New Yorker 27:119 Ap 7 '51 130w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles
San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 22 '51 900w

"The difficulty with so ambitious an effort is that it tends to fall apart for lack of a real center of interest. To overcome the difficulty the Shepards have offered the mind of Horace Walpole as a digester of the material. But the mind of Walpole as re-created by the Shepards is curiously arid. There is little nourishment to be found in an intelligence made up of poses, pretentions, mincing niceties, and confusions." James Gray
Sat R of Lit 34:53 Ap 14 '51 900w

Reviewed by Richard Henchey
Springf'd Republican p8C Ap 29 '51 150w

Time 57:100 Ap 2 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p725 N 16 '51 730w

SHEPPARD, HUGH RICHARD LAWRIE. Best of Dick Sheppard; ed. with an introd. by Halford E. Luccock. 162p $2.50 Harper

208.1 Theology. Sermons 51-9056

Selections from the writings of this one-time Vicar of St. Martin-in-the-Fields, London, who died in 1937. There is a biographical introduction by the editor.

Bookmark 10:108 F '51 30w

+ Christian Century 68:145 Ja 31 '51 220w

Reviewed by R. E. Keighton
Crozer Q 28:187 Ap '51 200w

"A spirit such as this is difficult to be communicated by the printed page, but this attempt would be worth while if but an infinitesimal fraction of his compelling message were passed on to the Christans of today."
+ Kirkus 19:53 F 1 '51 160w

SHERA, JESSE HAUK, ed. Bibliographic organization. See Chicago. University. Graduate library school

SHERIDAN, JOHN DESMOND. Magnificent MacDarney; il. by Emil Antonucci. 309p $3 Pellegrini & Cudahy

51-10312

"The Magnificent MacDarney is a Dubliner of 66 who looks 10 years younger; a poseur, an actor, a jack-of-all-trades and amiable drifter whose weakness is whisky and whose strength is the ability to deceive himself—and others—by a series of straight-faced lies. . . Engaged by a film company as an extra on location . . . through inability to rise early after a night's drinking, he loses his job. . . He is killed at last, by a car, crossing the street after a Catholic Retreat to which some boon companions had taken him, and dies, therefore, in a state of grace; his devoted wife follows soon after, leaving a disillusioned daughter to perpetuate the dynasty." Times [London] Lit Sup

---

"Mr. Sheridan does a wonderfully dexterous job with MacDarney showing at once the 'littleness of the man' and the cosmic side of his fecklessness. All in all, a grand spot of Irish." Riley Hughes
+ Cath World 173:474 S '51 270w

Reviewed by J. M. Flynn
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Je 24 '51 420w

Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 My 27 '51 750w

"Mr. Sheridan, a Dublin writing man with a talent sharpened by several volumes of light essays and three previous novels, sees right through MacDarney. . . The author ironically reveals that our hero has no stature at all except as foil for more important supporting players. . . Mr. Sheridan knows these people who invent the twinkling gaiety of dingy bars or share the quiet heroism of a Camelot Terrace. They are the obscure humans of any city any year, presented with low-pressure realism which will involve most readers from beginning to end." James Kelly
+ N Y Times p29 Ap 1 '51 320w

"A slight novel in which the author, by pure ingenuousness or pure nerve, gets away with a set of characters and a situation taken straight from stock without alteration. . . Mr. Sheridan's writing is brisk and undemanding."
New Yorker 27:138 Ap 14 '51 60w

"A cleverly written comedy-drama, which leaves one with high hopes of the author's future performance as a novelist."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p257 Ap 28 '50 330w

SHERIDAN, JUANITA. Kahuna killer. 218p $2.50 Doubleday 51-10228

Detective story.

Kirkus 19:139 Mr 1 '51 60w

"A feminine mystery, lively enough in a conventional way."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p27 My 13 '51 140w

"The local color may be a little lushly laid on for some tastes; but it's all fascinating, and the story carries genuine excitement and suspense." Anthony Boucher
+ — N Y Times p21 My 20 '51 120w

"This is a satisfying book." L. G. Offord
+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 22 '51 80w

"Fresh, original, intelligent." Kathleen Sproul
+ Sat R of Lit 34:45 Je 23 '51 40w

SHERMAN, HENRY CLAPP. Nutritional improvement of life. 270p $3.75 Columbia univ. press
641.1 Nutrition. Diet 50-8624

"The first seven chapters show the steps by which, during the past 60 years, we have attained our present understanding of what nutrition can do for the health and welfare of mankind. The remaining five chapters discuss the most recent developments and what these mean in terms of improvement of all aspects of life." (J Home Econ) Bibliography. Index.

"The wealth of information presented in the book is clearly organized, presented in language readily understood by laymen, and best of all, conclusions can be relied upon for truthfulness as well as interest." C. G. King
+ Chem & Eng N 28:4392 D 11 '50 230w

"The book is well indexed and has an extensive selected bibliography. It is a book to read and keep close at hand for continued reference because, as Dr. Sherman says, 'Nutrition is everyone's adventure.'" E. N. Todhunter
+ J Home Econ 43:47 Ja '51 200w

"Dr. Sherman refers not only to his own findings but to those of many others who have done research in everything from amino acids through the vitamins. The latter are discussed somewhat extensively, but anyone wishing to learn more about the former would do better to consult other sources. The title of the book is apt, but, jacket to the contrary, the book will appeal far less to the layman than to the student." D. H. T.
San Francisco Chronicle p15 Jl 30 '50 130w

SHERMAN, RICHARD. Kindred spirit. 148p $2.50 Little 51-121

A middle-aged writer of whodunits suddenly realizes how aimless her life is. Discovering in a lending library a W. Brown whose reading tastes are her own she falls in love with him, altho she never sees him. On the day she had picked for the meeting her pathetic love story collapses.

Booklist 47:181; 220 Ja 15 '51; F 15 '51
Bookmark 10:109 F '51 40w
Kirkus 18:706 D 1 '50 130w

"Charmingly amusing at first the mood grows tense, mounting to shock at the tragic end." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 76:180 F 1 '51 70w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 F 11 '51 400w

"As a slick-paper tour de force, the book moves smoothly enough, but you'll have to be a Sherman fan from way back to stay to the end." Mary Ahern
N Y Times p21 F 11 '51 230w

"Purely as a story, this will seem a bit contrived to many. . . What makes it more than that is the author's frank examination of an all-too-common situation, and one which, in these days of people massing in the big cities, is commoner than many suppose. Mr. Sherman's ability to wrap his tender little story credibly around this condition and its consequences is enough to set the story a bit higher than it otherwise would rate." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 26 '51 750w

"It is difficult to accept this book as the work of so professional a writer as Richard Sherman, whose third novel, 'The Bright Promise,' was a Literary Guild selection in 1947." J. M. Grant
— Sat R of Lit 34:38 F 17 '51 270w

"The plot is ingenious, with an ironical twist which most readers will see coming, but none the worse for that. This sad but urbane story, Mr. Sherman's second, keeps up the high standard of The Bright Promise."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p697 N 2 '51 160w
Wis Lib Bul 47:63 Mr '51

SHERWOOD, JOHN. Mr Blessington's imperialist plot [Eng title: Mr Blessington's plot]. 252p $2.50 Doubleday 51-9437

Mr Blessington, a mild little British treasury official, goes to a Balkan country on official business. There he is kidnapped by Soviet agents, and has to be rescued by a British intelligence man.

Kirkus 18:738 D 15 '50 100w

"Authentic sounding international espionage in one of the Iron Curtain countries. . . Good adventure and lots of impressive-sounding background."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 Mr 11 '51 180w

Reviewed by Hillis Mills
N Y Times p21 My 20 '51 110w

"The adventures are fine; so are the double-crossing villains, the Westenberg Secret and the generally light-hearted atmosphere. There's also some happy kidding of Communist cliches. You don't have to believe this yarn, just enjoy it." L. G. Offord
+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 F 18 '51 80w

"Excellent Balkan-British genre."
+ Sat R of Lit 34:44 Mr 17 '51 50w

SHIPPEN, KATHERINE BINNEY. Leif Eriksson; first voyager to America. 150p $2 Harper
B or 92 Leif Ericsson—Juvenile literature
51-14135

Based on the Karlsefni Saga, this sketches the boyhood of Leif in Iceland, his first trading voyage to Germany, his crossing to America, and his sea rescue of his future wife. For junior high schools.

SHIPPEN, K. B.—Continued

Booklist 48:131 D 1 '51

"The color and movement of the dramatic scenes have something of the stately sweep of the sagas themselves, and leave the reader with a vivid sense of Viking life. However, Leif himself never emerges as real a figure as his hot-tempered, pagan father, Erik the Red." V. I.

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p20 N 11 '51 170w

+ Kirkus 19:486 S 1 '51 150w

"With the skill and human understanding of a great artist, Miss Shippen has created a vigorous, beautifully written story of Leif Eriksson in Iceland and Greenland and in Norway and Vinland." Inger Boye

+ Library J 76:2014 D 1 '51 70w

"Written in a fine style, it keeps to short, brisk sentences. The twenty-six short chapters have lively titles that lure one on. It is a distinguished book for junior high school libraries." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 N 11 '51 130w

"More mature in content and style than its format indicates, this book will appeal to pre and early adolescents for its adventure, romance and feeling for the Viking explorer and his people." H. K. Lippmann

+ N Y Times p16 N 11 '51 220w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead
New Yorker 27:186 D 1 '51 30w

Wis Lib Bul 47:261 N '51

SHIPPEY, LEE. Los Angeles book; phot. by Max Yavno. 117p $5 Houghton
917.9494 Los Angeles—Views 50-10892

A combination of text and photographs describing "the sprawling hodgepodge of adobe and chromium and steel" which is Los Angeles.

Booklist 47:218 F 15 '51

"It's too bad there are so many superlatives about Los Angeles. They get in the way of a real appreciation of its true character and uniqueness, which lie in a different direction. At the guide-book level, however, this job is a competent effort. It is entertaining, informative and worthwhile to anyone unfamiliar with the subject. But it has the wrong title. The Los Angeles book has never been published. Until it is, this probably comes as close as any." Harold Gilliam

San Francisco Chronicle p13 D 24 '50 750w

"Max Yavno's photographs are often more documentary than imaginative and reflect more craftsmanship than artistry, but they fill the bill very nicely and have been rather well reproduced." H. S.

Sat R of Lit 34:36 Ja 27 '51 140w

SHIRLEY, DAVID ALLEN. Preparation of organic intermediates. 328p $6 Wiley
545.9 Chemistry, Organic 51-11299

"Another important reference book for the organic chemist, especially the chemist doing research work requiring the use of out-of-the-ordinary compounds. Precise procedures are given for the preparation of the more than 500 compounds which for the most part contain reactive functional groups useful in the building of other compounds. In addition to the detailed procedure, there is given for each compound an equation, structural diagrams, and one or more literature references." Library J

Reviewed by W. M. Lauer
Am Chem Soc J 73:5519 N '51 180w

"Generally, the book is excellently prepared and will be helpful in the organic laboratory." C. D. Hurd

+ Chem & Eng N 29:3648 S 3 '51 200w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 76:1134 Jl '51 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:52 Jl '51

SHOCK, NATHAN WETHERIL. Classified bibliography of gerontology and geriatrics; prepared for Stanford univ. under a grant from the Forest Park foundation. 599p $15 Stanford univ. press
016.61897 Old age—Bibliography 51-2115

"Lists over 18,000 numbered items in a classified arrangement, and is provided with an index of authors. The entries represent monographs and journal articles culled from over 2,000 periodical titles in many languages, and it covers a period from the beginning through 1948. . . The bibliography is continuing beyond 1948 in the pages of the Journal of Gerontology." U S Quarterly Bk R

Reviewed by R. S. Cavan
Am Soc R 16:575 Ag '51 180w

"A volume like this was just what was needed to integrate the widely different areas which are today involved in the problems of aging. This book will be an indispensable source of information for every agency and every individual actively engaged in old age research. . . The book is most carefully indexed." Martin Gumpert

+ Survey 87:236 My '51 200w

"It is by far the most extensive bibliography on the subject available in a single volume, and by virtue of that fact is bound to be enormously useful."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:214 Je '51 270w

SHOCK, NATHAN WETHERIL. Trends in gerontology. 153p $2.50 Stanford univ. press
618.97 Old age 51-9999

A study of the employment, retirement, illnesses, and other problems of the aging. Partial contents: Trends in income maintenance and retirement; Trends in health maintenance; Trends in living arrangements; Trends in community programs for the aged; Recommendations: an institute of gerontology. Index.

Reviewed by R. S. Cavan
Am Soc R 16:575 Ag '51 500w

Booklist 47:290 Ap 15 '51

"This illuminating study of the problem of an aging American population is the first interest to the academic specialist; the sociologist, the economist, and the medical economist. Its tone, however, is unpretentious, and the general reader will find it a fascinating and thoroughly understandable account." A. B. T.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 My 6 '51 70w

"This book is a most useful guide to the variety of projects and institutions which are at work in this country and abroad to gather the necessary medical and sociological knowledge." Martin Gumpert

+ Survey 87:236 My '51 70w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:195 Je '51 150w

SHOCKLEY, WILLIAM. Electrons and holes in semiconductors; with applications to transistor electronics. 558p $9.75 Van Nostrand
537.53 Electrons. Transistors 50-58185

The book is addressed to a broad cross-section of readers; this policy has dictated its organization into three parts and a careful consideration of pedagogical factors. Part I gives a simple introduction to transistor electronics, covering the transistor as a circuit element, after a brief discussion of the physics of semiconductors. Part II gives a descriptive treatment of the more rigorous theoretical and mathematical developments contained in Part III. . . Part III presents the quantum mechanical foundations of the subject. It should be noted that the whole book constitutes an example of the importance of quantum mechanics in modern engineering." (U S Quarterly Bk R) Indexes.

N Y New Tech Bks 36:7 Ja '51

"The very new subject of transistors and transistor electronics has so increased the prominence of semiconductors and the theory of electrons and holes in solids as to make this volume extremely welcome to research workers, designers, and engineers in the field of electronics and communications."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:108 Mr '51 260w

SHORE, MAURICE JOSEPH, ed. Twentieth century mental hygiene; new directions in mental health. 444p pl $6 Social sciences

616.8 Mental hygiene 50-10844

"Eighteen authors contribute twenty chapters to this work on mental hygiene which range in subject matter from neuropathology to the Rorschach test, and from the effects of the last war on human functioning to the structure of educational programs for the public." Am J Pub Health

"Since it covers so much ground it can hardly be expected to be thorough in all areas. There is little mention of the possibilities of public health mental hygiene, though programs are implied directly in Lloyd J. Thompson's chapter, 'The Contributions of Mental Hygiene and the Future,' and in the section called 'Comparative Mental Hygiene' which reports on programs in various countries. This section, in spite of its rather curious though interesting name, is one of the most informative in the book and deserves particular study by all interested in international problems of mental health programming." P. V. Lemkau

+ — Am J Pub Health 41:463 Ap '51 410w

Reviewed by J. K. Folsom

Ann Am Acad 276:162 Jl '51 360w

"Here is a completely different progressive and up-to-date treatment of modern mental hygiene by national and international specialists in their respective fields."

+ School & Society 72:335 N 18 '50 20w

Reviewed by H. L. Witmer

Survey 87:134 Mr '51 200w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:88 Mr '51 230w

SHOTT, JOHN G. Railroad monopoly; an instrument of banker control of the American economy. 250p $3 Public affairs inst, 312 Pennsylvania Av, SE, Washington 3, D.C.

385 Railroads—U.S. 50-11393

"A study of the causes and methods of the campaign by the railroads to secure the passage of the Reed-Bulwinkle Act of 1948 exempting them from the provisions of the Sherman Anti-Trust law. It examines banker control of the railroads, discriminatory practices against Western and Southern shippers, the activities of the American Association of Railroads and the Transportation Association of America and the use of civic organizations by the railroads in their lobbying efforts." (Current Hist) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by C. L. Dearing

Am Econ R 41:498 Je '51 1700w

Am Pol Sci R 45:242 Mr '51 40w

Current Hist 21:96 Ag '51 80w

SHU, CH'ING-CH'UN (LAU SHAW, pseud). Yellow storm; tr. from the Chinese by Ida Pruitt. 533p $4 Harcourt

51-9088

"What happens to the various residents of the street called Little Sheep Fold in Peiping and in particular, to the four-generation Chi family when the Japanese overrun China is graphically and authentically chronicled by a leading Chinese writer. For the mature reader." Bookmark

Booklist 47:181; 220 Ja 15 '51; F 15 '51

Bookmark 10:109 F '51 30w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 173:235 Je '51 220w

Reviewed by A. L. Bader

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 4 '51 360w

Christian Century 68:590 My 9 '51 120w

Reviewed by M. W. Stoer

Christian Science Monitor p13 F 21 '51 360w

Kirkus 19:5 Ja 1 '51 190w

"Recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 76:180 F 1 '51 100w

"This is a long book rich in dramatic incident and peopled by more than a score of major characters whom Lau Shaw makes individual and disconcertingly real. . . Lau Shaw's novel is convincing reading and certainly he has not stacked his cards." Mary Ross

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 F 11 '51 900w

"The value of Lau Shaw's picture of average Chinese citizens meeting a conqueror's challenge is not limited to its immediate occasion here. It gives the key to how the ordinary Chinese person reacts to conquest. In the end, it will be the minds of persons like Rey Shuan scattered through cities, villages and farms that will determine China's course." J. J. Espey

+ N Y Times p4 F 11 '51 550w

"Although some of the characters at times appear to be manipulated by invisible strings, collectively they do a successful job of representing a whole city and the viewpoint of a people under foreign domination."

+ — New Yorker 27:113 Je 9 '51 160w

Reviewed by Irving Babow

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Mr 6 '51 750w

"It is not only one of the best China books to appear since the war but is also easily one of the best novels to be published in this country in the same period." Preston Schoyer

+ Sat R of Lit 34:33 F 17 '51 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p673 O 26 '51 110w

SHUB, BORIS, and QUINT, BERNARD. Since Stalin; a photo history of our time. 184p il $3.95 Swen publications co, inc, 11 W. 42d st, N.Y. 18

947.084 Communism—Pictorial works. Russia—History—Pictorial works 51-13618

"This newcomer to the field of pictorial histories traces growth of Bolshevist movement, devoting about two-thirds to last twenty years, and giving many sidelights on pertinent events outside Russia. Clever choice of pictures, many published for first time, brings out evidence of Communist menace to existence of a free world." Library J

"Accompanying text, while open to criticism in small details, contributes to understanding of historical development. Excellent layout, reproduction and make-up, good index, selected bibliography. Recommended for all public and educational libraries which will need more than one copy." H. H. Brent

+ — Library J 76:2004 D 1 '51 130w

"The men responsible for this book began with an excellent idea and then executed it well." Harry Schwartz

+ N Y Times p26 N 18 '51 470w

SHUBIN, JOHN A., and MADEHEIM, HUXLEY. Plant layout; developing and improving manufacturing plants. 433p il $7.35; to schools $5.50 Prentice-Hall

658.2 Factories. Material handling 51-2856

"A college textbook for upper class students of mechanical and industrial engineering. The first-named author is a member of the faculty of New York University and the second a member of the faculty of City College of New York." (Library J) "The book endeavors to bring together in a single volume the principles, techniques and procedures connected with the selection and layout of plant facilities." (School & Society)

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 76:1134 Jl '51 70w

School & Society 73:319 My 19 '51 20w

SHULMAN, IRVING. Big brokers. 570p $3.50 Dial press
51-12897

"New York hoodlums are Irving Shulman's specialty. In this his third novel he lifts his characters out of the provincial scene of their first criminal operations and puts them through their violent paces as members of a national crime syndicate." N Y Times

---

"Shulman writes in a hard hitting style, notable for its directness and simplicity. His people, however absurd and deadly and stupid, spring to instant life; his story has all the fascination of a horrible and gory accident, which draws the eye even while it revolts the onlooker." August Derleth
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 O 21 '51 400w

"So foul is the entire cast that the reader fails to invest his own emotions in the book. . . But if you're interested in a life of crime don't overlook Mr. Shulman's Complete Guide to the Fast Buck. Who knows, maybe you, too, will end up with a handful of slugs in the belly. Or you might land on TV." V. P. Hass.
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 D 16 '51 440w

"As in the earlier books, 'The Amboy Dukes' and 'Cry Tough,' the author dwells with strange delight in the comfort-station dialogue that bad boys use; dwells on it to the point where the reader is apt to sicken. There is no attempt at subtlety in this dialogue. In the name of realism it is plastered on with weighted trowel. The author is at his best in this book in his portrayal of gangster characters." Meyer Berger
N Y Times p37 O 14 '51 360w

"There are some vividly brutal scenes in this book; the author seems to have quite a comprehensive grasp of the crime situation in America . . . but in total effect 'The Big Brokers' is very disappointing. However, I doubt if anybody else could do much better with the subject, a tough and unwieldy one. It is like trying to write a novel about the banking system of America." W. R. Burnett
Sat R of Lit 34:19 N 17 '51 550w

SHULMAN, MAX. Many loves of Dobie Gillis; eleven campus stories. 223p $2.50 Doubleday 51-12243

"Here are 11 short stories dealing with Dobie Gillis, of the crew cut set, and his adventures and misadventures on the Golden Gopher's campus. The stories appeared individually in the Saturday Evening Post, American Magazine and other periodicals. Most of the time Dobie is becoming infatuated or dis-infatuated with one fair coed or another, and the woes and worries which these damsels bring with them supply obstacles for the nimble-witted, freckled Casanova." San Francisco Chronicle

Reviewed by Robert Cromie
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 14 '51 180w
Kirkus 19:334 Jl 1 '51 130w
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Ja 13 '52 100w

Reviewed by Rex Lardner
N Y Times p21 S 16 '51 110w

"This latest flight of whimsy has lots of chuckles but does not quite recapture the freshness of Shulman's magnum opus, 'Barefoot Boy With Cheek.' It demonstrates, however, that Max is still handy with an adjective and that he has by no means exhausted his slightly mad vocabulary resources." R. H. D.
San Francisco Chronicle p23 S 30 '51 200w

"For all we know, this fellow Max Shulman may be to the short story what James Joyce was to the novel, what Ibsen was to the drama, what Burma-Shave was to the billboard. Shulman is a new force in fiction, a pixillated pioneer of the typewriter, a clean wind from the lonely steppes of Minnesota. The short story has become silly putty in his hands." Lee Rogow
Sat R of Lit 34:20 N 24 '51 1500w

"Perhaps to console himself, Dobie takes to devouring something called a 'Varsity Voom' at the 'Kozy Kampus Korner.' The recipe: 'One scoop vanilla, one scoop chocolate, one scoop coleslaw, hot fudge, and rolled anchovies.' By a happy coincidence, this mixture perfectly conveys the flavor of Shulman's humor. Readers whose palates were tickled by Shulman's previous concoctions (Barefoot Boy with Cheek, Sleep Till Noon) will find these stories just about as pleasant to swallow as anything he has written. People who have never tried Shulman might be well advised to test themselves first with a Varsity Voom."
Time 58:120 S 17 '51 220w

SHULTZ, GEORGE P. Pressures on wage decisions; a case study in the shoe industry. 142p $3 Mass. inst. of technology; Wiley
331.2 Wages. Shoe industry 51-1472

"In this study of the shoe industry in Brockton, Massachusetts, the author discusses the overall economic and political problems faced by management and labor, the way in which these problems have become real to them, and the adjustment of the decision makers to the needs of the total situation. The problems and adjustments of both depressions and booms are described." Management R

"This brief but thorough study of a particular industry is limited to the Brockton locality and consequently to that part of the industry that makes the better quality of men's shoes. Nevertheless any industrialist or union leader will find the book enlightening, both as a good portrayal of an important industry, and as an analysis of the complex forces that can affect collective bargaining. The facts have been gathered from all sides and presented without bias." C. W. Lytle
+ Ann Am Acad 275:196 My '51 500w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 76:602 Ap 1 '51 70w
Management R 40:383 Je '51 60w
U S Quarterly Bk R 7:191 Je '51 250w

SHURTLEFF, BERTRAND LESLIE. Colt of the Alcan road. 266p $2.50 Bobbs
Horses—Legends and stories 51-13147

Adventure story for ages twelve and over. It is the story of a brave colt who survived the dangers of the Alaskan winter, wolves, and Indians and finally returned to his owner.

"The author weaves suspense, far northern atmosphere, and grafic descriptions of animal conflict into an entertaining tale for older boys and girls." F. D. H.
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 N 11 '51 70w

"Ardent young lovers of horse stories will doubtless enjoy the book." Elizabeth Mitchell
Library J 76:2017 D 1 '51 70w

"There is lots of interesting information along the way. It might be considered a modern parallel to Jack London's tales, but much better and more real as to background." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 N 11 '51 80w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal
Springf'd Republican p6D D 30 '51 100w

SHUTE, NEVIL, pseud. See Norway, N. S.

SIDGWICK, JOHN BENSON. Heavens above; a rationale of astronomy; American edition prepared by Warren K. Green. 333p il $4; college ed $3 Oxford
520 Astronomy 51-9278

"The British edition of this book for the mature general reader appeared two years ago and has already found its way into a number of American libraries. Certain changes have been made in the text of the present edition in order 'to adapt the book for the American public,' and to include accounts of several discoveries since 1948. It is packed with information and contains a few equations." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 47:248 Mr 15 '51

Kirkus 19:46 Ja 15 '51 150w

"For anyone with a leaning toward astronomy and the ability to stick with a meaty text, it will serve as a fascinating and authoritative account of current knowledge of the stars and the universe." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 76:710 Ap 15 '51 100w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Je 24 '51 230w

"Recommended as a valuable addition to the library of the amateur astronomer." John Pfeiffer

+ N Y Times p27 Je 10 '51 400w

"This clearly written beginner's guide is an extraordinarily good first book for the increasing number of people who are 'interested in the stars,' but know nothing more than some of the spectacular results achieved by professional astronomers." C. W. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ap 8 '51 200w

"A much greater readership exists for this splendid book than the author and modifier anticipate. . . Mr. Green, who Americanized the English edition so cunningly that the jointures do not show seemingly retains the same elevation."

+ Sat R of Lit 34:28 Jl 7 '51 450w

SIDON, MRS ALICE. Continental dessert delicacies. 186p $2.50 Barrows

641.8 Desserts 50-10206

"A galaxy of tortes of Vienna, fifty-eight of them no less . . . along with chestnut pudding, backlava, Swiss gugelhupf, and eleven soufflés. All these recipes, totaling 200, have been checked by Ruth P. Casa-Emellos, home economist of The New York Times." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

"An answer to prayer for those who like to cook but can never think of a dessert." Charlotte Turgeon

+ N Y Times p67 D 3 '50 60w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 7 '51 600w

Reviewed by Lawton Mackall

Sat R of Lit 34:45 Mr 10 '51 50w

SIEGELE, HERMAN HUGO. Carpenters' tools. 156p il $2.50 Drake, F.J.

694 Carpentry—Tools 50-10991

"Their care and maintenance; a practical book covering many kinds of carpenters' tools, showing how to sharpen and use them, giving the apprentice expert advice on selecting tools for his kit." Subtitle

---

Bookmark 10:167 Ap '51

"As is true of most books on common hand tools, there is little in this one that is new. Nevertheless it is a convenient and reliable compilation of proven information with a few special pointers."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 36:32 Mr '51

SIGEL, ELEANOR RECORD. Good food for diabetics. 144p $2.50 Harper

616.63 Diabetes. Diet in disease 51-9802

Over a hundred and fifty meals are listed with recipes for soup, fish, meat, vegetables, salads, and desserts for diabetics. The author is herself a diabetic, and has planned her meals for those who use insulin as well as for those who use diet alone. Index.

Booklist 47:306 My 1 '51

Bookmark 10:206 Je '51 30w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ap 7 '51 80w

"A breath of hope for the diabetic person, as it suggests widely varied menus within the prescribed diet." M. A. Gram

+ Sat R of Lit 34:48 Mr 10 '51 60w

Wis Lib Bul 47:85 Ap '51

SIGERIST, HENRY ERNEST. History of medicine; 8v; v. 1, Primitive and archaic medicine. 564p il $8.50 Oxford

610.9 Medicine—History (51-9041)

The first volume of a proposed eight-volume history of medicine, to be global in scope. It consists of an introductory survey of the customs, folklore, geography, art, and literature of the various areas, a general discussion of primitive medicine; and sections on ancient Egypt and Mesopotamia. Copiously illustrated. Bibliographies. Index.

"Eminently readable volume." T. D. Stewart

+ Am Anthropol 53:569 O '51 700w

Reviewed by J. W. Swain

Am Hist R 56:848 Jl '51 750w

"The book is fully documented, it has four bibliographic appendices, is richly illustrated, and has an index. It should be read by every person concerned with medicine and public health, for it will enrich his understanding of his own activity. We look forward to the succeeding volumes of Sigerist's History." George Rosen

+ Am J Pub Health 41:596 My '51 380w

"The first volume sets a high standard of lucidity, informativeness, and readability. So thoroughly has Dr. Sigerist mastered his material that he has no need of technical jargon, and his writing will appeal to the layman as well as the medical specialist. Apt analogies, vivid illustrations, and an interesting style makes for quotable passages on nearly every page. In addition there is a large section of photographs and drawings." E. A. Ferguson

+ Am Soc R 16:573 Ag '51 1200w

"Dr. Sigerist, in true scholarly fashion, includes so much detail that at times the book appears dull and repetitious. But we know that history cannot be written as lightly as a novel because much background material must be given for the sake of completeness." T. R. Van Dellen

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 F 4 '51 270w

"This first volume is very readable, profusely illustrated, richly documented, well indexed, and typographically perfect. . . For the medical profession, but of equal value to the layman." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 76:181 F 1 '51 140w

Reviewed by Ralph Colp

Nation 173:56 Jl 21 '51 850w

"Judged from its first volume, Sigerist's work will interest a circle much wider than the medical profession. It is about medicine; but it is history. It is a substantial contribution to our knowledge of the human mind and the ways in which that mind functions in the creation of a social order." C.-E. A. Winslow

+ New Repub 125:19 S 24 '51 420w

Reviewed by A. E. Cohn

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ag 12 '51 1150w

"It is apparent at once that this is to be an extraordinary contribution to world scholarship. . . Dr. Sigerist's writing is clear and alive. One may deeply hope that the author and his world will continue robust enough to allow fulfillment of this history whose beginnings offer such rich promise." T. H. Maren

+ N Y Times p14 Mr 18 '51 450w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:169 Je '51 500w

"Dr. Sigerist's study of primitive and archaic medicine is the first of eight projected volumes. . . It is an ambitious and praiseworthy undertaking that should go far towards a synthesis of the history of medicine with history in general. There is nothing at present of this scope." S. C. Harvey

+ Yale R n s 40:550 spring '51 800w

SILLIMAN, LELAND. Bucky Forrester; il. by Norman Guthrie Rudolph. 216p $2.50 Winston 51-10180

"Written for and about the Boys' Clubs of America, this is a story of a teen-age member who sacrificed his personal ambitions for the good of the group and won the highest honor the organization can bestow upon a member: the National Junior Citizenship Award." Library J

Booklist 47:349 Je 1 '51

Kirkus 19:64 F 1 '51 140w

"Although Bucky is almost too noble, story gives a true picture of ideals and objectives of the Boys' Clubs, and there is enough adventure to make it popular with boys of 12 up. Recommended." R. O. Bostwick

+ — Library J 76:717 Ap 15 '51 70w

"The style is that brisk journalism which boys of varied tastes enjoy; the humor, much of it, is straight from their own lips, at fifteen or sixteen; and the moral issues are clear and well worth thinking about." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 My 13 '51 210w

"Teen-age boys everywhere should get a genuine thrill from this tribute to a boy's courage—the hard but valuable lessons to be learned from defeat, and the lift of personal triumphs greater than mere athletic victory." H. B. Lent

+ N Y Times p16 Jl 22 '51 170w

Sat R of Lit 34:41 Ap 21 '51 290w

+ Springf'd Republican p12C Ap 22 '51 70w

SIMAK, CLIFFORD D. Cosmic engineers; an interplanetary novel. 224p $2.50 Gnome press 51-9901

This science-fiction story "concerns danger to the entire universe from collision with another universe which is being directed toward the shock by a race appropriately named the Hell-hounds." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 47:255 Mr 15 '51

Kirkus 18:648 O 15 '50 70w

"Better than most of its kind." Basil Davenport

+ N Y Times p12 Ja 7 '51 190w

Reviewed by Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p17 F 4 '51 140w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

Sat R of Lit 33:16 D 30 '50 30w

SIMENON, GEORGES, pseud. (GEORGES SIM). Heart of a man; translated by Louise Varèse. 213p $3 Prentice-Hall
51-11547

A psychological study of a famous French actor, who learns at fifty-nine that his heart will not last much longer. The story describes his life in a series of flashbacks.

"The novel [is] a life-size portrait of a great figure of the Parisian theater—a wonderfully realistic narrative in the Balzacian tradition."

+ Atlantic 188:88 Jl '51 150w

"In novel after novel, Georges Simenon demonstrates that his work is in the great Gallic tradition; here is a writer of increasing stature in the field of the realistic novel. 'The Heart of a Man' is one of his best performances." August Derleth

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Jl 1 '51 360w

Kirkus 19:248 My 15 '51 150w

"In this portrait of a successful actor as a man, Mr. Simenon writes with a magnetic intensity that focuses on character rather than action. One may question whether a person brought up in squalor and meanness cannot later savor the decent and good things of life, but one cannot dismiss the integrity of the likeness of this man who did not." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Je 24 '51 800w

"The climax leaves one with a sharp sense of letdown, a feeling that Maugin has not been fully understood. There remains, however, a powerfully drawn picture of a notable man of the theatre, who, for all his coarseness and compulsions, has a tragic dignity and strength. As a piece of realistic storytelling, the novel is a fine performance." C. J. Rolo

+ — N Y Times p4 Je 24 '51 700w

"Solely as a portrait of an actor, the book is fascinating reading, but Mr. Simenon's handling of Maugin's nightmare, as he begins to die in the middle of a living world, imparts a remarkable feeling of eeriness and pity."

+ New Yorker 27:64 Jl 7 '51 90w

Reviewed by James Kelly

Sat R of Lit 34:14 Jl 14 '51 650w

"'The Heart of a Man' is not a long novel, and its brevity gives added impact to the author's triumphant character study and mastery of his theme." L. S. Munn

+ Springf'd Republican p14A S 2 '51 400w

"In spots, Author Simenon writes with deft satire about his fellow countrymen. Where he tries for something like tragic irony, he achieves only the stale, sentimental cliché about the iron mask of success hiding suffering human clay."

— + Time 58:98 Jl 2 '51 470w

SIMMEL, GEORG. Sociology of Georg Simmel; tr. ed, and with an introd. by Kurt H. Wolff. 445p $5.50 Free press

301 Sociology 50-7406

"Comprises Simmel's popular presentation of 'Fundamental Problems of Sociology' (1917); three of the ten essays of his Soziologie (1908) —i.e. Quantitative Aspects of the group, Superordination, The Secret and the Secret Society; and several short pieces on Faithfulness and Gratitude, the Negative Character of Collective Behavior, the Stranger, and the Metropolis and Mental Life." Am Soc R

"Simmel's influence in sociology, through the help of Albion W. Small, Park and Burgess, and Nicholas J. Spykman, has been quite large and there is a rather extensive literature on him. Still, until the appearance of Professor Wolff's translation, only a small and scattered part of his writing was available in English. His major works in philosophy and ethics—and a great one in economics—have yet to be translated. We should be particularly grateful for Professor Wolff's smooth and scholarly rendition of two of Simmel's major sociological treatises." Meno Lovenstein

+ Am Econ R 41:194 Mr '51 1000w

Reviewed by Paul Honigsheim

Am J Soc 56:195 S '50 3450w

"This volume of Simmel is or should be indispensable for any sociologist, social psychologist, political scientist. . . The translation and the Simmel bibliography—the best in any language—are a labor of love, for Simmel's style is a great challenge to any translator." Hans Gerth

+ Am Soc R 15:685 O '50 1250w

"Professor Wolff draws attention to Simmel's own emphasis upon the 'wholly fragmentary, incomplete character' of his main work, Soziologie, and to the 'insecure foundations' of his theoretical elaborations. Nevertheless, it is a decided gain to have access to some of his views in English, and for many years to come students of the social sciences will be able to turn to this volume with interest and profit."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p713 N 10 '50 180w

SIMMONS, HARRY. Successful sales promotion. 441p il $5.65; to schools $4.25 Prentice-Hall

658.8 Marketing. Advertising 50-8894

Handbook of principles, methods, and how to apply them to sales promotion. Among the subjects treated are: house organs; sales contests; store outlay and modernization; coordinating advertising and selling; counter and window displays; sales manuals; visual selling aids; trade shows and exhibits; etc. Index.

"Recommended." J. E. Cross
+ Library J 76:183 F 1 '51 70w

"Had Mr. Simmons approached his task as an editor seeking an orderly and meaningful fusing of the methods, thoughts and experiences of qualified sales promotion men, he might have produced a useful book. Unfortunately, this volume is in large part a superficial and often undiscriminating collection of articles on the subject, gathered from various periodicals. When the author writes on aspects of the subject with which he is apparently familiar, he produces some worthwhile information." Saul Poliak
— + Management R 40:247 Ap '51 90w

SIMON, HERBERT ALEXANDER, and others. Public administration. 582p $6 Knopf 350 Public administration 50-8992

"An explanation of how government is managed in all its executive branches. The principles and concepts discussed here are by no means limited to government operations and will be of interest and importance to all serious students of organization and business administration." (Management R) There is an appraisal of the recommendations of the Hoover commission. Bibliographical notes. Index.

"This volume is a major landmark among the textbooks in public administration." W. S. Sayre
+ Am Pol Sci R 45:233 Mr '51 700w
+ Current Hist 19:291 N '50 70w

"This book should supply a stimulating introduction to insights about public administration; and the stress throughout upon the moral implications of the work of direction and supervision gives the volume a realistic dynamism which is to be heartily commended." Ordway Tead
+ Ethics 61:336 Jl '51 170w

"A realistic and lucid explanation."
+ Management R 34:686 N '50 40w

"A fine study of public administration. . . Although the book is designed primarily for the use of college students, its originality and keenness of insight should commend it to a wider audience."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:477 D '50 220w

SIMON, YVES. Philosophy of democratic government. 324p $3.50 Univ. of Chicago press
320.1 Political science. Democracy 51-4189

"A treatise on the meaning of democracy by a Catholic liberal, or, to be more precise, by a liberal mind operating in the Catholic tradition. . . In his carefully reasoned chapters Professor Simon analyzes the meaning of authority, freedom, equality, the common good, sovereignty, majority rule, and so on, and his conclusions generally remain within a framework that would be acceptable to a Jefferson or a Madison. He refutes the idea, so often advanced by conservatives and fascists, that government is in itself a necessary evil, pointing out that it is inherently neither evil nor good but only a function of society designed for the common good." (Nation) Index.

"Even a casual reader will find in this study a great deal of substance and a good many arresting ideas. By the use of numerous illustrations, often of a homely character, an attempt is made to clarify complex aspects of the subject, and there are many sections of the book which should be meaningful to nonspecialists. However, quite frequently the author lapses into language . . . which will make the going difficult for the ordinary reader." Harold Zink
+ — Ann Am Acad 278:207 N '51 350w

"Mr. Simon's book is an example of the kind of shoring up that America's intellectual foundation needs. It offers a revitalization of many of the basic phrases and concepts of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution, not by referring them back to the Enlightenment but rather to the Enlightenment's more remote and original sources in classical and scholastic philosophy. . . It is the book of a good citizen. Far too seldom in the past have American Catholic thinkers performed such an act of civic pietas." J. W. Meaney
+ Commonweal 55:232 D 7 '51 1000w

"It is certainly a welcome addition to American political literature. It should help to dispel some of the unease which secular democrats feel vis-à-vis Catholic thought and action. This is a book by a man of good-will whose aims and orientation are fundamentally democratic." S. K. Padover
+ Nation 173:332 O 20 '51 650w

"Likely to please those already committed to Catholic liberal doctrine; it is not likely to persuade or to influence others." David Spitz
New Repub 125:27 O 29 '51 700w
School & Society 74:352 D 1 '51 30w

SIMONS, JOSEPH H., ed. Fluorine chemistry; v 1, 1950. 615p il $13.50 Academic press
546.16 Fluorine (50-11325)

"The numerous compounds of fluorine are not only of great theoretical interest, but many of them have found application both in laboratory chemical work and in industrial chemistry. Nevertheless, the literature in book form is still scant. Here is the first volume of the first attempt at a comprehensive survey of the field. It is composed of monographs written by prominent chemists who have made contributions to the subject and is addressed to graduate and professional chemists. Each chapter is a compact review of the knowledge and literature of a specific aspect of fluorine chemistry, and each concludes with a comprehensive list of the pertinent literature." N Y New Tech Bks

"The most salient feature of the discussion on fluorocarbons and so-called fluorocarbon derivatives is the unique system of nomenclature. This may confuse readers who are not skilled in the chemistry of organic fluro compounds. This system of nomenclature has been considered by nomenclature committees of the American Chemical Society and rejected. A good analysis of the preparation of fluorocarbons is given." E. T. McBee
+ Am Chem Soc J 73:2979 Je '51 300w

"Great strides have been made in the field of fluorine chemistry during the past three decades and especially since the beginning of World War II. The authors of this treatise have given excellent reviews of the information published on certain areas of this field." E. T. McBee
+ Chem & Eng N 29:1886 My 7 '51 360w
N Y New Tech Bks 36:8 Ja '51
U S Quarterly Bk R 7:102 Mr '51 270w

SIMONS, KATHERINE DRAYTON MAYRANT (DRAYTON MAYRANT, pseud). First the blade. 314p $3 Appleton
50-10389

Claudia Procula, granddaughter of the Emperor Augustus, wife of Pontius Pilate, is the heroine of this novel of the days of Christ.

Kirkus 18:646 O 15 '50 200w
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p25 N 26 '50 330w

"A warmly imaginative biographical novel." Charles Lee
+ N Y Times p24 D 10 '50 200w

"The story is well-contrived, except that the contrivance sticks out. The pattern is familiar yet well enough managed to maintain interest. It is clear that Miss Mayrant has studied hard for her Roman backgrounds. Her reconstruction is careful and workmanlike, earnest and well thought out. . . Perhaps that is the trouble. One can sense the careful planning, the hard work which made the book. The impact is therefore something less than it should be, since the imagined world is never transmuted to reality." Bradford Smith

SIMONS, K. D. M.—Continued
+ — Sat R of Lit 34:13 Ja 20 '51 230w

SIMONT, MARC. Polly's oats. [44]p il $1.75 Harper
51-11666

Picture storybook about the work horse, Polly, who did not rate oats like the farmer's prize horses, and what happened the day she got stuck in the mud. For ages three to six.

Booklist 48:17 S 1 '51
Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '51

Reviewed by J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews
Horn Bk 27:322 S '51 50w
Kirkus 19:345 Jl 15 '51 100w

"Recommended." L. E. Cathon
+ Library J 76:1342 S 1 '51 50w

"The idea seems slight, unless the pictures were irresistible, which they are not. The brilliant style on the board cover changes to a sort of caricature which is too frequently used nowadays." L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p30 O 7 '51 50w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p38 O 14 '51 70w
San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 11 '51 30w

"The drawings of Polly's expressions, of the three prize horses when they were very ill indeed, and the last one of Polly kicking up her heels because the oats made her feel so good are so satisfying that you come back to them again and again. They look like charcoal drawings and are beautifully reproduced."
+ Sat R of Lit 34:44 S 22 '51 190w
Wis Lib Bul 47:257 N '51

SIMPSON, EVAN JOHN (EVAN JOHN, pseud). Ride home tomorrow; the chronicle of a crusader; newly set forth by [the author]. 343p $3.50 Putnam
51-9681

"A novel about the last years of the Kingdom of Jerusalem, the prelude to the Third Crusade." Spec

Booklist 47:311 My 1 '51

Reviewed by V. P. Hass
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Mr 25 '51 500w
Kirkus 18:708 D 1 '50 290w
Library J 76:718 Ap 15 '51 50w

"It is an easily paced steadily moving story, good in some aspects, ordinary in others. It gives the reader an excellent idea of what it was like—or what probably it was like—to be a Crusader." Thomas Sugrue
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Mr 4 '51 500w

"It is neither speeches nor battles that give this book its excellence. It is rather its feeling of reality. Mr. John is no mean foreign correspondent—even though the happenings he writes about took place a thousand years ago." T. C. Chubb
+ N Y Times p30 Mr 18 '51 450w

"The author, an English Shakespearean actor and a playwright, here essays a new role, that of historical novelist. He has chosen for his theme a difficult period, one rarely written about with knowledge, of which Mr. John appears to have a vast fund. Fortunately for the reader, he integrates his scholarship with his fiction not without skill, and he writes well and now and again with distinction." John Cournos
+ Sat R of Lit 34:21 Mr 31 '51 310w

Reviewed by R. D. Charques
Spec 185:26 Ja 5 '51 50w
Time 57:104 Mr 5 '51 600w

"[Mr John] makes the Holy Land a real and vivid country, a place known and loved. . . The central character and narrator is perhaps too like the hero of an old-fashioned boy's story in his improbable knack of going everywhere and meeting everyone, . . . but in other respects he is a genuine and maturing person and one rare in present-day novels, a man striving after good."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p781 D 8 '50 300w

SIMPSON, GEORGE GAYLORD. Horses; the story of the horse family in the modern world and through sixty million years of history. 247p il $6.50 Oxford
599.725 Horses. Horses, Fossil 51-12082

History of the evolution of the horse from prehistoric forms to the present. It is a scientific survey, based on a project of the American museum of natural history. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:26 S 15 '51

"Fascinating summary of modern knowledge about horses as animals."
+ Bookmark 11:33 N '51 10w
Cleveland Open Shelf p26 N '51

"Well written and already used as a textbook in one of the author's classes, and presented in a highly attractive and illustrated format, this should prove a good seller with plus High School market."
+ Kirkus 19:460 Ag 15 '51 150w

"Recommended." R. W. Henderson
Library J 76:1814 N 1 '51 50w

SIMPSON, MARTHA. Art is for everyone. 173p 24pl $3.50 McGraw 707 Esthetics. Art—Study and teaching
51-10790

"Tracing the history of art and distinguishing between the different schools, a noted American painter writes in popular vein on the appreciation of art. Photographs. Index." Bookmark

Booklist 48:27 S 15 '51
Bookmark 10:206 Je '51 30w

"Most of her text is an elucidation of modern art. The exposition is admirably developed. The conviction with which Miss Simpson writes seems to be strengthened from practical experience in working out new theories. Her chapter summarizing art history is the weakest. There is a modest selection of reproductions." Dorothy Adlow
Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 9 '51 120w

SINCLAIR, JO, pseud. See Seid, R.

SINCLAIR, ROBERT B. Eleventh hour. 217p $2.50 Mill 51-432

Detective story.

Bookmark 10:158 Ap '51

"Striking a note of sympathy as well as suspense, this is effective."
+ Kirkus 18:740 D 15 '50 70w

"Robert Sinclair tells an ingenious story with clarity and preciseness and rounds it out by a really ironic ending."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ap 1 '51 140w

"If it lacks any novelistic depth, any real concern with the character of the murderer or the effect of murder on that character, it does possess admirable superficial virtues. These include a clean easy prose, a reader-compelling pace, very tidy plotting both in the construction of the perfect alibi and in its demolition. Also, the book has something out of the ordinary run of detectives in the superbly self-satisfied Sgt. Lester R. Bauer, who is at once believable, absurd and just a little terrifying." Anthony Boucher
+ — N Y Times p29 Mr 4 '51 150w

"An intricate and skillfully worked-out plot, and though the style hasn't a great deal of distinction, the characters and dialogue are first rate."

+ — New Yorker 27:116 Mr 3 '51 90w

"This first novel is plotted with exceptional neatness and written in a style that makes it far more satisfying than most inverted mysteries." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 Mr 18 '51 80w

Sat R of Lit 34:63 Ap 14 '51 40w

SINGER, MRS DOROTHEA (WALEY). Giordano Bruno; his life and thought. 389p il maps $6 Schuman

195 Bruno, Giordano. Infinite 50-9727

"This volume contains (1) a biography of Bruno, (2) a translation of On the Infinite Universe and Worlds, one of Bruno's principal dialogues, (3) précis of a number of Bruno's major works (including On the Infinite Universe and Worlds), and (4) a short account of Bruno's influence on subsequent Western thought. There are appendices (i) listing chronologically all of Bruno's writings, (ii) discussing the early printers of his works, and (iii) analyzing the extant manuscripts. There is also a short bibliography." Ann Am Acad

"In general, the chief virtues of the volume and its main defects stem from the same fact—that it has been written con amore. Mrs. Singer is obviously a great admirer of Bruno, and she communicates to the reader her enthusiasm and affection for this strange and pathetic figure. Unfortunately this admiration causes her to exaggerate Bruno's significance as a thinker and the extent of his influence." W. T. Jones

+ — Ann Am Acad 273:266 Ja '51 550w

School & Society 72:335 N 18 '50 30w

Social Studies 42:48 Ja '51 10w

SINGER, KURT D. World's 30 greatest women spies [Eng title: World's greatest women spies]. 318p il $3.50 Funk, W.

923.5 Spies 51-14051

Stories, based on fact, about thirty women of various nationalities, who were spies. With the exception of Mata Hari, all of them have played their parts during the last two decades.

Booklist 48:143 D 15 '51

"The stories have a few errors of fact which should have been caught by the editors. The most glaring [page 201] is the statement that Gestapo Chief Himmler was executed at Nuernberg. . . However, Kurt Singer has put together a remarkable collection of tales showing what women, endowed with wit and ingenuity and backed by unlimited funds, can do." Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p24 N 11 '51 400w

"The author shows his special skill of combining diligence in unearthing hidden facts with the insight of a political journalist and the natural gift of an excellent storyteller. Each of the thirty case histories not only reads like a first-class thriller but gives the reader a clearer understanding of the forces behind the events that make headlines." Leo Lania

+ Sat R of Lit 34:24 D 1 '51 410w

SINNOTT, EDMUND WARE. Cell and psyche; the biology of purpose. 121p $2 Univ. of N.C. press

570.1 Biology—Philosophy. Mind and body 50-10556

"Dr. Edmund Sinnott, dean of the Yale Graduate School, has spent more than twenty years in biological research. In this book he draws on his experience to formulate an ambitious philosophy of living things in general and man in particular. . . [He] arrives at tentative conclusions after presenting concrete observations, not only his own but those of colleagues working in other laboratories. A central and challenging problem in biology is the phenomenon of 'organization.' To illustrate this problem Dr. Sinnott describes research conducted at Princeton several years ago and recorded in one of the most fascinating scientific motion pictures ever made." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

Reviewed by N. K. Burger

N Y Times p24 Mr 4 '51 290w

"This stimulating book is recommended to readers interested in modern science and philosophy."

+ Sat R of Lit 34:31 Je 9 '51 320w

SISKIND, CHARLES SEYMOUR. Alternating-current armature windings; theory, practice, and design. 236p il $5 McGraw

621.316 Armatures—Winding. Electric machinery, Alternating current 51-4776

"A companion volume to the author's Direct-current Armature Windings [Book Review Digest 1949]. It is designed for electricians, factory maintenance men, the personnel of motor repair shops, and for students in trade school courses. The main emphasis is on understanding the basic principles of the various types of alternating-current armatures, but most of the space is devoted to such practical topics as wiring diagrams and illustrations of wiring operations." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 47:398 Jl 15 '51

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 76:1939 N 15 '51 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:65 S '51

SITWELL, SIR GEORGE RERESBY, 4th bart. On the making of gardens; with an introd. by Sir Osbert Sitwell. 76p il $3.75 Scribner

712 Landscape gardening 51-12298

The first American edition of an essay on theory of garden making, first published in England in 1909. The author was the father of Sir Osbert Sitwell, who has written the preface. Illustrated with photographs of Italian gardens. Index.

Kirkus 19:417 Ag 1 '51 160w

"The principles of garden design, the relation of light and shade, when and where to use water for effect, are so skillfully set down and in so delightful a manner that the reprint is more than welcome. . . This belongs in every collection that has use for the words of the Sitwell family." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 76:1217 Ag '51 90w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 O 28 '51 700w

"This treatise, first issued in England in 1909, is notable as an exposition of its subject and no less as a portrait of the impassioned mind—of its author as poet and moralist, 'regarding his surroundings with analytic attention.' Sir Francis Bacon's 'Essay on Gardens' at last has a counterpart. . . Sir George Sitwell shows us in this glittering treatise how to look at what we see; his stately observations are applicable to small as well as to great gardens; and throughout, an inescapable lesson is afforded us—that discipline results in freedom." Marianne Moore

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 19 '51 750w

SITWELL, SIR OSBERT, 5th bart. Noble essences; a book of characters. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 356p $4.50 Little

B or 92 Sitwell family. Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 50-9728

For descriptive note see Annual for 1950.

Booklist 47:173 Ja 1 '51

"Although the book is hardly an autobiography the sketches and the interpretation of

SITWELL, SIR OSBERT—Continued
the persons who are included, are memorable —full of life and poignant interest." Robert Wilberforce
+ Cath World 172:398 F '51 400w
Cleveland Open Shelf p3 Ja '51

"Noble Essences is not without its share of the author's evocative brilliance. But its temper seems a little disturbed, suggesting that, as Sir Osbert moves further in time from his beginnings, he draws nearer to them in spirit. When he writes of the contemporary world his generous and humane regard is broken by a sort of petulance." Naomi Lewis
+ — New Repub 124:19 Ap 9 '51 1200w
San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ja 7 '51 330w

SIZER, THEODORE. Works of Colonel John Trumbull, artist of the American revolution. 117p 461il $5 Yale univ. press
759.13 Trumbull, John 50-10129

"John Trumbull was the painter of the American Revolution. . . In this volume, Mr. Sizer, Professor of the History of Art at Yale, makes it possible, at long last, to evaluate Trumbull's achievement on the basis of solid fact. . . We have here a list of all of Trumbull's graphic works, not only the celebrated portraits and historical scenes, but the drawings that were among his liveliest achievements, his forgotten landscapes, maps, designs for medals, and the architectural plans that reveal his skill in a second art. Information about the innumerable items is inserted in capsule form." N Y Times

"Even without any explanatory or analytical text to go with it, Mr. Sizer's catalogue of Trumbull's work in itself is of interest to all students of American art in presenting what is really a case history of the career of an American artist in the post-Revolutionary era. The mere titles of the paintings recorded themselves present a life history not only of Trumbull but of the typical American artist of the period." Benjamin Rowland
+ New Eng Q 24:115 Mr '51 1050w

"The text is so crammed with knowledge that the serious reader cannot afford to skip a word." J. T. Flexner
+ N Y Times p24 O 22 '50 550w

Reviewed by Alfred Frankenstein
San Francisco Chronicle p21 Jl 1 '51 440w

"Certain to remain the authoritative reference to Trumbull's works for years to come, this painstaking study concludes with a model and exhaustive bibliography."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:14 Mr '51 200w

SKIDMORE, REX AUSTIN, and CANNON, ANTHON STEFFENSEN. Building your marriage. 650p $5 Harper
392.5 Marriage 51-2630

"Emphasizes the constructive and hopeful aspects of preparing and achieving happiness in marriage and family living. The book, by authors from the University of Utah, is organized around questions asked by their students. Its philosophy is both practical and idealistic. The span of the family cycle is covered and findings of recent research along with short personal sketches of family situations give the book validity. The approach is functional and psychological." J Home Econ

"College students from many departments will want to read this text; many will not consider it a text. It's the kind of book that will start thinking and will be discussed over the coffee cups and in dormitories. Building Your Marriage compares favorably with other recent texts." Katharine Roy
+ J Home Econ 43:726 N '51 220w

"In the hands of an experienced counselor, this book could be made the basis of study for a group lasting for a whole year. For larger libraries."
Wis Lib Bul 47:158 Je '51

SKILLING, HUGH HILDRETH. Electric transmission lines; distributed constants, theory, and applications. 438p il $6.50 McGraw 621.3192 Electric lines 51-11698

"An engineering college textbook in which all types of electric transmission lines from power lines to coaxial cables and hollow wave guides are treated. Somewhat more attention is given to lines designed for transmission and microwave frequencies than to other types of lines. According to the author the material has been thoroughly tested in his own classes at Stanford University." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 76:1231 Ag '51 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 36:68 S '51

SKLAR, GEORGE. Promising young men. 304p $3 Crown
51-10487

Character study of a tennis "bum." Steve Kropa—later Krowe—starts out well, but takes the wrong turning. He leaves his wife for another woman, and goes downhill fast. His regeneration begins after his collapse at Wimbledon.

"Cast in a traditional mold, and many of its characters are stock. As a novel, it follows a pattern which is evident early in the story. Its prose is pedestrian, and, as a finished work, it does not stack up with Mr. Sklar's earlier novel, 'The Two Worlds of Johnny Truro.' Yet the novel is conscientious and effective within its limitations. Its picture of the false glitter of success is authentic enough." August Derleth
— + Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 My 20 '51 460w

"A well written, timely but bitter novel. . . Food for thought!" R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 76:773 My 1 '51 90w
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Je 3 '51 100w

"To an outsider, the account of the world of tennis seems plausible—and the author, a former playwright, manages to give the various matches he describes an authentic feel of excitement. The novel, however, as the title suggests, seeks to be something more than a book about tennis; its theme is the nature of failure, and Mr. Sklar appears to be quite serious about it. The trouble is that we never quite believe that Steve Kropa promises any more than he accomplishes." Granville Hicks
N Y Times p18 My 20 '51 360w

"The writing lacks restraint, and to tennis players there is little verisimilitude in the accounts of matches at Wimbledon and Forest Hills. In fact, as a picture of the evils of big-time sport the whole thing is unconvincing." J. R. Tunis
— Sat R of Lit 34:37 Je 23 '51 250w

SKOOG, FOLKE, ed. Plant growth substances. 476p il $6 Univ. of Wis. press
581.194 Hormones (plants). Growth (plants) 51-9938

"A symposium volume on the auxins and other hormones that effect the life processes of plants, including not only growth but flowering, fertilization and fruit development. The contributors are all specialists, and the papers are written essentially for professional workers in the field; many are accompanied by extensive lists of the literature." Library J

"Should be added to well developed botanical, agricultural, and biochemical collections." R. R. Hawkins
+ Library J 76:710 Ap 15 '51 70w

"Although the volume should prove stimulating as a source of ideas and information, the usefulness of the book as a reference could have been enhanced by the inclusion of an index."
+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 7:194 Je '51 240w

SKORZENY, OTTO. Secret missions; war memoirs of the most dangerous man in Europe; tr. from the French by Jacques Le Clercq. 256p $3 Dutton

940.548743 World war, 1939-1945—Germany. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, German 51-9042

The war memoirs of the German commando leader who kidnapped Mussolini.

"As a plain, straightforward story of a completely unreconstructed nazi soldier, his book contains its full share of suspense and excitement." W. H. Chamberlin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 21 '51 430w

"The nameless author of the introduction to Skorzeny's book groups him with the 'good' Germans. If Skorzeny did belong to that group, his book does not show it. What it does show is the author's undiminished admiration for Hitler, his barely disguised intention to keep the Nazi cult alive, and his disregard for correct dates and place names." E. S. Pisko
Christian Science Monitor p3 Ja 8 '51 370w

Foreign Affairs 30:157 O '51 20w

"Exciting as these exploits are, most readers will still find their enjoyment of the book considerably lessened by Skorzeny's latterday lament over the fate of bombed German cities, and his recording of his first meeting with Hitler."
Kirkus 18:714 D 1 '50 170w

"From the standpoint of history, this volume is useful only in its portrayal of the incredible efforts the Germans made to achieve victory." Donald Wasson
Library J 76:38 Ja 1 '51 120w

"It might have been hoped that Skorzeny would write an interesting book; but he has not succeeded in doing so. He is obviously uncomfortable with a pen in his hand and his style is alarmingly hackneyed, although this may be partly due to the fact that his book (for reasons not disclosed) has been translated from the French. His mind is, moreover, neither reflective nor analytical, and he seems happy only when he is writing of his moments of violent action." G. A. Craig
— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ja 7 '51 1300w

"To the world at large 'Skorzeny's Secret Missions' offers a highly personal version of the 'real truth,' full of nonchalant dare-devilishness, dripping sentimentality, and romantic hero-worship—all just in the right proportions to make it a true reflection of Nazi mentality. . . The book [is] at least psychologically, interesting. Skorzeny, as he depicts himself in his memoirs, is the prototype of the unrepentant Nazi fanatic." J. H. Lichtblau
N Y Times p6 D 31 '50 800w

New Yorker 26:104 F 10 '51 220w

"Skorzeny is never critical, he does not draw new portraits of the Nazi leaders he met, he never stops admiring the man who was responsible for Germany's defeat. It is no surprise that he writes with little skill or insight." H. B. Kranz
— Sat R of Lit 34:34 F 24 '51 950w

SKRINE, MARY LESTA (M. J. FARRELL, pseud). Enchanting witch [Eng title: Loving without tears]. 245p $3 Crowell 51-13062

Story of a charming but dominating mother who tried to arrange her children's love affairs and finally had to acknowledge defeat. The scene is a mock-Gothic castle on the Irish coast; the time, just after the war.

Booklist 48:65 O 15 '51

Bookmark 11:59 D '51 30w

"The author is as gleeful as the reader will be by all that goes on, and the style is brilliant, witty, luxuriously malicious. A delight."
+ Kirkus 19:494 S 1 '51 240w

"'The Enchanting Witch' is by no means a romantic soufflé; it has scenes as sharp as vinegar. The climax is comedy." Lisle Bell
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 O 14 '51 490w

Reviewed by M. S. Hurst
N Y Times p12 D 30 '51 170w

"Mrs. Farrell writes about the defeat of this lady in lively language that is sometimes original and sometimes only self-conscious, and displays a power of observation that is much too good for her nondescript men and women."
+ — New Yorker 27:148 O 20 '51 90w

Reviewed by Marghanita Laski
Spec 187:106 Jl 20 '51 110w

"It is clear that Mrs. Farrell's talent lies in dialogue and in portraying those small actions whereby character is revealed, as for instance when the mechanical-minded Julian blows down a petrol-feed while deciding to switch from one love to another, or when the overwrought, inarticulate Tiddley, stifled by frustrated love, rushes to strum 'Lili Marlene' on the school-room piano. It seems a pity, therefore, that she does not allow her characters to speak and act entirely for themselves. When she thinks for them the resulting passages mar an otherwise adroit comedy."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p449 Jl 20 '51 270w

SLAUGHTER, FRANK GILL. Fort Everglades. 340p $3 Doubleday 51-1834

Historical novel the locale of which is southern Florida during the second Seminole war, 1835-1840. The hero is a doctor, living in the Everglades in an attempt to forget the woman he had loved in Paris. The plot is concerned with the working out of the situation caused by the doctor's love for the woman who is engaged to his best friend.

"The characters in Fort Everglades are pretty much types. . . Much more convincing are the atmospheric and scenic details." Riley Hughes
Cath World 173:313 Jl '51 220w

"The author's addiction to the gross exaggerations of overwriting is passed over in the light of the high degree of suspense he succeeds in maintaining. And the ultimate result is a vividly narrated and absorbingly interesting portrayal of rugged romance on a long vanished American frontier." Henry Cavendish
+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 18 '51 550w

Kirkus 19:31 Ja 15 '51 130w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Ap 29 '51 90w

"Like all Slaughter heroes, Dr. Coe wields a pretty special scalpel. . . The author has lost none of his gift for dramatizing surgery—whether he's operating on a moonlit island or in the Seminole chieftain's own palm-thatch house, with the whole tribe watching." Richard Match
+ N Y Times p20 Mr 4 '51 360w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 My 6 '51 200w

Reviewed by J. M. Grant
Sat R of Lit 34:16 Jl 14 '51 290w

SLAUGHTER, FRANK GILL. Road to Bithynia. 330p $3.50 Doubleday

Luke, Saint—Fiction 51-12110

A biblical novel based on the life of St Luke and the early years of the Christian church.

Booklist 48:50 O 1 '51

"An artless story and an artful presentation of what is known as liberal theology. The Road to Bithynia is a banal and baleful book." Riley Hughes
— Cath World 174:153 N '51 250w

Reviewed by J. R. Perkins
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 2 '51 350w

"The author does paint an exciting picture of the life of the first century, but for the reviewer no light upon the Gospel of St. Luke or the life of the early Christians. Yet some readers will have the pious notion that they are learning something new." W. L. Caswell
Churchman 165:16 N 1 '51 200w

SLAUGHTER, F. G.—Continued

"Frank Slaughter is no Lloyd Douglas; one has no feeling of an emotional and spiritual quality here; but for many not overly critical of the pulse below the surface, this may well prove his most memorable work."

Kirkus 19:301 Je 15 '51 190w

"Not remarkable as literature but good general reading. Recommended." E. S. Brown

+ Library J 76:1223 Ag '51 100w

" 'The Road to Bithynia' has a quality of drama from the first page to the last. The reader is drawn into the sweep of events in the opening scenes." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ag 26 '51 240w

" 'The Road to Bithynia' is a novel for those who like their reading quaintly old-fashioned. It is for those who like their characters typed —only Paul emerges from the shadows." Vardis Fisher

N Y Times p14 Ag 26 '51 200w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p16 S 9 '51 600w

"The book has color and pageantry, with the dramas of bloody arenas and contests between the Christian preachers and the priests of Ephesian Diana in magical powers. It has a dedicated Christian tone, and in spite of the interpretation of Paul, it depicts with proper reference and wonder the collective miracle wrought by the serene and fearless band who were the primitive church." Edmund Fuller

+ Sat R of Lit 34:14 Ag 25 '51 500w

SLICHTER, SUMNER HUBER. What's ahead for American business. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 216p $2.75 Little

330.973 U.S.—Economic conditions. U.S.—Economic policy 51-2784

"The body of this book consists of material (revised and somewhat expanded) presented in lecture form at a conference of the Graduate School of Business at Stanford University last summer. Before publication the author added comments on what changes the Korean episodes might be introducing into the course of our economic evolution." N Y Times

Booklist 47:303 My 1 '51

Bookmark 10:207 Je '51 30w

Reviewed by Melchior Palyi

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Jl 22 '51 180w

"The lay person doesn't need a course in economics to find this book rewarding." G. R. Ericson

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 My 24 '51 600w

Kirkus 19:146 Mr 1 '51 210w

"A challenging and instructive book." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 76:871 My 15 '51 100w

"The business executive who reads Professor Slichter's most recent book will find it a useful and generally encouraging highlight description of where the American economy stands today and where it may be headed. He also should find it challenging, for Professor Slichter deposits a number of thorny problems in the laps of those who would exercise business leadership." H. S. Hettinger

+ Management R 40:707 N '51 800w

Reviewed by C. E. Noyes

Nation 172:446 My 12 '51 800w

"All those, who from day to day have doubts as Washington backs and fills, might well read this little book for comfort and inspiration." L. M. Hacker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ap 22 '51 700w

"In the kaleidoscopic picture flashed on this screen things that are of profound importance and profoundly puzzling as to their outcome are gone almost before the eye can catch them. If some of Mr. Slichter's hearers at Stanford or readers of the book should not at the end feel precisely informed or fully convinced, all must realize that they 'have been somewhere' —and that in the hands of a wise and daring old habitant guide." E. G. Nourse

N Y Times p6 Ap 15 '51 950w

"From beginning to end, however, the book moves rapidly and freshly. That constitutes its chief charm and will, we hope, provide this particular professor with a sizable audience. His teaching is easy to take and is decidedly needed among our economic illiterates." Ray Hickok

+ Sat R of Lit 34:13 My 19 '51 800w

Wis Lib Bul 47:159 Je '51

Reviewed by J. P. Miller

Yale R n s 41:152 autumn '51 300w

SLOANE, MICHAEL EDISON. First and last poems; a posthumous collection. 72p $2.50 Fine editions

811 51-10738

"Michael Sloane was born on Jan. 8, 1931, and died on Sept. 11, 1949, in an accident on the Pasterze Glacier on Gross Glockner in Austria. What he might have lived to write is, of course, impossible to guess, but what he did leave in his notebooks is impressive." N Y Times

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries

Nation 173:198 S 8 '51 40w

"[The author] had a talent, and there is a very real and direct quality in the emotion he put into these poems, a sensitive loneliness that is never sentimental." M. H. Irvine

+ N Y Times p5 Je 17 '51 140w

SLOBODKIN, LOUIS. Dinny and Danny. il $2 Macmillan

51-12244

Picture storybook about Danny, who lived in a cave in prehistoric times, and his friend and helper, Dinny, the gentle dinosaur.

Booklist 48:90 N 1 '51

Reviewed by Marcia Winn

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 11 '51 110w

Reviewed by E. C. Ince

Christian Science Monitor p13 S 13 '51 110w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

Horn Bk 27:400 D '51 20w

Kirkus 19:479 S 1 '51 80w

"The story is simply told with a great deal of charm. And the pictures are as delightful as any of Slobodkin's." Phyllis Fenner

+ Library J 76:1710 O 15 '51 80w

"The simple story will seem funny to small children who have just returned from their first visit to see those great skeletons which so fascinate them at museums. The gay, clear colors add much." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p30 O 7 '51 70w

Reviewed by Miriam James

N Y Times p28 Ja 13 '52 50w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead

New Yorker 27:171 D 1 '51 60w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis

Sat R of Lit 34:38 O 20 '51 250w

Wis Lib Bul 47:258 N '51

SLOSSON, ELVENIA J., comp. Pioneer American gardening. 306p il $3.75 Coward-McCann

635.9 Gardening. Gardens—U.S. Agr51-527

Considers early American gardens by regions. Based on letters, diaries, and early records, it includes some history of old time gardens and the people who made them. Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 48:26 S 15 '51

"The average reader, yes, even the average enthusiastic Garden Club member, will find most of it singularly colorless and dull. And yet the subject is a rich one. . . The matter is there; the fault lies in the manner."

Kirkus 19:252 My 15 250w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 O 14 '51 100w

SLOTKIN, JAMES SYDNEY. Social anthropology; the science of human society and culture. 604p il $4.75 Macmillan
301 Sociology 50-6475

"This publication cannot be called an elementary textbook although its colloquial style may recommend it for such use. This study is, in several respects, an original endeavor to synthesize anthropological and sociological theory around a few pivotal concepts. The two key categories on which major portions of Slotkin's deductions rest are 'environment' and 'adjustment.'" Am J Soc

"There is little in this text to commend it to either teacher or student. Imbued with the spirit of a kind of latter-day scholasticism, the book smacks of the library rather than the classroom. This, coupled with Dr. Slotkin's highly idiosyncratic conception of the content of social anthropology and his oblivion, or indifference, to many of the most productive trends in recent social science makes the volume seem curiously out of joint with the times. That the manuscript has languished for five or so years before being belatedly published adds to this impression. The lack of competent editorial assistance is only too apparent in the graceless, staccato style, the heavy freight of scholarly impedimenta, and the absence of a bibliography or most of the other amenities of a usuable text. In short, this is an ill-advised book." J. B. Casagrande
— Am Anthropol 53:245 Ap '51 1200w

"Occasionally the encyclopedic style of presentation is carried well beyond the point of diminishing returns. Sometimes the book seems to recapture the punctilious atmosphere of an eighteenth-century encyclopedia. . . Such shortcomings will, however, not blind the careful reader of this book to its distinct merits. This reviewer considers this publication a step toward the consolidation of anthropology and sociology as a science. While one may question some of the generalizations advanced in this work, the issues which they raise lie not in the blind alleys of sociological casuistry but along a royal highway which, one may hope, will bear heavy traffic." Ernest Manheim
+ — Am J Soc 56:369 Ja '51 1500w

"The author of this text exhibits diversified reading in the social sciences and in the humanities. He has high standards of scholarship. But the fruits of his learning are blighted by pedantry. . . Hundreds of quotations are assembled and tabulated rather than integrated into the text to document and illustrate every generalization made. The end product is regretfully a peculiarly static, scholastic, and, in parts, pedestrian document." B. J. Stern
— + Ann Am Acad 273:248 Ja '51 240w

"Professor Slotkin has allowed an excellent idea—the presentation of cross-cultural data to illustrate processes and principles—to get somewhat out of hand. This reviewer finds some of the positive aspects of the book to be: the use of historical data to give time-perspective to propositions; setting up criteria of a society's cultural 'advancement' or 'primitiveness' as the magnitude and complexity of its specializations. . . On the negative side must be listed the dubious breakdown of custom performance into 'customary activity' and 'customary behavior'; the insertion of long illustrative passages after nearly every statement so that the text is interrupted by long, unnecessary breaks." David Landy
+ — Social Forces 29:342 Mr '51 650w

SMART, WILLIAM MARSHALL. Origin of the earth. 239p il $2.75 Cambridge
520 Astronomy. Cosmogony [A51-9820]

A book for lay readers, originating in a series of talks to soldiers, by the professor of astronomy in Glasgow university. Divided into three sections captioned; Whence? When? How?

Booklist 47:306 My 1 '51

"I recommend Dr. Smart's book most highly." K. F. Mather
+ Christian Century 68:1407 D 5 '51 900w
Cleveland Open Shelf p17 S '51

"This is for the serious-minded reader who is willing to keep pushing ahead through occasionally difficult areas."
Kirkus 19:198 Ap 1 '51 180w
N Y New Tech Bks 36:35 My '51
San Francisco Chronicle p21 Je 10 '51 60w

"He divides the discussion, so important to the inquiring mind of man, into three chief parts: 'Whence?' 'When?' and 'How?' His answers to these questions are not dogmatic. They are the best that have been offered in the past or are current today both as to fact and to theory. This avoidance of the pontifical is one of the refreshing features of the book." J. C. Hickey
+ Sat R of Lit 34:40 Je 16 '51 650w

Reviewed by H. S. Jones
Spec 185:318 Mr 9 '51 550w

SMILEY, DEAN FRANKLIN, and GOULD, ADRIAN GORDON. Your health. 555p il $4.50 Macmillan
613 Hygiene 51-10315

"Deals with the important aspects of personal hygiene as well as including certain considerations of community health, especially as it affects the student after graduation. Many of the subjects discussed will be of interest to older persons as well as college students." Am J Pub Health

"Teachers acquainted with the work of Smiley and Gould will welcome another book from these well known writers. Your Health is the expression of many years of experience in the field of health education. Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes would have liked this book. He felt that knowledge, like timber, should be well seasoned before it is used. The factual material includes the new knowledge in hygiene and, while scientific in content, is presented in a style that is easy to read and understand. The book is well written." W. R. Morrison
+ Am J Pub Health 41:1132 S '51 280w
Booklist 47:404 Jl 15 '51

SMITH, ALPHEUS WILSON. Careers in physics. 271p il $4 Long's college bk. co, 1836 N High St, Columbus 1, Ohio
530.69 Physics as a profession 51-13475

"An outline of the scope and meaning of physics as a profession; intended for the guidance of students in secondary schools, colleges, and universities, facing the problem of choosing a career." (School & Society) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:118 D 1 '51

"An expert survey of the work and employment opportunities for physicists at the present time. The author is professor of physics emeritus and dean emeritus of the Graduate School of Ohio State University and knows whereof he speaks." R. R. Hawkins
+ Library J 77:62 Ja 1 '52 100w
School & Society 74:256 O 20 '51 30w

SMITH, ALSON JESSE, ed. Psychic source book; introd. by Pitirim A. Sorokin. (Creative age Press bk) 442p $4.50 Farrar, Straus
133.072 Psychical research 51-10921

"This volume deals with the little explored area of extrasensory perception and psychic research. It furnishes a convenient handbook of the best experiments accomplished in this field of growing interest. The first section ably lays the groundwork for the skeptical reader. . . The second part takes up case histories of such famous mediums as Patience

SMITH, A. J.—Continued
Worth and Mrs. Piper, as well as Gilbert Murray's experiments in thought transference and J. W. Dunne's prophetic dreams. The last part is devoted to the laboratory work of J. B. Rhine and S. G. Soal." Sat R of Lit

"To avoid any suggestion of mystic nonsense the editor—Reverend Alson Smith—has carefully chosen contributions that lean over backward to indicate a scientific approach to the problem. He does this so well that many not unwilling to believe will be persuaded." M. S.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Jl 29 '51 270w

"Despite great unevenness and some errors of proofreading this book is interesting. One is inclined to murmur with Galileo, 'And, still, it moves.'" M. S. Churchill
Sat R of Lit 34:37 N 10 '51 270w

SMITH, ALSON JESSE. Religion and the new psychology. 192p $2.50 Doubleday
130.072 Psychical research 51-9915

"[An account] of the development of parapsychology, or extra-sensory perception, as a respectable science and of its significance for both science and religion. Both Dr. Rhine of Duke and Bishop Pardue have written enthusiastic introductions. The story is told of the early development in psychical research, of the interest of reputable people in it from the beginning even though 95 percent of the early evidence was phony. Finally, it reached the laboratory stage at Duke, Harvard, and other universities, and statistical and mathematical records were kept of all experiments." Churchman

"Readable, thought-provoking discussion."
+ Bookmark 10:182 My '51 20w

"A well written and fascinating acount. . . This book is the easiest way to become acquainted with a new realm of important research, and it is certain to stimulate one's thinking even if the evidence seems unconclusive." R. C. Miller
+ Churchman 165:16 Ag '51 300w

SMITH, BRADFORD. Bradford of Plymouth. 338p $5 Lippincott
B or 92 Bradford, William. Plymouth colony 51-11198

Full-length, scholarly biography, with an occasional bit of imaginative detail, which tells the story of Plymouth colony's great governor from his youth in Scrooby, England, to his death.

Booklist 48:84 N 1 '51
Reviewed by Fanny Butcher
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 21 '51 600w

"It is a pity that Mr. Smith's book was not written with more skill and distinction, that it did not contain less indulgence of personal opinions and prejudices such as one detects between the lines. For the book is concerned with a mighty and momentous story." Margaret Williamson
+ — Christian Science Monitor p8 O 18 '51 800w

"An important book, vigorously conceived and written, well documented and spiced with humanity and humor."
+ Kirkus 19:506 S 1 '51 370w
Nation 173:380 N 3 '51 50w

"So much sentimental slop and (of late) disparaging nonsense has been written about the Plymouth Colony, that this sober, competent biography by Mr. Smith is thrice welcome." S. E. Morison
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 N 4 '51 1450w

"A striking example of the author's method is his treatment of the death of Bradford's first wife, Dorothy. . . A good many other passages and word pictures are similarly compounded of a small proportion of known fact and a large dose of imaginative reconstruction. While this sort of treatment can hardly be called valid history in a proper sense, it does make for a highly readable narrative. Bradford becomes, at his biographer's hands, a real human being and an understandable, if exceptional, individual." L. W. Labaree
+ — N Y Times p16 N 18 '51 460w
San Francisco Chronicle p15 D 9 '51 70w
Reviewed by Perry Miller
Sat R of Lit 35:17 Ja 12 '52 600w
Springf'd Republican p30A N 11 '51 460w

SMITH, CECIL MICHENER. Musical comedy in America. 374p pl $5 Theatre arts 782.8 Musical comedy 50-58209

A history of the music show in America, from the Black Crook, which opened in New York in 1866, to South Pacific of the present. Illustrated with many photographs. Index.

Booklist 47:202 F 1 '51
Bookmark 10:108 F '51 50w

"Highly recommended for music and theatre collections as well as for the larger public and university libraries." George Freedley
+ Library J 76:114 Ja 15 '51 60w

"This book arouses, to say the least, mixed feelings. In reading it I experienced pleasure and irritation, laughter and frustration. I am happy that it has appeared because there is nothing like it, and I am disappointed in its revelations because they are insufficient and sometimes erroneous. . . It may seem grudging praise, after such faultfinding, to say the book is welcome, but I have no other choice. The author has made available a vast quantity of needed information, has directed readers' attention to important phenomena that disappear too rapidly, and has caught some (but not all) of the glamour emanating from the musical stage. My chief complaint is that the book should have been so much better." E. N. Waters
+ — Music Lib Assn Notes 8:344 Mr '51 850w

"Almost any account of musical comedy in America would have been a good idea, and this one goes the idea one better: it does the job. . . One hardly expects an excellent reference work to be as 'readable' as romantic fiction, and this work is no exception. It does, nevertheless, present the bulk of its material with a maximum of clean, efficient prose. Although Smith flounders a bit throughout the book in his attempt to isolate musical comedy as a separate entity, he comes out all right in the end with: 'It is, in short, the form of all musical works for the stage except revue, ballet, and through-composed opera.'" Frederic Ramsey
+ — Nation 172:184 F 24 '51 1200w
New Repub 123:21 D 18 '50 50w

"It is the honesty and individuality of his views which distinguish this book, for although it is a history with dates, places, names and other factual data relating to a long succession of theatrical productions, it is held together and illuminated by the critical comment of its author." Oscar Hammerstein
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ja 28 '51 1450w

"Somehow his book avoids becoming a mere compendium, perhaps because Mr. Smith manifestly enjoys what he is doing and therefore writes with gusto. At all events, he has got a prodigious amount of fact between one pair of covers, and he has presented it engagingly throughout." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 D 12 '50 800w

"Contains a vast amount of material never previously brought within covers; it dates many obscure happenings, isolates beginnings, points up climaxes; but the end product for me is the source material for another, and livelier book. . . The photographs are generous in number and well chosen, doing in a way what the author has not done in re-creation of the moods and manners of the material he is discussing. There is an ample index." Irving Kolodin

Sat R of Lit 34:21 Ja 27 '51 500w

"The book has a minimum of the inevitable errors and omissions indigenous to such a voluminous work. . . Considered, however, as a whole, 'Musical Comedy in America' is a book that no library and no student of the theatre can do without." Bernard Sobel

+ — Theatre Arts 35:2 F '51 1650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p370 Je 15 '51 330w

SMITH, CHARLES EDWARD. Innocent III, church defender. 203p $3.50 La. state univ. press

B or 92 Innocent III, pope 51-1676

"Pope Innocent III (1198-1216) is most frequently thought of as the pope who raised his office to the highest pinnacle of imperial power that it ever attained and came nearer than any other to reducing all civil governments to a status of subordination to the ecclesiastical autocracy. This is, in fact, the truest way to think of him. But he did other things as well. Prof. Smith's able monograph confines itself for the most part to aspects of Innocent's work which may be called 'reform.' " (Christian Century) Bibliographical note. Index.

Reviewed by F. Duncalf

Am Hist R 56:948 Jl '51 290w

Reviewed by W. F. Garrison

Christian Century 68:562 My 2 '51 470w

Reviewed by Max Fischer

Commonweal 55:44 O 19 '51 440w

"The book as a whole makes clear the vast range of Pope Innocent III's interests and activities, the tremendous power reached by the medieval papacy under his leadership. The scholarly and minute documentation consisting of references to the papal correspondence will prove an eminently helpful index to careful study."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:170 Je '51 320w

SMITH, MRS DOROTHY EVELYN (JONES). O, the brave music. 256p $3 Dutton 51-11794

Ruan Ashley, daughter of a non-conformist English minister and a beautiful, high-spirited member of the aristocracy, describes her life from the age of seven to her middle teens. The scene is first an English industrial town, and a nearby farm, and later the ancient great house of Ruan's mother's high born family.

Booklist 47:354; 48:14 Je 15 '51; S 1 '51

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Cath World 174:155 N '51 150w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 26 '51 300w

"Some books grow in the reading, steadily and unobtrusively, like a good friendship. 'O, The Brave Music' is one of these. . . The story continues unpretentiously, too, but the characters are so credible, the descriptions of English north country moors and the crowded industrial town so evocative that the reader is completely won. This is not to say that the book is uneventful. It isn't. Dealt with less deftly and compassionaely, it might have been both sordid and sensational. That it definitely is otherwise is due to the author's particular skill." Maxine Shore

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 23 '51 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '51

Kirkus 19:299 Je 15 '51 180w

"Highly recommended. This should charm young and old." J. L. Ross

+ Library J 76:1223 Ag '51 60w

"Told in the first person, for the most part exquisitely, 'O, the Brave Music' occasionally lapses into the exaggerated and feigned innocence of effect which so often mars writing about children and adolescents. Accept its period and premises, and you can have a refreshing holiday from these our times in its delightful pages." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ag 19 '51 400w

"Pleasant kind of unrealistic fiction. It is well written. It has a certain mounting, emotional appeal. It holds interest, though the reader, especially the American reader, knows from the start that the characters have no existence, and could have no existence, even in the England of before World War I, which the setting purports to be. Life is not, and was not, like that anywhere, outside a fairy tale." Evelyn Eaton

N Y Times p18 Ag 19 '51 230w

"Foolish, meandering story."

— New Yorker 27:84 Ag 25 '51 100w

" 'O, the Brave Music' is frankly a sentimental, nostalgic tale, somewhat uneven in the manner of writing, containing some beautifully done passages and some that are hopelessly bad. The theme Mrs. Smith develops is summed up in one sentence: 'How strange and varied are the ways of happiness.' " J. V.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p16 S 2 '51 280w

"This is an old-fashioned, romantic novel, with all the suitable props and backdrops for a story which unfolds in an English country setting. . . Among the hard-bitten, disillusioned novels of this age, this romance has a touchingly nostalgic quality." Pamela Taylor

+ Sat R of Lit 34:28 Ag 25 '51 330w

Springf'd Republican p22A S 9 '51 140w

Wis Lib Bul 47:216 S '51

SMITH, GEORGE EVERARD KIDDER. Sweden builds; its modern architecture and land policy, background, development and contribution; phot. by the author. 279p $8.50 Bonnier

720.9485 Architecture—Sweden 51-5024

"The great part of this volume deals with present day achievements in school and civic architecture [in Sweden], in pre-fabricated houses and apartments, in recreational buildings, and outdoor plans, in theatres and factories. It is all bright and clean; 'we find intelligent buildings for intelligent citizens.' " (Library J) Bibliography.

Reviewed by C. S. Ascher

Ann Am Acad 276:180 Jl '51 370w

"Another thoroughly successful and handsome book by the young American architect who has already interpreted and photographed and arranged exhibitions concerning Stockholm and Brazil and Switzerland. . . Recommended." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 76:599 Ap 1 '51 110w

Reviewed by John Willett

Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 24 '51 110w

"Anyone who is remotely interested in building, design, city-planning and beautifying his environment in general might well place 'Sweden Builds' near the top of his list. . . The author, an architect who traveled four times to Sweden to photograph and write the story of the country's architecture on a Guggenheim fellowship, has captured its spirit in crisp, inviting pictures and text." Ogden Tanner

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Mr 11 '51 800w

"In 'Sweden Builds' . . . on-the-spot studies and photographs form a comprehensive pictorial survey, and the underlining captions make for quick reading and absorption. But it must be admitted that there is nothing new in Sweden's architecture, and the author cannot be blamed for that. Nevertheless, to any student particularly interested in Sweden's contribution to the arts this book will be welcome for its spirit of warm devotion to Swedish integrity." F. J. Kiesler

+ Sat R of Lit 34:36 My 5 '51 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p422 Jl 6 '51 400w

SMITH, HENRY LADD. Airways abroad; the story of American world air routes. 355p il $4 Univ. of Wis. press

387.72 Aeronautics, Commercial. Airways. Trippe, Juan Terry 50-14738

"Here is the story of two amazing decades in which American air lines spread a network around the world. Largely, it is the story of Juan Trippe, who was just twenty-eight in 1927 when he saw a pot of gold at the end of a Key West-Havana air line, organized Pan American Airways and began dreaming of further conquests. Also, it is the story of rivals who, in this country and abroad, resented Juan Trippe's achievement and tried, with varying degrees of success, to win a share of the airways for themselves." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 47:89 N 1 '50

"Mr. Smith's book is likely to take an assured place as an authoritative record of the infant years of a new pattern of world communications." Lewis Gannet
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 Ja 28 '51 550w

"Highly recommended to aviation aficionados and the general reader of non-fiction." P. R. Levin
+ Sat R of Lit 34:36 My 19 '51 360w
U S Quarterly Bk R 7:60 Mr '51 160w

SMITH, IRA LEPOUCE, and SMITH, HARRY ALLEN. Three men on third [a second book of baseball anecdotes, oddities and curiosities; with il. by Leo Hershfield]. 250p $2.95 Doubleday

796.357 Baseball—Anecdotes, facetiae, satire, etc. 51-9939

An anthology of baseball funny stories, anecdotes, and oddities, similar to Low and Inside (Book Review Digest 1949).

Booklist 47:269 Ap 1 '51

Reviewed by Robert Cromie
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 29 '51 300w
Kirkus 19:42 Ja 15 '51 70w

"Highly recommended." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 76:780 My 1 '51 30w

Reviewed by John Lardner
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ag 5 '51 100w

"A cheery, informative book." Rex Lardner
+ N Y Times p23 Mr 18 '51 200w

"The stories are of all kinds, some very funny, some dull, some of general interest, some of peculiar concern to baseball fans. Many of the items are 'oddities'—like the foul ball hit in the San Francisco ball park that landed in a tuba. Only a baseball nut would want to read the whole volume." M. S.
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p26 My 6 '51 100w

SMITH, IRENE (MRS LOUIS GREEN). Down the road with Johnny [il. by Kurt Wiese]. (Whittlesey house publication) 64p $1.75 McGraw

51-13392

Continues the story of the young hero of Lucky Days for Johnny (Book Review Digest 1950). This time Johnny visits his uncle's farm and has some enjoyable experiences. For grades 2 to 3.

Booklist 48:90 N 1 '51

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 N 25 '51 120w

"A sunny, enjoyable little story for young readers."
+ Kirkus 19:349 Jl 15 '51 110w

Reviewed by E. T. Dobbins
Library J 76:1943 N 15 '51 80w

"A fine new 'thin' book for small boys. . . The story is gentle, yet unsentimental and real." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 N 18 '51 60w

"As in 'Lucky Days For Johnny,' there is nice quiet everyday humor here that children like. It is a good story for very young readers. Kurt Wiese's illustrations on almost every page are delightful." Phyllis Fenner
+ N Y Times p39 N 11 '51 150w
Springf'd Republican p28A N 25 '51 40w

SMITH, JOHN EDWIN. Royce's social infinite: the community of interpretation. 176p $2.75 Liberal arts press

191.9 Royce, Josiah 50-6708

"Professor John E. Smith affirms that three important features of Royce's thought have not been sufficiently treated: the theory of the community of interpretation; the debt to Charles Peirce's thought, particularly his logic and the interpretation of Christianity. . . Broadly, the author is convinced that Royce's view of Christianity 'has a peculiar significance at present,' since, though Royce 'should not be called "neoorthodox" in one of the senses of that rather vague term, he did try to steer a middle course between naïve fundamentalism on the one hand and that liberalism which hoped to confine itself to the "religion of the historical Jesus," on the other.' " J Religion

J Philos 48:219 Mr 29 '51 650w

Reviewed by J. K. McCreary
+ J Religion 31:69 Ja '51 600w

"John E. Smith, Assistant Professor of Philosophy at Columbia, has performed his task with great clarity and with a remarkable precision of thought. . . His analysis of Royce's philosophy is particularly valuable because it reveals so clearly how the idealistic and the Christian elements are fused in Royce's system. Royce's 'beloved community' is a philosophical version of the Christian concept of the invisible church." Reinhold Niebuhr
+ N Y Times p12 O 8 '50 700w

"This is high doctrine, not to be approached by the short-winded. But Professor Smith has put it all in very much smaller compass than Royce's, and explained it in a way that is orderly, workmanlike, and—considering its difficulty—lucid, although a little pedestrian."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:297 S '50 240w

SMITH, MARGARET RUTH (ANN SERANNE, pseud). Complete book of home baking. 386p il $3.95 Doubleday

641.631 Baking 51-9049

"Here are, at least, 1000 recipes, as well as charts and equivalents and commandments, for baking everything made with any kind of dough. The skilled author has covered foreign and domestic foods." Library J

Booklist 47:170 Ja 1 '51

"Inviting, well-informed volume."
+ Bookmark 10:84 Ja '51 30w

"The one great lack that I felt in the book was virtual ignoring of the use of mechanical aids, and the changes, for instance, in timing and in combination of ingredients if an electric beater is used. Definitely a book for the advanced cook."
Kirkus 18:579 S 15 '50 250w

"A mouth-watering tome, not amateurish."
+ Library J 75:2153 D 15 '50 50w

"Basic instructions are good, but recipes are not always consistent in form." M. A. Gram
Sat R of Lit 34:49 Mr 10 '51 140w

SMITH, MORTIMER BREWSTER. William Jay Gaynor, mayor of New York. 192p il $2.50 Regnery

B or 92 Gaynor, William Jay. New York (city)—Politics and government 51-12724

Popularly written biography of a colorful figure in early twentieth century American politics, mayor of New York from 1910 to 1914.

Christian Century 69:45 Ja 9 '52 250w

Reviewed by Godfrey Sperling
Christian Science Monitor p9 O 27 '51 500w

Current Hist 21:353 D '51 50w
Kirkus 19:426 Ag 1 '51 170w

"An interesting character brought to life in a frank and judicious book."
+ Nation 173:360 O 27 '51 60w

"The reader who has a taste for salty characters may rather regret the author's substitution of a sketch for a portrait, because William Jay Gaynor was a vivid personality moving among other vivid personalities in a series of civic dramas, and while Mr. Smith has been able to convey the flavor of the man and his period with remarkable economy, he indicates that an extended study would be even more interesting." Harry Baehr
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p30 D 2 '51 450w

"Mortimer Smith—biographer and social historian—attempts to salvage Mayor Gaynor's fame in a book that is well written and interesting." Neil MacNeil
+ N Y Times p36 O 21 '51 500w

SMITH, SAMUEL LEONARD. Builders of goodwill; the story of the state agents of Negro education in the South, 1910-1950. 185p il $3 Tenn. bk. co, 181 3d av, N, Nashville 3, Tenn.

371.974 Negroes—Education. School administration and organization 51-9079

"Record of the work of educational foundations in the South, particularly of the Julius Rosenwald Fund, during the first half of the twentieth century. . . Specifically, the book deals with the work of the state agents of Negro education in the South and of the Southern representatives of the Julius Rosenwald Fund, the Jeanes and Slater Funds, and the General Education Board, from 1910 to 1950." Social Forces

Booklist 47:232 Mr 1 '51

"It preserves for the United States a story of educational and humanitarian development of great importance not only to the South, but to the nation, and to foreign countries as well, since the conditions under which the developments took place have been widely studied by other regions and countries where similar or comparable conditions prevail." L. R. Wilson
+ Social Forces 29:336 Mr '51 800w

SMITH, THOMAS LYNN, and MARCHANT, ALEXANDER, eds. Brazil; portrait of half a continent. 466p il maps $5.75 Dryden

918.1 Brazil 51-3140

"Brazilian and American scholars unite to survey Brazil, each writing a chapter on his specialty. In varying degrees of studious monotone they provide a wealth of information on social, economic, religious and artistic life, sketching a varied present while showing its logical development from the physical environment and historic past. The thirty-two photographs and drawings are grouped at the front of the book; figures and charts accompany the text." Booklist

"The volume, a valuable contribution to the literature on Brazil, is of interest to specialists as well as to the general reader." R. E. Crist
+ Ann Am Acad 277:276 S '51 500w
Booklist 47:380 Jl 1 '51
Foreign Affairs 30:169 O '51 20w

"A solid fine job, it is not a book for the careless or casual reader, but it furnishes the material which some one should incorporate in a more popular book. But even the tired tourist will enjoy the fifty excellent illustrations." Hubert Herring
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 N 18 '51 260w

"This 'portrait' seems to lie, in format, somewhere between a reference book, a history and an interpretation—without achieving the best aspects of any. It lacks the penetrating interpretative insight of Freyre's 'Masters and Slaves' (to which the authors make frequent reference) or da Cunha's 'Revolt in the Backlands.' This volume is no more than a collection of expanded lecture notes which grew out of a 1948 summer session on Brazilian studies at Vanderbilt University." W. W. White
N Y Times p7 Ag 5 '51 350w

"Introduced by interesting photographs and drawings, this symposium provides a fairly satisfactory view of contemporary Brazilian society and culture, but it must be supplemented by other materials to provide the portrait claimed by the subtitle. Nevertheless, the variety of subjects discussed, the high degree of excellence achieved, and its general readability combine to recommend this composit work."
+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 7:299 S '51 220w

SMITH, THOMAS VERNOR. Abraham Lincoln and the spiritual life. 95p $1.50 Beacon press

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham 51-3983

"Mr. Smith, Professor of Philosophy and Citizenship at Syracuse University, examines Lincoln as a moralist, as one who served truth as scrupulously as any scientist, beauty as faithfully as an artist and who sought the whole of truth and goodness rather than a part. At the same time, Mr. Smith emphasizes Lincoln's insistence on the value of compromise in moving toward mankind's desired goals." N Y Times

"Lively, learned, provocative, and pocket-sized addendum to the monumental pile of writings about Lincoln. This little volume, not to be overlooked by those interested in Lincoln's relevance to our own troublous times, is the brisk tribute of a professional philosopher." Robert Peel
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 F 8 '51 900w
N Y Times p23 Mr 18 '51 130w

SMITH, WILLIAM JAY. Celebration at dark; poems. 48p $2 Farrar, Straus

811 50-10914

A group of short poems from the recent work of this young American poet.

Booklist 47:270 Ap 1 '51

"A second volume of poems worth serious consideration for their well-molded style and evocative, lyrical tone."
+ Kirkus 18:627 O 1 '50 110w

"The perfection of sound and vision in these poems is equalled by the versatility of language and sincerity of emotion that went into their composition. This book is worthy of a place in every library of poetry for Mr. Smith has written some of the most beautiful lyrics of his generation." Herbert Cahoon
+ Library J 76:49 Ja 1 '51 50w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries
Nation 172:256 Mr 17 '51 100w

"The poems have the rare merit of meaning more than they say. Most of them are short and unpretentious, yet they are perfectly controlled, not only metrically, but visually." Michael Hamburger
+ New Statesman & Nation 41:106 Ja 27 '51 340w

"William Jay Smith has a calmness joined to certain bell-like tones which remind of early Quennell, or, somehow, of Elizabeth Bishop. He is in some ways a poet like a painter, sensuously conscious of colors, of words as plastic tones and of music in words as color. Above all, of the demand for controlled form, a blending of images and sounds and sights and imaginings in harmony." Richard Eberhart
+ N Y Times p16 Ja 7 '51 380w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan
New Yorker 27:113 Je 9 '51 20w

Reviewed by J. E. Hardy
Poetry 78:237 Jl '51 1050w
Times [London] Lit Sup p798 D 15 '50 240w

"Much of this book has the authority which all genuine poetry possesses in some degree,

SMITH, W. J.—Continued
however frail may be its actual accomplishment. That authority consists in a certain confidence of direction, together with an appropriate musical quality and use of imagery and rhetorical statement."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:27 Mr '51 240w

SMYTHE, FRANCIS SYDNEY. Climbs in the Canadian rockies; photographs by the author. 260p $4.50 Norton

796.52 Rocky mountains, Canada. Mountaineering 51-11640

"A book by the late Frank S. Smythe, long known as an alpinist who, while he kept the climb itself in his mind's eye first, had also a nice appreciation of the wild life, both flora and fauna, of the mountain regions he knows so well. Somewhat over half of this volume concerns Canadian Rockies and mountains there; the rest includes mountains in the Selkirks and the Coast Range of British Columbia. There are magnificent photographs, some in full color." San Francisco Chronicle

Booklist 48:9 S 1 '51

"Just as it is staggering to think of any man's doing what Smythe and his associates did, so it is impossible to think of anyone's failing to respond enthusiastically to reading such a book as this about their exploits. Thanks to books like this, the hard earned memories of mountaineers become in large and signicant part a public possession." A. C. Ames
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 S 23 '51 330w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 27 '51 90w

"The present book is the last of Mr. Smythe's mountain memories that will appear: it is a most happy book, with a great sense of holiday. . . Unlike the Alps, unlike the Himalaya, the atmosphere of the Northern Rockies 'cares nothing for the past, for there was no past save for a few roaming Indians, no ancient civilization ever populated its valleys.' This lack would deter many travellers. Mr. Smythe responded to the challenge, and these beautiful, inhuman mountains have occasioned one of his most agreeable books."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p120 F 23 '51 1100w

SNEDDON, IAN NAISMITH. Fourier transforms. 542p $10 McGraw

517.35 Fourier's series 51-3296

"In this useful work, Fourier transforms and related techniques such as LaPlace, Mellin and Hankle transforms are presented from the standpoint of advanced students and research workers in physics and engineering. The basic emphasis is on the mathematical techniques, although applications of the techniques to scientific and engineering problems are illustrated in many worked examples. An understanding of advanced calculus is the chief prerequisite. The book is based on postgraduate lectures given over a period of years to advanced students and graduates at the University of Glasgow." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 76:1134 Jl '51 60w
N Y New Tech Bks 36:38 My '51

SNEIDER, VERN J. Teahouse of the August moon. 282p $3 Putnam

51-3768

Captain Fisby of the Government team in Okinawa was presented with two geishas in return for a favor. The captain was stunned for a time, but he came out of the situation fine. What the ladies of the town couldn't think up, Fisby did. And the Colonel was eventually persuaded that Fisby's way was best.

Booklist 47:363 Je 15 '51

Reviewed by Edith Weigle
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Jl 15 '51 440w

"Great novels about Okinawa remain to be written. But Vern Sneider has done a thoroughly adequate job of delineating the character of the U.S. military occupation of that war- and tornado-torn pivot island of the Ryukyu archipelago. That he has described so tragic a situation in such comic fashion and yet made his point gives promise of a bright future for this young, new novelist." G. E. Hopkins
+ Christian Century 68:990 Ag 29 '51 750w

Reviewed by Ruth Chapin
Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 7 '51 420w

"A wonderfully humorous and satirical story. Recommended." W. K. Harrison
+ Library J 76:963 Je 1 '51 90w

"A charming and pleasant novel." Herbert Kupferberg
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 My 27 '51 700w

"MacArthur never regenerated Japan like this. Here is rehabilitation played for laughs. If some of them are a little forced in the closing pages, it is still rehabilitation without tears." Trudi McCullough
N Y Times p17 Je 3 '51 380w

"Mr. Sneider's crudely drawn characters and thin obvious humor would be fine in a comic strip but show up poorly in a full-length novel."
— New Yorker 27:77 Je 30 '51 110w

"Good-natured satire, which has more meaning behind its foolery than you might think. It's a healthily funny, often uproarious, always entertaining yarn. And if, concealed beneath all the high-jinks, there is a pretty sound moral—well, so much the better." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 24 '51 700w

"In this gay little novel Mr. Sneider has entirely without preaching told us that our fault as occupiers is our tendency to think of democracy only in terms of American institutions. . . Everyone involved in such tasks both in Washington and overseas should read 'The Teahouse of the August Moon.' A bitter but beneficial pill is not often so tastefully coated." Bradford Smith
+ Sat R of Lit 34:9 Je 30 '51 370w
Springf'd Republican p8D Jl 1 '51 150w
Time 57:97 Je 25 '51 500w

SNOW, CHARLES PERCY. The masters. 386p $3.50 Macmillan

51-8194

This is the latest in the author's sequence of novels which describes the life and experience of Lewis Eliot, the narrator. The whole book centers around the election of a new Master of a Cambridge (England) college.

Booklist 48:58; 86 O 15 '51; N 1 '51

"It is written in beautiful English, a thing in itself to make it distinguished. But it is a novel, obedient to its form, and rich with understanding of the motives of men. That which is urgent in all men, good and bad, this novel makes us aware of. But it is written with irony at its saddest, men are not condemned, but are understood." Francis Downing
+ Commonweal 55:283 D 21 '51 700w
Kirkus 19:450 Ag 15 '51 150w

"It is very English in style and approach, which on the one hand will limit appeal for American reader, on the other hand give him excellent insight into English college faculty life. Strength lies more in individual characterization than in movement of general plot. Recommended for sophisticated reader." H. H. Bernt
Library J 76:1421 S 15 '51 60w

"In spite of its unevenness and rather photographic quality this may be the most impressive English novel since L. P. Hartley's 'The Boat.' . . The dons' talk is so well done that one remembers what it is that might make some of them snatch at an opportunity of being dropped from an aeroplane behind enemy lines a long way away from their common room." Paul Bloomfield

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 27 '51 130w

"The Masters permits no distraction of attention; its opening is as quiet as the perimeter of a whirlpool, and like a whirlpool it proceeds gently to fasten upon the attention. But the journey to the center seems to be over in a flash; there is no time for looking at the scenery on the banks. To change the metaphor, we are engrossed in an architectural feature; it is in itself beautifully done; but it is a harmonious part of a larger whole. In the illusion that it gives of brevity it is a justification of the scale upon which Mr. Snow has chosen to work." J. D. Scott

+ New Statesman & Nation 42:134 Ag 4 '51 550w

"You can argue that 'The Masters' is too blatantly a thesis novel. But it is because Mr. Snow has the courage to be the moralist of a civilized and cultured group that he seems to me important. Readers of 'The Masters' will feel at the end as if they had been shut in an operating room under a powerful light, the world fallen away, watching a skillful performance by a skillful surgeon. They will find also, I think, that the minute knowledge of the surgeon compensates for the slow motion of the tale and for its schematic quality." H. M. Jones

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 O 28 '51 550w

Reviewed by Donald Barr

N Y Times p17 D 16 '51 370w

"Mr. Snow's writing is slow, sure, and shrewd, and powerful enough to draw the reader entirely into his closed, almost airtight world of scholars and their families."

+ New Yorker 27:160 N 10 '51 150w

Reviewed by Harrison Smith

Sat R of Lit 34:17 N 3 '51 700w

School & Society 75:15 Ja 5 '52 20w

"It is certain that The Masters is beautifully constructed, and that to hold the reader's attention for so long a book on a single issue so esoteric and remote is a major achievement. The intention of the book I doubt my capacity to evaluate, and must urge each reader to judge for himself." Marghanita Laski

Spec 187:106 Jl 20 '51 360w

"The author has gone to great pains to reproduce all the circumstances and atmosphere of the society he depicts. In this he has been extremely successful. He is a writer who recalls Hugh Walpole in his general approach, though Mr. Snow is more determined to keep his story at a realistic level. Indeed, his realism is so insistent that there are times when some of the unexciting preoccupations of his characters begin to infect the reader with a suggestion of their own tedium. He is at his least happy with female characters. . . The book closes in an atmosphere of sadness and failure; but there can be no doubt that The Masters gives an excellent account of at least one side of university life, upon which Mr. Snow is to be warmly congratulated."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p449 Jl 20 '51 430w

SNOW, EDWARD ROWE. Secrets of the North Atlantic islands. 339p il maps $4 Dodd

970.04 Islands of the Atlantic 50-10687

Stories of pirates, shipwrecks, buried treasure, ghosts and early settlers along the eastern coast of North America, from South Carolina to Newfoundland.

Booklist 47:155 D 15 '50

"The new Snow volume is well illustrated with photografs and line drawings, has maps of every island written about, and interesting endpaper maps, apparently by the author, all of which add much to the readability. Recommended for all members of the family." Al Chase

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ja 7 '51 190w

"There is something for almost every taste in this volume, but the whole is best suited for those who have felt, with the author, the 'magic fascination' of the island and who hold it to be 'a body of land surrounded by adventure.' They, guided by Mr. Snow, can find new excitement in familiar scenes, visit places dimly seen from a steamer's deck or journey to spots that before were only an evocative name on a map." H. W. Baehr

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 D 3 '50 500w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 D 24 '50 170w

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich

Sat R of Lit 34:21 Mr 3 '51 170w

SNYDER, LOUIS LEO, ed. Treasury of intimate biographies. 384p $5 Greenberg

920 51-10995

"Dramatic stories from the lives of great men told by those who knew them well and who themselves were men and women of distinction in literature and the arts, and placed in historical continuum and perspective by before-and-after notes concerning the lives, loves, and work of both biographee and biographer, and designed for full enjoyment and reading pleasure." (Subtitle) No index.

"Brilliantly conceived collection of short biografies. . . [They] are short, to the point, and some are amusing. Their charm lies in the reader knowing he is getting first hand coverage, rather than a report by some scholar digging around in the records centuries later." Richard Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Jl 1 '51 260w

"The idea is a good one, though something less than four hundred pages hardly allows scope for its full realization. Each sketch amounts to little more than a tantalizing taste of what we should like to digest at leisure." G. F. Whicher

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ag 5 '51 80w

"The selections are, in almost every case, interesting reading and that is the end toward which this volume was planned and executed." R. H. D.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 S 23 '51 160w

SNYDER, LOUIS LEO, and MORRIS, RICHARD B., eds. They saw it happen; eyewitness reports of great events. 445p il $5 Stackpole co.

909 History, Universal—Sources 51-14423

An anthology of eyewitness accounts of significant events in human history. Partial contents: Sennacherib lays siege to Jerusalem; Nehemiah rebuilds the walls of Jerusalem; The death of Socrates; Delenda est Carthago! Britain is invaded! Pliny the younger on the eruption of Mount Vesuvius; Canossa: humiliation of a monarch; Butchery on the operating table; Michelangelo's ordeal on the scaffold; Sir Thomas More meets death with a wisecrack; The massacre of St. Bartholomew; Samuel Pepys on the great fire of London; America's first revolt; The black hole of Calcutta; Massacre at Boston; "I have not yet begun to fight!" Mutiny on the Bounty; Retreat from Moscow; Gold in them hills; P. T. Barnum presents Jenny Lind; A nation of eyewitnesses sees Kefauver investigation. Index.

"The book is an invaluable record of lucid writing, exciting events, and historical information, and for sheer entertainment it is hard to beat." R. L. Blakesley

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p42 D 2 '51 360w

"The editors, both history professors—the first at C.C.N.Y. and the other at Columbia—are to be complimented for choosing their material, especially in the earlier parts of the book, for its unfamiliarity as well as for its dramatic value."

+ New Yorker 27:176 D 8 '51 180w

SOKOLOFF, BORIS FEDOROVICH. Science and the purpose of life. 284p $3 Creative age

570.1 Religion and science. Biology—Philosophy 50-9926

"In this work, Dr. Sokoloff, a biologist of some repute and Director of Research at Florida Southern College, expresses his profound belief in the purposefulness of human existence. He has come to the conclusion that science, although rendering great services to mankind, has failed because of its inability to bring true happiness and peace of mind. His studies regarding the immortality of cells, the quality of individuality possessed by each living thing, the evolution of man, and the phenomena of intuition and precognition, have convinced him that 'a nonmaterial power dominates and directs the living world.' " Library J

"Not for the pure scientist despite the large dose of biology, this is provocative and written for the layman."

Kirkus 18:542 S 1 '50 170w

"The book has a wide appeal and is heartily recommended." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 75:1658 O 1 '50 150w

"What we have in this book is not a logical case for vitalism, but an exercise in what might better be termed 'spontaneous induction.' " J. W. H.

San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 26 '50 200w

"The belief in the immortality of the soul, which Dr. Sokoloff shares with many others, is one of the most powerful ideas ever conceived. It is a travesty of religious feeling to see the author attempting to 'prove' this belief by citing studies of rat nutrition, vitamin C, and hormone E. A similar dragging-in of technical data typifies his discussions of purpose in evolution and other mystical problems. For all its good intentions this book falls far short of its aims." J. E. P.

Sat R of Lit 34:31 Ap 28 '51 230w

SOLOMON, CHARLES J., and DISBROW, BENNETT L. Slam bidding and point count. 281p $2.75 Macrae Smith co.

795.41 Contract bridge 51-9194

"The near science of contract bridge is further systematized in this description of the Solomon-Disbrow point-count method. The two experts concentrate on the bidding of slams, reducing the technique to a question of mathematical percentages. They also offer their newest contribution to the auction. A two-diamond forcing bid to uncover control cards without necessitating a game declaration." San Francisco Chronicle

---

Booklist 47:249 Mr 15 '51

"Bridge players eager to keep up on modern developments in the game will enjoy and profit by a clearly stated analysis of slam bidding through direct and conventional methods."

+ Bookmark 10:108 F '51 30w

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 4 '51 70w

SOLOV'EV, VLADIMIR SERGEEVICH. Anthology; arranged by S. L. Frank, tr. from the Russian by Natalie Duddington. 256p $3.50 Scribner

197 Philosophy, Russian [51-9534]

"Solovyov was 'a philosopher, a theologian, a perfectly original mystic, a man of the "prophetic" type, a moral teacher, a political thinker, a poet and a literary critic.' . . He was deeply conscious of the apocalyptic meaning of things—strikingly exemplified in The Story of Antichrist, which Dr. Frank includes in his anthology. Other excerpts are taken from Solovyov's Lectures on Godmanhood, from The Meaning of Love, from The History and the Future of Theocracy and from The National Question in Russia. These excerpts are translated from the Russian by Natalie Duddington, long a pioneer in the field of Russian literary and religious studies." Commonweal

---

Christian Century 68:497 Ap 18 '51 260w

"The distinguished editor of this treasury did not live to see his selections published. Professor Frank died recently in Europe after many years of fruitful writing and teaching in the field of Russian religious philosophy. He was the very man to make a careful and well-balanced choice of Solovyovian texts. As Dr. Frank reminds us in his scholarly introduction, this was no easy choice because of the extraordinary range of Solovyov's gifts." Helene Iswolsky

+ Commonweal 53:499 F 23 '51 600w

"Included within this anthology are selections from Solovyov's writings upon many other topics of interest to American readers, quite apart from their possible connection with Christian unity. These give the reader some acquaintance with the philosopher's interpretations of God, Christianity, humanity, beauty in nature and art, romantic love, morality, nationality, legal justice, and the secret of progress. . . Mrs. Duddington's translations read well, and give the impression that in the original Russian Solovyov's works must be literary classics of a very high order." W. K. Wright

+ Crozer Q 28:262 Jl '51 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p185 Mr 23 '51 650w

SOLSKI, VASLAV. Train leaves at midnight. 287p $3 Crown 51-12803

"Novel of suspense [which] takes us underground in Poland during the terrible occupation that has followed World War II. The author, a writer of international reputation, was in Russia during the revolution of 1917, in Germany in the '30s when Hitler rose to power, in France when Paris fell, in London during the blitz. He was born in Poland and knows his people." Springf'd Republican

---

Kirkus 19:406 Ag 1 '51 180w

"If it weren't for a leaden love affair and an overcast of Slavic melancholy this could have been a wholly exciting yarn. . . It will probably be even more exciting in celluloid than it is in its present form. Even as it stands, it has its rewarding moments of terror." Richard Plant

+ — N Y Times p36 O 14 '51 360w

"Vaslav Solski has written a thrilling story of conspiracy and suspense with an air of authenticity that will lead the reader to believe that he did not come by his material secondhand." Jack Aldridge

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 7 '51 450w

"[The novel] succeeds for stretches in holding the reader's attention, and is not likely to add anything to his knowledge of Poland's recent history." Robert Pick

Sat R of Lit 34:71 N 17 '51 280w

"Solski has capitalized fully on every emotion to build up a plot of unusual interest." J. F. S.

Springf'd Republican p30A N 11 '51 110w

SOMERVELL, DAVID CHURCHILL. British politics since 1900. 265p $3.75 Oxford

942.08 Great Britain—Politics and government 50-12182

For descriptive note see Annual for 1950.

"Mr. Somervell is not (praise be!) 'nonpartisan,' as the book jacket claims; but until he reaches the last twenty years, when a certain bias against Labor becomes apparent, he dispenses kicks and ha'pence fairly impartially. Churchill is his hero throughout the book. The characterizations of Baldwin and Neville Chamberlain are good, of Balfour, Asquith, and MacDonald fair, of Lloyd George inadequate. This is history without tears; or, to change the metaphor, an éclair when one had hoped for fruit cake. And, of course, one should not complain of one's host's choice of fare." C. L. Mowat

+ — Am Hist R 56:644 Ap '51 370w

"Political scientists may regret the absence of any discussion of party organization and the fact that the book does not begin at an earlier point. . . It may also be regretted that much space is devoted to such comparatively settled issues as those of the suffragette campaign. Nevertheless, this is the best book of its kind available. Particularly satisfactory are the character sketches of certain British politicians and the delineation of the issues on which successive elections in twentieth-century Britain have turned." A. B. Dugan
+ Am Pol Sci R 45:248 Mr '51 260w

"This volume is by a distinguished author, who does a distinguished job." E. P. Chase
+ Ann Am Acad 273:271 Ja '51 350w

Reviewed by Eric Harrison
Canadian Hist R 32:280 S '51 420w

"Mr. David Somervell's latest work is entirely in keeping with his well-known style and powers of condensation, consistency and sense of proportion, not a word too much nor an essential fact omitted. Yet this is a very human book which should interest many readers. The trenchant quality of its wit suits the nature of party politics, and reminds us that many a debate in the House of Commons also reflects the same quality." Leila Flower
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Ja 3 '51 600w

"A delightfully readable survey, with a gallery of well-drawn political portraits. Of particular interest is the author's defense, at points debatable, of the Baldwin and Chamberlain Cabinets, which have suffered both Churchillian and Laborite castigation."
+ Foreign Affairs 29:328 Ja '51 40w

"Like his previous books, the present volume is a work of neither erudition nor profundity; and if it is, in general, disappointing, the explanation is mainly that Somervell has not taken advantage of the rich potentialities of an important subject. . . All this is not to say that the book is without value. Any layman who seeks an introductory survey of some of the main currents in twentieth-century British political history will find it helpful; and anyone who enjoys reading lively and colorful character sketches of political leaders will find it a rewarding volume." Herman Ausubel
+ — Pol Sci Q 66:136 Mr '51 550w

Sat R of Lit 34:58 Ap 14 '51 400w

"This book is certainly a delight to read, the grace of its style and the pungency of its aphorisms giving it unusual distinction. The reader who wants to understand the democratic revolution now in process in Britain could not do better than begin by reading this book." C. H. Driver
+ Yale R n s 40:375 winter '51 190w

SONNICHSEN, CHARLES LELAND. I'll die before I'll run. 294p il $3.50 Harper

976.4 Texas—History. Crime and criminals—Texas. Vendetta 51-9785

The story of the Texas frontier feuds of the last century. Illustrated with photographs. Map on end papers. No index.

Booklist 47:270 Ap 1 '51

Reviewed by Stanley Vestal
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 My 13 '51 450w

Kirkus 18:749 D 15 '50 120w

Reviewed by Sylvester Vigilante
Library J 76:516 Mr 15 '51 140w

"The quality that makes his narratives readable is a sense of immediacy—and a sense of immediacy can never be realized by talking around a subject but only by unstopping the bottle and letting it flow out." Frank Dobie
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Je 24 '51 850w

"Though aware of that danger, Mr. Sonnichsen has trod rather heavily here and there, on a few sensitive toes. His book is a distinct contribution to Texas history, a well-written, well-documented recording of a chapter in which Texans can find little pride." Hoffman Birney
+ N Y Times p29 Mr 11 '51 360w

"Over the years, many of the great Texas feuds have found their way into the published historical accounts of the Southwest, and they have almost invariably made good reading. Now, however, there appears (probably for the first time) a collection of such chronicles which treats the feud thoughtfully as an historical phenomenon." Ruth Teiser
+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ap 22 '51 650w

Sat R of Lit 34:35 Ag 18 '51 190w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:296 S '51 230w

SOPER, DAVID WESLEY, ed. These found the way; thirteen converts to Protestant Christianity [by Joy Davidman, and others]. 175p $2.50 Westminster press

922 Protestantism 51-10040

"In their own words, thirteen people of diverse backgrounds and interests tell of the personal experiences that led them to accept Protestant Christianity." (Pub note) The contributors to the volume are: Joy Davidman; Mildred E. Whitcomb; Joseph Wittkofski; Asa G. Candler, Jr.; William Lindsay Gresham; Lee Jordan; Frank R. Snavely; Gerald Kennedy; Chad Walsh; Nels F. S. Ferré; Hyatt Howe Waggoner; Wingate M. Johnson; David Wesley Soper.

"This is an old-fashioned 'testimonial meeting' with modern participants, in book form. . . How the reader may react to these intimate spiritual autobiographies will probably depend upon the degree of subjectivism that he likes in his religion. This reviewer, for one, prefers to see religion placed on a somewhat more objective footing." D. E. Stevenson
Christian Century 68:797 Jl 4 '51 420p

"These life stories are interesting and, with one exception, positive and constructive. It is a good book for Protestants to pass on to those searching for the truth, particularly to young intellectuals."
+ Kirkus 19:57 F 1 '51 170w

Springf'd Republican p5D Je 17 '51 180w

SORENSEN, MRS VIRGINIA (EGGERSTEN). Proper gods. 309p $3 Harcourt

51-9941

Adan Savala, a Yaqui Indian, recently returned from service in World war II, decides to rejoin his family in Mexico. He had been brought up in Arizona, when the family lived in exile, so he did not remember his birthplace in Mexico. It is the story of Adan's struggle to readjust to the old, dignified way of his ancestors, and to his love for Micaela.

Booklist 47:245; 294 Mr 15 '51; Ap 15 '51

Reviewed by Mildred Walker
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 29 '51 450w

Reviewed by M. W. Stoer
Christian Science Monitor p9 Ap 23 '51 250w

"This is wholly different from her previous novels and displays almost encyclopedic information about the Yaquis which hangs darkly over the re-adjustment of a man to his racial background. Perhaps more limited in appeal than her other books, this is however a serious and sympathetic appraisal."
Kirkus 19:132 Mr 1 '51 200w

"An unusually competent story." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 76:705 Ap 15 '51 80w

"Mrs. Sorensen has done more than make conceivable human beings of these strangers; in the course of her absorbing story she makes likeable and admirable human beings of them, too. And she has conjured up a fascinating picture of the entire Yaqui way of life. The temptation to overburden her book with descriptive and expository matter must have been strong, but she has nowhere succumbed to it. . . Something should be said, finally, about the distinction with which 'The Proper

SORENSEN, V. E.—Continued
Gods' is written. At once simple and close-textured, this evocative prose has the quality of good poetry." Dan Wickenden
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Mr 25 '51 900w

"This is a strangely effective portrait of one man's journey from the emptiness of mere civilization to the fullness of always-multiplying faith." M. H. Ley
+ N Y Times p16 Ap 15 '51 230w

"The story is often in danger of turning into a sociological treatise on community life, intermarriage, minority groups, and the position of the child in the family, but Adan and his betrothed are human enough young people, and Mrs. Sorensen's Yaqui material is not too familiar to be interesting."
New Yorker 27:104 Mr 24 '51 100w

"Mrs. Sorensen writes with the directness and simplicity of old epic writers. Her manner is based on a union of pattern and freedom that comes from the subject itself. The reader who wants to find out more about man than about things will find her book entirely satisfying." Jane Voiles
+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 Mr 31 '51 850w

"The book is beautifully written. Mrs. Sorensen's gift for exactly the right phrase, her superb awareness, and her discriminating intelligence give 'The Proper Gods' qualities of genuine distinction." D. L. Morgan
+ Sat R of Lit 34:17 Jl 21 '51 650w

SOROKIN, PITIRIM ALEKSANDROVICH. Social philosophies of an age of crisis. 345p $4 Beacon press

301 Sociology. Philosophy, Modern. History—Philosophy 50-11732

"A philosopher looks at other philosophers, modern thinkers who have contributed their hows and whys of a war-torn civilization, and—if any—the roads to salvation. In capsule form he summarizes the basic philosophies of Danilevsky, Spengler, Toynbee, Northrop, Kroeber, Schweitzer, Berdyaev, and others. He analyzes the points at which they agree or disagree. In conclusion he finds them as creative as any other group of social and humanistic scholars of our age." (Kirkus) Index.

Am Pol Sci R 45:287 Mr '51 30w

Reviewed by W. L. Kolb
Am Soc R 16:267 Ap '51 1000w

"Sorokin's critical comments on the works reviewed in this volume frequently make somewhat irritating reading, which will not surprise those who are familiar with his earlier writings. He displays a rather naïve tendency to proceed on the assumption that all his own previous works are authoritative and may be cited without further argument in support of favorable or unfavorable comment on other men's writings. Still, all in all, one can pardon this as a minor eccentricity in a writer of otherwise excellent ability and industry." F. N. House
+ — Ann Am Acad 274:254 Mr '51 400w

"Rarely entertaining, often instructive, usually provocative, Sorokin is at once stimulating and exasperating. This is the kind of book one finds it impossible to take or discard." C. W. Kegley
+ Christian Century 68:303 Mr 7 '51 1350w

"The work is a masterpiece of erudition and analysis. Yet one finds oneself wondering whether all its unassailable logic furnishes us with as much workable truth as the more indefinite (inaccurate, as the author maintains) formulae of a Toynbee or a Schweitzer." Henry Sowerby
+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 18 '51 700w

Reviewed by R. L. Hightower
Crozer Q 29:74 Ja '52 650w

Reviewed by Alan Gewirth
Ethics 61:244 Ap '51 120w

Foreign Affairs 30:156 O '51 20w

Reviewed by D. J. McCracken
Hibbert J 49:410 Jl '51 1350w

"Rigorous but rewarding reading, this should provide a fine introduction to the study of the works of the philosophers under dissection."
+ Kirkus 18:623 O 1 '50 90w

Reviewed by Albert Hofstadter
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p26 My 13 '51 850w

"Since he himself is profoundly convinced that love is more important in evolution than is hate (having at Harvard University set up his own Research Center in Altruistic Integration and Creativity), it is not surprising that this book adds to the organic nature of culture the dynamic role of benevolence in human history." T. V. Smith
N Y Times p3 Ja 14 '51 800w

Reviewed by S. B. Clough
Pol Sci Q 66:309 Je '51 420w

Reviewed by Robert Bierstedt
Sat R of Lit 34:40 Mr 24 '51 230w

"A work of substantial proportions and of major significance." H. W. Hintz
+ Survey 86:566 D '50 1400w

"Although Sorokin's own cyclical theory of sociocultural change may be questionable, this volume should interest all serious students of culture and social organization."
U S Quarterly Bk R 7:83 Mr '51 160w

SOUTHWORTH, GEORGE CLARK. Principles and applications of waveguide transmission. 689p il $9.50 Van Nostrand

537.5 Wave guides 50-9834

"A substantial treatment of the current knowledge and practice of wave guides in the transmission of microwave radiation. . . The author, who is on the staff of Bell Telephone Laboratories, is one of the outstanding investigators of wave guide transmission. The first five chapters of the work deal with the fundamental and historical aspects. Rather advanced mathematics is used in them, and they are addressed primarily to graduate students and practicing engineers." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

N Y New Tech Bks 35:93 N '50

"The text is illustrated with many excellent sketches and photographs, particularly of field patterns of many modes propagated in rectangular and circular guides. On the whole, the treatment is more descriptive than mathematical; this should make the book helpful to a wide range of users."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:508 D '50 250w

SOWERBY, BENN. Fright in the forest. 272p $3 Knopf

51-11065

"Here are two stories. The first is composed of sensuous scenes of an English boyhood and young manhood; the second, the piecing together of Paul's personality, draws its images of terror and its insights from the first. 'It is the things that are not told that are important,' says the author, 'and these things I have tried to tell.'" N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Kirkus 19:360 Jl 15 130w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Jenkins
Manchester Guardian p4 Je 29 '51 110w

Reviewed by Robert Phelps
New Repub 125:20 O 1 '51 250w

"This novel, now straightforward and vivid, now oblique and allegorical, is an Artist's Progress, which, like the self-analysis of Proust, attempts to save something of human personality from the pressure of society and the confusions of time. If the Forest is dark, it is so for many men today, and works such as this have a wide significance. 'Fright in the Forest' is of unusual interest as a novel of a new kind." Louis Simpson
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 S 23 '51 500w

"Technically this first novel by a British writer named Benn Sowerby ranks as an impressive achievement. . . I suspect that a psychiatrist would find this book a clinically flawless picture of mental illness. There is, however, nothing clinical about the writing." Richard Match

+ N Y Times p10 D 23 '51 270w

"There is enough in 'Fright in the Forest' that is Mr. Sowerby's most original own to arouse our curiosity as to his future work as a teller of meaningful eerie tales." Robert Pick
+ Sat R of Lit 34:33 O 27 '51 350w

"The author knows how to express himself, and at the same time possesses the power to allow that free flow of ideas, so essential to novel writing. It is peculiar, therefore, that Fright in the Forest is not more interesting; for there is a suggestion of something lacking that seems to prevent the story from ever coming wholly to life."
Times [London] Lit Sup p417 Jl 6 '51 240w

SPEERS, WALLACE CARTER, ed. What on earth are you doing? with an introd. by Elton Trueblood. 158p $2 Harper
248 Christian life 51-12791

Collection of talks by 28 prominent laymen from different fields and denominations, on how to apply Christian teachings to everyday living.

Bookmark 11:33 N '51 30w

"A good book for ministers to read and pass on to their laymen."
+ Kirkus 19:608 O 1 '51 170w

"Highly recommended."
+ Wis Lib Bul 47:209 S '51

SPEIDEL, HANS. Invasion 1944; Rommel and the Normandy campaigns; introd. by Truman Smith [tr. from the German by T. R. Crevenna]. 176p il maps $2.75 Regnery
940.542 World war, 1939-1945—Campaigns and battles. Rommel, Erwin 50-10416

For descriptive note see Annual for 1950.

Am Pol Sci R 45:270 Mr '51 40w

"I strongly endorse this book as a must on the reading list of American military men. It is highly instructive to learn how our adversary prepared for the tremendous Allied onslaught across the channel in the most stupendous military operation in history. Fortunately for the lay reader, military technical terms are rarely employed." A. C. Wedemeyer
+ Ann Am Acad 274:218 Mr '51 800w
Booklist 47:172 Ja 1 '51
Foreign Affairs 29:668 Jl '51 20w
San Francisco Chronicle p20 D 31 '50 310w

"As a regular officer of the German Army Speidel disclaims and disowns the atrocities committed under Hitler. The book's objective may be to regain some of Germany's military honor, but whatever the intention it is a highly interesting account of the death struggle of Germany in World War II. And because of General Speidel's participation in the current problems of rearming Western Germany the book gains additional significance." H. C. Butcher
Sat R of Lit 34:18 F 24 '51 750w

"General Speidel, Rommel's chief of staff to Army Group B, is now a lecturer in history at Tübingen University. It seems safe to say that this book will not add materially to his historical reputation. Written from memory and without access to Wehrmacht documents, it will annoy many readers by its stilted third person style, by its embarrassingly frequent references to Speidel's doctor's degree, and by its many errors of fact. One would judge that the author has not read any of the important books dealing with the Normandy campaign published in the United States and Britain." H. A. DeWeerd
Yale R n s 40:545 spring '51 900w

SPELLMAN, FRANCIS JOSEPH, cardinal. The foundling. 304p $2.75 Scribner
51-10798

Shortly after Christmas in 1918 Paul Taggart arrived in New York from the war, scarred and lacking an arm. In the Cathedral he found an abandoned baby and turned the child over to the Catholic Foundling home. With renewed faith in himself he found courage to face his mother and the girl he loved. But when he went to adopt the foundling he discovered he could not, because Paul was a Protestant. Thru the years Paul kept in touch with Peter who had meant so much to him, and when Peter, blinded in World war II came home it was Paul's voice which greeted him.

Booklist 47:286; 329 Ap 15 '51; My 15 '51
Bookmark 10:232 Jl '51 50w

"Peter's story is a Staten Island and New England pastoral; his is a pious and uncomplicated life. The characters, except for a comic vestryman, are believable enough as types; the narrative is evenly paced." Riley Hughes
+ Cath World 173:310 Jl '51 320w

"Told with a warm simplicity which enhances its beauty, this tale appears symbolic of the saga of Everyman; for each reader can easily discern a semblance of his own soul reflected in the crystal flow, and sense a kinship with the hero who, lost at first and last in adverse circumstances, is doubly a foundling of divine care." E. F. Murphy
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 27 '51 500w

"Merely considered on its literary merits, Cardinal Spellman's novel is undistinguished. It represents the efforts of a well-intentioned amateur to use the novel form for purposes which, I'm afraid this book proves again, are better served by the pulpit or platform. As novelist, Cardinal Spellman, so highly gifted with other talents, displays, at best, mediocre ability." John Cogley
Commonweal 54:171 My 25 '51 700w

"The book is a sure winner for the Catholic market, while skilful avoidance of any stigma of propaganda will disarm Protestants who might feel on guard against what is definitely a Catholic story. . . The characterizations, the conflicts, seem superficial, the situations too pat, but the story moves along with enough of emotional content to satisfy the undemanding reader."
+ — Kirkus 19:157 Mr 15 '51 270w

"Unobjectionable, mediocre novel that you'd better duplicate because of author's religious prestige." F. A. Boyle
Library J 76:862 My 15 '51 120w

"Those who know His Eminence, Francis Cardinal Spellman, are never surprised by anything he does. They will not be surprised to learn that he has written a novel, and a warm, human, well-written novel, too." Quentin Reynolds
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 My 20 '51 650w

"The story of Peter Lane, as it unravels in a narrative at times too swiftly paced, at times too sharply pruned, will seem to some readers of our average modern fiction as outdated, sentimental and unrealistic. . . Actually, 'The Foundling' is a completely realistic novel; it describes with fidelity the conditions and attitudes under which the majority of Americans dwell, the ceiling of emotion toward which they aspire and the mist of tears which bathes and restores them when their efforts seem to fail." Thomas Sugrue
+ N Y Times p4 My 20 '51 950w
New Yorker 27:114 My 26 '51 70w
San Francisco Chronicle p23 Jl 1 '51 500w

"The most callous reviewer would be forced to regard it with some awe, for it is a literary event of historical importance and it is a tribute to the energy and vitality of an extraordinarily busy man. . . Cardinal Spellman after a lifetime of devotion and love for suffering people has created characters and scenes that may remain in the reader's memory." Harrison Smith

SPELLMAN, F. J.—Continued

+ Sat R of Lit 34:17 My 26 '51 1000w

Reviewed by Marghanita Laski
Spec 187:408 S 28 '51 50w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal
Springf'd Republican p11D Je 10 '51 280w

"As a novelist, Cardinal Spellman is bland and amateurish. But if his book will not advance American literature, it will do positive good in another quarter: every nickel of the proceeds (including about $40,000 from the Literary Guild) goes to the New York Foundling Hospital."

Time 57:130 My 21 '51 140w

"There are several touching and characteristic scenes from American life, with the 'minority' element—Jews and Negroes as well as Catholics—well to the fore. Cardinal Spellman writes with honest sentimentality."

Times [London] Lit Sup p561 S 7 '51 150w

Wis Lib Bul 47:121 My '51

SPENDER, STEPHEN. World within world. 312p $3.50 Harcourt

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, ect. 51-10107

Autobiography of the British poet in which he describes his experiences in "love; poetry; politics; the life of literature; childhood; travel; and the development of certain attitudes towards moral problems." Index.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 187:83 My '51 550w

Booklist 47:293 Ap 15 '51

Reviewed by Samuel Roddan
Canadian Forum 31:204 D '51 1100w

Reviewed by Paul Engle
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 15 '51 400w

Reviewed by Harold Hobson
Christian Science Monitor p7 Jl 5 '51 170w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle
Commonweal 54:119 My 11 '51 2150w

"A moving and exhilarating autobiography. . . Of special interest to literati will be full-blooded portraits of well known writers, poets and intellectuals of Spender's acquaintance—Auden, Isherwood, T. S. Eliot, Virginia Woolf, Lady Ottoline Morrell, Cyril Connolly, and others."

+ Kirkus 19:169 Mr 15 '51 190w

"This is a notable work on the meaning of a man's life and the varied aspects of the world in which he lived. Recommended." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 76:596 Ap 1 '51 150w

Manchester Guardian p3 My 1 '51 450w

"For all its bad prose 'World Within World' is a very good book. It is an honest and sometimes painful attempt to evaluate experience which has always been deeply felt and from which the writer is trying to draw wisdom." Ernest Jones

+ — Nation 172:376 Ap 21 '51 1250w

"Will seem an unsatisfactory book to some and a highly interesting one to others. . . Though all of the book is keenly sensitive and intelligent, its chief significance for me lies in its description of Spender's struggle with the politics of his time." Harold Clurman

New Repub 125:19 Jl 2 '51 750w

"Mr. Spender's insights are better than his arguments and he is at his best when he proceeds, as one would expect a poet to do, by vision. Like his earlier witness of Germany, this eye-witness account of himself makes the deep impression of a many-sided piece of nature wholly revealed." V. S. Pritchett

New Statesman & Nation 41:426 Ap 14 '51 2200w

"The book is a memoir; it is the almost novelistic reconstruction of a personality and it is a lyric meditation. As the last of these it is best when it is the reflective musing of a poet rather than the disquisitions of a man of letters borrowing the intellectual clichés of his time. . . But parts of the book which seem perhaps to Mr. Spender more incidental than the conflicts in his psyche and the place of the poet in our world are likely to be of more interest to more readers. These are the portraits, vivid, shrewd, telling, of many leading literary figures in the England of our generation." Irwin Edman

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ap 8 '51 1750w

"None of our writers now in his middle years is better equipped to make an interesting running commentary of his life than Stephen Spender, for few of them have at once been so consistently involved in public issues and so determined to maintain the lineaments of their individuality." Mark Schorer

+ N Y Times p1 Ap 8 '51 1550w

New Yorker 27:115 My 5 '51 200w

"The more personal side of this rambling autobiography reveals candidly Spender's own emotional ambivalences. His attempt here is to exploit his own experiences as a contribution to clinical psychology. Here too, therefore, he shows himself to be dominated by social rather than personal motivation, just as in objective matters he appears to have sacrificed art for art's sake." C. S.

San Francisco Chronicle p26 My 13 '51 210w

Reviewed by Horace Gregory
Sat R of Lit 34:16 Ap 28 '51 900w

"Mr. Spender has married twice. He writes of these and related private matters with delicacy as well as candour, and it may be that such passages of his narrative will command the greatest respect from his readers. I suspect that everyone who reads the book will think kindlier of the author afterwards. I know that my own admiration has been quickened." Maurice Cranston

+ Spec 185:496 Ap 13 '51 1100w

Time 57:112 Ap 16 '51 700w

"One is never older than at 40; and so Mr. Spender's decision to write his autobiography so far before the usual time of life has logic to commend it. More important, however, than that is the fact that he has written an exceptionally good book: one, moreover, which by its nice mixture of tact and candour is likely to give him an experience not often vouchsafed to those who make their introspections public—that of gaining, rather than losing, friends."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p228 Ap 13 '51 2750w

Wis Lib Bul 47:120 My '51

"It is a penetrating and honest, sometimes embarrassingly honest, attempt to recreat the poet's life in the years 1928-39. It has the disadvantages as well as the merit of honesty, for it is sometimes exasperating, and occasionally dull." B. M. W. Knox

+ — Yale R n s 40:738 summer '51 750w

SPERBER, MANES. Burned bramble; tr. by Constantine Fitzgibbon [Eng title: Wind and the flame]. 405p $3.95 Doubleday

51-9942

Novel about the Communist party in Europe in the 1930's. "The book centers around the figure of Soennecke, an old-time colleague of Rosa Luxembourg, the leader of the German Communist party, and his two chief lieutenants, Vasso and Doino, young central European Communists, as pure in intent as Soennecke, but already incipient deviationists, beset with desperate doubts about the Soviet leaders and the naked expediency of the party line. These three make the nucleus and it is through their activities that you come to know the many other figures whom Mr. Sperber weaves into the labyrinth of the underground Communist network." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R)

"The profusion of characters, the jerky movement from one plot to another, and the continual jumps across the map are, unfortunately, as confusing to the reader as the gyrations of the Party Line. Even so, The Burned Bramble is an impassioned and profound picture of Communist experience in the years before Stalinism had fully shown its face—of the faith and exaltation; the monstrous erasure of human decency and truth; the incredible loyalty and self-sacrifice whose eventual reward was a disillusioned soul, a cheated mind, and a bullet in the neck." C. J. Rolo

+ — Atlantic 187:84 My '51 550w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 22 '51 450w

"This is a serious and depressing novel. A very good one. A very modern one. Not recommended for readers of Saroyan." Serge Hughes

+ Commonweal 54:66 Ap 27 '51 550w

Kirkus 19:70 F 1 '51 270w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Jenkins

Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 3 '51 80w

Reviewed by Irving Howe

Nation 172:569 Je 16 '51 170w

Reviewed by Harvey Swados

New Repub 125:21 Jl 9 '51 550w

Reviewed by J. D. Scott

New Statesman & Nation 42:411 Ag 25 '51 600w

Reviewed by Virgilia Peterson

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Mr 18 '51 900w

"The first novel for which I went all out was called 'Babbitt'; the second was called 'An American Tragedy'; the third, a decade or so later, was called 'The Grapes of Wrath.' I have no hesitation in putting 'The Burned Bramble' in this class. It is both timely and timeless. Its author knows what he is writing about, and he knows how to make it real and important to us. This is indeed a timely book." Upton Sinclair

+ N Y Times p1 Mr 18 '51 1650w

Reviewed by Anthony West

New Yorker 27:113 Ap 28 '51 1000w

"Sperber succeeds where his betters failed. He too shows darkness at noon—though what skill he has certainly cannot be likened to the great power of Koestler—but before showing you darkness he makes you feel the air of what once looked like dawn to him and his comrades. That remarkable achievement may be due to the primitivity of this author's technique and its directness. . . He is not a novelist of distinction. The sheer quantity of what he feels he must say nearly destroys his book. . . Curiously, M. Sperber's women characters are rather impressive." Robert Pick

+ — Sat R of Lit 34:26 Mr 17 '51 750w

Reviewed by R. D. Charques

Spec 187:224 Ag 17 '51 410w

Time 57:122 Mr 19 '51 350w

"Mr. Sperber has rarely dramatized his subject. Consequently, the greater part of his book is talk—sometimes brilliant, often good, but talk, talk, talk. To be sure, the characters suffer, reproduce, and get killed, but their extra-conversational activities are unimportant, for the debating squad has plenty of reserves." Paul Pickrel

Yale R n s 40:765 summer '51 270w

SPERRY, WILLARD LEAROYD, ed. Classics of religious devotion. 117p $2 Beacon press

242 Religious literature 50-11054

"Interpretations of six classics of Judaism and Christianity make up this book. The writings selected for study are Augustine's Confessions [by J. Wild] Maimonides' Guide for the Perplexed [by B. D. Cohon] Thomas a Kempis' Imitation of Christ [by W. L. Sperry] John Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress [by P. Miller] John Woolman's Journal [by H. J. Cadbury] and Albert Schweitzer's Out of my Life and Thought [by F. M. Eliot]." Ann Am Acad

"Interesting, fair, penetrating, practical interpretations." C. H. Moehlman

+ Ann Am Acad 274:258 Mr '51 500w

Reviewed by R. C. Batchelder

Churchman 165:17 F 1 '51 120w

Reviewed by J. W. Brush

+ Crozer Q 28:182 Ap '51 330w

SPICEHANDLER, DANIEL. Let my right hand wither. 261p $3.50 Beechhurst press

956.9 Palestine—Jewish-Arab problem. Israel—History 50-11142

"Daniel Spicehandler, 27, grew up in Brooklyn as a member of a Hebrew-speaking family devoted to the cause of Zionism. After serving with the U. S. Air Force during World War II, he and his wife went to Palestine in 1946 to study at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem. Eventually Mr. Spicehandler joined in the Jewish fight for a free homeland and he tells the story of his experiences in [this book]." Springf'd Republican

"'This is a war book, the battle-report of a onetime Zionist youth organizer who fought with the Israel army. It is earnest, at times over-passioned and declamatory, but has an air of honesty." Gerold Frank

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 Mr 11 '51 500w

"While the book may be especially appreciated by Jews, it should also be interesting to everyone sympathizing with the brave men and women who, against great odds, have succeeded in re-establishing an ancient nation in its original homeland after a lapse of many centuries." H. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p10C Ja 21 '51 240w

SPICER, BART. Black sheep, run. 288p $2.50 Dodd

51-13636

Detective story.

"Carney's in good form, although given to unmitigated gagging which, at crises, seems to annoy the characters in the book as much as it did me. He can (and has) handled better plots than this one." James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 N 4 '51 120w

"The story is exciting and satisfactory as a mystery, and as human and even tender as it is hard and tough. In particular, the complex relationship between a professional policeman and a private detective has rarely been so subtly or plausibly explored." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p50 N 18 '51 120w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p28 N 4 '51 80w

"Nice job." Sergeant Cuff

+ Sat R of Lit 34:76 N 17 '51 40w

SPICER, BART. Golden door. 216p $2.50 Dodd

51-982

Detective story.

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 F 18 '51 160w

"In a year-end appraisal of the annual whodunit crop, Bart Spicer's 'Blues for the Prince' was hailed in these columns as one of the best mysteries of 1950. His new book has the same unusual mixture of toughness and warmth." Hillis Mills

+ N Y Times p24 My 13 '51 140w

"This one's fast and absorbing, though nearer to the conventional than Spicer's other novels." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 F 11 '51 70w

SPIELVOGEL, SAMUEL. Selected bibliography on city and regional planning. 276p $5.50 Scarecrow press

016.711 City planning—Bibliography. Regional planning—Bibliography 51-12328

"Books and magazine articles, classified by such subjects as history, transportation, technical and site problems, regionalism. Many

SPIELVOGEL, SAMUEL—Continued
references from 1940-50 publications. Annotations as needed to explain content and application. Special lists of films by title, often queerly inverted, directories, periodicals, planning reports, and textbooks. Arrangement of subjects follows doubtful logic, and index is spotty with adequate coverage of authors and general subjects but arbitrary and undependable inclusion of titles and minor subjects. For large collections, students and planners." Booklist

Booklist 48:4 S 1 '51

"There has been no comprehensive city planning bibliography published for a decade and more. Consequently city planners and librarians are welcoming this book. . . This bibliography is comprehensive and carefully selected. It is classified by subjects which are subdivided for practical use. Its most useful feature is the excellent descriptive notes for almost every entry." R. B. Rankin
+ Library J 76:1697 O 15 '51 230w

SPILHAUS, ATHELSTAN FREDERICK. Weathercraft; il. with phot. and charts. 64p $2 Viking

551.5 Weather forecasting. Meteorology—Juvenile literature 51-10922

Directions for making and operating a home weather station. The author, dean of the Institute of Technology at the University of Minnesota, describes the making of a rain gauge, an anemometer, a thermometer, etc., out of inexpensive materials, and shows how to use them.

Booklist 47:370 Je 15 '51

Christian Science Monitor p12 S 1 '51 150w

"The materials used are inexpensive; many of them are already available in any household; and photographs and diagrams make even clearer the instructions on how to observe and measure rainfall, wind speed and whatever else is necessary to make one a competent amateur 'weatherman' who can do his own forecasting." J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews
+ Horn Bk 27:259 Jl '51 140w

"A pleasant and in general simple handbook about how to make and operate gadgets for analyzing the weather."
+ Kirkus 19:263 Je 1 '51 130w

"An unusual book which will fill a need in this hobby field. . . Recommended." M. I. Ross
+ Library J 76:1139 Jl '51 140w

"Described so enjoyably that we foresee a new hobby spreading among boys of about junior high age and their fathers." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 My 27 '51 180w

N Y Times p26 Je 10 '51 50w

Sat R of Lit 34:36 Ag 18 '51 80w

SPILLANE, FRANK MORRISON. Big kill. 224p $2.50 Dutton
51-11571

Detective story.

Kirkus 19:238 My 1 '51 60w

"The mixture even more repellent than usual." Anthony Boucher
— N Y Times p17 Ag 5 '51 40w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
— San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 22 '51 70w

Springf'd Republican p5D Jl 29 '51 90w

SPILLANE, FRANK MORRISON. Long wait. 256p $2.50 Dutton
51-13576

Detective story.

Kirkus 19:501 S 1 '51 80w

Reviewed by James Sandoe
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 N 18 '51 270w

"As rife with sexuality and sadism as any of his novels, based on a complete misunderstanding of law and on the wildest coincidence in detective fiction, it still can boast the absence of the hypocritical 'crusading' sentiments of Mike Hammer. For that reason, and for some slight ingenuity in its denouement, it may rank as the best Spillane—which is the faintest praise this department has ever bestowed." Anthony Boucher
N Y Times p24 N 11 '51 70w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p20 D 2 '51 70w

"Bloody and bawdy." Sergeant Cuff
Sat R of Lit 34:45 N 24 '51 30w

Time 58:110 D 3 '51 550w

SPITZER, MARIAN (MRS HARLAN THOMPSON). I took it lying down. 247p $2.75 Random house

616.246 Tuberculosis 51-10098

The author was stricken with tuberculosis in the 1930's, and from a very active life had to submit to a very quiet one, spending months in bed. This is her record of that experience and of two subsequent attacks.

Booklist 47:265; 290 Ap 1 '51; Ap 15 '51

Bookmark 10:182 My '51 30w

Kirkus 19:95 F 1 '51 160w

"Throughout the long account, there is a remarkable concentration on the main theme—the great psychological struggle for adjustment to a way of life wherein essential, maximum rest must be achieved as the major step in the cure. Rich in scenes of childhood memories, in anecdotes about famous cinema stars, and in descriptions of books allowed as pastime reading. . . Sincere in its psychosomatic analysis." J. M. Scherr
+ Library J 75:1404 S 1 '50 120w

"Miss Spitzer writes brightly, but her account is moving because it is frank and courageous."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Je 10 '51 250w

"Like many young women with a high polish who scintillate between Hollywood and New York, Marian Spitzer is naive. An earnest account of how she learned to lie still and listen to the radio is really just plain dull. Why anyone thought it worth publishing is another mystery." W. L. Gresham
— Sat R of Lit 34:27 Ap 14 '51 360w

Reviewed by Stella Korbrin
Survey 87:400 S '51 360w

Wis Lib Bul 47:161 Je '51

SPOLANSKY, JACOB. Communist trail in America. 227p $3.50 Macmillan

335.4 Communism—U.S. 51-2709

Report of the author's last thirty years' efforts in tracking down Communists. A Russian by birth, the author was working for the F.B.I. shortly after his arrival in this country, because of his knowledge of foreign born people. Index.

Am Pol Sci R 45:909 S '51 60w

Booklist 47:357 Je 15 '51

"Wisely the text has been subjected to a minimum of editing, for the unformed style is in character. Despite the competition that any new publication in this field has to encounter, these pages are interesting because of the close-up picture they give of so many persons known to be active in subversive activities."
+ Cath World 173:479 S '51 160w

"Mr. Spolansky's book is particularly valuable because it serves to recall that the military, justice and immigration departments were alerted almost from the beginning to the communist menace." Willard Edwards
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 29 '51 350w

Christian Century 68:1078 S 19 '51 80w
Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '51
Current Hist 21:168 S '51 60w
Kirkus 19:92 F 1 '51 150w

"In the main, Mr. Spolansky goes over ground that has been gone over before. He has no sensational revelations. However, his book serves a useful purpose in that it is a good round-up of Red skulduggeries." Marcus Duffield
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Je 10 '51 880w

"His book is most interesting when he confines himself to his personal observations and experiences." F. S. Adams
N Y Times p3 Ap 15 '51 480w

"Where Mr. Spolansky writes from personal knowledge, as in the case of the Bridgman raid of 1922, he is often interesting; and he contributes useful characterizations of some of the early Party leaders. But modesty is not his main characteristic." Arthur Schlesinger, Jr.
Sat R of Lit 34:13 My 26 '51 900w
School & Society 73:238 Ap 14 '51 20w

SPOTTISWOODE, RAYMOND JOHN. Film and its techniques. 472p il $7.50 Univ. of Calif. press

791.4 Moving picture photography 51-10739

"A book for beginning professionals in the making of documentary and special films, which will also be useful for sponsors, buyers and exhibitors. Covers contract details, script, camera, production, sound and cutting techniques, and discusses new developments in television and third dimensional films. A full glossary and list of additional reading." Booklist

---

Booklist 47:359 Je 15 '51

"Highly recommended where locally needed." George Freedley
+ Library J 76:1031 Je 15 '51 60w

"Despite the wealth of admirable material that this book contains, there are still a few rather strange omissions. Considering that this is intended primarily for the documentary student and worker, more precise information on costs and budgets would surely seem to be in order. And one of the most vital problems of documentary people today, working with the non-actor, is passed over without any comment whatsoever." Arthur Knight
+ — Sat R of Lit 34:40 S 8 '51 700w

SPRIEGEL, WILLIAM ROBERT, and TOWLE, JOSEPH W. Retail personnel management. 360p $4.50 McGraw

658.87 Retail trade 51-11626

"Authors acknowledge that the basic principles of personnel administration are the same for all fields of work, but believe that each field needs its own text because it has its own terminology and adaptation of methods. They have made these adaptations in the terminology of and with illustrations of practices from the field of retailing. The text is designed chiefly for college students of retailing and personnel management, but working non students could use it to advantage, also." Library J

"Subject coverage is good, the style very simple, the bibliography unusually full, and the index adequate, although it might have been more inclusive." Phyllis Osteen
+ Library J 76:1570 O 1 '51 130w

"This is the best work yet on the specialized practices of retail personnel management. . . Those who wish a well-organized, well-balanced summary of the best of current personnel practices in the retail field will find this book useful." J. C. Worthy
+ Management R 40:716 N '51 500w

SPRING, GERALD MAX. Return from Babel. 188p $3.50 Philosophical lib.

901 Civilization, Modern. Twentieth century 51-10740

"Presents a pragmatic approach to 'one world.' A revolution in social attitudes would be guided by 'the interpreter class'; nationalism would be discarded for less artificial groupings; imperialism would give way to economic regionalism. The specific roles of Germany, Soviet Russia and the United States are discussed." Am Pol Sci R

Am Pol Sci R 45:923 S '51 30w

"Spring is much impressed by regionalism as a solution to the Babel arising from overlarge groupings. It is dangerous, he appropriately declares, for love and hate to be attached to empires. His local loyalty is more than geographical, for he writes lovingly but tolerantly of race. It is germane to add that many of the authorities he names in this or other matters are of the right." Garland Downum
Ann Am Acad 277:261 S '51 320w

"[The author] has evidently read widely, thoughtfully, and discriminatingly. This book is worth studying." W. K. Wright
+ Crozer Q 28:371 O '51 140w

SPRUNGMAN, ORMAL I. Photography afield. 449p il $7.50 Stackpole co.

778.71 Photography 51-13151

"Although it deals with all aspects of nature photography, including the photography of wild flowers, the main emphasis is on the taking of hunting, fishing, and wildlife scenes. Though written mainly for the amateur, the discussions are quite mature and many of the techniques are essentially those of professionals. A large number of reproductions of nature photographs are included. Author is camera editor of Sports Afield." Library J

Reviewed by Robert Cromie
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 11 '51 110w

"An excellent book on a fascinating but difficult branch of photography." R. R. Hawkins
+ Library J 76:1940 N 15 '51 80w

STALLKNECHT, NEWTON PHELPS, and BRUMBAUGH, ROBERT SHERRICK. Spirit of Western philosophy; a historical interpretation including selections from the major European philosophers. 540p $4.75 Longmans

109 Philosophy—History 50-10148

"The purpose has been to outline the central argument of ancient, medieval, and modern philosophy, and to follow the growth of the presiding themes and concepts. . . In choosing passages to illustrate the development of philosophical ideas, the authors have kept in mind the needs and the limitations of the average undergraduate reader." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"This history of western philosophy is a sort of suitcase of small samples from the history of philosophy. . . A history of western philosophy which will be an adequate integration of human history and human thought is yet to be written." Robin Gotesky
Ann Am Acad 276:166 Jl '51 370w
Booklist 47:150 D 15 '50

"This volume may be heartily recommended to the teacher in search of a challenging introduction to Western philosophy from its beginning in ancient Greece to the present: the text is admirable for the purpose." G. W. Cunningham
+ Ethics 61:245 Ap '51 240w

Reviewed by W. L. Bryan
+ J Philos 48:341 My 10 '51 340w
School & Society 72:224 S 30 '50 20w

STAMM, FREDERICK KELLER. If this be religion—. 116p $1.75 Day

260 Church. Christianity 50-10315

"Dr. Stamm pleads for a simplification of the Christian message of love and brotherhood, as the only answer to the turmoil of our day when our civilization is threatened with destruction as a result of the hates engendered by self-interest. He strikes out in particular against the pharisaical thought which opposes any change in a status quo for those who are fortunate in it." (Christian Science Monitor) For many years the author has conducted a summer radio program called High Lights of the Bible.

STAMM, F. K.—Continued

Booklist 47:199 F 1 '51

"He would have written a better book in support of this thesis if he had not made it, at the same time, a rather querulous defense of his own position in some tense situations in his successive pastorates. An apologia pro vita sua, especially in this tone of voice, is not the most convincing argument for practical Christianity embodying the plain and evident principles of Jesus." W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 68:174 F 7 '51 1000w

Reviewed by Neil Martin
Christian Science Monitor p9 Ja 6 '51 700w

Springf'd Republican p9B Ag 20 '50 100w

STAMP, LAURENCE DUDLEY. Earth's crust; a new approach to physical geography and geology; with a foreword by Isaiah Bowman. 120p il col pl maps $6 Crown

551 Physical geography. Geology 51-12362

"This book constitutes a new approach to physical geography and geology, and is divided into four parts. In Part I the ever-changing surface of the earth (i.e. denudation and deposition) is described in fifteen sections, including an explanation of what the crust is, and the effects of action by sun, rain, frost and other elemental forces. Part II, 'Mountain-building,' is largely concerned with earthquakes and their consequences, and Part III takes in different aspects of structure and scenery. In conclusion, Part IV deals with 'Rocks, Minerals, and Man.'" (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 48:167 Ja 15 '52

"The book will be very helpful to laymen, and even professional geologists and geographers will find the models and some of the other illustrations of considerable interest." R. R. Hawkins
+ Library J 76:1940 N 15 '51 90w

"Probably the greatest difficulty facing those who wish to understand differences in scenery is the acquisition of the art of 'seeing solid,' that is, of visualising the relationship between surface features and the underlying geology as a three-dimensional one. It is in the attempt made to solve this problem that Professor Stamp makes a distinctive contribution. The text provides a concise and clearly written introductory survey of the outlines of geomorphology, but it is for the illustrations that the book will be particularly valuable." N. P.
+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 3 '51 360w

"This successful, cleanly produced handbook should be an ideal aid to teaching the elements of physical geography. It is equally well suited to those who cannot return to school but who still hope to gain an intelligent understanding of the history of landscapes, whether strange or familiar." Jacquetta Hawkes
+ New Statesman & Nation 42:105 Jl 28 '51 700w

"The photographs are grouped to illustrate some of the main lock types and processes important in the production of land-forms. They are accompanied by captions and text dealing with such matters as rock folding, mountain building, the work of rivers, ice and the sea, and the action of rain, frost and wind. The union of plates and text forms a most useful approach that helps to carry forward a mere interest in scenery towards an understanding of it."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p611 S 28 '51 500w

STAMP, LAURENCE DUDLEY, and WOOLDRIDGE, SIDNEY WILLIAM, eds. London essays in geography; Rodwell Jones memorial volume. 351p il maps $5 Harvard univ. press

910.04 Geography. Jones, Llewellyn Rodwell A51-2944

"Rodwell Jones was appointed lecturer in geography at the London School of Economics in 1919, and in 1925 he followed the late Sir Halford Mackinder as professor of geography. Already in 1922 the department of geography at the London School of Economics had joined forces with the neighbouring department at King's College. It was a union that was greatly to the advantage of both departments and to the study of geography in general. Rodwell Jones then became largely responsible for nursing the new Joint School of Geography, and the next 20 years were marked by great progress. He retired in 1945, but unfortunately he was not long to enjoy his leisure, for he died after a short illness in 1947. The present volume is a collection of essays by 17 of his former students or colleagues, and it is edited by the professors of geography at the London School of Economics and at King's College." Times [London] Lit Sup

"Like most collections of memorial essays, the diversity of theme and treatment in the present book is in part a tribute to the person in whose honour it is written and, in part, a little disconcerting." H. J. Fleure
Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 16 '51 400w

"The essays provide an interesting cross-section of contemporary work in academic geography."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p248 Ap 20 '51 450w

STANDARD, STELLA. Whole grain cookery; a gourmet guide to glowing health. 240p $3.95 Day

641.5 Cookery (cereals). Baking 51-3908

"All of the recipes are based upon the use of whole grains, which are grains ground slowly by a cold stone mill, which keeps intact the tissue and bone building elements and all the original vitamins and minerals of grain in its natural state. Chief among these whole grains are brown rice, corn meal, oatmeal flour, sunflower seed flour, cracked wheat and whole-wheat, the use of which will produce in a remarkably short time a sense of health and well being. There are nearly 500 recipes." Chicago Sunday Tribune

"A most excellent cookbook." Morrison Wood
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 19 '51 400w

"The instructions are lucid and easy to follow, as I have proved to my own satisfaction." E. L. Tinker
+ N Y Times p13 Ag 26 '51 40w

STANDISH, ROBERT, pseud. See Gerahty, D. G.

STANFORD, ALFRED BOLLER. Force Mulberry; the planning and installation of the artificial harbor off U. S. Normandy beaches in World War II; with an introd. by Samuel E. Morison. 240p il map $3.50 Morrow

940.545 World war, 1939-1949—Normandy. World war, 1939-1945—Naval operations 51-14035

Mulberry was the code name for the operation of building and establishing the artificial harbors off Normandy beaches in June 1944. This is the account of how the "mulberries" were planned, hurried to completion, how crews were trained and how the towing of the huge forts across the channel was carried out and their installation and use. Index.

Booklist 48:122 D 1 '51

"The author is by inclination a nautically minded civilian, a journalist by profession with a nice sense of history. He has written a source book of one of the key episodes of the war, and he has written it clearly, avoiding technical jargon on the one hand and sensationalism on the other." Francis Russell

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 D 15 '51 420w

"In spite of all that has been written about every facet of World War II, there is still a good deal of mystery surrounding the basic operation on which the Normandy invasion was built, what is known in military jargon as 'Mulberry'. Here is that story, told with the vividness of an eye witness, and the courage not to pull punches where some of the personalities and the difficulties are concerned."
+ Kirkus 19:553 S 15 '51 280w

"It is a story of marvels—marvels of accomplishment amid disorganization and mischance, death and heartbreak and triumph—brilliantly and movingly told." Walter Millis
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 N 18 '51 1200w

"Commander Stanford tells his story well, and the book's appendices contain a wealth of statistics." J. I. Greene
+ N Y Times p12 Ja 6 '52 420w

Springf'd Republican p6D D 30 '51 340w

STANFORD, DEREK. Christopher Fry; an appreciation. 222p il $2.75 British bk. centre

822 Fry, Christopher [51-6420]

A critical study of the works of this leading English dramatist. No index.

Booklist 48:168 Ja 15 '52

"When you finish it, you realize how considerable a writer is Fry. Highly recommended for theatre and poetry collections."
+ Library J 76:1706 O 15 '51 40w

"The very thorough examination which Mr. Stanford has made of the poet's work is timely. He has grasped, as few other critics have done, the paradoxical seriousness of purpose in Christopher Fry's comedy, his intensely interesting philosophical attitude and the deliberate and skilful craftmanship which lie beneath the apparently effortless glitter. It is only a pity that, with the perception he shows in this book, his presentation should be so very earnest—almost, in places, dull." John Guest
+ — Spec 187:71 Jl 13 '51 450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p486 Ag 3 '51 350w

STANIAR, WILLIAM, ed. Plant engineering handbook; prepared by a staff of specialists. 2007p il $15 McGraw

621.7 Factories. Mechanical engineering 50-10348

"A one-volume encyclopedia for plant engineers and others who are responsible for the organization, construction, operation or maintenance of factories and other industrial establishments. Most of the chapters are devoted to engineering and mechanical phases of the large field. However, costs, work simplification, administration of job evaluation plans, etc., are given some space." (N Y New Tech Bks) Chapter bibliographies. Index.

Bookmark 10:166 Ap '51

"The individual authors have been well selected, each is fully competent to discuss his field, and each has given a good presentation of his subject. It is hard to imagine what kind of an engineer would find this selection of material more useful than handbooks already available." W. L. Badger
+ Chem & Eng N 29:3190 Ag 6 '51 350w

Chem Eng 58:295 My '51 220w

"A huge range of data is included, and it is hard to conceive of any one charged with plant organization or operation who cannot find a great deal in the volume that is useful to him." R. R. Hawkins
+ Library J 75:2011 N 15 '50 150w

Management R 40:384 Je '51 60w

"The treatment of each subject is necessarily very compact, but in general there is enough information under each heading to orient the plant engineer and to provide him with the basic facts about the subject under discussion."
N Y New Tech Bks 36:11 Ja '51

STANTON, ALFRED H., and PERRY, STEWART E., eds. Personality and political crisis; new perspectives from social science and psychiatry for the study of war and politics. 260p $3.75 Free press

301.15 Social psychology. Propaganda 51-6379

The contents of the book are as follows: Propaganda and mass insecurity, by H. D. Lasswell; Psychiatric aspects of morale, by H. S. Sullivan; Personality and social structure, by Talcott Parsons; From morality to morale, by David Riesman; Psychological warfare, intelligence, and insight, by Renzo Sereno; The concept of national character, by Ralph Linton; Anti-Nazis: Criteria of differentiation, by D. M. Levy; Psychological aspects of international relations, by Otto Klineberg.

Am Pol Sci R 45:936 S '51 50w

Reviewed by P. B. Foreman
Am Soc R 16:884 D '51 370w

Reviewed by W. Eliasberg
Ann Am Acad 278:207 N '51 300w

"Personality and Political Crisis is worth reading; it gives the layman a view of contemporary social science and psychiatric thought." R. A. Sim
+ Canadian Forum 31:186 N '51 550w

"Though not a systematic study, this book is an exceedingly valuable and durable contribution because of its many exciting insights as well as its new mapping of a most important field." Rollo May
+ N Y Times p7 Jl 8 '51 800w

STANTON, WILLIAM ARTHUR. Awakening of India; forty years among the Telugus. 213p il map $3 Falmouth

275.4 Missions—India. Telugus 50-27838

"An account of the progress of Christian work in a field of South India, over a period of forty years." Churchman

"The general interest in India and Pakistan, and the recognition of the place these countries will hold in the future of the world, give this new and authoritative book on India special significance. . . The little glimpses of the home life of Dr. and Mrs. Stanton give the reader a new appreciation of the everyday life of a missionary in India. The beginnings and development of the church in India are portrayed faithfully, with insight and enthusiasm." J. C. Robbins
+ Christian Century 67:924 Ag 2 '50 380w

"Written in words of one syllable, with much repetition of ideas and phrases and display of intimate personal sentiments. The style is out of date. There are many interesting passages in the account and the work method of the enterprise is simply told, and there are records of a number of striking incidents. . . There are much better accounts of the spread of Christianity among the Shudras and Madigas in South India and the turning of Hindus to Christian schools. But, without doubt, a book of this sort will appeal to certain areas within the church." G. W. Briggs
Churchman 164:17 D 15 '50 180w

STARKMAN, MIRIAM KOSH. Swift's satire on learning in A tale of a tub. 178p $3 Princeton univ. press

827 Swift, Jonathan—Tale of a tub 50-10557

"In this study, 'A Tale' is returned to its setting and more thoroughly annotated against the background of 17th-century learning than ever before. The result is that it emerges not merely as a product of the controversy between the Ancients and Moderns but as a passionately

STARKMAN, M. K.—Continued
partisan document in the controversy, written by the embattled moralist of Ancient persuasion in his favorite cause." School & Society

School & Society 72:432 D 23 '50 60w

"Mrs. Starkman does not quite succeed in justifying the form, because she fails to see that the form with its digressions and arguments, its list of authorities and so on, is itself a satire on the scholastic method; but she has done enough to convince the reader that the book is at any rate not chaotic and without design. She has done extremely useful service to both the student of Swift and the worker in the history of ideas, and is to be admitted to the company of such American scholars as Professor Lovejoy and Miss Marjorie Nicolson, who have done so much to render the prose and poetry of the early eighteenth century more intelligible to us." B. D.
+ — Spec 187:108 Jl 20 '51 300w

Times [London] Lit Sup p464 Jl 27 '51 300w

"The most valuable parts of this study are those which explain specific passages in A Tale of a Tub by reference to the psychological, philosophical, scientific, or physiological ideas that provoked Swift's contempt. There is also an excellent analysis of the Tale, which brings out how carefully Swift deployed his thematic material. Incidentally the study reveals afresh Swift's gift as a parodist of a manner, an attitude, a state of mind; it thus illuminates not only his satiric intent, but also his art."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:23 Mr '51 180w

STARNES, RICHARD. The other body in Grant's tomb. 249p $2.50 Lippincott 51-11183

Detective story.

Booklist 48:14 S 1 '51
Bookmark 11:61 D '51
Kirkus 19:308 Je 15 '51 70w

"The breezy adventures of Dr. St. George Peachy and his newspaperman cohort, Barney Forge, grow progressively better as they go along. They have outgrown their earlier, sometimes misguided flippancy and developed a more sympathetic form of wit. The stories are just as lively and colorful but they have a greater sense of warmth."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 S 9 '51 150w

"For the first half of the book, Mr. Starnes writes better than ever before, with an unmannered hardness and bite; let's hope that in his next he may forget about the cute Dr. Peachy and his surprise solutions and write a straight suspense story about Barney Forge." Anthony Boucher
+ — N Y Times p31 S 9 '51 110w

"Slower than Starnes' other books (barring a few lively moments) but previous determined flippancy of style is here pleasantly toned down. C plus." L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 26 '51 50w

"Parboiled toughy-roughy, told in engagingly smart-aleck patois, with solution not wholly unguessable to medium IQs." Sergeant Cuff
Sat R of Lit 34:42 S 22 '51 40w
Springf'd Republican p5C S 23 '51 80w

STARR, CECILE, ed. Ideas on film [a handbook for the 16mm. film user] with a foreword by Irving Jacoby. 251p il $4.50 Funk
791.4 Moving pictures in education 51-11364

"Authored by Cecile Starr, editor of the SRL's department on 16mm film, 'Ideas on Film' is the first compendium of its kind, ranging from separate pieces by many who have shared in the growth of these films, reviews by Miss Starr, Raymond Spottiswoode (who originated her department), and others, on their choice among the 16mm films, and a pretty complete listing of what and where to rent or purchase them anywhere in the United States. The emphasis is mainly on films made and released since 1945, but there are many references to the old masters, such as Robert Flaherty, whose 'Nanook of the North' after twenty-eight years is now a best seller on 16mm and within reach of any one with a projector." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 48:46 O 1 '51

"This anthology of articles from that periodical [Saturday Review of Literature] is an invaluable aid to the users of 16mm. film. Recommended for educational film collections and for readers' advisory services." George Freedley
+ Library J 76:1228 Ag '51 40w

"Here is an invaluable handbook, full of pertinent facts and miscellaneous information for anyone who has ever had more than a passing interest in films." Evelyn Gerstein
+ Sat R of Lit 34:40 S 8 '51 800w

STASHEFF, EDWARD, and BRETZ, RUDY. Television program; its writing, direction, and production. 355p il $4.95 Wyn
791.4 Television programs 51-13893

"Manual on the techniques, mechanics and facilities of television with sample scripts and procedures in marketing. Photographs, diagrams. Glossary, index." Bookmark

"A valuable and attractive manual."
+ Bookmark 11:58 D '51 20w

"This book is intended for the thousands who are interested in directing, producing, or writing for the new medium. It is fully illustrated and contains sample scripts with marginal notes and camera cues. Diagrams show the floor plan, camera and light placement for certain shows." Larry Wolters
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p21 N 11 '51 100w

Reviewed by George Freedley
Library J 76:2116 D 15 '51 30w
Springf'd Republican p8C Mr 4 '51 130w

STASSEN, HAROLD EDWARD. Man was meant to be free; ed. and with a foreword by Amos J. Peaslee. 460p il $3.50 Doubleday
308.1 U.S.—Politics and government. U.S.—Foreign relations 51-13395

"For more than a decade the voice of Harold Stassen has been sounding out at crucial junctures in our nation's life. Selections from the addresses and articles of this period have now been gathered, to form a record of one man's attempt to come to grips with political issues." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

Booklist 48:82 N 1 '51
Kirkus 19:427 Ag 1 '51 140w

"This is patently a campaign document, looking to Stassen's Presidential candidacy, and as such should be available in public libraries." R. W. Henderson
Library J 76:1932 N 15 '51 180w

"Whatever may be the individual's agreement with specific points in this collection, it is impossible to escape the over-all impression of Mr. Stassen's serviceableness and energy. He has steadily sought the role of leadership which his ambitions early marked out for him. He has never hesitated to speak up." August Heckscher
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 O 21 '51 750w

"Whatever may betide in the political arena next year, Stassen will be a factor, if only in the debate of the issues. He belongs to the liberal and internationalist wing of his party, and if he does nothing else he will fight to nominate a candidate and to write a platform that will resist the various forms of isolationism in the Republican party. For these reasons the collection of his views in this book has pertinence." A. I. Leviero
N Y Times p39 O 14 '51 360w

Reviewed by U. K. Alpert
Springf'd Republican p12C N 18 '51 190w

STEARNS, MRS MARTHA (GENUNG). Needle in hand. 168p il $3.50 Washburn

746.44 Needlework 50-10558

"The purpose [of this book] is to give a very practical description of stitches, how to use them, how to make them effective, and how to make a start at creating our own designs: in other words, the technique of decorative needlework. Much of the material is taken from outlines for class study and the notebooks amassed over the years, in trying to answer the questions most often asked by workers." (p.17) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 47:171 Ja 1 '51

"The directions, further simplified by excellent diagrams, are clear and concise. The explanation of basic principles related to preparation of materials, textiles, thread to use, needles etc. seem sound."

+ Kirkus 18:589 S 15 '50 130w

Wis Lib Bul 46:15 N '50

STEBBINS, GEORGE LEDYARD. Variation and evolution in plants. 643p il $8 Columbia univ. press

581.15 Plants—Evolution. Botany—Variation 50-9426

"Evolution is presented as a dynamic process, and knowledge from a number of related fields such as systematic botany, ecology, genetics, and paleobotany has been synthesized to support the argument. Extensive accounts are given of the current knowledge of such phenomena as polyploidy. The work is addressed to graduate students and professional workers in such fields as genetics and biology. Although much of the information contained bears on the work of plant breeders, the author has not attempted to write for this group. The list of works cited runs to 60 pages." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"An important contribution to the literature of biological evolution." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 75:1832 O 15 '50 110w

"A well-written, critical, and well-organized digest."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:491 D '50 260w

STEEGMULLER, FRANCIS. Flaubert and Madame Bovary; a double portrait. 2d rev ed 433p $4 Farrar, Straus

B or 92 Flaubert, Gustave 50-9297

"A few corrections have been made in the text of a literary study first published in 1939 [Book Review Digest 1939]." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 47:43 S 15 '50

Chicago Sun p6 S 17 '50 50w

Kirkus 18:493 Ag 15 '50 50w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ja 7 '51 110w

"A new edition, revised, corrected and containing new material based on more recent discoveries made in the library at Rouen, where Flaubert lived." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 D 6 '50 850w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

Sat R of Lit 34:32 Ja 27 '51 310w

STEEGMULLER, FRANCIS. Two lives of James Jackson Jarves. 331p il $5 Yale univ. press

B or 92 Jarves, James Jackson 51-10488

"James Jackson Jarves, the son of the inventor of a celebrated Yankee product, Sandwich glass, is known to most of those who have heard his name for the early Italian paintings which he collected with particular discrimination in Tuscany and Umbria in the 1850's. . . To others Jarves is known for his pioneering books on art, with their comments on its condition in the America of his day . . . and his name is familiar to students of Hawaiian history because he lived in Hawaii when young and was himself the first historian of the islands. . . The present volume is not a treatise by an art historian, but a biography of an extraordinary man, based largely on unpublished or obscure documents." Preview

Booklist 47:361 Je 15 '51

Kirkus 19:198 Ap 1 '51 220w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 76:1127 Jl '51 150w

Reviewed by Ernest Jones

Nation 173:55 Jl 21 '51 950w

Reviewed by Lamont Moore

New Eng Q 24:393 S '51 900w

New Repub 125:21 D 10 '51 100w

"Despite his outstanding qualities, Jarves was strangely devoid of personality, an original character without color, fire or the dramatic attributes so tempting to biographers. Mr. Steegmuller, an old hand at the business, examines his subject with the same sort of clinical precision and powers of induction that Flaubert lavished on the Normans of his day. Without forcing the issues, without sensationalism, tricks, or artifices, he has created a truthful and full-length portrait of a remarkable though curiously unprepossessing figure. He has paid his respects to the life and pioneering attainments of a collector with such directness of statement and organizing ability as to make further studies of Jarves totally unnecessary." Thomas Craven

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Je 3 '51 1150w

"This study might well have added that Jarves stands as the founder of a line running from Fenollosa to Berenson to Huneker, Leo Stein and Paul Rosenfeld, and it might also have reproduced and evaluated more of his criticism. Even so, this is an able rehabilitation of an eminent figure, and as such it places Francis Steegmuller—already established through his books on Flaubert and Maupassant—high among our literary biographers." Jerome Mellquist

+ N Y Times p7 My 27 '51 800w

"Mr. Steegmuller, working mostly from unpublished manuscripts, has rescued from undeserved obscurity a quixotic and very interesting individual—a man of parts and of instinctive taste and perception."

+ New Yorker 27:115 My 3 '51 220w

Reviewed by George Boas

Sat R of Lit 34:39 Jl 7 '51 950w

"The author quotes very generously from Jarves' own writings but he refrains from much speculation or analysis. Although Mr. Steegmuller has allowed inaccuracies to creep into his text, he has, nevertheless, made a considerable contribution to cultural history."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 7:229 S '51 300w

Reviewed by John Derby

Yale R n s 41:135 autumn '51 700w

STEELE, WILBUR DANIEL. Full cargo; more stories. 369p $3.95 Doubleday

51-14516

A collection of nineteen short stories selected from the author's output from 1918 to the present.

Kirkus 19:622 O 15 '51 170w

"These stories have vigor and suspense and technical expertness. More important, they stretch one's imagination. They are likely to linger in memory not so much because of strange scenes and adventures or the neatness of the denouément as because of the range and clarity of the author's pictures of what men really live by." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 D 9 '51 450w

"Mr. Steele's best stories have an idea core—they take up a point of conflict between different human beings and let it work itself out, while the author stands aside, not taking sides, merely throwing over his tale a light mantle

STEELE, W. D.—Continued
of poetic insight. His experiments with unusual forms are less successful." John Brooks
+ — N Y Times p16 D 16 '51 330w
New Yorker 27:156 D 15 '51 50w
Time 58:116 D 10 '51 700w

STEIN, AARON MARC. Shoot me dacent. 189p $2.50 Doubleday 51-10655

Detective story.

Kirkus 19:140 Mr 1 '51 60w

"An amiable story chock full of local color of an amusingly instructive variety."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 3 '51 130w

"If you want an expertly written mystery that has integrated atmosphere, clearly drawn characters, suspense, shocking surprises and plausible explanations, don't miss this one." K. S. Cole
+ N Y Times p18 My 27 '51 120w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p24 My 13 '51 70w

"Civilized and amusing."
+ Sat R of Lit 34:32 Je 30 '51 50w

STEIN, CLARENCE S. Toward new towns for America; with an introd. by Lewis Mumford. 245p il pl $5 Public adm.
711 Housing. City planning

A study of the deliberate planning and replanning of suburban towns to make them safer, more efficient, and better adapted to modern living. Among the developments studied are Sunnyside Gardens, New York; Greenbelt, Maryland; and Baldwin Hills Village, Los Angeles. Bibliography. Index.

"Mr. Stein's book which is detailed and frank, will give the civic minded man or woman an excellent idea of what must be done and what avoided if the garden city is ever to become a part of our general background." Edward Barry
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Jl 15 '51 350w

"Mr. Stein was closely associated, as architect and planner, with all these developments. He writes with inside knowledge and yet with self-critical detachment. His account, while based on a many-sided expertise, is streamlined and clear enough for the layman to follow. It is illustrated by photographs which succeed admirably in their aim, which is not to glamourise or 'sell,' but to really help one see how the new arrangements of space, roads and housing work out on the ground." Charles Madge
+ New Statesman & Nation 42:499 N 3 '51 450w

STEIN, GERTRUDE. Two: Gertrude Stein and her brother, and other early portraits [1908-12]; with a foreword by Janet Flanner. (Yale ed. of the unpublished writings of Gertrude Stein, v 1) 355p $5 Yale univ. press
818 51-12322

The first volume in the Yale edition of the unpublished work of Gertrude Stein is a collection of early "portraits" done between 1908 and 1912.

Revised by Walter Havighurst
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 S 23 '51 250w

"Readers who are unacquainted with her writing may find these early examples of interest. For the already initiated they hold no surprises; they can be described as merely more of the same." Lloyd Morris
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 O 28 '51 400w

"It is both the best and the worst book with which, as she might have said, to be beginning reading Gertrude Stein. For the most part its palette is restricted to words like 'being,' 'existing,' 'one,' 'certainly,' 'then.' The 'continuous present' is here prolonged to lengths never dreamed of before or since.' Lloyd Frankenberg
N Y Times p5 S 30 '51 410w

"It makes very boring reading."
— New Yorker 27:75 Ja 5 '52 160w

Reviewed by W. G. Rogers
Sat R of Lit 34:16 S 29 '51 420w

STEINBECK, JOHN. Log from the Sea of Cortez. 282p $4 Viking
591.92 Ricketts, Edward Flanders. California, Gulf of. Marine fauna 51-12804

"A reissue of the narrative part of 'The Sea of Cortez' [Book Review Digest 1941], which was the record of an expedition to the Gulf of California undertaken ten years ago by Steinbeck and his marine-biologist friend Ed Ricketts. . . The present volume omits the marine biology, and the author has added an informal biographical sketch of Ricketts, who was killed in an automobile-train collision in 1948." (New Yorker) Glossary. Index.

Booklist 48:68 O 15 '51
Kirkus 19:375 Jl 15 '51 50w

"Technical libraries already owning Sea of Cortez will probably not need to purchase this. Other libraries, considering the book for its new material may be primarily interested in John Steinbeck's 50 page memoir of Ed Ricketts, who died in 1948, and from whom the character of Doc in Cannery Row was drawn." E. M. Cole
Library J 76:1565 O 1 '51 90w

"The best part of this newly unveiled work of the novelist presents sharply evocative descriptions of the sea and the approaches to shore, plus some interesting accounts of the scuttling, flopping, sucking, stabbing, poisoning creatures that were taken on the beaches. . . Writing his log, the novelist is impelled to supply the philosophical discourse that passed between the friends in the late watches of the night. Their conversations must have brought sound sleep to all aboard the trawler. On this evidence, Steinbeck the philosophical essayist will do well to leave the field to the other Steinbeck; the novelist appears to have a far more penetrating insight into nature." Harry Gilroy
N Y Times p6 S 16 '51 300w

"Ricketts' highly flavored personality, as it emerges from the pages of the new preface, greatly enhances the appeal of the book."
+ New Yorker 27:125 O 6 '51 170w
Springf'd Republican p14C O 14 '51 200w

STEINBERG, MILTON. A believing Jew. 318p $3.50 Harcourt
296 Jews—Religion. Jews in the U.S.
51-12040

A posthumous collection of twenty-three articles, essays, and sermons. The author, when he died in March 1950 at the age of 46, was rabbi of the Park Avenue Synagogue in New York city.

Booklist 48:138 D 15 '51
Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '51

"Should find an audience among all Jews, practicing and otherwise, and students of religion who wish to know what an outstanding leader of Judaism is thinking." C. J. Roth
+ Library J 76:1217 Ag '51 80w

"The many admirers of the late Rabbi Milton Steinberg's masterly exposition of 'Basic Judaism' will find this posthumous volume of his essays and sermons no less a source of stimulation and delight. The same penetrating intelligence, the same extraordinary clarity, the same dedication to what is best in the Hebraic and American traditions, the same discriminating responsiveness to the emergent and the new, the same fairness and humanity and warmth of heart." Joshua Kunitz
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 S 9 '51 290w

"It is indeed the record of a believing Jew, but is is also the record of a civilized, perceptive and understanding mind; though this, of course, is precisely the way Rabbi Steinberg would describe a believing Jew, with the addition of a compassionate heart and an unwavering faith." Thomas Sugrue
+ N Y Times p4 S 2 '51 800w
San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 14 '51 120w

STEINER, MRS CHARLOTTE. Giddy-ap, Giddy-ap! unp col il $1.25 Doubleday
51-12484

"The adventures of small Dickie who pretended he was a cowboy, dressed like a cowboy, 'felt like a brave cowboy,' and tried to show his bravery. Vocabulary not over-simple but sentence arrangement on page makes beginning readers feel at home with it." Library J

Kirkus 19:527 S 15 '51 90w

"Recommended as a picture-book to be read by first-and early second-graders." F. W. Butler
+ Library J 76:2010 D 1 '51 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p30 O 7 '51 60w

"The pictures, in semi-cartoon style, are unimaginative, but have a Western flavor in their yellow, red and brown tones." Miriam James
N Y Times p34 O 28 '51 110w

STENDHAL, pseud. See Beyle, M. H.

STERLING, DOROTHY. Sophie and her puppies; phot. by Myron Ehrenberg. 59p $2.50 Doubleday
Dogs—Legends and stories 51-10768

Sophie was a young thoroughbred dachshund who belonged to a little girl named Anne. In simple text and large photographs this is the story of Sophie's eight puppies, how they were born, how Sophie took care of them in their early days, how they grew, and how Anne and her family finally found homes for them all except one.

Booklist 47:386 Jl 1 '51
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Jl 8 '51 110w
Kirkus 19:245 My 15 '51 110w

"The dogs are excellent subjects for photographer Myron Ehrenberg. Recommended for ages 5-8, and any dog lover." D. M. Blasco
+ Library J 76:1034 Je 15 '51 60w

"Measuring eight by eleven inches, cloth bound, it is more a gift for special young dog lovers than a necessity for schools and libraries. Of course, every friend of the dachshund, of any age, will greet it with joy. This Sophie is no show dog, and dachshund puppies aer not very 'pretty.' As they are caught here, in such amusing action, their nonsensical baby-clownishness and obviously definite character show why they have grown so popular in America." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 My 13 '51 180w

Reviewed by Miriam James
N Y Times p18 Jl 1 '51 160w

STERLING, STEWART, pseud. See Winchell, P.

STERN, FREDERICK MARTIN. Capitalism in America; a classless society. 119p $2 Rinehart
330.973 Capitalism. U.S.—Economic conditions. U.S.—Civilization 51-12379

"A fine, simple, presentation of 'the American way' written as connected letters by a naturalized American citizen to a friend in Paris with whom he had studied in Edinburgh thirty years ago. The writer came to this country in 1937 and had corresponded casually with his French friend since that time. Recently learning that he was tending toward communism Mr. Stern decided to give him a first-hand picture of conditions here." Library J

Reviewed by D. J. McDonald
Commonweal 55:98 N 2 '51 1700w

"Well-written, of interest to new citizens, limited generally."
Kirkus 19:379 Jl 15 '51 120w

"Mr. Stern is painstaking in explanation, pointing out the basic differences between the American system as it is and as those of other lands have considered it in the light of their experience with their own or neighboring countries. . . He is not blind to faults in our society's structure, but points to the over-all trends and progress to better living. Librarians will be in better position to respond to queries from their readers after enjoying these letters." A. B. Lindsay
+ Library J 76:1419 S 15 '51 250w

"A book which contains some of the best small-arms fire in defense of the American way of life since the shots fired at Concord. Author Stern couches his arguments in the form of lively, colloquial letters to a European intellectual who is thinking of turning Communist."
+ Time 58:124 O 22 '51 500w

STERN, JAMES. Man who was loved. 234p $3 Harcourt
51-2839

"To any one who has wondered at the almost fabulous reputation James Stern enjoys among many British writers of distinction, this selection of his short stories (the first to be published here) will be of unusual interest. . . The stories contained in this volume are both old and new and were selected by the author—seven from his published collections and five that have not previously appeared in book form." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"The keynote of the book is variety, a refreshing absence of pattern. With a couple of exceptions, these tales have an unpretentious perfection. They are warmly felt and expertly entertaining." C. J. Rolo
+ Atlantic 187:83 Je '51 330w

"In only one story, I think, does the result not quite justify the effort, 'Next Door to Death.' Here, the considerations of a man nearing death in a hospital do not seem to add up to the story. But this does not detract from a talent that is fresh and a good thing to see. The words are right, the man is serious, and certainly he entertains." J. A. Lynch
+ — Commonweal 54:293 Je 29 '51 550w

"Vital, moving stories, with suspense, pleasant shocks, and unforgettable characters."
+ Kirkus 19:215 Ap 15 '51 180w

Reviewed by Ernest Jones
Nation 172:495 My 26 '51 700w

Reviewed by Angus Wilson
New Repub 125:20 Ag 13 '51 600w

"Mr. Stern, as writer, can do an infinite variety of things and he can do them well—he can also, upon occasion, do them badly. Certainly it can be said that Mr. Stern has done his best to live up to the thumping praise lavished upon him by his illustrious admirers. That he has not always succeeded is scarcely surprising. Tchekov himself would have been very hard put to it to do so." J. J. Maloney
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ap 22 '51 600w

"A writer of short stories must have every resource, must be at home in many manners. Mr. Stern has these gifts and writes with the skill, speed and aplomb of a natural storyteller. . . He fails only in a piece like 'Solitaire,' in which he tries direct reporting without comment; it is a clever failure because his talent is that of the reflective man, not of the cinematic reporter." V. S. Pritchett
+ — N Y Times p4 Ap 22 '51 600w
San Francisco Chronicle p20 Jl 22 '51 600w

STERN, JAMES—Continued

"There is beauty here, and laughter, but the dominant impression is one of macabre melancholy. The laughter in 'The Man Who Was Loved' is that of a dying man in a deserted house, and the beauty is not far removed from corruption and decay." William Peden

Sat R of Lit 34:18 Je 23 '51 550w

Time 57:109 My 7 '51 380w

"Sardonic though the stories gathered here be, they nevertheless are nearly all first-rate, and some of them are brilliant."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:243 S '51 270w

Reviewed by Paul Pickrel

Yale R n s 40:767 summer '51 140w

STERN, KARL. Pillar of fire. 310p $3.50 Harcourt

B or 92 Roman Catholic church—Converts. Jews—Political and social conditions 51-9567

Reminiscences of a German Jewish psychiatrist. He tells his story from his childhood in a small Bavarian town, thru all his experiences, spiritual and physical, up to and thru his arrival in America, where he finally became a Catholic.

"A deeply interesting story, it is also an illuminating presentation of the case for Catholicism to the mid-twentieth century mind. It is unique too because of the author's previous religion, his standing as a scientist, his detached objective judgment, his habit of formulating convictions in forthright fashion and justifying them inoffensively." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 172:474 Mr '51 550w

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 4 '51 450w

"A book of unusual beauty, of the modern spiritual autobiographies the best. Utterly unpretentious, it is superbly written, evoking with great clarity many levels of experience." J. M. Oesterreicher

+ Commonweal 53:520 Mr 2 '51 1700w

"Excellent book." R. P. Breaden

+ Library J 76:409 Mr 1 '51 110w

"Many an ax will be ground, but whatever the judgment, the book must be accepted as a profound and moving document. It may not reveal the divine but it casts light on the mortal suffering of the modern Jew and the despairing perplexity of modern man." Marie Syrkin

Nation 173:16 Jl 7 '51 750w

"Undoubtedly, Dr. Stern is a sincere man, in search of the truth, eager to find peace of mind. But to this reviewer his autobiography indicates that he is also an insecure and confused man and that his conversion has been for him a refuge from insecurity." Erich Fromm

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ap 15 '51 1250w

"Told in superb English. . . Dr. Stern writes with the ease, skill and wit of an educated American, but also with the ripeness, bouquet, vocabulary and wholeness of an adult, urbane European." Anne Fremantle

+ N Y Times p6 F 25 '51 900w

Reviewed by W. R. White

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 28 '51 750w

Reviewed by J. M. Cohen

Spec 187:402 S 28 '51 300w

Wis Lib Bul 47:87 Ap '51

STERN, PHILIP VAN DOREN. Love is the one with wings. 250p $2.50 Farrar, Straus

51-9568

Roy Higgins began life as an honest Maine lad, but the war taught him that it was a good policy to grab all you could get before someone else did. The novel describes the tragic outcome of Roy's attempt to grab the wife of a wealthy New York business man.

Kirkus 18:734 D 15 '50 120w

"Diverting of course, and very frank. Doesn't say much except that men taught to kill in the army sometimes do a little killing out of the army. Can be left to the commercial rental libraries." R. E. Kingery

Library J 76:111 Ja 15 '51 150w

Reviewed by James MacBride

N Y Times p22 Mr 11 '51 80w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ap 1 '51 120w

STERN, SELMA. Court Jew; a contribution to the history of the period of absolutism in central Europe; tr. from the German ms. by Ralph Weiman. 312p $4 Jewish pub.

332 Jews—Political and social conditions. Capitalists and financiers 50-12026

"During the period when feudalism in Europe began to crumble . . . there appeared the so-called Court Jews. They were a peculiar caste of Jews who because of their commercial genius managed to gather tremendous wealth and emerged from the ghettos as advisers to European rulers. They influenced financial affairs, organized new industries and foreign commerce, and had much to say about internal and foreign policy. . . Dr. Stern gives an exhaustive historical background of the financial, political, and humanitarian Court Jews from 1650 to 1750." Sat R of Lit

"Miss Stern's well-documented volume is mainly of interest to students of Jewish history of this era. For the layman it is, on the whole, dry reading. Mr. Weiman's translation is excellent." Philip Rubin

+ N Y Times p25 O 29 '50 360w

"Dr Stern's characterization of the Court Jews and the description of their common esprit de corps are picturesquely presented and give evidence of her writing talent." Antoni Gronowicz

+ Sat R of Lit 34:39 Mr 17 '51 430w

STETTHEIMER, ETTIE. Memorial volume; of and by [the author]. 644p $7.50 Knopf

818 51-10543

"Ettie Stettheimer [was] a bluestocking of the Gibson girl era. Her works here reprinted consist of an autobiographical fragment describing a young woman student's life at the University of Freiburg in Baden, her doctoral dissertation on William James, a novel originally published under the pseudonym of Henri Waste, and four short stories, three of which have not previously appeared." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"Miss Stettheimer writes with the leisurely rhythms of a Walter Pater. In her pages may be found as if preserved in amber a mind innocent and perplexed, shaped in expectation of a world of established order and not quite able to realize that things recently so firmly moored have gone irremediably adrift." G. F. Whicher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 S 16 '51 120w

"Much of what Miss Stettheimer set down has become, in the passive voice, dated—in the active voice, quaint. Her style imitates Henry James, and her dialogue is at times irresistibly reminiscent of Elinor Glyn. . . And yet—Miss Stettheimer is not to be laughed off. More than anyone else, more even than Edith Wharton, who was infinitely her superior at fiction, Miss Stettheimer has drawn the picture of the eager, inhibited, triumphant, pathetic American woman of the early twentieth century." Elizabeth Janeway

+ — N Y Times p13 Je 17 '51 750w

STEVENS, ALDEN GIFFORD. Lion Boy's white brother; il. by Robert Frankenberg. 241p $2.50 Lippincott

51-10232

Sequel to Lion Boy (Book Review Digest 1938). In this an English boy, whose doctor father is searching for rare herbs near Simba's village, makes friends with Simba. The two boys make a safari into the wilds of Africa, and the doctor finally gets his sought-for herb.

Booklist 47:333 My 15 '51
Horn Bk 27:254 Jl '51 80w
Kirkus 19:186 Ap 1 '51 120w

"Author lived six years in Africa. One, therefore, may consider the background authentic although some episodes seem improbable." V. K. Fitch
Library J 76:971 Je 1 '51 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 My 13 '51 170w

"The story is strong in adventure, background and characterization." F. C. Smith
+ N Y Times p20 Je 24 '51 220w

"A modern adventure story, this is a convincing picture of a little-known country."
+ Sat R of Lit 34:44 My 12 '51 180w

STEVENS, DONALD. Or call it winter. 210p $2.75 Harper
51-3278

The setting is a West Indian island. A young American artist and his wife have set up housekeeping there because living is cheap. An American woman, recently from a psychoanalytic clinic arrives, and the action is concerned with her attempts to share her experiences with the artist and his wife and other American expatriates.

"Readers of 'Tender Is The Night' may be reminded of its theme of emotional bankruptcy. Mr. Stevens has analyzed his people perhaps more probingly than the impressionistic F. Scott Fitzgerald did, but he does not write of them with the same warmth and pathos and lyricism, nor does he lend them much pictorial vividness. Still, his book is neat, honest, and entertaining and should fit the current vogue for the introspective novel of disintegration." Fitzroy Davis
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 My 20 '51 320w

"There's a certain acid amusement, if no great depth, to all of this."
Kirkus 19:137 Mr 1 '51 150w

"It strikes one as the industrious piecing together of all one young writer knows about psychoanalysis. With a slight twist of the wrist it could have been turned into a nice satire on the psychoanalytical novel. Though no competent novelist from here on in can disregard the discoveries made in the field, Mr. Stevens' concentration (shall we say fixation?) upon them has considerably inhibited—as it always does—his concern with certain human values which were the obvious potential of a story he has otherwise very capably told. For Mr. Stevens displays in the actual writing of 'Or Call It Winter,' a very promising skill." F. H. Bullock
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 S 16 '51 300w

Reviewed by Robert Hagy
N Y Times p10 Jl 29 '51 340w

"Much of the writing is excessively precious, larded with italicized words and arch innuendo. The conversations between John and his wife are stagy and unreal. None of the characters is drawn incisively enough to arouse the reader's sympathy. And the action seems to take place in a kind of vacuum so apart from the real world as to make the satire ineffective. At best, 'Or Call It Winter' is innocuous summer reading." Martin Levin
Sat R of Lit 34:27 Je 30 '51 290w

STEVENS, WALLACE. Necessary angel: essays on rèality and the imagination. 176p $3 Knopf 808.1 Poetry 51-12072

"Contains Wallace Stevens' own selection of those of his essays and speeches on the art of poetry, on the relation between imagination and reality, which he wished to appear in book form." (Publisher's note) No index.

Reviewed by Ruth Chapin
Christian Science Monitor p5 D 27 '51 90w
Kirkus 19:524 S 1 '51 150w

"He writes about imagination almost as Coleridge might have done, could that great mind have divorced itself from its religious provincialism. He writes about the significance of poetry as Arnold might have, could he have stepped out from under the shadow of the Victorian schoolroom. He writes, of course, and most happily, like no one but Wallace Stevens, and we can only rejoice to attend." Babette Deutsch
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 D 9 '51 600w

"From this collection Stevens has chosen to exclude a number of the notes and articles he has written as prefaces, answers to questionnaires, and so on. Presumably he has excluded them as being too discrete or too technical for a volume through which he would convince the reader that imagination enlarges and subtilizes experience. Most of these pages invite or require close attention, but they are not addressed solely to the special student of poetry." M. V. O'Connor
N Y Times p7 D 2 '51 700w

"[These essays] have been hard to get at, and it is a good thing to have them all together. It is a good thing that Wallace Stevens has come to the conclusion that 'The Necessary Angel 'is necessary. It seems to exemplify the high seriousness with which this poet approaches his art. In fact, 'The Necessary Angel' may well take its place—beside much of his later poetry—as the Credo of Wallace Stevens: his mystique." G. P. Meyer
+ Sat R of Lit 34:11 D 29 '51 550w

STEVENS, WILLIAM OLIVER. Famous women of America. (Famous biographies for young people) 174p il $2.50 Dodd
920.7 Woman—Biography—Juvenile literature. U.S.—Biography—Juvenile literature 50-10179

Short biographical sketches of twenty-four American women from different periods of history. Among them are: Betsy Ross; Molly Pitcher; Sally Townsend; Harriet Lane; Lucretia Coffin Mott; Dr. Mary Walker; Charlotte Cushman; Clara Morris; Carrie Jacobs Bond; Mary Mapes Dodge. For ages ten to fourteen. Index.

Booklist 47:208 F 1 '51
Christian Science Monitor p8 Ja 20 '51 90w

"Should be useful in junior high school to bring to life girls who did things—the nurse, artist, actress, pioneer, reformer." R. C. Buell
+ Library J 75:2020 N 15 '50 70w

STEVENSON, AUGUSTA. Booker T. Washington, ambitious boy; il. by Charles V. John. (Childhood of famous Americans ser) 199p $1.75 Bobbs
B or 92 Washington, Booker Taliaferro—Juvenile literature 50-14744

In this volume of the Childhood of Famous Americans series, the author tells the story of the childhood years of the slave-boy who became in after-life the honored head of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, a leader of his people, and friend of many notable men and women.

"This entire series is very popular and attractive, and this new title adds to the usefulness of these valuable little volumes for younger readers." A. L. Shea
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 Ja 28 '51 110w

"Useful addition to the 'Childhood of Famous Americans' series." Virginia Haviland
+ Library J 76:121 Ja 15 '51 70w

"The more boys, both white and colored, who know about the great Negro educator,

STEVENSON, AUGUSTA—Continued
Booker T. Washington, in any aspect, the better. His story is one children will find enjoyable and touching and will remember when they later fit it into adult reading." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 12 '50 90w

Reviewed by Eleanor Breed
San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 12 '50 60w

STEVENSON, DOROTHY EMILY (MRS JAMES REID PEPLOE). Shoulder the sky; a story of winter in the hills [Eng title: Winter and rough weather]. 275p $2.75 Rinehart
51-12700

Continues the story of the Johnstones and their nephew James of Music in the Hills (Book Review Digest 1950). James and his beloved Rhoda came to the remote Scottish sheep farm after the honeymoon. James worried for fear Rhoda would miss her London friends, but Rhoda soon made the adjustment. She made new friends; took up her painting again; and in so doing helped a talented but sulky small boy.

Booklist 48:22; 50 S 15 '51; O 1 '51
Bookmark 11:60 D '51 30w

"This book is simply written. With no sensational bids for attention, it quietly enthralls the reader till the last page leaves him reluctant to put it down, but relaxed. Miss Stevenson renders her milieu with restful absence of dialect, just sufficiently sprinkled with Scottish expressions to give it savor. Her percipience presents her characters with vitality and stature. They meet their all too human loves, griefs, mysteries, entanglements, tragedies and triumphs with a sort of clear-eyed elemental simplicity." Kathleen Cannell
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 O 25 '51 410w
Kirkus 19:456 Ag 15 '51 100w

Reviewed by Mary Ahern
N Y Times p27 N 11 '51 440w

"Unfortunately, the problem of Rhoda's adjustment, a very real and difficult one, is merely glossed over, as the author moves on to unravel the romantic tangles of her other principals. . . There is nothing lacking, however, in Miss Stevenson's understanding of the Scottish countryside. Drumberly and its environs, Boscath Farm and Mureth House have physical reality. . . The homely businesses of farmers and their wives are warmly portrayed. In 'Shoulder the Sky' Miss Stevenson's loyal readers will once more find a world far happier, far more simple, than the one in which we live." Eugenie Bolger
+ — Sat R of Lit 34:14 O 27 '51 600w
Times [London] Lit Sup p716 N 9 '51 50w

STEWART, ANNA BIRD. Enter David Garrick; with il. by Ernest H. Shepard. 278p $3 Lippincott

Garrick, David—Juvenile literature
51-11179

A fictionalized biography of the famous English actor, David Garrick. It begins in Litchfield when David at ten, sees his first play, and ends with his death in 1779. For junior and senior high schools. Index.

Booklist 48:87 N 1 '51
Bookmark 11:61 D '51

"Both adults and young people will read this book for its high interest value but at the same time add greatly to their knowledge of theatrical history. E. H. Shepard has contributed several pen and ink sketches that are wonderful." A. B. McG.
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 N 11 '51 160w
Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '51
Horn Bk 27:420 D '51 120w

"A superb account, lightened with wit and imagination, and the charming sketches by Ernest H. Shepard."
+ Kirkus 19:583 O 1 '51 190w

"Sympathetic, though sometimes too detailed, bibliography. Authentic illustrations by E. H. Shepard add charm and interest. Recommended for teen-age." Elizabeth Hodges
+ Library J 76:2017 D 1 '51 100w

"A delightful biography. . . Probably the most obvious audience for this book, addressed to young people, is those over fourteen who are keen on the stage. For them, every page should prove absorbing. . . Yet the general young reader will be unfortunate to miss Garrick because of an alien eighteenth century tapestry. He is worth knowing for himself." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 N 11 '51 500w

"The romantic episodes in Garrick's life are played up, and the author has drawn on her imagination in re-creating some incidents. In spite of these devices, the story is somewhat impeded by too much attention to detail." Elizabeth Hodges
N Y Times p16 N 11 '51 200w

"This biography of the eighteenth-century's greatest actor is a delight to read. . . Miss Stewart makes the eighteenth century as familiar and as real as the reader's own world." M. R. B.
+ Sat R of Lit 34:50 N 10 '51 320w

STEWART, FRANK MANN. Half century of municipal reform; the history of the National municipal league. 289p $5 Univ. of Calif. press

352 National municipal league. Municipal government
50-10845

"This study records the history of the National Municipal League, outlines the conditions which brought this citizens' organization for better government into existence, describes its program for the improvement of local government, analyzes its methods, techniques, and problems, and attempts to evaluate the contribution of the League to fifty years of municipal reform, 1894-1944. It does not purport to discuss all phases of the struggle for municipal reform during this period. In a few instances reference is made to events up to the fall of 1948." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"The prodigious labor involved in compiling this history with its vast amount of factual material and copious notes and references has not kept it from being preeminently readable and enjoyable, and the author's skillful organization of the material which is thoroughly indexed and abundantly supplemented is to be commended. The chapter arrangement is developed to give the general reader as well as the specialist sufficient background before he traces the actual history of the League, which is treated in a functional as well as a chronological manner." F. P. Gruenberg
+ Am Pol Sci R 45:566 Je '51 750w

"Although Professor Stewart's book is not the liveliest essay on this subject that I have read, it is well organized and carefully written. He has meticulously documented his statements. There is an extensive bibliography and a good index." W. H. Young
+ Ann Am Acad 275:181 My '51 400w
U S Quarterly Bk R 7:61 Mr '51 160w

STEWART, GEORGE RIPPEY. Sheep Rock. 286p $3 Random house
51-1695

"A philosophical novel in which Sheep Rock, a land 'inhospitable and hostile, threatening and treacherous' is the protagonist. Geoffrey, a poet, on a year's Fellowship, traces the geological changes in the place through eons of time, and deftly, dramatically reconstructs from vestigial objects its harsh effect on sundry humans. Sheep Rock becomes a 'symbol of the larger world,' grim only with respect to men." Library J

Booklist 47:255 Mr 15 '51

Bookmark 10:185 My '51 30w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Ap 8 '51 550w

Reviewed by M. W. Stoer
Christian Science Monitor p9 Ap 23 '51 250w

"A poet's conception and execution, this will scarcely stand up against the acid test of the average reader's judgment."
Kirkus 19:11 Ja 1 '51 190w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 76:517 Mr 15 '51 100w

Reviewed by Harvey Swados
New Repub 124:21 Je 18 '51 360w

"Mr. Stewart, for all his nonconformity in the choice of subjects for his fiction, is an extremely able craftsman, and however far he strays from the well beaten paths (and in this one he strays pretty far), he somehow manages to avoid the novelist's cardinal sin, which is dullness. 'Sheep Rock' captures and holds the attention; interest seldom lags. . . Those who read the story attentively will not easily forget it." Oscar Lewis
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ap 1 '51 700w

"Mr. Stewart succeeds to an unusual extent in conveying the brooding mystery of the still lonely West—of drifted trails, caves and cabins, places 'too strong for men, grim and hard and dangerous.' . . And even after the poet and Mr. Stewart have done their best, something fittingly remains of the mystery of Sheep Rock. Neither of the literary sleuths manages to discover the story of a crumbling wagon and the sheepherder who left it there." J. K. Howard
+ N Y Times p5 Mr 11 '51 650w

"Mostly the novel is a patternless whole of impression and thought. Only those who enter easily into the author's feeling for a place in nature as a crossroads of time and space will welcome 'Sheep Rock' wholeheartedly. Very improbably will the novel be as popular as 'Storm,' or 'Fire,' or 'Earth Abides'; but the author must have known this when he started out on his new and very personal task." Marvin Sargent
+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Mr 18 '51 900w

STEWART, JOHN INNES MACKINTOSH (MICHAEL INNES, pseud). Paper thunderbolt [Eng title: Operation pax]. 333p $3 Dodd 51-13659

Detective story.

Booklist 48:144 D 15 '51

Cleveland Open Shelf p28 N '51

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 42:506 N 3 '51 160w

"An astounding mixture of wit, excitement, and thrill, and well blended it is, too." Edgar Acken
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 D 9 '51 270w

"A brilliant entertainment." Basil Davenport
+ N Y Times p26 N 11 '51 220w

"Mr. Innes's book is remarkably profuse in character, incident, and elementary psychoanalysis."
New Yorker 27:190 N 17 '51 170w

"Elegantly told, adventurous and joyfully fantastic." L. G. Offord
+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 28 '51 80w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff
Sat R of Lit 34:38 D 22 '51 30w

Reviewed by Esther Howard
Spec 187:684 N 16 '51 70w

STEWART, MARGUERITE ANN (MCKLVEEN) (MRS M. S. STEWART). We, the American people. 248p $3.50; text ed $2.60 Day

325.73 National characteristics, American. U.S.—Foreign population 51-10181

Tells the story of the American people and the various races, creeds, and nationalities from which they have grown. Partial contents: Americans from the Scandinavian countries; Our Spanish-speaking Americans; Americans from England; Our Negro Americans; Our Jewish Americans; Americans from Germany; Americans from Italy; Americans from China. Index.

Booklist 47:366 Je 15 '51

Bookmark 10:185 My '51

"The approach is sane, intelligent, and should appeal to young people encouraged to do their own thinking."
+ Kirkus 19:186 Ap 1 '51 150w

"Author points out the damage done by prejudice, and yet her approach is sane, intelligent, and logical, not emotional. . . Can be used perfectly with Shippen's Passage to America." Augusta Baker
+ Library J 76:1237 Ag '51 120w

STEWART, VIRGINIA. 45 contemporary Mexican artists; a twentieth-century renaissance. 167p il $10 Stanford univ. press

709.72 Artists, Mexican

"The work of these 45 artists is vigorous, colorful, stimulating. The incidents of their lives are engrossing. In keeping with the broad sweep of Mexican art in the twentieth century is the lavish format of the book. It has good margins, large print, photographs of the artists, many excellent reproductions of their work." Booklist

---

Booklist 48:120 D 1 '51

"This collection of amiable, chatty, uncritical little essays offers a pleasant introduction to a great and varied school of art which is understood hardly at all on this side of the Rio Grande. . . The essays which make up the book are not examples of scholarship in absentia. The author sought out the artists, interviewed them and took their pictures [the photografs are a delightful feature of the book], and went to no end of trouble to get reproductions of their works. These reproductions, tho nearly all in black and white, are adequate to drive home most of the points which the author makes in her text." Edward Barry
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 25 '51 370w

STIERI, EMANUELE. Complete home repair handbook; drawings by John G. Marinac. 1617p $8.85 Prentice-Hall

643.7 Repairing 50-58297

"The author has done a good job of rounding up all possible information on the tremendous variety of problems likely to be encountered around the house. The book is one that will be referred to constantly. Profusely illustrated; tables and glossary in appendix." Booklist

---

Booklist 47:248 Mr 15 '51

"This is one of the most ambitious projects of its kind and a gold mine of information for the home craftsman." William Yates
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Mr 25 '51 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:43 My '51

STILL, ALFRED. Borderlands of science. 424p $3.75 Philosophical lib.

133 Occult sciences. Science—Philosophy 51-1501

The author, a pioneer electrical engineer, a professor at Purdue University says: "'It is the method of science which from the old-time logic derived from language has evolved a new logic based on observation and experiment, and by so doing has discredited those who seek the truth by other channels. . . . Those who take the trouble to delve more deeply into this business may conclude that magic, religion, and science, these three, are merely different modes of thought.' By implementing this thesis he here offers what is in effect a compact little encyclopedia, erudite and authoritative, around the borderlands of science—dowsing, levitation, telekinesis, clairvoyance, telepathy, precognition, faith healing." (Sat R of Lit)

STILL, ALFRED—Continued

"Mr. Still does not claim that the mystic phenomena represent a higher or more valid truth than does science but pleads, gently and rather inconclusively, that they deserve more consideration. . . No one will quarrel with his attitude but his book would be more effective if it took into account the present frontiers of science and if its presentation of mysticism had less yearning and more facts." Gerald Wendt
Chem & Eng N 29:2222 My 28 '51 220w

"The author does not believe everything he hears or reads, but he seems to believe a great deal on very scanty evidence." W. E. G.
Christian Century 68:990 Ag 29 '51 120w

"Despite its curious anecdotal learning the book is neither amusing nor interesting." E. N.
J Philos 48:765 N 22 '51 160w
Sat R of Lit 34:32 Je 9 '51 250w
Wis Lib Bul 47:182 Jl '51

STIRLING, LILLA M. Jockie; a story of Prince Edward island; il. by Bob Meyers. 202p $2 Scribner

Horses—Legends and stories 51-10317

Life on Prince Edward Island is the background for this story for eight to ten year olds. Jockie and his horse Diana are the chief characters.

Booklist 47:349 Je 1 '51

"Although the young hero's horse, Diana, and her preparation for the fall races form the main thread of Jockie, this is much more than a horse book. Lilla Stirling knows and loves Prince Edward Island and its people, and her picture of life there through the year makes a fine modern story full of a diversity of interests." J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews
+ Horn Bk 27:185 My '51 100w
Kirkus 19:127 Mr 1 '51 100w

"Real characters, with fine child-adult relationships, and fresh local atmosphere. Recommended." Virginia Haviland
+ Library J 76:970 Je 1 '51 70w

"The style is intelligent and vigorous, yet easy reading for about fifth grade, with good type and pictures." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 13 '51 150w

"The winter racing and skiing, the summer cod fishing on and around Prince Edward Island are the background for an unusually good story about a boy and a horse. The book is very attractive, too, with excellent format and a number of vigorous, effective drawings."
+ Sat R of Lit 34:42 My 12 '51 130w
Wis Lib Bul 47:193 Jl '51

STOCKING, GEORGE WARD, and WATKINS, MYRON WEBSTER. Monopoly and free enterprise; with the report and recommendations of the Committee on cartels and monopoly. 596p $4 Twentieth century fund

338.883 Trusts, Industrial 51-9279

The last of three volumes, the first of which were Cartels in Action, and Cartels or Competition (Book Review Digest 1947 and 1948). This volume "surveys the theory of free enterprise, growth of monopolies and parallel development of regulation, and gives some attention to the related problems of patents and research. The last chapter constitutes a report of the Committee on promoting competition, which recommends reorganization of laws, constancy in enforcement and encouragement of small business." (Booklist)

"The rather cavalier attitude toward the materials studied by political scientists, sociologists, and psychologists is symptomatic of the essential weakness of the traditional approach of economic advocates of free competition to the study of monopoly and concentration of economic power. This approach is basically nonpolitical in character, and is marked by an uncritical acceptance of certain alleged truisms about the nature of democracy, reluctance to go beyond official documents in analyzing the role of the courts, the administrative agencies, the presidency, and the Congress in government regulation of business, and a failure to utilize scholarly materials which do not fit easily into the traditional frame of reference of the student of monopoly. More specifically, democracy tends to be equated here with a minimum of governmental control; hence, expanding governmental powers are regarded as probably authoritarian." Marver Bernstein
Am Pol Sci R 45:874 S '51 1450w

Reviewed by M. L. Hoch
Ann Am Acad 278:212 N '51 440w
Booklist 47:246 Mr 15 '51

"Businessmen, lawmakers and interpreters, and economists can make valuable use of this well-balanced and exhaustive study." R. L. Allen
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 F 13 '51 420w
Foreign Affairs 30:155 O '51 40w

Reviewed by C. R. Edwards
Harvard Law R 65:529 Ja '52 2050w

"One may agree with the authors' concern for the maintenance of vigorous competition and with many specific recommendations they make. However, their reasoning is based upon a number of serious misconceptions and does not prove the need for a program of corporate disintegration." N. H. Jacoby
+ — Management R 40:451 Jl '51 470w

"As well informed as any one writing on the state of competition in the United States today, [the authors] have the added qualifications of temperateness and balanced judgment. Far from being deep-enders, they have neither kissed competition a willing farewell nor been blind to pervasive evidences of monopolistic practice. They write out of a deep concern that American enterprise remain private and fruitful by keeping itself competitive." D. W. O'Connell
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 18 '51 550w

Reviewed by D. W. O'Connell
Pol Sci Q 66:297 Je '51 800w

"All things considered, this volume leaves something to be desired. It is as one-sided in its approach as are the many books which condemn big business just because it is big. There is still a real need for such a work that concentrates more on facts and less on opinions, however laudable those opinions may be." Donald Derby
Springf'd Republican p30A Mr 18 '51 300w
U S Quarterly Bk R 7:155 Je '51 320w

STOKER, GEORGE PARKER (GEORGE PARKER, pseud). Guaracha trail; adventures of an American doctor battling for a lost silver mine in the bandit country of northern Mexico. 251p $3.50 Dutton

B or 92 Physicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Mexico—Description and travel 51-12498

"Dr. George Parker has written what might be called an authentic adventure story in 'Guaracha Trail.' It is his recollection of perhaps ten years of his life, first as a practicing physician in the early oil fields and later in the Mexico of Diaz and Madero. The time is presumably from about 1905 to 1912 or thereabouts." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 48:48 O 1 '51

Kirkus 19:379 Jl 15 '51 140w

"Exciting enough for a 'movie.' Recommended as a firsthand account of a bygone Mexican period." J. M. Scherr

+ Library J 76:1216 Ag '51 70w

"Oddly enough, none of the tale seems stretched in the least. Perhaps it is impossible to disbelieve in the doctor because he tells his story so simply, even crudely, that the reader just knows it happened. It makes adventure fiction seem like pallid, puny stuff."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 S 23 '51 260w

"A sparsely written, diverting item." R. C. Lewis

+ N Y Times p31 S 23 '51 140w

STOKES, DONALD HUBERT. Captive in the night. 250p $2.75 Coward-McCann

51-12468

A tale of international intrigue in Algeria in postwar days. The hero is an American ex-soldier.

Kirkus 19:358 Jl 15 '51 120w

"This is at once nastier and more pretentious than Donald Stokes' first novel." James Sandoe

— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 S 23 '51 180w

Reviewed by Harrison Kinney

N Y Times p38 O 7 '51 120w

"Style is what rental librarians call 'outspoken,' action abounds, and maybe you don't need to get the politics straight." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p12 S 16 '51 60w

"Lust, greed, passion, love (of sorts), adventure, hair's-breadth escapes, intrigue, and plenty of shooting, are the salient ingredients of this technicolor story. . . This fast-paced story, splashed with blood and noise, is definitely for lovers of international thrillers." John Cournos

Sat R of Lit 34:14 S 29 '51 240w

STOKES, THOMAS LUNSFORD. The Savannah; il. by Lamar Dodd. (Rivers of America) 401p $4 Rinehart

917.57 Savannah river and valley 51-9387

History, politics, legend and social conditions are interwoven in this story of the Savannah, boundary river between Georgia and South Carolina, from the days of the Spanish explorers to the present.

Booklist 47:217 F 15 '51

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 11 '51 320w

Reviewed by T. M. Longstreth

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ap 10 '51 230w

"Thomas L. Stokes' record is far more tumultuous and exciting than the humid, primitive reality of colonial life in Georgia could have been. Stokes is writing popular history, and he is quite successful. But his real success comes when he forgets the arbitrary limitations of these books about rivers and gets into the political and econome history of the coastal area. This is Stokes' meat." William Pfaff

+ Commonweal 54:437 Ag 10 '51 300w

Kirkus 18:748 D 15 '50 110w

"The volume reflects meticulous research, is highly readable and interesting to the last word." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 76:110 Ja 15 '51 130w

"Here is Tom Stokes at his best, and the nobility and gentry will be much deceived if they think that means little. A careful, responsible man, he is spurred by passion and checked by reason, so that on the surface he seems placid, almost still, like the Savannah where it spreads to meet the sea; but he has come down from the Georgia hills with a momentum that is formidable indeed, and that is well demonstrated in this book." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Mr 11 '51 850w

Reviewed by Henry Cavendish

N Y Times p12 Mr 4 '51 420w

"Mr. Stokes, a native Georgian has been steeped in the lore of the Savannah since he was a young man, when he covered its waterfront for a Savannah paper. His writing, which is clear and straight, yet evocative of the grandeurs and squalors of the past, makes this one of the notable books in the series."

+ New Yorker 27:100 F 24 '51 180w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Mr 25 '51 400w

"Mr. Stokes writes in high romance and stark realism and with wisdom and understanding of what his story means. . . Mr. Stokes has laid himself open to a great many mistakes in small matters of detail; but the great sweep of his story is correct and wise." E. M. Coulter

+ Sat R of Lit 34:13 My 5 '51 650w

STOKES, WILLIAM SYLVANE. Honduras; an area study in government. 366p il $6 Univ. of Wis. press

342.7283 Honduras—Politics and government 50-10781

A detailed study of the government and political practices of Honduras. The author is professor of political science at the University of Wisconsin. An appendix gives the Constitution of Honduras of 1936; and a list of presidents, 1824 to 1949. Bibliography. Index.

"On balance, the book is a valuable addition to the slowly expanding body of literature in English on the political systems of the other American republics. A sound evaluation of the political problems of Latin America as a whole has long been hampered by the paucity of published basic data on the individual countries. This volume renders much current material on Honduras available for the first time to students in the United States." G. I. Blanksten

+ Am Pol Sci R 45:562 Je '51 700w

"Clear, concise, and considered treatment. . . This is not to say that the reviewer was completely in accord with everything in the book, for it is inevitable that in a work of this type personal tastes or attitudes will lead to some disagreement." R. E. Scott

+ Ann Am Acad 274:271 Mr '51 500w

Foreign Affairs 29:334 Ja '51 20w

"A thorough and also the only accurate volume—in either Spanish or English—on Honduran government and politics." P. R. Levin

+ Sat R of Lit 34:33 Je 16 '51 290w

"The book is a useful reference work for those interested in Central America, and is a welcome addition to the small number of case studies of Latin-American constitutions and governments."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:70 Mr '51 250w

STOKLEY, JAMES, ed. Science marches on. 331p $3.75 Washburn

504 Science 51-2170

"A selection from the more than five hundred talks that have been presented on the General Electric Science Forum since 1939. Fifty talks are included, hence only one in ten made the grade. The range is wide, running in time from the ice ages to the atomic power problems of the near future. . . They are supplemented by thumbnail biographical sketches of their authors." Library J

Booklist 47:290 Ap 15 '51

"There are pitfalls in a simplified presentation of the deep things of research. Speculations are often presented as though they were established fact, and the opinions of an expert are sometimes stated as though they were the only ones in that field and were generally accepted. In general the 50 authors have spotted these pitfalls and skillfully avoided them. Yet the lay reader will do well to keep his skepticism handy." R. C. Cowen

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ap 16 '51 320w

Kirkus 19:45 Ja 15 '51 120w

STOKLEY, JAMES—Continued

"All of the selections are pleasant reading and informative." R. R. Hawkins
+ Library J 76:710 Ap 15 '51 90w

"Most of the talks are but snapshots and the book a discursive album, revealing, entertaining, and with a faint flavor of reminiscence. Certainly it is to the credit of the WGY radio program that its scripts make such stimulating reading years after the passing radio waves have faded." Gerald Wendt
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 My 13 '51 240w

Reviewed by Myron Weiss
Sat R of Lit 34:31 Ap 28 '51 320w

STOLZ, HERBERT ROWELL, and MEEK, LOIS HAYDEN (MRS HERBERT ROWELL STOLZ). Somatic development of adolescent boys; a study of the growth of boys during the second decade of life. 557p il $9 Macmillan

612.661 Adolescence. Boys. Growth 51-10318

"This volume reports the authors' findings and conclusions based upon repeated observations of 67 boys for seven years, beginning at ages between 9½ and 12½ years. The data presented on these boys are primarily anthropometric and photographic, but include tests of muscle strength and detailed studies of sex characters. These have been obtained on each individual every six months and are presented in tables, distributions and charts of plotted increments." Am J Pub Health

"For practising physicians and any professional workers with adolescent boys, the supporting evidences presented for the wide individual differences in the ages at which the succeeding phases of orderly development occur during adolescence are worthy of careful study. However, it is the reviewer's belief that detailed study of the minor changes in the rates of progress in different measurements might be confusing and would not be helpful for practical purposes, owing to lack of knowledge regarding the health significance of these variations." H. C. Stuart
Am J Pub Health 41:1131 S '51 320w

Reviewed by M. R. Brown
School R 59:501 N '51 800w

"It may be questioned whether the material, limited to a rather small number of white boys in California, can be accepted as a sufficiently broad ground for understanding the 'child as a whole,' since it precludes the consideration of racial, environmental, climatic, and nutritional factors upon his development. With its holistic approach, which looks beyond kilograms gained and centimeters added, the book is, however, superior to those following the usual anthropometric methods."
U S Quarterly Bk R 7:201 Je '51 300w

STOLZ, MARY SLATTERY. Organdy cupcakes. 213p $2.50 Harper

51-10182

Novel for older girls about the last few weeks before graduation of three student nurses from a New York hospital. Gretchen, who has poise, beauty, and a charming personality, is the heroine.

Booklist 47:314 My 1 '51
Bookmark 10:158 Ap '51

"A good, mature story for older girls." S. M. A.
+ Horn Bk 27:188 My '51 100w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 27:196 My '51 60w
Kirkus 19:66 F 1 '51 180w

"It is by far the best 'career book' of the spring, also it is much more mature in its approach to the older teen age girl audience than was 'To Tell Your Love,' so highly praised last year." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 My 13 '51 200w

"'The Organdy Cupcakes' is witty, perceptive and mature." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p24 Ap 8 '51 170w

"Mary Stolz follows up an unusually good story of last year with an even better one... The background of the hospital with its personal equations, its politics, and its high standard of service is drawn with understanding and a touch of humor. The characters are real people who are good to know and hard to forget."
+ Sat R of Lit 34:55 My 12 '51 230w
Wis Lib Bul 47:122 My '51

STOLZ, MARY SLATTERY. The sea gulls woke me. 240p $2.50 Harper

51-7072

Novel for older girls. It is the story of Jean who had been too much loved and cared for by a doting mother. The summer she was sixteen Jean went to spend the summer at her uncle's Maine inn. Here in the company of older boys and girls Jean forgets her shyness and learns to be independent.

Booklist 48:69 O 15 '51
Bookmark 11:35 N '51

Reviewed by Lucille Pannell
Chicago Sunday Tribune p19 N 11 '51 140w

Reviewed by E. C. Ince
Christian Science Monitor p13 S 13 '51 60w
Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '51

"Jean's romance seems a bit sudden but girls with Cinderella daydreams will find it satisfying. The author has an observant eye for detail and the ability to re-create the feeling of a place." S. M. A.
Horn Bk 27:335 S '51 70w
Kirkus 19:322 Jl 1 '51 180w

Reviewed by Siri Andrews
Library J 76:2017 D 1 '51 90w

"A book to delight teen-age girls, this is the best yet of the three junior novels, or first love stories, by this writer." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 O 28 '51 200w

"This novel is simpler in construction and in theme than are Mrs. Stolz's earlier books, 'To Tell Your Love' and 'The Organdy Cupcakes,' but for that reason it may be even more popular, especially among the younger teen-agers. It has, too, the humor, the sharp awareness of character and scene which have made her one of the best present-day novelists for older girls." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p28 S 16 '51 250w
San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 11 '51 160w

"The island people are beautifully drawn. Clayton Chabot especially is characteristic of the man of Maine who is completely independent in thought and action and yet wise in knowledge of the 'outlanders' who come and go through a Maine summer. Mona, as a character, is a bit too complicated; Jean we know and understand well. The story is, however, intensely interesting." M. G. Davis
+ Sat R of Lit 34:39 O 20 '51 400w

STONE, EUGENIA. Sagebrush filly; il. by Earl Mayan. 184p $2.50 Knopf

50-10130

A Western story for boys and girls of eleven to thirteen.

Booklist 47:208 F 1 '51

"Rick's unswerving devotion to his horse, the warm kindliness of his friends, both white and Indian, the vivid feel of the western country all make this an outstanding story for young lovers of horses and the west." Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p17 Mr 4 '51 200w

"This exciting, adventure-packed story of the sagebrush and cattle country of Nevada should be of interest to all he-men of ten and up who like a long, hard and successful chase."
+ Kirkus 18:417 Ag 1 '50 210w

"A well written Western." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 F 11 '51 30w

STONE, MRS GRACE (ZARING) (ETHEL VANCE, pseud). The grotto. 249p $3 Harper 51-9445

"The heroine, Celia Thorne, struggles first against the realization of her son's homosexuality and later against the fact of it. After a good deal of unhappiness and some violence, she dies suddenly. . . This episode takes place in the south of Italy during a summer holiday." New Yorker

Booklist 47:255 Mr 15 '51

"It scarcely need be said—indeed the theme does not lend itself to popular treatment—that The Grotto displays neither profundity of insight nor technical control." Riley Hughes
Cath World 173:74 Ap '51 220w

"The subject is difficult; the handling is superb. Of the many, many novels which lately have been treating—and often sensationally exploiting—this general kind of matter, this is one which is both delicate and sound. It is a book done with care, with understanding, and with honorable restraint." Richard Sullivan
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Mr 4 '51 400w

"Grace Zaring Stone is not at her best here."
Kirkus 18:707 D 1 '50 160w

"Were it not for Celia, 'The Grotto' would be just one more well written contribution to the literature of worldly dissolution. As it is, however, Mrs. Stone shows once again in her story of Celia's conflict that she possesses, beyond sophistication, the bitter wisdom of the heart." Virgilia Peterson
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 F 18 '51 950w

"'The Grotto' is a topical novel of suspense which, this time, inevitably becomes a multidimensional portrait of a bright, worldly woman destroyed by self-delusion and her own carefully nurtured inadequacies." Leo Lerman
+ N Y Times p5 F 25 '51 550w

New Yorker 27:98 F 24 '51 80w

"There is much that must remain implicit in a story of this kind and much that must be conveyed with the utmost precision. Mrs. Stone does this admirably in a series of scenes during which the emotional tension mounts as in a play. . . 'The Grotto' is a beautifully conceived novel with scenes of rare beauty. In spite of its theme, it never offends against good taste." J. V.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Mr 25 '51 500w

"Mrs Stone's remarkable narrative gift keeps the interest mounting steadily from crisis to crisis. Enough of a background is provided for the mother-son situation to give it believability as a variant on the Oedipus theme. The people are, however, no puppets of the thesis novel." James Gray
+ Sat R of Lit 34:18 Ap 21 '51 550w

Reviewed by Marghanita Laski
Spec 187:408 S 28 '51 60w

"Miss Vance has been rather too timorous in handling this admittedly difficult theme. She is over-anxious lest she should shock the reader's sensibilities, and indulges in too many dark hints and innuendoes. Some of her writing is too intense. . . Nevertheless, the book makes an impression of sincerity."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p617 S 28 '51 200w

Wis Lib Bul 47:89 Ap '51

STONE, IRVING. The President's lady. 338p $3.50 Doubleday

Jackson, Andrew—Fiction. Jackson, Rachel (Donelson)—Fiction 51-6885

A biographical novel based on the lives of Andrew and Rachel Jackson.

Booklist 48:66 O 15 '51

Bookmark 11:34 N '51 30w

"To this reader 'The President's Lady' is not so successful as a fictionalized biografy as it might have been because, despite its minuteness of detail of hourly living, neither Rachel nor Andrew Jackson emerges from its pages as a living human being." Fanny Butcher
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 S 30 '51 330w

"The story is told without fireworks or melodrama. Mr. Stone could have wracked the emotions, could have let himself go on local color, but he chose a gentler flow of narration that is steadily engrossing. The reasonableness and restraint of the treatment make his Rachel and Andrew Jackson seem the real ones. Over the inherent tragedy of their tale lies the glow of unquestioning devotion and good companionship." W. K. Rugg
+ Christian Science Monitor p13 S 27 '51 430w

Cleveland Open Shelf p28 N '51

Kirkus 19:447 Ag 15 '51 310w

Reviewed by W. K. Harrison
Library J 76:1421 S 15 '51 50w

"No writer of fiction could desire more fascinating and romantic characters than Mr. Stone draws from history for this biographical novel." Mary Ross
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 S 30 '51 700w

"The Stone novels include no fictional characters. They are always soundly researched. Yet, unavoidably the author reserves the right to 're-create' dialogue. Besides the generic flaw, the present story suffers from others all its own. It fails to make either Andrew or Rachel seem a human being of real stature and individuality. And, fatally, it tries to see Andrew Jackson's public life through the eyes of Rachel, who was a passive spectator at best." Richard Match
N Y Times p4 S 30 '51 430w

"What happened to Rachel Jackson is a matter of historical record. Mr. Stone's concern is with the meaning of what happened. His portrayal of Rachel is romantic and chivalrous. Her story is more subdued than that of Jessie Fremont, its inflections more on the quiet side. But it is a fine piece of imaginative craftsmanship, persuasive and illuminating." Jane Voiles
+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 7 '51 550w

"Those who expect to find anything new in Mr. Stone's version of the love story will be disappointed; it has been told before, and well, as in Marquis James's excellent biography of Andrew Jackson. But it is Old Hickory who dominates the other books, while Mr. Stone's central figure is Rachel, a portrait done full-length, con amore, and in fullest detail. . . The story moves, even though it could stand a bit of editing here and there, and is filled with the drama and the personalities of one of the most exciting periods of all American history." Herschel Brickell
+ Sat R of Lit 34:13 S 29 '51 450w

Time 58:122 O 8 '51 350w

STONG, PHILIP DUFFIELD. Forty pounds of gold; il. by Arthur Shilstone. 218p $2.50 Doubleday 51-12485

Story of two young men from Iowa who in 1850 fight their way to California in search of their 'forty pounds of gold.'

Booklist 48:50 O 1 '51

"Here is a lark of a book, quick, pungent, and yet relaxed, a small but well packed yarn of outdoor America of a hundred years ago." H. T. Kane
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 14 '51 390w

"A story that should have a plus sale for young adults."
+ Kirkus 19:305 Je 15 '51 220w

"Phil Stong has written a book quite unlike his previous novels, although he is still concerned a bit with Iowa. While he creates a factual background that seems authentic, he is not yet at home in the light adventurous, historical romance. His characters talk more like today's city folk, than outdoor men of one hundred years ago, and even their ambitions seem curiously modern." E. L. Acken

STONG, P. D.—Continued
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 S 16 '51 270w

"Set in a slightly different key, 'Forty Pounds of Gold' could almost be billed as an item for the juvenile shelf: as it stands it should appeal to young and old alike. Written in a light style that hits recurrent seams of humor just under the surface, it is a refreshing mixture of romance and adventure." H. C.
+ N Y Times p20 S 16 '51 280w
San Francisco Chronicle p24 O 28 '51 250w

"Mr. Stong must have written this one between yawns. It doesn't seem possible that a skilled writer could take a couple of sharpshooting Iowa farmboys, Mississippi steamboating, Panamanian pirates, the California goldrush, and a brace of man-hungry girls, and come up with literary phenobarbital, yet the proof is in the reading." Charles Lee
— Sat R of Lit 34:36 S 1 '51 300w
Springf'd Republican p14c O 28 '51 120w

STONG, PHILIP DUFFIELD. Hirum, the hillbilly; pictures by Kurt Wiese. 104p $2.75 Dodd 51-14201

The adventures of Hirum, an Ozark mule, telling how he saved the family he worked for—and liked—from being fleeced by two smart city fellows.

Reviewed by Marge Lyon
Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 N 11 '51 150w

"A good book to read aloud or to be enjoyed by oneself." A. B. Martin
+ Library J 77:68 Ja 1 '52 80w

"A slight story, this is actually a paean in praise of the simple life, Ozark style, complete with square dances, country cooking, fox-hunting (in the backwoods manner) and colorful conversation. It's all a little too good to be true, but no one is supposed to take it seriously—not with Hirum around." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p48 N 18 '51 140w
Springf'd Republican p28A N 25 '51 70w

STORCH, HENRY HERMAN, and others. Fischer-Tropsch and related syntheses; including a summary of theoretical and applied contact catalysis. 610p il $9 Wiley
545.9 Chemistry, Organic—Synthesis 51-3810

"Methods of chemical synthesis covered in this book pertain mainly to the production of alcohols and aliphatic hydrocarbons from carbon monoxide. The most important application is in the production of liquid fuels. Prior to World War II, the German chemical industry—as might be expected in a petroleum short country—was the farthest advanced in both the understanding and the application of these synthetic methods. . . Largely based on information obtained from Germany by organized teams of British and American investigators after the close of the War." Library J

Reviewed by R. N. Pease
Am Chem Soc J 73:5923 D '51 330w
Reviewed by A. W. Weitkamp
Chem & Eng N 29:3770 S 10 '51 250w
Chem Eng 58:265 Je '51 1350w

"It is written on a professional level and is a substantial contribution to both the knowledge of fuel synthesis and the knowledge of contact catalysis." R. R. Hawkins
+ Library J 76:1135 Jl '51 110w
N Y New Tech Bks 36:52 Jl '51

"The work is well documented, and is illustrated with numerous drawings, tables, formulas, and graphs. There is a six-page name index, and a ten-page subject index. Although intended primarily for those working in the synthetic liquid fuel field, the book will be of interest to a much larger group."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:324 S '51 190w

STOREY, GRAHAM. Reuters; the story of a century of news-gathering; foreword by Lord Layton [Eng title: Reuters' century]. 276p il $4 Chanticleer
070.4312 Reuter, Paul Julius, baron de. Reuters' limited 51-12805

A history of the beginnings and development of the Reuters news agency thru its hundred years of existence. Photographs. Index.

Booklist 48:154 Ja 1 '52
Bookmark 11:33 N '51 20w
Reviewed by Gilbert Twiss
Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 O 14 '51 340w

"The book is the careful history of business genius and of a significant century of the gathering and transmitting of international news as an international force in the history of its time. It is the revealing and well constructed tapestry of the global phase of a free journalism that strives today to make righteousness readable, government understandable and democracy attainable." Roscoe Ellard
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 D 23 '51 700w

"Frankly a commissioned portrait, published to mark Reuters' centenary year, the book was written by Graham Storey, a Cambridge don, partly from the agency's archives. If it suffers from its pious purpose, it also profits from its authenticity. Storey has struck a skillful balance between dramatization and scholarly synthesis." Crerar Harris
+ — N Y Times p34 O 14 '51 550w

"A well-proportioned history of the whole hundred years." W. P.
+ Spec 187:72 Jl 13 '51 180w
Times [London] Lit Sup p431 Jl 13 '51 750w

STOUT, MELVILLE BIGHAM. Basic electrical measurements. 504p il $7.75; to schools $5.75 Prentice-Hall
621.37 Electric measurements 50-10799

"An introduction to the more important techniques and instruments for making electrical measurements. . . More attention is paid to the principles of electrical measurements and the mathematical computations involved than to descriptions of commercially available instruments. However, there is a fair amount of material of the latter kind, including photographs of instruments." (Library J) Index.

"The engineer in industry who makes only occasional use of electrical measuring instruments but then needs to understand how they function should find the book useful." R. R. Hawkins
Library J 76:120 Ja 15 '51 150w

"The primary purpose of the book is to train college students who are majoring in physics or electrical engineering in the fundamentals of electrical measurements, but electricians, graduate engineers and other technical workers who need occasional information on methods or instruments should find it useful for reference."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 36:7 Ja '51

STOUT, REX. Curtains for three. 247p $2.50 Viking 51-938

Three detective stories featuring Nero Wolfe. Contents: The gun with wings; Bullet for one; Disguise for murder.

Kirkus 19:13 Ja 1 '51 70w

"All good, sound plots, and well rounded, too. Rex Stout is one of those rare people who can give you full value in a novelette."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ap 1 '51 160w
Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p27 F 25 '51 170w
New Yorker 27:104 F 24 '51 100w

"Mr. Stout, one of our ablest performers in the novelette length, has turned three more neat tricks in this volume." L. G. Offord
+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 F 25 '51 90w

"No stitches dropped—but wool thin."
Sat R of Lit 34:63 Ap 14 '51 60w

STOUT, REX. Murder by the book [a Nero Wolfe novel]. 248p $2.50 Viking 51-13498

Detective story.

Kirkus 19:457 Ag 15 '51 70w

"This is the nineteenth volume in the chronicles of Nero Wolfe and a pleasing addition to the canon, although Archie and Nero are both tamer than they have been, Archie less acrid and Nero less rude." James Sandoe
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 O 28 '51 120w

"It's an odd and interesting approach; the solution is at once plausible and surprising (if not quite deductively watertight). Wolfe and Archie are both in top form and Stout has rarely done a better novelistic job of putting flesh on assorted minor characters. The insatiate fans will be happier than ever, and anyone who's been wavering in his allegiance to Stout and Wolfe, should come back and try this one." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p30 O 28 '51 170w

"Not one of Mr. Stout's major efforts (too much complexity, perhaps, and not quite enough humor), but still a reasonably spirited and entertaining piece of work."
New Yorker 27:152 O 13 '51 200w

"Solid sending." L. G. Offord
+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 28 '51 70w

"Among his best." Sergeant Cuff
+ Sat R of Lit 34:24 N 10 '51 40w

Springf'd Republican p14C O 28 '51 60w

STOUT, WILLIAM BUSHNELL. So away I went! 336p il $4 Bobbs

B or 92 Inventors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Airplanes 51-10108

Reminiscences of an inventor who pioneered in many fields, among them toys, airplanes, automobiles and trailers. Illustrated. Index.

Booklist 47:293 Ap 15 '51

Reviewed by H. L. Smith
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 S 9 '51 400w

"This book is really only an outline of the long and interesting life Bill Stout has lived. Yet it is a readable outline. It is the story of a man who has never believed it wise to be guided by the dead hand of tradition." Frederick Graham
+ N Y Times p7 Je 17 '51 300w

STOVER, HERBERT ELISHA. Powder mission. 278p $3 Dodd
51-12111

Historical novel of the American revolution dealing with an expedition down the rivers from Fort Pitt to New Orleans to get gold and powder for Washington's army.

"The action of this novel moves over the great interior wilderness. . . The background figures are drawn from history. There is a love story, but it is not too stormy for credence and it does not eclipse the military action which is the novel's substance. Into a sweeping picture of the Revolutionary period, Mr. Stover has woven a tale of romance and adventure." Walter Havighurst
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 19 '51 300w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ja 13 '52 80w

"As in his earlier novels, Mr. Stover has taken a number of obscure incidents of the Revolution and knit them into a fast-moving, readable yarn." Hoffman Birney
+ N Y Times p14 Ag 26 '51 140w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 O 21 '51 200w

"This is one of those novels that may best be classified as circulation-library-historical, which means that it makes a very pleasant and glancing use of history to embellish a romantic adventure story." N. L. Rothman
+ Sat R of Lit 34:35 S 22 '51 290w

"Mr. Stover is the author of 'Men in Buckskin' and 'Song of the Susquehanna'. He is to be congratulated on having written stirring adventure tales, of genuine historic value, which yet do not violate the canons of good ethics and good taste." H. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p14A S 2 '51 160w

STRAIN, MRS FRANCES (BRUCE). But you don't understand; a dramatic series of teenage predicaments. 217p $3 Appleton

136.7354 Adolescence 50-9379

"Short stories about 12 representative young people in critical situations emphasize the need for insight and sympathy, while suggested interpretations are added." Bookmark

Bookmark 10:31 N '50 20w

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '50

"Really a must for parents and teachers—for everyone working with young people. Don't hide this from the teen-ager either, since he may find here his own problems aired for the benefit of himself and his parents."
+ Kirkus 18:478 Ag 15 '50 210w

"Coming from someone who knows young people as well as Mrs. Strain does, these stories cannot but impress those of us who are concerned with helping adolescents gain a better understanding of their needs and desires." Margaret De Westfelt
+ Survey 87:184 Ap '51 350w

"Readable for the teen-agers as well as the parents, and in each case indicating ways out of the difficulty."
+ Wis Lib Bul 46:16 O '50

STRANGE, JOHN STEPHEN, pseud. See Tillett, D. S.

STRANSKY, JAN. East wind over Prague. 245p $3 Random house

943.7 Czechoslovakia—Politics and government. Communism—Czechoslovakia 51-342

"The author belongs to a highly respected Czech family whose members have distinguished themselves for several generations both in politics and in publishing. Little more than a boy when the Germans entered Prague in 1939 he escaped to England, served as secretary to the Czechoslovak Prime Minister in London throughout the war and in 1945 returned home via Moscow. . . Based on the experiences of his friends and of himself, his book is less concerned with history than with a psychological study of the conditions which were created by the Nazi occupation and by the war." Times [London] Lit Sup

Booklist 47:217 F 15 '51

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 11 '51 450w

Foreign Affairs 30:164 O '51 30w

Kirkus 18:719 D 1 '50 150w

Reviewed by A. J. P. Taylor
Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 27 '50 220w

"The creeping, corrosive, cynically brutal methods which Communists can use to subjugate a civilized Western nation and its people are set forth eloquently here by a young man who saw it happen to Czechoslovakia, and sees it threatening the rest of us. . . Mr. Stransky cites case after case of acquaintances —he writes of them with compassion if with

STRANSKY, JAN—Continued
distaste—who took the fatal step, and found themselves inextricably involved in the system." Fitzhugh Turner
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 F 4 '51 850w

"Stransky tells his story convincingly in the form of personal experience, anecdotes and case histories." D. A. Schmidt
+ N Y Times p6 Ja 28 '51 650w

New Yorker 27:110 F 17 '51 180w

"Mr. Stransky has written a book that is strongly anti-Communist and terrifying. But not because of its account of the methods employed by Communists to grab and hold power. It is the non-Communists, the victims, who awaken a sense of real dread in the reader. They are so human, so all-too-human; in their bewilderment, weariness and obstinate quest for security such easy prey to the Pied Piper of Communism." Eva Putnam
San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 4 '51 1000w

"As an attack on the cynicism of Russian-Communist power politics, whether directed against a single village farmer or a popular national party, and as a report on the instability, confusion, and amorality of much of Europe's non-Communist population this book glows with conviction. It manages to cope with a complex, inhuman problem in a way that is consistently human and simple." Budd Schulberg
+ Sat R of Lit 34:35 Ja 13 '51 1600w

"A brilliant picture of the psychological atmosphere obtaining in the Occupied countries after the war, and it is a terrible indictment of the means which the Communists use to turn free men into Communist sheep." S. G. Duff
Spec 184:218 F 17 '50 130w

"Mr. Stransky does not spare his countrymen, nor does he raise false hopes for the future. His task is to explain the attitude of his sorely tried people, and he accomplishes it with a sincerity which keeps a fair balance between high principle and low opportunism and between determination and weakness. . . This is an interesting and most disturbing book which should be read by all who have not experienced the horrors of a foreign occupation and, more particularly perhaps, by those professors and scientists who seek to interpret Soviet intentions solely by theory."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p182 Mr 24 '50 900w

Reviewed by R. J. Kerner
Yale R n s 40:759 summer '51 210w

STRATEGICUS, pseud. See O'Neill, H. C.

STRATHMANN, ERNEST ALBERT. Sir Walter Ralegh; a study in Elizabethan skepticism. 292p $3.75 Columbia univ. press

B or 92 Raleigh, Sir Walter, 1552?-1618. Skepticism 51-10319

"It seems strange to us today that a man's atheism should be determined by his belief about the size of Noah's ark, about the date of the creation and age of the world, about the credence to be given to astrology. . . The age of Elizabeth was such an age, and Sir Walter Ralegh was the accused atheist and skeptic. Strathmann has undertaken a study 'to reexamine in their Elizabethan setting the charges of atheism which Sir Walter Ralegh's contemporaries made against him and to survey anew his religious and philosophical beliefs.'" (Crozer Q) Index.

"Excellent and thoroughgoing investigation." R. E. Keighton
+ Crozer Q 28:364 O '51 550w

"As biography, this work should be definitive. It could, perhaps, have been given greater breadth if it had gone farther beyond the mind and opinions of Ralegh to try to describe the Elizabethan mind. Professor Strathmann has, it is true, been at pains to show the range of current opinion on the topics he discusses, but a kind of spectrum of Elizabethan thought is still needed."
U S Quarterly Bk R 7:229 S '51 250w

STRAUSS, BERTRAM W., and STRAUSS, FRANCES. New ways to better meetings; drawings by Thomas E. Hutchens. 177p il $2.95 Viking

374.24 Public meetings 51-2318

A manual for members and chairmen of group meetings which explains how leaders can "get the members of a group, small or large, to participate; how to reach decisions without straitjacket Rules of Order; how to use the valuable tool of role-playing; how the small meeting works best; how to involve an audience in a large meeting; how to get the best results from a big conference." (Publisher's note)

Reviewed by J. M. Wisan
Am J Pub Health 41:1302 O '51 140w

Booklist 47:303 My 1 '51

Bookmark 10:183 My '51 20w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '51

"The material is challenging to those already aware of the problem and willing to work towards meeting it. But the authors fail in dramatizing and humanizing their presentation, in giving it form that holds the interest of those who are lukewarm to the idea, or the possibility, of making meetings productive on all levels. Certainly a book to call to attention of local organizations."
+ — Kirkus 19:93 F 1 '51 180w

"We have long needed this presentation and we are fortunate that this is completely satisfactory. Urged for most collections." R. E. Kingery
+ Library J 76:325 F 15 '51 120w

"In getting their story across, the authors exhibit several welcome virtues. They write with an eye on the Flesch Index, avoiding technical jargon. Historical background is provided to give added meaning to the main topics. There is enough how-to-do-it to make the volume of practical use. . . In spite of the fact that it is cursory in its treatment of a few topics, this volume is a very readable overview of some of the newer techniques developed in the field of group leadership." L. A. Allen
+ — Management R 40:590 S '51 650w

"The Strausses have written what I believe to be the first popular exposition of the ideas suggested by group dynamics. The explanations of the new meeting procedures are simple and vivid; the psychological reasons for the effectiveness of the techniques are not gone into deeply, but are sufficiently indicated so that even a skeptical reader will feel impelled to try them out at his next PTA meeting." S. I. Hayakawa
+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 13 '51 360w

Reviewed by G. A. Panichas
Springf'd Republican p12C Ap 22 '51 160w

STREATFEILD, NOEL. Osbert; il. by Susanne Suba. 30p $1.25 Rand McNally

"'Happiness could be felt like a soft wind' on the day of Aunt Cathy's wedding, but the children were terribly upset, for Father decreed that Osbert, a strange looking part-poodle, must be sent to a neighbor's for the wedding. The children's combined savings and an expert hairdresser saved the situation." Library J

Reviewed by E. C. Ince
Christian Science Monitor p11 O 11 '51 40w

Reviewed by J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews
+ Horn Bk 27:408 D '51 100w

Kirkus 19:433 Ag 15 '51 90w

"Streatfeild knows how to write, and even this slight story has charm and humor." Phyllis Fenner
+ Library J 76:1572 O 1 '51 80w

"It is all rather silly, but also rather charming." L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p30 O 7 '51 50w

"This story by the author of the popular 'Shoes' series has charm so far as it goes but it is so slight that it seems like a fragment rather than a whole. Not even Susanne Suba's stylish illustrations can give it real substance. There is a cut-out toy figure of Osbert in the back of the book." E. L. B.
N Y Times p22 Ag 19 '51 80w

STREATFEILD, NOEL. Skating shoes; il. by Richard Floethe. 245p $2.75 Random house 51-13118

Story of two English girls, Harriet who had to take up skating to gain strength, even tho it was a family struggle to get the means for it, and wealthy Lalla, a lonely child who was being pushed by an ambitious aunt. The friendship of the two girls had a good effect on each of them. Grades 5 to 8.

Booklist 48:110 N 15 '51
Bookmark 11:35 N '51

"The contrast between Harriet's poor but happy home life and Lalla's wealthy but lonely one is well drawn, as is each and every character—a varied and interesting lot—in this well written, wise and humorous story." P. G.
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p41 D 2 '51 170w

Reviewed by J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews
Horn Bk 27:413 D '51 100w
Kirkus 19:436 Ag 15 '51 150w

"Worth-while story for ages 10-12." A. M. Wetherell
+ Library J 77:68 Ja 1 '52 80w

"The talk here about professional skating is just enough to lure any girl who loves to skate, and to hint at the real drudgery that must be endured to be a star. New York City children can see girls like Lalla and Harriet at the Radio City rink, but their dreams and efforts go on in every village with a frozen pond." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 N 11 '51 270w

"Like all Miss Streatfeild's 'Shoe' stories, this is more than just an amusing and casual tale of English family life. There is plenty of fun and action." F. N. Chrystie
+ N Y Times p28 N 11 '51 140w

"An amusing and absorbing story." K. T. Kinkead
+ New Yorker 27:176 D 1 '51 60w

STREESEMAN, ADELE EMILY. You're human, too! 206p $3 Coward-McCann
616.8 Psychology, Applied 50-10893

"Dr. Streeseman possesses not only scientific mastery but deep human sympathy and understanding. . . Making a careful distinction between the job of the analyst and the religionist, she points out that it would be as futile for the former to free the patient from the neurotic obsessions that restrict his powers as it would be for a mechanic to adjust an automobile if there were no place for it to go. She deals with the whole being, bringing in the psychosomatic approach which is increasingly important. There are fifteen chapters covering everyday problems, in any one of which one may recognize at least a part of oneself." (Churchman) No index.

"All can find help here; those familiar with the subject will rejoice in a fresh and rewarding approach. Strongly recommended; give it to yourself and your friends." J. H. Titus
+ Churchman 165:17 Ja 1 '51 210w

"Some highly interesting casework establishes the patterns here for a study which if popular, is more scientific than the title would indicate, and which establishes the importance of psychotherapy—not self-administered."
+ Kirkus 18:650 O 15 '50 110w

"It is a fact that psychoanalysis intrigues everybody. Hence, librarians are frequently asked: What's a good, elementary book on the subject? I would now recommend You're Human, Too!" J. M. Scherr
+ Library J 75:1902 N 1 '50 140w

"A readable and helpful book on many aspects of human life. [The author's] viewpoint is strictly Freudian but her approach is a human and a lively one." Lorine Pruette
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Mr 4 '51 350w

"Addicts of popular psychology books have learned to be wary of such items bearing a breathless exclamation point after the title. Dr. Streeseman's highly readable and absorbing book, free from patronizing, is the exception. The author is a physician and psychoanalyst stressing the psychosomatic approach." I. B.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 D 24 '50 170w

Reviewed by E. H. Johnson
Survey 87:185 Ap '51 550w

STREET, CECIL JOHN CHARLES (JOHN RHODE, pseud). Affair of the substitute doctor [Eng title: Dr Goodwood's locum]. 242p $2.50 Dodd 51-11301

Detective story.

Booklist 48:14 S 1 '51

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
N Y Times p19 Jl 22 '51 60w

"If you like your mysteries solemn, transparent and almost static, here you are." L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p23 Jl 1 '51 70w

"Quality unflagging." Kathleen Sproul
+ Sat R of Lit 34:45 Jl 21 '51 50w

STREET, JAMES HOWELL. High calling. 308p $3 Doubleday
51-11225

A sequel to The Gauntlet (Book Review Digest 1945) taking up the story of London Wingo, twenty years after his wife's death. This story opens with London's return to Linden, Missouri, to become the pastor of a small Baptist church in a suburb.

Booklist 47:382 Jl 1 '51
Bookmark 10:233 Jl '51 50w

"James Street's first novel about London Wingo, 'The Gauntlet,' had no admirer more ardent than this reviewer. It would not, then, have taken much of a sequel to please me, but the unhappy fact is that 'The High Calling' is pretty juiceless fare." V. P. Hass
— Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 Jl 8 '51 470w

Reviewed by E. L. Snodgrass
Christian Century 68:895 Ag 1 '51 250w
Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '51
Kirkus 19:233 My 1 '51 270w

"Entertaining episodes are well scattered among more serious incidents. Clear characterization, smooth writing and careful attention to detail, raise the story well above the average. Recommended." R. P. Tubby
+ Library J 76:960 Je 1 '51 80w

"'The High Calling' is a well told and sympathetic story."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Je 17 '51 140w

"'The High Calling' is a good novel, oversweet at times but generally quite palatable. As usual, Mr. Street is firmly in control of both his theme and his colorful dramatis personae. Like 'The Gauntlet,' this novel is superior to his historical fiction. It is worth noting that the author has been a Baptist minister in his time, as well as a journalist turned novelist." H. F. West
+ N Y Times p22 Je 10 '51 360w
San Francisco Chronicle p25 S 30 '51 140w

"This discriminating, eloquent, heart-stirring, challenging novel is, I think, the climax of James Street's preacher books." D. A. Poling
+ Sat R of Lit 34:18 Jl 7 '51 550w
Wis Lib Bul 47:167 Je '51

STRICKLAND, RUTH GERTRUDE. Language arts in the elementary school. 370p il $3.75 Heath

372.61 English language—Study and teaching 51-9973

"The relationship between language and other aspects of child development is carefully developed here. Problems of boys and girls who deviate from the usual patterns are analyzed, and helpful ways of meeting their needs are suggested. There are bibliographies at the end of each chapter." School & Society

"Everyone interested in the language arts as a single pattern of interrelated abilities will find the well-written and sound presentation of this volume worth while, not only for reference use, but for consecutive reading. It is a foundation book to be studied before one consults volumes dealing more elaborately with a particular phase of communication. Because of the concrete, realistic, and up-to-date character of Strickland's contribution, it is of inestimable value as a college textbook and as a stimulating guide to teachers, supervisors, principals, and administrators in service. The reviewer recommends it highly." Gertrude Whipple

+ El School J 52:55 S '51 700w

School & Society 73:174 Mr 17 '51 40w

STRODE, GEORGE KING, ed. Yellow fever [by the editor] and John C. Bugher [and others; prepared by the International health division of the Rockefeller foundation]. 710p il maps $9.50 McGraw

616.928 Yellow fever 51-10630

"Some 30 years ago the International Health Division of the Rockefeller Foundation assigned itself an overwhelming task—the conquest of yellow fever. . . The work of the Foundation in the field of yellow fever control has continued unremittingly down to the present day. This remarkable volume of over 700 pages is a summary of the results that were achieved by the Foundation staff in its researches on yellow fever, in the laboratory and in the field." (Am J Pub Health) Bibliography. Index.

"The story is told in a simple, straightforward way. As it unfolds, it becomes an epic of modern medical history. . . The text is beautifully illustrated, well indexed, and has a complete bibliography of yellow fever control throughout the world during the past 30 years. It is a great book." W. G. Smillie

+ Am J Pub Health 41:1134 S '51 550w

Reviewed by T. H. Maren

+ N Y Times p27 Je 10 '51 400w

STRODE, HUDSON. Denmark is a lovely land. 304p pl $4.75 Harcourt

914.89 Denmark—Description and travel 51-6957

A travelog which is a mixture of history, social life and customs, and a picture of present-day Denmark. Includes a chapter on the Danish author Baroness Blixen. No index.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic 189:85 Ja '52 220w

Booklist 48:83 N 1 '51

Bookmark 11:33 N '51 20w

Reviewed by J. F. Nims

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 D 16 '51 280w

"If you cannot spend several months in Denmark, make the visit by way of 'Denmark Is a Lovely Land.' You will find yourself uncommonly intelligent on the subject of Denmark and you will almost believe you have actually been there. Thank you, Hudson Strode." Edith Prudden

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 N 1 '51 500w

"The whole effect is a pleasant tour with an agreeable companion."

+ Kirkus 19:593 O 1 '51 140w

"Highly recommended." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 76:1702 O 15 '51 70w

"Mr. Strode has a happy technique of telling much and keeping the narrative going without too much exposition. . . Good travelers who bring whole nations back alive in books practice an art in the public service." Ernestine Evans

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 O 28 '51 500w

"Strode writes like a true lyric poet of the beautiful, mild Danish countryside, of such a lovely and unique spot as the miniature castle of Liselund. . . Strode's realistic account of the famous folk high schools is one of the best and most complete. He is equally vivid when he tells the familiar story of the marvelous transformation of the naturally poor soil of Denmark into valuable farmland. His report on the Danish provision for a safe and satisfying old age for its citizens is newer to most readers." D. C. Fisher

+ N Y Times p12 O 21 '51 500w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p27 N 4 '51 800w

Sat R of Lit 34:38 N 24 '51 120w

School & Society 74:367 D 8 '51 20w

Wis Lib Bul 47:252 N '51

STRONG, JAY V. Employee benefit plans in operation. 348p $5 Bur. of nat. affairs

331.25 Employees' benefit plans

"A report based on a survey of plans in over nine hundred companies, of the many problems facing management in setting up or extending financial provisions for employee retirement, group life insurance, disability, hospitalization. The careful analysis shows trends in organization and methods of financing, and views of executives based upon experience. Considerable attention is given to attitudes of employees and labor unions, and to inclusion of such welfare provisions in collective bargaining." Library J

"Valuable material on a live subject." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 76:412 Mr 1 '51 80w

"Jay V. Strong in this book has performed a real service to business and labor leaders in presenting in such a clear and understandable way the essentials of an employee benefit program. He unravels some of the mysteries and presents them in a simple and comprehensible manner." A. F. Kindall

+ Management R 40:245 Ap '51 800w

"Although intended primarily for business executives and union officials, the study should be of considerable interest to scholars in the field of insurance and related subjects."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:191 Je '51 220w

STRONG, LEONARD ALFRED GEORGE. Sacred river; an approach to James Joyce. 160p $2.75 Pellegrini & Cudahy

B or 92 Joyce, James 51-1248

"The reference of the title is to the River Alph in 'Kubla Khan' which had its course through caverns 'down to a sunless sea': the unconscious. . . After providing a short sketch of Joyce's life Mr. Strong describes his subject's chief preoccupations at greater length: his love of music, feelings for language, interest in metaphysics, study of Shakespeare, Swift, and Blake. He gives analyses of what happens in the enigmatic works, and in a more general way discusses psychological and psychic phenomena and the difference between them. After that the plot thickens, with Mr. Strong decidedly taking up a transcendentalist position —one, that is, in keeping with what he regards as Joyce's ethical intention in both 'Ulysses' and 'Finnegan's Wake.' " Manchester Guardian

"Described as 'an approach to James Joyce,' Mr. Strong's 'Sacred River' is one of the most readable, as well as one of the most reasonable, books on this highly involved, highly controversial subject." J. M. Flynn

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Mr 18 '51 400w

"Mr. Strong's standing as a poet, critic and Dubliner well fits him with the discernment necessary for the task he undertakes in The Sacred River. Were I convinced of the value of Joyce's experiments in the effort to evolve a literary treatment, at once timeless and allied with the age, I might view the entirety of this book with more interest. As it is, the time appears to have moved away from Joyce and his timelessness still remains the product of partisan conjecture." Barry Byrne

Commonweal 54:173 My 25 '51 550w

Reviewed by Theodore Enslin

Crozer Q 28:250 Jl '51 1300w

"An acceptable and illuminating little book." Paul Bloomfield

+ Manchester Guardian p4 D 20 '49 240w

Nation 172:353 Ap 14 '51 50w

Reviewed by Nathan Halper

New Repub 122:19 Mr 27 '50 600w

"Of the welter of words that have been published about James Joyce and his life's work, there has been no study more informative, more lucid and more intelligent than 'The Sacred River.' Although Mr. Strong appears not to have known Joyce personally, nevertheless as a judge of his production he is probably better qualified than any other writer who has so far attempted to plumb the depths and obscurities of 'Ulysses' and 'Finnegans Wake.'" James Stern

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ap 15 '51 550w

Reviewed by James Slocum

N Y Times p4 Jl 1 '51 500w

"It is his desire to understand, and his willingness to suspend judgment until he has understood, which distinguishes Mr. Strong's book from a vast deal of lesser criticism of Joyce. And yet it is a markedly personal book. The approach is Mr. Strong's approach, and if you don't like it you can lump it. But it is permissible to protest when at times it stops short at the threshold of Finnegans Wake. When Mr. Strong can spread such enlightenment in carrying his understanding of Shakespeare or of tenor song right into the recesses of that forbidding mansion, why, when writing of Joyce's philosophical preoccupations and of his treatment of the time factor, does he leave us at the door with only a perfunctory pat on the shoulder?" Walter Taplin

Spec 183:782 D 2 '49 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p74 F 3 '50 800w

STRONG, PATIENCE. Glory of the garden; front. by Edward Steichen. 189p $2.50 Dutton

635.9 Gardening Agr51-23

A day by day description of an English garden, thruout one whole year. It is not a how-to-do-it book, but there is information for gardeners.

Bookmark 10:153 Ap '51 20w

"There's tranquility here that should soothe troubled hearts in troubled days."

+ Kirkus 19:43 Ja 15 '51 130w

"Many librarians will hesitate to add another volume to that already long and little-used array of books typified by such titles as 'My Garden in Spring,' 'Everyday in My Garden,' etc. Here is one, however, which for true beauty of writing merits the attention of both gardeners and non-gardeners." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 76:110 Ja 15 '51 130w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ja 27 '51 400w

Springf'd Republican p8C F 18 '51 240w

STROUD, DOROTHY. Capability Brown; with an introd. by Christopher Hussey. 224p il $12.50 Scribner

B or 92 Brown, Lancelot. Landscape gardening [51-4605]

The life and work of the famous English landscape gardener, Lancelot Brown, is the subject of this volume. Born in 1716 in Northumberland, he began his career as a garden boy, and rose gradually to be England's leading garden consultant. Copiously illustrated. Index.

Kirkus 19:417 Ag 1 '51 130w

Library J 77:52 Ja 1 '52 130w

Manchester Guardian p3 F 6 '51 190w

"A really excellent monograph on Capability, a careful, direct, pleasantly written work with splendid illustrations. Mr. Hussey contributes a useful critical introduction." John Summerson

+ New Statesman & Nation 41:191 F 17 '51 950w

"In her easy style Miss Dorothy Stroud unfolds the satisfactory life-story of the man preeminently responsible for fashioning the English landscape in the familiar manner it retained at least right up to a generation ago. . . Mr. Hussey's admirable introduction should rather be read after the text than before it. . . Time and Miss Stroud have at last done Capability's creative genius ample justice." James Lees-Milne

+ Spec 185:696 My 25 '51 800w

"This scholarly, detailed, and highly enjoyable account of Brown's career is a valuable addition to the history of taste, in that new material is used and a chronological sequence of his achievement is established. The production of the book and the quality of the 120 plates are excellent."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p51 Ja 26 '51 900w

STRUNK, WILLIAM OLIVER, ed. Source readings in music history; from classical antiquity through the romantic era [musical examples by Gordon Mapes]. 919p $8.50 Norton

780.9 Music—History and criticism 50-10992

Selections from the world's writings about music, from Plato's study of the function of music in the ideal state, down to the nineteenth century critical writings by Berlioz, Liszt and Wagner. No twentieth century writings are included. Index.

"For the serious reader only. Rich in annotations and bibliography; editorially above reproach." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 76:866 My 15 '51 110w

"In view of the thorough scholarship of the editor the question of accuracy need hardly be raised. Naturally, in a work of this size, a few oversights are unavoidable but they are negligible beside the great achievement. The Source Readings are a model of what an intelligent and well-informed anthology can and should be, and will doubtless become indispensible as a one-volume library of musical documents and as a work of reference." M. F. Bukofzer

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 8:517 Je '51 850w

"The span of subjects and viewpoints included in this distinguished collection is staggeringly wide; the ordering of them is clear and helpful; and the translations do a minimum of violence. This is the one basic book in the English language for everyone who wants to see and understand music in the largest context of cultural history." Cecil Smith

+ New Repub 123:20 D 18 '50 180w

"This is not only a first attempt, but an achievement of heroic proportions, carried out with unflagging scholarship, felicitous style, rare discrimination, and eminently practical results. Moreover, it is distinguished by a quality all too often absent in our literature on music: an awareness of the humanity that is behind this large bouquet of writings." P. H. Lang

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 D 24 '50 1400w

"Mr. Strunk guides the reader with the surest of hands and the most consumate knowledge of the vast terrain through all the later phases of music and musical opinion." Ernest Newman

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 7 '51 750w

"Disclaiming intention to produce a musical Bartlett, Professor Strunk has assembled a large, informative, learned, and often amusing

STRUNK, W. O.—Continued
compendium which will be used certainly as a musical Bartlett. He did the work, and lazier men are going to quote from the result as if he had not. His book will enlarge the erudition of critics and teachers, many of whom will be grateful for the chance to cite Pietro Cerone as if they had heard of him before the publication of these source readings; and some may acknowledge their gratitude." C. G. Burke
+ Sat R of Lit 34:20 Ja 27 '51 900w

STRUVE, GLEB. Soviet Russian literature, 1917-50. 414p $5 Univ. of Okla. press
891.709 Russian literature—History and criticism 51-3030

"This book is based on [the author's] Soviet Russian Literature, first published in Great Britain in 1935. A new edition of it, with a postscript covering the years 1935-43, appeared in 1944 under the title 25 years of Soviet Russian Literature. In the present version the story of post-Revolutionary literature in Russia has been brought up to the year 1950. Large portions of the earlier text have been revised, both stylistically and through the inclusion of a great deal of new material in the part dealing with the first decade of Soviet literature. The arrangement of the book has been considerably altered, new sections have been added, and some material has been suppressed." (Foreword) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by L. T. Heron
Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Jl 15 '51 140w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 68:1078 S 19 '51 230w

"Critical surveys of Soviet writing almost inevitably suffer from the matter with which they deal, as if the progressive dehumanizing of the literature projected over the criticism a creeping apathy and a mechanical method. Gleb Struve's study, newly revised and expanded from the English editions of 1935 and 1944, in spite of its many merits suffers no less than others from these defects—for which the critic should not be too severely blamed. He can do little more than analyze the evidence of how an art was polluted by politics and by political apologetics and propaganda." Hubert Creekmore
Nation 173:331 O 20 '51 700w

"Although Mr. Struve's new book is neither a strictly historical survey nor a consistent essay in literary criticism, it does fulfill its purpose as a book of reference compiled by a diligent scholar. The American reader will find in it a large amount of reliable information about individual authors, literary schools, disputes, party pronunciamentos, critical polemics, and even synopses of a number of novels." Marc Slonim
+ — N Y Times p5 My 13 '51 650w

"This book carries on the story of the evolution of Russian literature from the point where D. S. Mirsky's history left it, and though the author's English style is inferior to Mirsky's and though he has not quite Mirsky's finesse in appreciating literary qualities, he has produced a comprehensive and intelligent work that may be used with equal confidence."
+ — New Yorker 27:121 My 26 '51 220w

"This is primarily a work for the student. The unknown quantity, however, of life behind the Iron Curtain heightens its value for all who are hunting clues to conditions of existence within the Soviet Union." C. E. M.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Jl 8 '51 240w

"The most comprehensive presentation of contemporary Russian literature yet published. . . Although this book is based on the author's previous works, the material is thoroughly revised and considerably expanded."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:239 S '51 260w

STRYKER, MRS CHARLOTTE. Time for tapioca; drawings by John Teppich. 250p $3 Crowell
919.22 Java—Social life and customs 51-1948

In 1927 the Stryker family went to Java, to stay while Mr Stryker established a tapioca plantation and factory. Life in Java proved very different from the expected, but the family enjoyed it, even though Father had very little time for tapioca. The book describes their two years—1927 to 1929, in Java.

Booklist 47:229; 270 Mr 1 '51; Ap 1 '51
Bookmark 10:183 My '51 20w

"It is a good story—a humorous one and a human one—simple and directly written, light hearted yet nostalgic." A. L. Bader
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Mr 25 '51 370w

Reviewed by C. B. Burnett
Christian Science Monitor p11 My 24 '51 220w

"Not quaint or cute, but colorful and interesting, this juxtaposes two cultures in warm and amusing terms."
+ Kirkus 19:88 F 1 '51 210w

Reviewed by M. D. Read
Library J 76:1036 Je 15 '51 50w

"This is a book that doesn't try to be funny, and, perhaps for that reason, is much more rewarding than some of the recent crop of 'I remember' family portraits. Its only sad note lies in the realization that the tranquillity of those days has been so irreparably lost." Lisle Bell
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ap 8 '51 550w
San Francisco Chronicle p16 S 16 '51 330w
Wis Lib Bul 47:86 Ap '51

STUART, FRANCIS. Redemption. 249p $3 Devin-Adair
50-11506

"The hero, Ezra Arrigho, a resentful, humorless man of forty or so, inclined to make embarrassingly brash pronouncements on such matters as sin, religion, sex, women, and marriage, preaches of a world in which people will live chastened and afraid, in a permanent state of postwar awareness, or shock. Ezra, an Irishman who has been through the bombing of Berlin, transforms his nostalgia for the irresponsibility and, presumably, the comaraderie of the underground shelters into a violent desire to see all humanity punished." New Yorker

"The creation is not up to the tenor of the inspiration, the artistry is not equal to the vision of earthly happiness, the precepts are not adequate, and the symbols are not credible." George Miles
— Commonweal 53:208 D 1 '50 850w
Kirkus 18:616 O 1 '50 130w

"Mr. Stuart is an Irishman who spent World War II teaching at the University of Berlin. The destruction he saw there has evidently been etched in vitriol on his mind and heart. Unfortunately, his attempts to perform as a kind of Irish Dostoevsky has produced a cross between D. H. Lawrence and Hermann Hesse." Anne Fremantle
N Y Times p21 Ja 21 '51 270w

"Mr. Stuart's writing is lively and fresh, his characters are highly developed, interesting individuals, and the place he writes of is appealing. Everything, in fact, is fine, except for the sour presence of Mr. Arrigho, a man most people would go out of their way to avoid."
+ New Yorker 26:73 D 23 '50 180w

"Though written in the overwrought, pseudo-prophetic manner of D. H. Lawrence's later novels, it is a fascinating book."
Time 56:106 N 27 '50 500w

STUBBINGS, G. W. Dictionary of church music. 128p $3.75 Philosophical lib.
783.03 Church music—Dictionaries 50-9061

"Written from the viewpoint of a musician in the Anglican Church, but one also familiar with the better Protestant and Catholic practices, this concise dictionary explains in brief essays the meaning of the terms commonly met in the field of church music in English speaking countries today." Music Lib Assn Notes

Christian Century 67:975 Ag 15 '50 90w

"Excellent little volume is an English compilation intended primarily for organists, choirmasters, and clergymen in the Church of England. It contains, however, much information useful to church musicians and ministers in other denominations, especially those in which liturgical forms of worship are followed." H. W. Foote

+ Crozer Q 28:93 Ja '51 110w

"A modest reliable work of reference." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 75:1298 Ag '50 70w

"A useful little volume for the reference shelf of the public library." Leonard Ellinwood

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 8:180 D '50 90w

STUBER, STANLEY IRVING. Public relations manual for churches. 284p $3 Doubleday

259 Publicity 51-3702

"[Covers] in considerable detail practically all forms of church publicity, from bulletin boards to TV. It includes special programs, every member canvass, committee work, and much advice on preparation of copy and type selection. It suggests approaches to newspapers, periodicals and other publications, with appropriate lists, so that it ranges from local parish work to national publicity." Library J

"The reference section, together with other reference material in the contents of the volume, rightly used will be an invaluable aid to every religious leader. Religious leaders should welcome this addition to their libraries." W. N. Weaver

+ Christian Century 68:1016 S 5 '51 550w

"This is an intensely practical book—readable, interesting and informative." L. D. Farrar

+ Churchman 165:17 Je '51 140w

"An extremely practical and comprehensive handbook. . . Stuber insists on dignity and good taste in religious publicity." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 76:513 Mr 15 '51 80w

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 26 '51 110w

STURGEON, THEODORE, pseud. See Waldo, E. H.

STURGIS, ALICE FLEENOR. Standard code of parliamentary procedure. 268p $2.50 McGraw

328.1 Parliamentary practice 50-10916

"An excellent handbook for small or large organizations. It contains a code of procedure, sections on the structure and functions of organizations, on the rights of members and conduct of conventions, and on the kinds and disposition of motions. Rules and reasons for their existence are given concisely. Notes cite court decisions affecting parliamentary procedure; a list of terms is provided." Booklist

Booklist 47:169 Ja 1 '51

+ Bookmark 10:84 Ja '51 20w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '51

"Comprehensive, lucid handbook." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 75:2002 N 15 '50 80w

Reviewed by S. I. Hayakawa

San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 13 '51 370w

"This book has completeness, simplicity, clarity and conciseness; it is easy to use, explains common procedures, conforms to court decisions and is up-to-date." Ethel Dexter

+ Springf'd Republican 10C Ja 21 '51 200w

STYPULKOWSKI, ZBIGNIEW FRANCEWICZ. Invitation to Moscow; with a pref. by H. R. Trevor-Roper. 359p $3.50 McKay

940.547247 Poland—History—Russian occupation, 1939- . World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, Polish. Poland—History—German occupation, 1939-1945 [51-4368]

The author, a Polish lawyer and political prisoner, describes his long session in the notorious Soviet Lubianka prison, and the methods used to obtain a confession of his non-guilt.

"Mr. Stypulkowski's reconstruction of his intellectual duel with MVD Commissar Tichonov and the public prosecutor R. A. Rudenko, which fills about one-third of the book, is worth reading. And even if one does not agree with all the political views the author expresses in the book's first 200 pages, one cannot fail to recognize him as a patriot of the strongest moral fiber." Ernest Pisko

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Je 28 '51 700w

"It is a fascinating story, told as dully as possible." Anne Fremantle

Commonweal 54:365 Jl 20 '51 440w

Reviewed by Hugh Seton-Watson

Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 10 '51 240w

Reviewed by R. H. S. Crossman

New Statesman & Nation 41:453 Ap 21 '51 500w

Reviewed by Crane Brinton

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Jl 8 '51 650w

"It would be unfortunate if this volume were catalogued as merely another book on Soviet political terror. It is much more than that. An important half of the book is devoted to the author's experience in the Polish underground, fighting against the German invaders. . . Finally, this book is valuable because it gives the detailed story of Soviet perfidy toward the Polish underground in the closing days of World War II." Harry Schwartz

+ N Y Times p33 Je 10 '51 480w

"Such an experience could not fail to result in a valuable and exceptionally interesting work, even if it were badly written, but fortunately Mr Stypulkowski writes a clean, lean prose that never gets in the way of his truly amazing story." C. W. Weinberger

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 8 '51 850w

"This macabre book and its author are both unique. . . Stypulkowski's clinical report on Soviet methodology for the extraction of confessions is so reasoned and convincing that it actually begins to make the reader understand why the defendants in Iron Curtain trials—including American businessmen and reporters—behave in the incredible way they do. The first part of Stypulkowski's narrative is poorly organized. . . When he reaches the really distinguished part of his chronicle, however, Stypulkowski writes so differently and so much better he seems almost to be someone else." Hal Lehrman

+ — Sat R of Lit 34:12 Ag 11 '51 550w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Wiskemann

Spec 185:592 My 4 '51 400w

"Taut, spare, sharply observed and recorded, it is the most convincing account yet of that indigenous Soviet phenomenon, the phony confession. Beside it, even Arthur Koestler's brilliant Darkness at Noon bulges a bit at the suppositional seams."

+ Time 57:106 Je 4 '51 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p376 Je 15 '51 750w

STYRON, WILLIAM. Lie down in darkness. 400p $3.50 Bobbs

51-12286

Story of the degeneration of a Southern family. The tale is told in stream of consciousness style as Milton Loftis follows the hearse in which his beautiful daughter, Peyton, is being carried to the grave.

STYRON, WILLIAM—Continued

"I have little affection and considerable admiration for Lie Down in Darkness. . . The book is not bleakly written. On the contrary, it is richly and even (in the best sense) poetically written. . . If the parts seems to succeed each other with no apparent logic or dialectic, each part is brilliantly made and lovingly accomplished. If the long, terminal inner-soliloquy appears immature, there is so much else that is overwhelmingly adult. . . Not least among its virtues, the novel is deeply absorbing. It is a basically mature, substantial, and enviable achievement, powerful enough to stay with you after you have shut it out." Harvey Breit

+ — Atlantic 188:78 O '51 650w

Canadian Forum 31:239 Ja '52 100w

"What is evident in this first novel is an eagerness and a sincerity which ought to have been served by an able and understanding editor. Mr. Styron, however, had no Maxwell Perkins to guide him, with the result that he has written here a serious work of fiction which should not have exceeded 300 pages in length, and which need not have been done in so turgid and often confused a manner. Wisdom and compassion are surely here; much insight and perception flash thru its pages; but Mr. Styron leaves his readers curiously unsympathetic." August Derleth

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 S 9 '51 250w

"William Styron, a precocious and obviously talented young writer whose first book this is, has tasted and—to his credit—very nearly digested, a number of writers of what might be called the 'stream of words' tradition: notably Thomas Wolfe, James Joyce and William Faulkner. Yet from what first appears as chaos he has subtly evolved a pattern." Ruth Chapin

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 4 '51 250w

"A beautifully written novel." Francis Downing

+ Commonweal 54:620 O 5 '51 220w

Reviewed by Alfred O'Brien

Commonweal 55:43 O 19 '51 410w

"William Styron out of William Faulkner, out of Thomas Wolfe, out of James Joyce has himself sired a novel of quiet though, at times, incomprehensible beauty. . . Recommended." M. S. Byam

+ Library J 76:1423 S 15 '51 170w

"A rich and densely written book. There is a prodigality in Mr. Styron's prose, a willingness to take risks in achieving effects, that speaks of a strong and fertile new talent. Nevertheless, the book is unsatisfactory, and even ludicrous in more than one place, because Mr. Styron insists on investing his corrupt family with a grandiose 'significance' which is ultimately meaningless." Harvey Swados

+ — Nation 173:453 N 24 '51 550w

"It is a general rule that novels which stay close to their literary models have no great value of their own, but Lie Down in Darkness is an exception; in this case the example of Faulkner seems to have had a liberating effect on Styron's imagination. One might even say that his book is best and most personal when it is most Faulknerian." Malcolm Cowley

+ New Repub 125:19 O 8 '51 800w

"'Lie Down in Darkness' illustrates the hold which certain conventions now have upon the American novel at the same time that it shows how these formulae, properly mastered, can contain a rich, full and moving story. For, despite its echoes of familiar authors, 'Lie down in Darkness' is satisfying work. It is planned with mature intelligence, it is written in a style everywhere competent and sometimes superb, and its slow and powerful stream is fed by insights into human beings beyond the capacity of many better known novelists." H. M. Jones

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 S 9 '51 850w

"It would be a disservice to Styron, and worse than meaningless in these times, to say that he has produced a work of genius. Only the sustained greatness of a richly productive lifetime still deserves that kind of praise. Yet one can say that he has produced a first novel containing some of the elements of greatness, one with which the work of no other young writer of 25 can be compared, and that he has done brilliant justice to the Southern tradition from which his talent derives." J. W. Aldridge

+ N Y Times p5 S 9 '51 600w

New Yorker 27:118 S 29 '51 160w

"A remarkable and fascinating novel—the best novel of the year by my standards—and one of the few completely human and mature novels published since the Second World War." Maxwell Geismar

+ Sat R of Lit 34:12 S 15 '51 900w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p10B S 30 '51 440w

Time 58:106 S 10 '51 420w

SUGRUE, THOMAS. Watch for the morning. 304p $3.50 Harper

956.9 Palestine—History. Zionism 50-14729

For descriptive note see Annual for 1950.

Foreign Affairs 30:166 O '51 10w

"Loving the ancient land and its new people so intensely, Sugrue writes of them with such vast tenderness that in the end he almost does them a disservice. . . Greater justice might have been rendered to Israel and the friends of Israel here if this record, by mixing the frailties of the State with its virtues, had been brought closer to earth—and thereby made more credible." Hal Lehrman

Sat R of Lit 34:18 Ja 6 '51 650w

"'Watch for the Morning' is not 'just one more book about Zionism.' It is unique, first of all, because Sugrue crippled by arthritis, made the entire journey in a wheel chair; second, because this deeply devout and sensitive Christian spirit was able to read himself so completely into Jewry's past tragedies and into the life of Israel's pioneers today. Thomas Sugrue, by a unique act of empathy, seems to have taken upon himself the sins committed by all our Christian forebears who helped create the so-called 'Jewish problem.' Sugrue understands Israel's centuries of tears." C. H. Voss

+ Survey 87:88 F '51 310w

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:458 D '50 320w

Wis Lib Bul 46:35 D '50

SUKHOTINA, TAT'IANA L'VOVNA (TOLSTAIA). Tolstoy home; tr. by Alec Brown. 352p il $4 Columbia univ. press

B or 92 Tolstoi, Lev Nikolaevich, graf A51-8955

The diary of the eldest daughter of Leo Tolstoy, begun in 1878 when she was thirteen, which continues up to the time of her father's death in 1910. Especially interesting for the story of the relationship between the Countess and her adored father, whose companion she was up to the time of her marriage in 1899. Index.

Booklist 47:328 My 15 '51

"There is a refreshing candor in the glimpses offered of life at the Tolstoy country estate, and of the great man himself. Also the dilemmas of girlhood and young womanhood are described here with the simplicity and naiveté of one as yet inexperienced and unaccustomed to the sophistications of cultured society. It is a troubled heart that has written this book." John Cournos

Commonweal 54:66 Ap 27 '51 420w

Kirkus 19:93 F 1 '51 180w

"A book for general purchase." B. B. Libaire

Library J 76:406 Mr 1 '51 130w

"Contains little that is new, though collectors of Tolstoyana may value it for its account of Tolstoy as seen through the eyes of a small girl—the Countess, his eldest daughter." G. L. Arnold

Manchester Guardian p4 N 14 '50 230w

Reviewed by Anita Marburg

+ Nation 172:327 Ap 7 '51 1150w

Reviewed by Anita Marburg

New Repub 124:20 Je 18 '51 450w

"These Diaries, the original Russian text of which has never previously been published or translated, are another welcome addition to the fascinatingly intimate and seemingly interminable chronicle of the Tolstoy family." Joshua Kunitz

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 My 27 '51 750w

"The diary provides us with little fresh information about the details of her famous father's life and thought and artistic works—though there is some of this—but as a compensation there is revealed a thoroughly interesting and altogether charming personality, as well as an absorbing slice of Russian life at this time." E. J. Simmons

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 25 '51 900w

New Yorker 27:135 S 15 '51 150w

"The charm and the value of these diaries are due precisely to the fact that we are allowed to watch one of the greatest writers in what was often the humdrum round of everyday existence. And as we do this we cannot but admire the understanding sympathy and the fairness with which the author tried to convey some of the less-known aspects of Tolstoy's life." Janko Lavrin

+ Sat R of Lit 34:13 Je 30 '51 850w

Springf'd Republican p8C Ap 29 '51 140w

Time 57:114 Ap 9 '51 900w

"For at least three-quarters of its length this diary might have been written by any intelligent daughter of a family of Russian landed gentry at the end of the nineteenth century. . . It would be unfair, however, to decry on these grounds a diary refreshing for its honesty as for its picture of a leisurely way of life now vanished and half-forgotten."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p760 D 1 '50 850w

SULLIVAN, JOHN WADSWORTH WILLIAM. Story of metals. 290p il $3 Am. soc. for metals; Iowa state college press

669 Metals

"A general book that is intended apparently for the information of workers in the metallurgical industries. More than one-third of it is devoted to the history of metals, especially their working and uses, up to the beginning of the nineteenth century. After this introduction, the scientific basis of modern metallurgy and the specific metallurgies of iron and steel, the non-ferrous metals and the alloys are described." Library J

Booklist 47:306 My 1 '51

"The book is perhaps too technical for the average lay reader, but it should be easy reading for anyone with a practical interest in metals. Information on some subjects seems unnecessarily brief, but perhaps the author chose not to frighten his readers with too many facts." R. R. Hawkins

Library J 76:710 Ap 15 '51 120w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:39 My '51

SULLIVAN, RICHARD. Notre Dame. 243p $3 Holt

378 Notre Dame, Indiana. University

51-12398

"Sullivan, Associate Professor of English at Notre Dame, and author of four novels and a volume of short stories, calls his book 'a sketchy exploratory biography.' Written largely in the present tense and in the first person, it is essentially autobiographical. . . [The book] is simply Notre Dame as perceived through Sullivan's five senses: the Mother of God atop the gilded dome, the grotto, 10 o'clock coffee in the 'Caf,' the traffic in radiators for freshmen, Vetville in 'Fertile Valley' and the germ-free guinea pigs who have renounced the world." N Y Times

---

Booklist 48:25 S 15 '51

Reviewed by W. W. (Red) Smith

+ Cath World 174:237 D '51 360w

"Mr. Sullivan, in the modesty of true ability and deep affection, is frank to state he doesn't know the answer to what is Notre Dame. Yet, he has revealed far beyond his own expectations the Notre Dame the men of Notre Dame know and love. He has lit a literary candle with devotion and ability that does himself and his alma mater proud." Walter Trohan

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 S 9 '51 600w

"Mr. Sullivan has certainly done right by the special financial and promotional needs of the University; he has not wholly slighted history; and there is enough feeling in his book to keep the legends burnished. . . For the author Notre Dame was obviously a labor of love." John Cogley

+ Commonweal 54:628 O 5 '51 280w

Kirkus 19:383 Jl 15 '51 120w

"Discreetly discounting football, he writes with just pride, obvious affection, disarming humor, infectious goodwill and wise restraint. He admirably conveys the true spirit of Notre Dame. . . Recommended as good general reading for Catholic and Protestant." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 76:1217 Ag '51 80w

"If you find yourself in a book store this week, you will probably glance with casual indifference at a new book which bears the unexciting title 'Notre Dame, The Story of a Great University.' It is hardly the kind of title calculated to stampede the book-buying-public. And so thousands will pass it by and will be forever cheated out of two of the most pleasant hours a reader could enjoy." Quentin Reynolds

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 S 23 '51 850w

"There are many ways to portray an alma mater. One is to open the doors and show all the people, a procedure far from edifying. Sullivan has opened the doors and shown himself—just as Notre Dame made him. It is pleasant reading, as full of color and 'razzle-dazzle' as a home game at South Bend." J. K. Bettersworth

+ N Y Times p16 S 9 '51 300w

"It happens to be a book worth reading, just as much because of its excellent style and unconventional approach as because of its subject." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 S 21 '51 600w

SUMMERS, JAMES L. Open season. 182p $2 Doubleday

51-10771

A volume of short stories, mostly about teenagers and their problems. Contents: The long year; Tomorrow; The glass boy; Open season; I'll remember you; Like son; The boy in the mirror; Wait for me; Decision for spring; Weren't you ever young! And now farewell.

Booklist 47:384 Jl 1 '51

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 27:242 Jl '51 30w

"The unusual feature in this group of stories is the inclusion of confessions about love, dates, and break-ups from the young male point of view. However, we do feel that there are some serious departures from realism in this type of young teen-fiction which holds that parents are always right, that the high school seniors cannot assume the financial and marital responsibilities of adults when the draft board offers a grim alternative; and that although real emotion is encountered, real living does not start until after the graduation ball."

Kirkus 19:187 Ap 1 '51 150w

"Highly readable, not all froth, holding to high ideals of conduct and the external verities by an author who understands young people very well indeed." M. K. Walraven

+ Library J 76:1237 Ag '51 80w

"It is not often that a man invades the date-and-dance school of literature. However, Mr. Summers, a father and an ex-teacher, obviously knows a great deal about the manners and customs of the teen ager, both male and female. These eleven stories appeared in

SUMMERS, J. L.—Continued
Seventeen and in Senior Prom and are contemporary in setting, brisk in tempo and sometimes rather lush in style. Some of them are smooth rather than substantial." E. L. B.
+ — N Y Times p22 My 27 '51 150w
Sat R of Lit 34:53 My 12 '51 80w

SUMNER, BENEDICT HUMPHREY. Peter the Great and the emergence of Russia. (Teach yourself history lib) 216p $2 Macmillan

B or 92 Peter I, the Great, emperor of Russia. Russia—History

"Professor Sumner presents the swiftly moving drama of Peter's reign, the military campaigns in the South and in the North, his administrative reforms, the transformation of the church into a state-serving agency, the social and economic changes during the turbulent period following Peter's reign, winding up with a general evaluation of the first Russian emperor who was instrumental in setting Muscovite Russia on the road to Imperial Russia." Ann Am Acad

"Much could be learned from such excellent studies as the one of B. H. Sumner. In these days when so many feeble hands endeavor to pull too big bows it is most gratifying to come across such a work. Despite its brevity the work is of considerable stature in scholarship and interpretive skill." A. G. Mazour
+ Ann Am Acad 278:235 N '51 800w

"This is a very sound piece of work, a little severe and matter-of-fact in style, as indeed was almost everything that Mr. Sumner wrote on Russian history, but bringing to a subject on which even now there is no full-length study in English of adequate authority, wide knowledge and reasoned justice."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p407 Je 29 '51 1350w

SUMNER, MRS CID RICKETTS. Sudden glory. 326p $3 Bobbs

51-11048

"A novel of family life in Mississippi in the years after the Civil War. It is the story of Rhoda Lee Dalton, who is an engaging fifteen-year-old girl—climbing trees and speculating upon her future—when the story opens on an April afternoon in 1879. When the story closes a few years later she is a very grown-up young lady." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 47:382 Jl 1 '51

"What it was to be alive and young in Mississippi in 1879 is conveyed with spirit and authority in this novel. Mrs Sumner does not indulge in editorializing about Reconstruction or the passing of the great plantations; she shows the Daltons and their kin and neighbors as, cheerfully and without self-pity, they go about living their lives." Riley Hughes
+ Cath World 173:475 S '51 170w

"A typical conglomeration of romantic trash, some reviewers may say. But the fluent writing is tightly woven, the characters are real, and for my money 'Sudden Glory' is a fresh breath of clean atmosphere blowing thru the mildewed pages of other period pieces long since gone sour." Henry Cavendish
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 17 '51 400w
Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '51

Reviewed by Coleman Rosenberger
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Je 10 '51 500w

"The book is notably imbued with affection and humor. Though at times it treads close to coyness (and, in some characterizations, to stereotype), it manages to shed over the glimpses of the townsfolk and the portraits of the family a warmth that does not ignore the human failings of the best of people. Mrs. Sumner's pace is always leisurely, her touch nearly always light." Hubert Creekmore
+ N Y Times p22 Je 10 '51 500w

Reviewed by F. R. Smith
Sat R of Lit 34:52 S 8 '51 270w
Wis Lib Bul 47:216 S '51

SURANYI-UNGER, THEO. Private enterprise and governmental planning; an integration. 389p $4.50 McGraw

330.15 Economic policy 50-9878

"A study, by Professor of Economics at Syracuse University, of the inter-relationships of private enterprise with government planning, control, and intervention in a dynamic, mixed economy; followed by a generalization of the quantitative relationships underlying the processes of economic integration, with an appendix: 'Mathematical Notations and Formulas,' pertinent to the text. The author seeks to avoid emotional and ideological reactions, and to study, and measure, the means, private and public, of implementing individual and collective wants as accounting for shifts toward increasing emphasis on collective planning or on private enterprise activities. Selected bibliography." Library J

Reviewed by Carl Landauer
Am Econ R 41:696 S '51 1000w

"So much emotionally charged chaff has been scattered about governmental planning that this solid study is highly welcome. Professor Surányi-Unger deserves thanks for a carefully thought-out and deeply analytic piece of work. His analysis is chiefly theoretical and, by consequence, speculative. Yet it is ballasted by very solid use of statistical material, well arranged. The result is the best abstract study this reviewer has read." A. A. Berle
+ Ann Am Acad 273:230 Ja '51 1400w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 75:1667 O 1 '50 110w
U S Quarterly Bkl 6:436 D '50 220w

SUTER, CHESTER MERLE, ed. See Medicinal chemistry

SUTHERLAND, DONALD. Gertrude Stein; a biography of her work. 218p $3.75 Yale univ. press

818 Stein, Gertrude 51-12323

"Interpretation of Gertrude Stein's work, by an associate professor of classics at the University of Colorado (and an advisory editor of the forthcoming Yale edition of her unpublished writings). Mr. Sutherland analyzes the structure, language, and intention of her books; and compares her achievement with that of other twentieth century artists—Picasso, Matisse, Satie." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 S 23 '51 270w
Kirkus 19:378 Jl 15 '51 160w

"For a limited audience, this critique should have value also as an ingenious contribution to aesthetics." H. W. Hart
Library J 76:1332 S 1 '51 110w

Reviewed by Lloyd Morris
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 O 28 '51 300w

"Considering the number of writers Gertrude Stein influenced it seems curious that until now there has been no full-scale critical estimate of her work. Whatever the reason, the lack is now more than amply made up for." Lloyd Frankenberg
+ N Y Times p5 S 30 '51 700w
New Yorker 27:171 N 24 '52 110w

"Mr. Sutherland, who is not of course the first to venture into the green field of Stein exegesis, occasionally finds himself on a path already well trodden. He is a brilliant elucidator, but his brilliance, maybe because it dazzles and blinds even him, can lead him astray, into foggy regions beyond his trail's end." W. G. Rogers
+ — Sat R of Lit 34:16 S 29 '51 420w

SUTTON, GEORGE MIKSCH. Mexican birds; first impressions; il. with water-color and pen-and-ink drawings by the author. 282p $10 Univ. of Oklahoma press

598.2972 Birds—Mexico 51-14425

"The book is based on an expedition to Tamaulipas, Nuevo León and Coahuila; an appendix describes the over-all ornithological picture in Mexico. Most of the chapters are concerned with 'first impressions.'. . As the wealth of bird life is successively introduced in appropriate environments, each species is recorded by both a vernacular and a technical name." (N Y Times) Index.

"People who take their nature sitting down indoors can enter vigorously into the excitement of Sutton's narrative, almost as well as those who know from similar experience the thrills of seeing new species for the first time." A. C. Ames
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 18 '51 270w

"A colorful and highly subjective narrative. . . The abundant and practical illustrations are well chosen and well executed. Several of the water-colors, such as the little bat falcon, are notably charming. . . To evaluate it critically would require more specialized knowledge of New World land birds than the reviewer commands, but the references to oceanic species are not wholly free from errors and misleading implications." R. C. Murphy
+ — N Y Times p24 N 25 '51 600w

SVENDSEN, GRO. Frontier mother; letters; tr. and ed. by Pauline Farseth and Theodore C. Blegen. 153p $2.50 Norwegian-Am. hist. assn.

B or 92 Frontier and pioneer life—Iowa

"A collection of the letters written by a young mother to her family in Norway. She emigrated as a bride in 1862 and died in 1878 after giving birth to her tenth child. The letters give an impressionistic, segmental account of life on the frontier, of the hardships, of the hopes, of the longings, and of the fears of the immigrants. The establishment of new settlements, the arrival of new immigrants, the routes of migration, strange customs in a strange land, and the life in the Norwegian home community all emerge from the letters." Social Forces

"Here is another document from the frontier, adding no new trait to the picture, but further enriching it; and worth while in itself for its human warmth and vigor." L. N. Bergmann
+ Am Hist R 56:1005 Jl '51 240w

"Gro Svendsen expressed virtues of thrift, fortitude, and piety, and one is sure that her children became solid American citizens. A reading of these letters may remind us of some of the less romantic elements in America's settlement." M. P. Redfield
Am J Soc 57:293 N '51 440w

Reviewed by H. A. Pedersen
+ Social Forces 29:467 My '51 220w

SWAIN, JOSEPH WARD. Ancient world. 2v 578:658p il maps $12.50; college ed ea $4 Harper

930 History, Ancient 50-4261

A history of the period from prehistoric man to the sack of Rome. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:351 Jl 15 '50

"His account of Greece and Rome is rather conventional, but clearly his own. Cultural things, literature and art, interest him rather than political and military affairs—a fact that is reflected in the excellently chosen illustrations. . . Nevertheless, he has done as much as could well be asked of one man, and more. He has ideas and a point of view. The book will be read profitably by those who are interested in man's past; still more by those who are concerned for his future." C. B. Welles
+ — N Y Times p6 D 17 '50 1100w

SWARTZ, HARRY FELIX. Your hay fever and what to do about it. 182p $2.75 Funk

616.202 Hay fever 51-10678

Author of Allergy: What it is and What to do about it (Book Review Digest 1949) here concentrates on one particular kind of allergy, that known commonly as hay fever. He recalls the history of the disease, describes its symptoms and discusses causes, and gives advice to sufferers from it on what to do for it.

Booklist 47:341 Je 1 '51

Bookmark 10:228 Jl '51 20w

Reviewed by T. R. Van Dellen
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 My 20 '51 100w

Springf'd Republican p4C Ag 5 '51 190w

Wis Lib Bul 47:211 S '51

SWARZENSKI, HANNS. Early medieval illumination. See Early medieval illumination

SWEENEY, FRANCIS W. Baroque moment. 64p $2.50 McMullen

811 51-8092

Collection of poetry by a Catholic priest in which "there are poems of Newark as well as London, of music and architecture, tributes to people he has loved and admired, and poems of thoughtful devotion." (N Y Times)

"Certain poems are memorable but too many are slim in content, pleasantly put statements with insufficient power to lift them from the plane of personal to that of universal experience. A few lapse into the bathetic. Where there is some inner compulsion. . . Father Sweeney responds with profundity and in such instances merits Harold C. Gardiner's comparison to 'steel and song.'" John Sebastian
Cath World 174:239 D '51 140w

"The poet is particularly effective with his precise gift of phrase and rhythm, and the warmth and insight that must come from a full life." M. I.
+ N Y Times p17 Jl 8 '51 200w

SWEETMAN, LUKE DECATUR. Back trailing on open range; il. by L. D. Cram. 248p map $3.50 Caxton ptrs.

B or 92 Cowboys. Frontier and pioneer life —Montana 51-9569

"An untouched up account of an old-timer, this goes back to 1885 and Montana where for some time he joined the L U Bar, follows down through the years and a life of buying and trading horses, on his own. There are the days and the nights on the range; the roping and handling of steer; the hunting of antelopes; coyotes and bears and wolves, and the many years of handling horses, wild and gentle." Kirkus

Booklist 47:251 Mr 15 '51

Reviewed by Al Chase
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 18 '51 200w

"Splendidly illustrated by L. D. Cram, this is a fine piece of Americana, natural as the lope of a horse. Mr. Sweetman makes no attempt to force the interest in either matter or style." Horace Reynolds
+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 2 '51 450w

Kirkus 18:652 O 15 '50 70w

SWEEZY, PAUL MARLOR, and HUBERMAN, LEO, eds. F. O. Matthiessen (1902-1950); a collective portrait. 154p il $2.50 Schuman

B or 92 Matthiessen, Francis Otto 50-58262

A collective portrait of this Harvard professor and author who "was called 'Matty' by many who never knew what his initials stood for; born in California, he grew up in Illinois, studied at Yale and Oxford, summered in Maine, taught in Salzburg and Prague. . . He was a pacifist who tried to get into the Marine Corps; he wrote on the achievement of Eliot and on the political heart of Europe. He was as ambiguous as Walt Whitman and Henry James, on both of whom, different though they seem, Matthiessen wrote well." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) A preliminary bibliography of F. O. Matthiessen.

SWEEZY, P. M.—Continued

Reviewed by B. E. Nelson
Ann Am Acad 275:173 My '51 500w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 11 '51 500w

"It would be easy, in the current jargon of popular journalism, to dismiss F. O. Matthiessen as a fellow traveler who ended in suicide. Yet such a description would tell very little about the sensitive critic and scholar, the dearly loved teacher, the generous friend, the 'Christian and socialist' for whom the conflicts within and the conflicts without proved at last too insoluble a problem. The present book, by a number of different hands, is both a tribute to and a portrait of 'Matty,' as this scrappy little Harvard professor was affectionately known to a host of students and friends on two continents." R. P.
Christian Science Monitor p7 D 9 '50 400w

Kirkus 18:669 N 1 '50 130w

Reviewed by Donald Stauffer
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ja 14 '51 950w

Reviewed by George Mayberry
N Y Times p16 F 11 '51 550w

"Besides Matthiessen's piece, written when he was almost fifty, the volume contains a chapter from his recently published book on Theodore Dreiser. The rest of the book is made up of statements from his wide range of friends, colleagues, and students. Although they differ in emphases and sympathies, all their statements attest to his solid gifts and undiminished sincerity." Robert Halsband
+ Sat R of Lit 34:34 Ap 28 '51 230w

SWETNAM, GEORGE. Pittsylvania country. (American folkways ser) 328p $3.50 Duell
917.488 Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania 51-9280

"An informal account of the growth of Pittsburgh and its environs with interesting sidelights on the historical, political and legendary figures who were connected with the region's industrial and cultural development. Maps. Index." Bookmark

---

Booklist 47:234 Mr 1 '51

Bookmark 10:108 F '51 30w

+ Kirkus 18:716 D 1 '50 140w

Reviewed by D. K. Oko
Library J 76:182 F 1 '51 120w

"Mr. Swetnam has filled his pages with a large number of incidents and anecdotes carefully chosen from the chronicle of western Pennsylvania, and, on the whole, has told them well; but the result is a collection of what Ring Lardner used to term 'cigar bands.' Many of them are intrinsically interesting and add to one's miscellaneous knowledge. . . The reader is, however, left to perform one part of the author's task, to put all this together for himself, if he can." Carl Bridenbaugh
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 F 4 '51 1000w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 11 '51 500w

"The book is interesting and in some parts exciting. But it is too, at times, jumpy, going from one episode to another without apparent transition, and somewhat fragmentary, for the whole story of the district cannot possibly be told in only 300 pages. But it is generally good and it should cause to swell with pride the breasts of the millions who now live in the famed and fabulous Pittsylvania Country." J. D. Paulus
+ — Sat R of Lit 34:16 My 5 '51 700w

"Far more than local history, this artful work has real flavor and gusto, and should be of considerable interest outside the geographic circle of the Pittsylvania country."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:184 Je '51 110w

Wis Lib Bul 47:213 S '51

SWINNERTON, FRANK ARTHUR. Flower for Catherine. 278p $3 Doubleday
51-1621

"[The story] of three middle-aged sisters—one, Catherine, married and quite content; one unmarried and a flourishing novelist; and one, the youngest, mysteriously alone and bitterly unsuccessful in every way. The story unfolds between October and Christmas, most of it in a suburban London house." New Yorker

---

Booklist 47:294 Ap 15 '51

Bookmark 10:185 My '51 40w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Cath World 173:312 Jl '51 220w

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan
Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 Mr 18 '51 450w

"There's a certain urbanity along with a slightly old fashioned quality to Swinnerton's writing. But there's sure craftmanship and acceptable story telling."
Kirkus 19:8 Ja 1 '51 210w

"Full of people called Bob, Pixie, and Puss, peppered with exclamation marks, and decorated with quaint chapter headings. It does credit to the warmth of Mr Swinnerton's sympathies and the clearness of his objective—the library lists, presumably, of realist housewives who scorn the sort of fiction in which the characters do not have their full share of domestic worries too." Norman Shrapnel
Manchester Guardian p5 D 15 '50 70w

"A skillfully organized and perceptive story of the way in which a woman weathered an unusual crisis in family life." Mary Ross
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Mr 25 '51 400w

"Mr. Swinnerton has been writing this kind of well-bred novel so long that he can probably do it with his eyes shut. And withal, the conscientious reviewer must confess that the book is so much better than many of those he praises for their promise. There, perhaps, lies the difference: Mr. Swinnerton's promise is all behind him." John Barkham
N Y Times p21 Mr 25 '51 360w

"The writing is clear and calm and occasionally wry—a great pleasure to read."
+ New Yorker 27:119 Mr 10 '51 90w

"Mr. Swinnerton's characterization is at its best in this story. . . Mr. Swinnerton calls his novel a psychological drama which conveys the idea of something heavy in the Ibsen manner. Its import is serious, to be sure, but it is executed with the deft and light touch that is characteristic of Swinnerton at his best. In this, his 27th novel, he does not disappoint his admirers." J. V.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 8 '51 350w

"A domestic drama, urbanely if not memorably contrived by one of England's most dependable storytellers, it is a book certain to arouse passions as well as discussion, raise temperatures along with some doubts, bring misgivings along with its challenges. Mr. Swinnerton's flower bears thorns as well as bloom." Charles Lee
Sat R of Lit 34:25 Mr 17 '51 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p797 D 15 '50 270w

SWINSON, CYRIL, ed. Dancers and critics. 80p pl $2 Macmillan 792.8 Dancers. Ballet [51-3365]

"To collect his compendium of ballet criticism, Cyril Swinson, its editor, invited some of the outstanding American, British and French dance critics to describe how they judge a ballet, a dancer, and a choreographer, and each was allowed to select as a subject a dancer of his own choice. Since ten of these chosen dancers have appeared in the United States, this volume should have a special interest for American readers." Theatre Arts

---

"Recommended for ballet and theatre collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 76:868 My 15 '51 40w

"More platitudes are gravely turned over than pancakes in a Childs window; and to a large extent hysteria rather than balanced criticism prevails. . . Fortunately, there are some saner judgments." Rosalyn Krokover
— + Sat R of Lit 34:34 Mr 31 '51 290w

"This volume will be welcomed by the discriminating and growing audience for ballet in America, and one can only wish that its editor would provide a much needed sequel on Critics and Choreographers." Arthur Todd
+ Theatre Arts 35:9 My '51 400w

SWISHER, CARL BRENT. Theory and practice of American national government. 949p maps $5 Houghton

342.733 U.S.—Politics and government—Handbooks, manuals, etc. 51-2038

"The author, professor of political science at Johns Hopkins, says his book 'deals with the dynamics, and the aliveness of American government as politics, law and administration combine to give us government-in-action.' Most of us are aware in a general way how our national Government has expanded in recent years, but this big book shows in detail what changes have taken place, especially from 1947 to 1950." San Francisco Chronicle

Am Pol Sci R 45:573 Je '51 30w

"Naturally students of political science and law will find this book of great value, but so will the general reader who is interested in seeing how our Government is changing to meet new conditions, not only internally but in the world situation. In these days of loyalty oaths and much confusion and uncertainty, books like this (in presenting calmly and objectively what our Government stands for) are well worth reading." I. B.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 My 13 '51 230w

SYKES, GERALD. Nice American. (Creative age press bk) 310p $3 Farrar, Straus 51-1591

"Algiers at the close of the second World War is the scene of [this] portrayal of a complex, young American Colonel who, torn between duty and personal fulfilment, vacillates between his able ex-wife and an alluringly-feminine Frenchwoman, while drawn always toward the oppressed rather than the rulers." Bookmark

"Though 'right' enough symbolically, the windup has the flavor of a boy-gets-hard-to-get-girl climax in the slicks. In fictionalizing his ideas, Mr. Sykes, far from giving them greater density, has sometimes thinned them down into clichés. I must add, however, that I found The Nice American more interesting than a good many more successfully executed novels. Mr. Sykes really has something worth while to say." C. J. Rolo
— + Atlantic 187:75 Ap '51 650w

"Frank treatment of sex limits the book to mature readers."
Bookmark 10:133 Mr '51 60w

"The Nice American is a collection of observations on modern life, sincere and soundly conceived, but in fictional terms it has little more emotional impact than the North Atlantic Treaty." C. H. Weiss
+ — Commonweal 54:65 Ap 27 '51 750w

Kirkus 19:69 F 1 '51 170w

"It is unfortunate that the fine ingredients in this novel had to get tied up with the Colonel and his ladies." C. J. Roth
Library J 76:407 Mr 1 '51 120w

Reviewed by H. I'A. Fausset
Manchester Guardian p4 O 12 '51 400w

Reviewed by Lloyd Frankenberg
Nation 172:618 Je 30 '51 420w

Reviewed by Harvey Swados
New Repub 124:30 My 7 '51 180w

Reviewed by J. D. Scott
New Statesman & Nation 42:374 O 6 '51 500w

"This could have been a good story if only its execution were on a level with its aim. It is a novel of praiseworthy ideas and implausible people. . . When some one in this book thinks, he never thinks his thoughts but Mr. Sykes' mannered and high-serious prose. Furthermore, the intrinsic worth of almost all his characters corresponds precisely with their ability to talk about the nuances of Cézanne." Frederic Morton
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Mr 4 '51 800w

"In an admirable setting—Algiers in the summer of 1945—[the author] presents an impressive cast of characters, about whom he writes in an urbane and often amusing style." Granville Hicks
+ N Y Times p20 Mr 4 '51 470w

"Mr. Sykes uses the English language as though he disliked it but were determined to contend with it. The result is a curiously stolid style that reflects distaste, effort, and weariness without end, and without hope of ending. All this is also true of his story, or, rather, of his material, for there is little story."
— New Yorker 27:129 Mr 17 '51 100w

Reviewed by C. W. Weinberger
San Francisco Chronicle p20 Mr 22 '51 800w

Reviewed by John Brooks
Sat R of Lit 34:27 Mr 17 '51 700w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn
Springf'd Republican p30A Mr 18 '51 550w

Time 57:106 Mr 5 '51 460w

"We have become, perhaps, rather accustomed to slick American novels in which plot and dialogue flow easily from the pen, but where the ideas are trite, or even non-existent. Mr. Gerald Sykes reverses this process in producing a book that is sometimes awkwardly expressed and constructed, but which embodies probably more interesting ideas than in any American novel—certainly any American war novel—that has appeared since the close of hostilities. The Nice American really breaks new ground; and some of its obvious imperfections should not blind readers to the importance of its theme."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p609 S 28 '51 480w

SYME, RONALD. Cortes of Mexico; il. by William Stobbs. 191p $2.50 Morrow

B or 92 Cortés, Hernando—Juvenile literature 51-4589

"Few men have lived as adventurously as Hernando Cortés. This book tells his story from the day in 1504 when, as a boy of nineteen, he left Spain for the New World. In Hispaniola he found what the average man in those days would have called enough. But Cortés was not an average man; he was a son of destiny who scorned a fat life. He took part in the Conquest of Cuba. Eventually, no one knew why, he was chosen to lead the first expedition into the land of the Aztecs. It is all here . . . until, neglected and alone with only five dollars in the world, he died in a tiny Spanish village at the age of sixty-two." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 48:17 S 1 '51

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 N 11 '51 170w

Reviewed by E. C. Ince
Christian Science Monitor p13 S 27 '51 80w

Horn Bk 27:423 D '51 80w

"This is a dashing production, unusually valuable for supplementary reading in history."
+ Kirkus 19:353 Jl 15 '51 150w

"Recommended, particularly for junior high school." S. J. Johnson
+ Library J 76:1717 O 15 '51 80w

"Thrilling as an adventure story and useful for history classes, this new book is very welcome." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 N 11 '51 270w

SYME, RONALD—Continued

"Mr. Stobbs' drawings add richness and reality to Mr. Syme's colorful biography." R. A. Brown

+ N Y Times p28 Ja 13 '52 190w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead

New Yorker 27:186 D 1 '51 40w

"This is an excellent book for young readers who are not familiar with the Conquest of Mexico. It might well be followed by a companion volume on Peru. The illustrations are good." M. P. Allen

+ Sat R of Lit 34:46 S 22 '51 330w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter

+ Springf'd Republican p10B S 30 '51 150w

Wis Lib Bul 47:220 S '51

SYMONDS, PERCIVAL MALLON. The ego and the self. 229p $2.50 Appleton

153.72 Self 51-9302

"Professor Symonds says that philosophers and social psychologists have been aware of the Self; that only now are psychologists becoming aware of the ego-self problem. The Ego is the 'I' as perceiving, thinking, acting. The Self seems to be the 'Me' in a social milieu. A mature person had developed both ego and self satisfactorily. Imbalance between ego and self, too little or too much ego and self cause personality troubles. The author discusses how to use ego-self applications to psychotherapy. . . At the end is a listing and evaluation of 211 books in the field." (Churchman) Index.

"Very interesting for ministers engaged in psychotherapeutic counselling." E. W. Harris

+ Churchman 165:16 Mr 15 '51 100w

"A good, readable text on an important psychological topic." M. R. Short

+ J Philos 48:538 Ag 16 '51 360w

SYMONS, GERALDINE. All souls. 327p $2.50 Longmans

[51-9790]

A family chronicle which follows the story of Lucy Abercorn and her descendants in Australia, China and England from 1844 to 1942.

Booklist 47:238 Mr 1 '51

Reviewed by Ruth Chapin

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 16 '51 300w

Kirkus 18:729 D 15 '50 140w

"Miss Symons has created a succession of strong, silent men and a perfect legend of good women whose reflexes, whether registered in a Hampshire cathedral close, an Australian farming settlement or a cholera-ridden port of the Yangtze-Kiang, are unhesitatingly the right ones. A book to be read while knitting or as a relaxation from Mrs. Dale's Diary." John Raymond

New Statesman & Nation 40:106 Jl 22 '50 120w

"There are vivid moments in Miss Symons' pictures of Australia in the 1840s, China in the 1880s, England in the first four decades of the twentieth century. To most readers this shifting scene is likely to hold greater interest than the ostensible and rather sentimental story of Sickle's personal life." Mary Ross

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 Ja 28 '51 400w

"As personal history, Miss Symons' novel has validity and charm. Jacob Abercorn, the pioneering farmer in the wilds of Australia, is a real personality, and his granddaughter, Sickle —who feels like a pioneer herself when she comes to England in 1900 after a childhood life in China—is drawn with sympathetic understanding of the vagaries, whims and inconsistencies of women. As the novel ends, Sickle at 60 is true to her pioneer ancestry: she looks forward to a trip to China with her grandson, Peter." Lily Van Ameringen

+ N Y Times p26 Ja 14 '51 230w

Reviewed by N. L. Rothman

Sat R of Lit 34:31 Mr 3 '51 220w

Times [London] Lit Sup p353 Je 9 '50 180w

SYMONS, JULIAN. 31st of February. 201p $2.50 Harper

51-9235

Mystery story.

"English advertising men and women ingloriously portrayed in tale that suavely blends subtle wit, bitterness, and abject torment." Drexel Drake

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Mr 4 '51 60w

"Sharpened by satire, this is cold, precise, pitiless."

Kirkus 18:685 N 15 '50 70w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield

Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 21 '50 60w

"An excellently satirical picture of English advertising and a good mystery situation somehow gets lost in the story of this tragic breakdown."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 F 18 '51 180w

Reviewed by Basil Davenport

N Y Times p24 F 4 '51 360w

"Nobody has painted a more gruesome picture of the advertising business since Dorothy Sayers wrote 'Murder Must Advertise,' and very few people have written a more entertaining or dramatic mystery story."

+ New Yorker 26:108 F 10 '51 160w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p23 F 18 '51 100w

"Superior."

+ Sat R of Lit 34:24 F 3 '51 50w

"The solution is . . . both improbable and unsatisfactory, yet the author's compelling narrative gift cannot be denied; and this book, in spite of its curious lapses from credibility, is a definite step towards the evolution of the psychological mystery without bloodshed, at which Mr. Symons is obviously aiming."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p481 Ag 4 '50 330w

SYNGE, JOHN LIGHTON. Science: sense and nonsense. 156p $2.75 Norton

504 Science [51-5604]

" 'For thousands of years, science has rested on foundations that any intelligent child of ten or twelve could have seen were silly,' says the author. He supports this interesting thesis with a series of parables and flights of fancy. One chapter is devoted to making a monkey out of Euclid. . . Another chapter records a dialogue between Newton and Archimedes in Hollywood in 1999, and, in a dizzying discussion of vicious circles, reduces the English language to a pulp. These exercises were first delivered as lectures before what must have been a startled audience at Trinity College, Dublin; Dr. Synge is himself a professor of science at the Dublin Institute for Advanced Studies." New Yorker

Booklist 47:398 Jl 15 '51

Reviewed by A. J. Coleman

Canadian Forum 31:144 S '51 280w

Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 3 '51 170w

"Whatever one may think of Professor Synge's conclusions, and, personally, I agree with many, he has undoubtedly written a clear exposition of a live subject; that it is sometimes provocative is all to the good. Except in a dialogue on relativity (not the best part of the book) his demands on his readers' mathematics are of the smallest." G. P. Thomson

+ New Statesman & Nation 41:510 My 5 '51 550w

"It will be sociologically significant should this book circulate widely. Whether it fails or no, it is by such rocket flights of humor, and not by the patient steps of logic, that we who are not mathematicians have any hope of being carried into the nonsensory world." Gerald Heard

+ N Y Times p9 Jl 8 '51 420w

"Wicked and amusing little book."

+ New Yorker 27:66 Jl 7 '51 70w

Time 57:82 Je 4 '51 550w

"The writing is uneven. But everyone interested in the strange ways of the human intellect will find nourishment in this book and enjoy much of it, provided he does not misinterpret an iconoclasm whch is unfortunately but very naturally deficient in most priests of science."

Times [London] Lit Sup p489 Ag 3 '51 320w

SZEBENYEI, JOSEPH. Reporters, kings, and other vagabonds (an autobiography) with jacket designed by Willy Pogany. 343p $3.50 Caxton ptrs.

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 51-10335

Recollections of a Hungarian-American journalist, describing colorful events in his life before and during World war I. One story he tells is of acting as interpreter for Theodore Roosevelt when he visited Budapest in 1910.

Booklist 47:293 Ap 15 '51

"The spirited manner of narration, to say nothing of the sense of plot, gives this volume a piquancy rare in autobiography." John Cournos

+ N Y Times p28 My 13 '51 180w

"Told in a manner that is light in mood and economical in style, his narrative includes a little of the plaintive with the boisterous, the bawdy. If the reader likes a chortle or two and a tale that is rich in anecdote, then this is recommended reading." C. E. M.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 Ap 22 '51 300w

SZENES, ANDRE (ANDRE DUGO, pseud). Joe the bluejay and Carl the cardinal [story and pictures] by André Dugo. 32p $2 Holt 51-13535

A retelling of the Mexican legend about how the blue jay lost his beautiful voice and how the cardinal won his handsome feathers and sweet voice. Illustrated in color.

Bookmark 11:35 N '51

Reviewed by J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews

+ Horn Bk 27:407 D '51 100w

+ Kirkus 19:613 O 15 '51 110w

"An unusual gift for bird lovers, and the color work has charm and distinction." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 N 11 '51 80w

Reviewed by Miriam James

N Y Times p41 N 11 '51 110w

Springf'd Republican p14C N 4 '51 100w

T

TABOR, EITHNE. Cliff's edge; songs of a psychotic. 80p $2 Sheed

811 50-10417

"These poems, written by a patient in a mental hospital, penetrate the experiences of a sick mind. . . They record with astonishing precision a young poet's observations of her own case and those of her fellow patients." Library J

Kirkus 18:544 S 1 '50 70w

"Articulate and wonderfully expressive (see 'Breakdown,' for instance), Miss Tabor's work has poetic validity which reaches beyond the psychological interest. The poems are not published as a stunt stressing the sensational or morbid. We are assured that the author wanted her poems printed and that their publication may help to improve her condition." Gerald McDonald

+ Library J 76:49 Ja 1 '51 140w

Reviewed by Richard Eberhart

N Y Times p12 Mr 11 '51 190w

"This book is called casuistically—with a ballyhoo not unusual from its publishers—Songs of a Psychotic, but neither in form nor in content is there anything to justify the title. The form is a well-mannered collection of usual rimed and free-verse American descriptive lyrics of feminine authorship, and a fairly terse and expert borrowed poetic diction and imagery." Paul Goodman

Poetry 78:243 Jl '51 450w

"The collection is much more than a clinical self-study. Even Miss Tabor's preoccupation with the sound of words in repetition contains beauty." M. L. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p19A Ja 14 '51 120w

TABORI, GEORGE. Caravan passes. 304p $3 Appleton

51-767

"A violent tale of insurrection in which imaginary natives of an imaginary Eastern port unite against an all too recognizable form of colonialism. The deus ex machina of the book, Varga, a ship's surgeon who has gone to sea to escape the fetters of responsibility, becomes involved in the turmoil against his better judgment and merely by fulfilling what he believes to be his duty, precipitates disaster." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Kirkus 19:8 Ja 1 '51 240w

Reviewed by Virgilia Peterson

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Mr 11 '51 750w

"The conflict within the chief characters is never brought into a living tension. Varga, by nature a refugee from responsible intimacy with the human race, is never really tempted. And with Marouf there is never any course but the Right One. These blights aside, it is an engrossing novel. For Mr. Tabori can write." Hugh McGovern

N Y Times p4 Mr 11 '51 360w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 My 13 '51 600w

"George Tabori's fourth novel is a rich and violent book, a book of trenchant ideas, storm action, and urgently human beings. This is to say that Tabori thinks provocatively, writes strong narrative, and has the indispensable gift which makes a novelist good: everyone on whom his writing touches, be it only for a paragraph, comes to life. . . It is a minor failure of the [book] that the dilemma exists for the reader but not for the [hero]." Vance Bourjaily

+ — Sat R of Lit 34:26 Mr 17 '51 650w

Springf'd Republican p8D Mr 11 '51 170w

"A perspiring little novel about Arabia, garnished with murder, intrigue and rebellion."

Time 57:102 Mr 12 '51 500w

TAFF, CHARLES A. Commercial motor transportation. 413p il $6.65; text ed $5 Irwin

388.3 Highway transportation 50-14640

"This complete manual on motor transportation brings into one volume both [freight] and passenger service. It deals adequately with organization of the industry, operations for dependable service, regulations for motor carriers, local passenger transportation and all other aspects of the industry." Chicago Sunday Tribune

"The book is written cautiously which is perhaps how textbooks should be written. But this approach does not warrant avoidance of controversial issues or undue use of pious hopes. . . The failure to be more analytical does not impair usefulness as a text. The factual material is complete and, after all, the professor ought to have some function to perform. Excellent illustrations and pleasing format add to the merit of the book. Commercial Motor Transportation will facilitate and enhance courses in Motor Carrier Transportation." L. L. Waters

TAFF, C. A.—Continued
+ — Am Econ R 41:735 S '51 600w

Reviewed by Winifred Baum
Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 My 6 '51 40w

TAFT, PHILIP. Movements for economic reform. 614p $5 Rinehart
335.09 Economic policy. Socialism—History 50-7003

"Except for a few highlights on economic reform from Plato to Winstanley, and a quick look at eighteenth-century French socialists, the text is given to an account of reform movements in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, primarily in Europe. Marxism and its variants, anarchism, the different national shades of social democracy, Nazism, fascism, 'reactionary socialism,' labor movements, and the New Deal all find a place." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Index.

"In this reviewer's judgment, the lack of an analytical and integrated treatment of fascism as a contemporary international phenomenon is one of the two major shortcomings of the book. The other one is its limitation to European movements and ideas, with the exception of two chapters on American radicalism and the New Deal, and a few paragraphs on communism in China and collective villages in Palestine. . . These criticisms are not meant to minimize the considerabe merits of the book. It has a much wider scope than many conventional books and courses on comparative economic systems, for it places the emphasis on movements and ideas while paying due attention to those older programs which have been translated into institutional reforms. The author is very anxious to do justice to every variety of reformer, and most of his judgments are fair and level-headed. The book is very readable and its style is clear, though the reader is occasionally left in some initial doubt as to where the reporting of other people's ideas stops and where the author's own views begin." Albert Lauterbach
+ — Am Econ R 41:219 Mr '51 1350w
Booklist 47:36 S 15 '50
Foreign Affairs 29:319 Ja '51 10w

"Although this textbook grew out of an undergraduate course in theories and programs of economic reform, it should be of wide interest as a kind of handbook which provides for the general reader a clear summary of the teachings of various reformers, and concise histories of major events in the field. . . Big as the book is, there are gaps in it. The section on the United States is weak. The great reform impulses of 1890-1914 are largely ignored. Bellamy, Henry George, the Muckrakers, and many others are scarcely mentioned. Some readers will probably feel that the account of 'reactionary socialism' could have been expanded at the expense of space given to events in Russia after the Bolsheviks came to power, and of the history of England's Labor government since 1945. These are, however, minor criticisms of a very useful book."
+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 6:437 D '50 260w

TAFT, ROBERT ALPHONSO. Foreign policy for Americans. 127p $2 Doubleday
327.73 U.S.—Foreign policy 51-14235

"The senator from Ohio criticizes the present U.S. administration for its inconsistent foreign policy which, he accuses, has fostered the spread of communism. Specifically he attacks the presidential power to send troops out of the country, the Atlantic Pact, U.S. failure to support Nationalist China, U.S. policy in Korea, plans for building up large ground forces, and the weakness of the United Nations." Booklist

---

Booklist 48:77; 116 N 1 '51; D 1 '51

"Sen. Taft is a rare figure in public life in that he insists on thinking and writing his own thoughts. He has set them down with coolness, with courage, with vision, and with frankness befitting honest thinking. He invites thought where others harangue. He writes forcibly and simply where others conceal. His statesmanship is not confined to pointing with pride or viewing with alarm, but expands to offer a program for an enduring America. Beyond doubt 'A Foreign Policy for Americans' is far and away the best thing he has ever done in the way of speaking, writing, or statecraft." Walter Trohan
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 18 '51 950w

"A Foreign Policy for Americans will and ought to be read by many. Concise of language and fluent of style, it gives much cause for thought. As one who spent happy years in Ohio, this reviewer is glad Robert Taft wrote the book, although he is still convinced that the Ohio Senator's forte lodges in matters domestic." H. J. Abraham
+ — Current Hist 21:293 N '51 850w
Kirkus 19:554 S 15 '51 180w

Reviewed by J. E. Brown
Library J 76:1928 N 15 '51 130w

Reviewed by August Heckscher
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p19 N 25 '51 550w

"The more important and the more controversial parts of the book outline what the Senator thinks present policies should be. Here it is difficult to be certain just what his views are because, when of necessity expressed in different contexts, they sometimes do not seem to be the same." Lindsay Rogers
N Y Times p3 N 18 '51 1600w
San Francisco Chronicle p21 D 16 '51 750w

"Senator Taft's book is, of course, a campaign document. As such, it is irreproachable: calm in tone, logically argued, lucidly written, soberly devoid of oratorical padding. For vote-getting purposes this has its drawbacks. The Senator is not, like his possible running-mate Joe McCarthy, a phrasemaker, and he does not stand in the need of the latter's talent for impudent verbal extrication from entanglement in a dubious past. His blind spots, too, may handicap him." Lewis Galantiere
+ — Sat R of Lit 34:13 N 17 '51 500w
Springf'd Republican p12C N 18 '51 650w

TAGGART, ARTHUR FAY. Elements of ore dressing. 595p il $10 Wiley
622.7 Ore dressing 51-849

"A more elementary treatment than is afforded by the author's well-known Handbook of Mineral Dressing. It is designed for use as an engineering college textbook and contains not only review questions but directions for laboratory experiments. The basic scientific principles that underlie modern methods of ore treatment are constantly emphasized, but there is also considerable description of machines such as cyclones, shaking tables, mills and stamps." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 76:525 Mr 15 '51 60w
N Y New Tech Bks 36:27 Mr '51

TAGORE, SIR RABINDRANATH. Sheaves; poems and songs sel. and tr. by Nagendranath Gupta. [2d ed] 152p $3.50 Philosophical lib.
891.441 51-11425

"The familiar, jewel-like perfection of Tagore's lyrics is present in these new free verse translations. Rich in metaphor, full of the familiar gentle passion, they range in subject from love and a child's play to religion and Indian mythology and patriotism. The translator's introduction is as much a statement of India's claim to recognition in politics and literature as it is an appreciation of Tagore as a poet. Reprint of a British publication." Booklist

Booklist 48:27 S 15 '51

"If you are to give these verses a good try you might get some idea that Tagore was a sincere and thoughtful poet if not a very good one. But the translation is forbidding." Harvey Breit
N Y Times p20 Jl 1 '51 150w

Reviewed by Lawrence Ferling
San Francisco Chronicle p17 Jl 22 '51 40w

TAINE, JOHN, pseud. See Bell, E. T.

TALLANT, ROBERT. Southern territory. 250p $3 Doubleday

51-11537

"A story of traveling salesmen in Southern territory, usually devoted to their families when at home, nostalgic and lonely when away, yet fatalistically attracted to their careers. Lacking inner resources to withstand the dreariness of hotel life, seeking companionship with one another, they drink continuously, becoming maudlin, melancholy and depressed—hence easy prey for ever-present predatory females." Library J

"As a literary work, the book has one really brilliant facet. Its conversations sound so real that the reader feels the author must have had a tape recorder hidden in rooms in which men talk, eat, sleep but which they never call home. Their talk is so convincing that it must all be true, one reasons, as the events unroll sometimes less convincingly. Mr. Tallant has a real genius for recorded talk—'has a real tallant for talk.' The talk is vivid, intimate, revealing of character as well as of its lack, and for that if for nothing else 'Southern Territory' is exciting reading." Fanny Butcher
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Jl 22 '51 420w

"Where's your sense of humor, Robert Tallant? Your sense of decency, too? This is a poisonous and unpalatable book, which, were I a publisher's traveler, I'd be reluctant to sell."
— Kirkus 19:249 My 15 '51 200w

"A compelling picture of a group of innately good-natured, yet boring people, desperately trying to have 'a good time,' paradoxically told in fascinating terms, with deep understanding and keen characterization." R. W. Henderson
Library J 76:1028 Je 15 '51 110w

"The author has picked an unfortunate focus for his examination of a way of life, and, as a result, what might have been a good novel is only a mildly interesting one."
— + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p30 D 2 '51 310w

"Despite the dramatic tightness of the writing, 'Southern Territory' is likely to prove unsatisfactory to many readers. The blissful domesticity of the ending is unconvincing in the light of the didos which litter the earlier pages; and the alcoholic splattering of virtually every scene reaches the point of supersaturation long before the finish." Henry Cavendish
N Y Times p4 Jl 22 '51 240w

"It's a pretty clever book. The scenes shift smoothly from city to city in the Southern territory. The author knows how to evoke the dreariness of hotel rooms and the restlessness, the companionable hilarity, and lonely depression of travelers. But to me it is not a satisfying novel. Its scope is narrow." G. F. Scheer
+ — Sat R of Lit 34:12 Jl 28 '51 380w

TANNENBAUM, ALBERT E., ed. Toxicology of uranium; survey and collected papers. 333p il $3 McGraw

615.9 Uranium—Physiological effect 51-9388

"This volume consists of a survey and collected papers. Part A, Introduction to the Toxicology of Uranium, is a concise review of the pharmacology and toxicology of uranium. . . Part B, Collected Papers, presents sixteen complete original studies performed by the project. They are presented in journal form, with experimental methods, data, discussion, and summary." (U S Quarterly Bk R) Index.

"The book must suffer from comparison with Volume I, Division VI, of the same series, published in 1949, which presented the University of Rochester studies on the same subject. There are no essential conflicts, but the Rochester work yielded many more details and included inhalation studies which by agreement were not made at Chicago. Few persons will want to own both volumes and the current volume is to be preferred for those not needing an exhaustive picture of a multitude of details upon uranium toxicology." H. F. Smyth
Chem & Eng N 29:2088 My 21 '51 250w

"While the editor points out that the volume is not intended as a complete textbook of uranium toxicology and pharmacology, it is, nevertheless, an excellent contribution to our knowledge of uranium poisoning in particular and to pharmacology and toxicology in general." M. B. Jacobs
+ Chem Eng 58:294 My '51 420w
U S Quarterly Bk R 7:312 S '51 220w

TANNENBAUM, FRANK. Philosophy of labor. 199p $2.75 Knopf

331.88 Trade unions. Labor and laboring classes 51-9389

"Analyzing the role of the trade union in modern society, Mr. Tannenbaum, Professor of History at Columbia University, has persuasively described it as 'the real alternative to the authoritarian state.' As 'the conservative movement of our time' he sees the trade union as "the counterrevolution' to revolutionary socialism, Marxism, communism, fascism." (N Y Times) No index.

Reviewed by Avery Leiserson
Am Pol Sci R 45:610 Je '51 240w
Booklist 47:232 Mr 1 '51

"As a maker of phrases, or, rather of stimulating paragraphs, the professor is a master." W. L. Mezger
+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Mr 30 '51 400w
Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '51
Current Hist 21:96 Ag '51 70w
Foreign Affairs 30:155 O '51 40w

"A scholarly, well-written examination of labor unions as the conservative, counter-revolutionary movement of our times."
+ Kirkus 18:720 D 1 '50 140w

"There are many who will quarrel with, or at least question, Dr. Tannenbaum's philosophy. But his clear style and scholarly presentation will interest and enlighten the layman no less than the labor specialist." D. K. Oko
+ Library J 76:183 F 1 '51 280w

"It is a pity that this book did not appear ten or 12 years ago, for its analysis of unionism would have been of real value for management men learning to live and work with a union. By now, most of the things said in this volume are probably well-known by people in management who have been exposed to unionism. Nevertheless, the book is worth reading if only because it expresses what so many of us have been learning." P. F. Drucker
+ Management R 40:244 Ap '51 700w

"It seems to me overly optimistic to assume that 'unconscious' motivations will work out as Mr. Tannenbaum predicts. But this is a book which both labor and management should

TANNENBAUM, FRANK—Continued
read and reflect upon. Only time will tell whether his assumptions are correct." E. M. Herrick
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 Mr 4 '51 1050w

"This profound and challenging book should have a definite appeal not only to trade unionists and employers and to thoughtful students of labor questions but also to economists and social and political scientists. It articulates a philosophy that cannot be understood until or unless one senses the inner meaning of the phrase which falls like a credo so frequently and naturally from the lips of the devoted unionist—the phrase 'the movement.'" Louis Stark
+ N Y Times p6 F 4 '51 600w

"While there is much interesting information about the evils of the Industrial Revolution and the role of the guilds and the unions attractively presented in Mr. Tannenbaum's book, which should be widely read, he has unfortunately become the victim of his own wishful thinking in many important respects. For example, his glorification of the guild ignores the dissatisfied excluded journeyman who owned only his power to labor and not the product of his labor." Mark Starr
+ — Sat R of Lit 34:16 Ap 7 '51 700w

"Without pretension or ponderous documentation this book philosophizes in the best sense about the place of the organized worker in contributing to and helping control the work of the world. Such mellow wisdom is encountered all too rarely in volumes which develop this urgent theme." Ordway Tead
+ Survey 87:244 My '51 500w
U S Quarterly Bk R 7:192 Je '51 180w

TARG, WILLIAM, ed. Reader for writers; with an introduction and notes by [the editor] (Professional writers lib) 322p $3.50 Hermitage
029.6 Authorship 51-12726

"Contains twenty-four pieces of choice literary shop talk on such topics as methods of work, sources of material, artistic standards, the rewards of authorship and the relation of writers to editors, publishers and the reading public. Only a handful of the selections are the work of living men. The rest are drawn from immortals as diverse as Ben Jonson, Voltaire, Hazlitt, Trollope, Mark Twain and Sinclair Lewis." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"In 'A Reader for Writers' William Targ has put together a book which is so sound, direct, fascinating, and stimulating that readers interested not only in writing, but also in reading, may here find wisdom, instruction, and pleasure." Richard Sullivan
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 S 30 '51 370w

"As Gorham Munson reminds us in a preliminary note, none of these papers take rank as critical value judgments. They are simply discussions of the craft of letters by its most eminent practitioners. The Professional Writers Library, which this book designed for creative browsing happily inaugurates, should find a place on a shelf not too distant from the work table." G. F. Whicher
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 O 28 '51 190w

TAUBES, FREDERIC. Quickest way to paint well; a manual for the part-time painter [pub. in assn. with Thomas Y. Crowell company]. 99p 40pl 6 col pl $3.50 Studio
751 Painting 50-12500

"A concise exposition of fine craftsmanship in oil painting for the serious amateur or commercial artist, with chapters on cleaning a picture and finishing frames." Cleveland Open Shelf

Booklist 47:233 Mr 1 '51
Reviewed by Leon Harpole
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 18 '51 60w
Cleveland Open Shelf p2 Ja '51

"The week-end painter, the professional amateur, the serious novice will find this volume tantalizing and rewarding." A. S. Plaut
+ Library J 76:778 My 1 '51 80w

TAUBMAN, HYMAN HOWARD. The maestro; the life of Arturo Toscanini. 342p il $5 Simon & Schuster
B or 92 Toscanini, Arturo 51-2529

A biography of Arturo Toscanini, by the music editor of The New York Times. It covers his long life from his birth in Italy in 1867, to 1950. The author spent twenty years gathering his materials for this work. Index.

Booklist 47:293 Ap 15 '51
Bookmark 10:183 My '51 30w
Reviewed by Edward Barry
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 29 '51 270w
Reviewed by K. G. Roy
Christian Science Monitor p9 S 15 '51 300w
Kirkus 19:21 Ja 1 '51 150w
Reviewed by C. K. Miller
Library J 76:1029 Je 15 '51 80w

"A Taubman writing about Toscanini the man, sets one's teeth on edge; nor have I ever detected in Mr. Taubman's critical writing the slightest evidence of genuine musical percepton that would have made him easier to read on Toscanini the musician; and the journalist without musical understanding proves to be an inaccurate reporter of some of the stories he says he has been collecting for twenty years." B. H. Haggin
— Nation 173:266 S 29 '51 1050w
Reviewed by Andrew Porter
New Statesman & Nation 42:442 O 20 '51 190w

"Mr. Taubman has compiled an amazing catalogue of the towns in which Toscanini has conducted, and the works he has performed. And he tells his story simply, even plainly, without any burdensome lapses into technical jargon. He has contributed valuable new material. Such as a wealth of detailed anecdotes, Toscanini's own lively remarks, and painstakingly precise descriptions of various incidents of the Maestro's conductorial career." Nicolas Nabokov
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Mr 25 '51 1300w

"We already have several books on Toscanini in one language and another; Mr. Taubman, who is the music editor of this newspaper, has a double advantage. His factual material goes down to 1950, and his book is based, so far as the shrewd and candid psychological study of the subject is concerned, on a close acquaintance with the great man. . . The whole fascinating true story, which we would pronounce to be largely fictive if it were told of some musician of a century ago, can now be read in Mr. Taubman's glowing but shrewdly balanced record." Ernest Newman
+ N Y Times p6 Mr 25 '51 750w

"Mr. Taubman, the music editor of the Times, has toured as a reporter with Toscanini, knows him, his family, and friends, and seems never to have missed a concert since he was old enough to go to one. His style is dull, but enough of his idol's brio comes through to make an exciting book."
+ — New Yorker 27:135 S 15 '51 130w

"Howard Taubman has done an admirable piece of work, not only in writing about the protagonist of the story but, in a wider sense, contributing a fascinating chronicle of a good portion of our time's musical history. We have here a book which is alive, accurate, and objective. Mr. Taubman has more than justified the sometimes delicate undertaking of writing the biography of a man still alive, many of whose contemporaries are still at work, and has solved the difficulty of relating incidents that involve people still active without damaging feelings or reputations." Erich Leinsdorf
+ Sat R of Lit 34:21 Mr 31 '51 850w

Reviewed by Victor Prahl
Springf'd Republican p16A Ap 1 '51 600w

TAYLOR, ALAN JOHN PERCIVAL. From Napoleon to Stalin; comments on European history. 224p $3 British bk. centre
940.27 Europe—History [51-446]

"The twenty-nine fugitive essays assembled here are evenly divided between the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. Some are pungent reappraisals that disinter an issue of a personality from the obscuring layers in which pride, prejudice, and propaganda have concealed it. Others such as 'The Austrian Illusion' are calm recitals of ignored facts." Sat R of Lit

---

"While these essays whet the appetite, they fail to satisfy. Some are too elliptic in style; others manifest too little of that solid, scholarly study which should be reflected in the best journalistic efforts of the trained historian." D. E. Lee
Am Hist R 56:938 Jl '51 170w

Reviewed by F. H. Underhill
Canadian Forum 30:139 S '50 300w

"If the book has no central theme, it nevertheless has a unified approach—an attempt to clarify post-war problems in the light of historical experience. . . To achieve the idyllic unity of interest among the Big Four, Mr. Taylor has a recipe. . . He concludes that Soviet friendship can be gained through hard, but fair, bargaining. . . Much of this argument has the musty smell of a long-closed mind. . . But the rest of the book has little of the archaic about it. The essays on 1848, and its consequences of social and national unrest, are keen and provocative." C. H. Weiss
+ — Commonweal 53:380 Ja 19 '51 900w
Foreign Affairs 29:489 Ap '51 20w

"Volume makes for enjoyable and stimulating reading, even though one may often disagree strongly with Taylor's opinions. No index, no bibliography. Recommended for larger college and public libraries." F. E. Hirsch
+ Library J 75:2149 D 15 '50 140w

"Read as a collection the essays suggest a constant trailing of the coat, and the piling up of audacious opinion finally produces the effect of a firework display that has gone on too long. . . Readers of the 'Manchester Guardian,' who will have read already most of those acute and acid discussions of the documentation on the pre-1939 period, do not need to be recommended to the rest or to a rereading of those read before, for they know the peculiar qualities that make Mr. Taylor invariably readable—his width of learning, originality of thought, pungency of judgment. . . Perhaps one reason why so many judgments seem eccentric is that Mr. Taylor has always been making judgments and that, by his own confession, he now blushes for some of them. . . But of the brillance of their presentation and of their setting there is no doubt at all." R. T. Clark
+ — Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 18 '50 600w

"[Mr. Taylor's] present book has more coherence and unity than is usual with such collections. The coherence is due ultimately to the fact that Mr. Taylor views events and men from the angle of the historian, and therefore his judgments, even when he writes as a journalist or reviewer, are not mere improvisations." Leonard Woolf
+ New Statesman & Nation 39:636 Je 3 '50 650w

"This Oxford don writes like an intellectual aristocrat whistling to keep up his spirits while the tumbrels pass. His glance is scornful, his wit aseptic, his judgments on the human comedy clinical and chilling." G. B.
Sat R of Lit 34:15 Mr 17 '51 350w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Wiskemann
Spec 184:830 Je 16 '50 800w
Times [London] Lit Sup p413 Jl 7 '50 3250w

TAYLOR, ALINE MACKENZIE. Next to Shakespeare; Otway's Venice preserv'd; and The orphan, and their history on the London stage. 328p pl $6 Duke univ. press
822 Otway, Thomas. Theater—London
50-10282

"According to Oliver Goldsmith, in 1759, Otway was, 'next to Shakespeare, the greatest genius England has produced in tragedy.' Dr. Taylor uses the phrase, Next to Shakespeare, for her essay on the main works of a dramatist so ignored in the theatre that there has been no major production of Venice Preserv'd since 1876; there have been two brief revivals by specialized societies, but nothing more. The fate of The Orphan has been even worse. Since December, 1815, it has had one revival—by the Phoenix Society. . . Dr. Taylor's method is to consider the two major plays and their stage histories, and then to discuss the decline of Otway's fame." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Bibliography. Indexes.

"This is a scholarly work and the research has evidently been painstaking, yet is entirely readable. For the student and historian it is recommended for university and large public reference collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 75:2155 D 15 '50 60w

"For most general readers, this more general kind of theatrical history is the real test of such a book's value; 'Next to Shakespeare' meets the test." Henry Popkin
+ Theatre Arts 35:6 My '51 200w

"A full and scholarly piece of research."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p178 Mr 23 '51 800w

TAYLOR, ARCHER, and MOSHER, FREDERIC J. Bibliographical history of anonyma and pseudonyma; pub. for the Newberry library. 288p $12.50 Univ. of Chicago press
014 Pseudonyms and anonyms 51-4934

"The present book surveys on a scale never attempted before the whole range of literature on anonyms and pseudonyms from the earliest times until the present day, treating as well of allied themes such as homonyms, pseudepigrapha or spurious writings, and fictitious publishers, dates and places of publication." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Bibliography. Index.

"For general collections as well as cataloging departments." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 76:1337 S 1 '51 130w

"The bibliography, which occupies 72 pages, will be of great service to librarians and research workers. It contains articles on periodicals, as well as books, and each item has a critical note which gives the scale, nature and an estimate of the merit of the work described. References to the text enable it to be used as an index to the introductory chapters and it is followed by a 'Classified Guide' in two sections. . . The authors deserve high praise for a sober and honest piece of research."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p604 S 21 '51 360w

"In addition to being an authoritative study of its subject, the main text contains much that will interest booklovers generally. The large bibliography of dictionaries and lists of identified anonyms and pseudonyms will be particularly valuable to American librarians dealing with foreign books. Users of the bibliography are aided by two classified guides to it, arranged by language or geographical area, and by subjects. There is also a good index."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:327 S '51 220w

TAYLOR, MRS ELIZABETH. Game of hide-and-seek. 312p $3 Knopf 51-9843

"The theme is a simple one: Harriet and Vesey have been in love since childhood, but Harriet marries Charles, and when she and Vesey meet in middle age they find it is too late to go away together. Miss Taylor's common sense will not allow this to be a tragedy,

TAYLOR, ELIZABETH—Continued
but her sensibility will not allow her lovers to rise above their situation." Times [London] Lit Sup

---

Booklist 47:294 Ap 15 '51

"Tho 'A Game of Hide-and-Seek' may seem reminiscent of 'Mrs. Dalloway,' it is never imitative, always unique and fresh, and it never suffers by the suggested comparison. Instead, it takes its own high place by its reciprocal humor and melancholy, its scenes so sustained that apparently no pulse beat is lost, and a narrative flow epitomizing the poignancy of life as both continuous and transitory." Warren Beck
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 18 '51 450w

Kirkus 19:9 Ja 1 '51 170w

"Miss Elizabeth Taylor's vision of the ordinary is delightfully pointed and perceptive in A Game of Hide-and-Seek. . . Even the more conventional people are streaked with originality, proof in itself of the insight which underlies Miss Taylor's humour and wit." H. I'A Fausset
+ Manchester Guardian p4 F 16 '51 80w

"This book is written; the prose falls trippingly on the ear, saying exactly what it means without any pretense." Ernest Jones
+ Nation 172:427 My 5 '51 500w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan
New Repub 124:28 My 7 '51 430w

"Each incident, each character, however minor, seems delineated with the utmost care to intensify and push to the limits some momentary awareness, some perception of personality. There are sharp flashes of insight into the lives of all the characters. . . 'A Game of Hide-and-Seek' is a distinguished performance." Coleman Rosenberger
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Mr 4 '51 750w

"Elizabeth Taylor's prose is one of the most beautiful and exact instruments of precision in use today. In a phrase, in half a sentence, in the 'he said, she said' of a bit of dialogue she can lay bare a heart and indicate a life. She believes, she says, in perfection—and in scene after scene she achieves it." Elizabeth Janeway
+ N Y Times p5 Mr 4 '51 850w

"It is all so sad and well bred and, at bottom, unaffecting. . . We have wanted to be taken up and shaken; instead, we have been given a forlorn and half-apologetic little shove." Brendan Gill
New Yorker 27:102 Mr 24 '51 600w

Reviewed by Patricia Sides
San Francisco Chronicle p14 Mr 30 '51 750w

"A book which contains so many compassionate and amusing comments on children, such unforgettable figures as that of Charles's mischievous mother, the aging actress, the char Mrs. Curzon, the Dutch 'mother's help' Elke, and the Greek mistress at Betsy's school, as well as turns of phrase which linger and enchant is a delight not to be missed." Pamela Taylor
+ Sat R of Lit 34:27 Ap 7 '51 650w

"Miss Taylor's is a novel of acute feminine sensibility, which bears the impression of Miss Elizabeth Bowen's example, particularly in the atmosphere of the dimly-lit scenes in street or teashop between the constrained, reluctant, obsessed lovers. She has excellent moments of small observation, passages of delicate and clever comedy—the cleverness in the dialogue is at times patently out of character—and is reasonably restrained, on the whole, in her addiction to the pathos of being female. But A Game of Hide and Seek is without the gift of storytelling. It lacks any sort of unity and is too often inconsequential." R. D. Charques
— + Spec 185:256 F 23 '51 270w

"Incisiveness is no longer Miss Taylor's strong point. Palladian had dryness and roundness, A View of the Harbour had pattern, but this latest book seems to have been put together from strips picked up at random from the cutting-room floor. Miss Taylor has also lost that keen sense of personal relationships which made her first novel so promising."
Times [London] Lit Sup p81 F 9 '51 320w

Reviewed by Paul Pickrel
Yale R n s 40:766 summer '51 220w

TAYLOR, FRANK JOHN. High horizons; daredevil flying postmen to modern magic carpet—the United air lines story. 198p il $4 McGraw

387.7 United air lines, inc. 51-11391

"Tells the exciting story of United Air Lines' first quarter century and of the intrepid pioneers 'whose daring made possible the free air transport system unique to this country.' Many photographs. Chronology." Bookmark

---

Bookmark 10:229 Jl '51 30w

"The United story is well told indeed, and it provides a perspective for the complex fabric of a huge transcontinental air transportation corporation." Wayne Thomis
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Jl 15 '51 160w

Reviewed by A. D. Hughes
Christian Science Monitor p8 Ag 11 '51 700w

San Francisco Chronicle p13 S 16 '51 240w

"An interesting and well illustrated factual story." W. F. Harmon
+ Springf'd Republican p5D Jl 15 '51 150w

TAYLOR, GEOFFREY, ed. Irish poets of the nineteenth century; selected with introductions. (Muses' lib) 406p $2.50 Harvard univ. press

821.08 Irish poetry—Collections [51-2435]

"Geoffrey Taylor has set out to do two things. First to make a substantial selection from each of the more important 19th century Irish poets, William Allingham, J. J. Callanan, Sir Samuel Ferguson, T. C. Irwin, J. C. Mangan, J. F. O'Donnell. Secondly to make an anthology of the better poems of other Irish writers of the same period." Publisher's note

---

"The compiler's biografical and critical notes are well worth reading, always for the style in which they are written, and, frequently, because of their unique subject matter. There are a number of poets in the collection whose lives, to judge from Mr. Taylor's necessarily brief outlines, would make more memorable reading than their poems." J. M. Flynn
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Jl 22 '51 130w

"Mr. Taylor's rather narrow view of poetry leads him to do real injustice to Ferguson. Preferring lyrical and descriptive poetry, he slights Ferguson's epic gifts. . . The reader should be properly grateful to Mr. Taylor, however, for the great majority of his omissions; five poems by Thomas Davis are plenty for anyone, while most of the other Nation poets never will be missed. . . Two further notes, the biographical data are as untrustworthy as those in most books edited by Irishmen, especially the dates; for excellent critical commentary on many of these writers, read Robert Farren's The Course of Irish Verse in English." Vivian Mercier
— + Commonweal 54:197 Je 1 '51 800w

Reviewed by G. D. McDonald
Library J 76:1427 S 15 '51 60w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries
Nation 173:198 S 8 '51 220w

Reviewed by W. R. Rodgers
New Statesman & Nation 41:454 Ap 21 '51 1000w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 S 16 '51 170w

"This book is a little gem, highly commended both for its content and its form. . . If you are one of those rare people who read poetry at all you will find this book a precious one. The editing of Geoffrey Taylor is urbane and perceptive." W. B. R.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p31 N 4 '51 300w

"As a good deal of Anglo-Irish verse written in the middle of the last century was provincial in tone, it is all the more regrettable that Mr. Taylor should have been content to concentrate at times on quantity rather than on quality. For all its defects, however, the book should prove both interesting and useful. We can regret the oddity shown so often in the selection and the many omissions. To give but a final instance, we miss that splendid 'Autumnal Ode,' known to so few, in which Aubrey de Vere used with mastery the classic modes."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p168 Mr 16 '51 800w

TAYLOR, GRIFFITH. See Taylor, T. G.

TAYLOR, LUCY D. Know your fabrics; standard decorative textiles and their uses. 366p il $6.75; college ed $5.75 Wiley

646.1 Textile fabrics. House decoration 51-13154

A textbook on the basic materials used in curtains, drapes, upholstery, etc. Contains both historical and practical details. Index.

Booklist 48:118 D 1 '51

"Will be useful to students, professional interior decorators and even to housewives looking for reliable guidance in choosing fabrics." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 76:1940 N 15 '51 80w

TAYLOR, PHOEBE ATWOOD (ALICE TILTON, pseud). Diplomatic corpse. 224p $2.50 Little 51-9878

Detective story.

Bookmark 10:158 Ap '51

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 My 6 '51 60w

Kirkus 19:39 Ja 15 '51 70w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 41:718 Je 23 '51 130w

"A slim plot which hinges on insufficient motivation."

— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Je 3 '51 130w

"There is a flouncing of period skirts and also a murder, some love interest, and mayhem, too, but it all simmers down to much-ado-about-nothing." E. B.

N Y Times p29 Ap 22 '51 100w

"Since Asey Mayo is in it, mystery and characters alike are gloriously goofy." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 22 '51 70w

Sat R of Lit 34:41 My 26 '51 40w

Wis Lib Bul 47:89 Ap '51

TAYLOR, MRS ROSEMARY (DRACHMAN). Harem scare'm; il. by Paul Galdone. 246p $3 Crowell

817 51-942

The author of Chicken Every Sunday (Book Review Digest 1943) describes in a similar style her experiences as a war correspondent for an Arizona paper, covering the Riff war in Morocco.

Booklist 47:181; 234 Ja 15 '51; Mr 1 '51

"It is hard to believe that any American girl of the post World War I decade could be quite so naive, but if the reader accepts that assumption together with certain other implausibilities, he will no doubt enjoy these recollections of a colorful place and time."

Cath World 173:159 My '51 120w

"While the telling never reaches any cultural or aesthetic heights, it adds up to a book that is a mighty good companion for an evening at home." Marge Lyon

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Mr 18 '51 750w

Kirkus 18:748 D 15 '50 220w

"Writing with the warmth and good humor that made 'Chicken Every Sunday' a best seller, Rosemary Taylor tells her story pleasantly in 'Harem Scare'm.' It is however, an extremely thin story. Except for the account of getting to Morocco, which is wacky enough to make engaging reading, there is nothing in the book that will startle or intrigue the reader." Joanna Spencer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 F 25 '51 550w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 14 '51 800w

Reviewed by Ray Pierre

Sat R of Lit 34:29 Ap 14 '51 450w

TAYLOR, SAMUEL WOOLLEY. Family kingdom. 302p $3.50 McGraw

B or 92 Taylor, John W. 51-10489

"An account of life with Father, with a very different angle. For Father is John W. Taylor, son of the Taylor who headed in the Mormon Church and an Apostle of the Church himself, whose practice of polygamy, in pursuance of the Principle, won him six wives and a high price for his beliefs. This is told by the son of his third wife, Janet." Kirkus

Booklist 47:245; 308 Mr 15 '51; My 1 '51

Bookmark 10:207 Je '51 50w

Reviewed by M. W. Stoer

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 7 '51 350w

"This is quite a story which should satisfy the always lively curiosity about plural marriages and their inside workings and which is a more than fair estimate of a man, and his wives."

Kirkus 19:91 F 1 '51 230w

"Fictionized biography is a useful medium here where the subject is one not too often discussed. Americana—but not essential for all libraries." K. T. Willis

Library J 76:706 Ap 15 '51 150w

"As amazing reading as one is likely to come across in a publishing season. . . John W. Taylor never would have been typical of any one but himself. His story, told with vigor, humor and respect by his son gives at once a fascinating portrait of an individual and insight into an extraordinary chapter in the development of the West, and, as Mormonism became a national issue, the United States." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ap 15 '51 850w

"This is by far the best book on the subject of polygamy in Mormonism I have ever read. Its author is the son of distinguished Mormon families, and though now and then he shows a Mormon bias, his book is that of a sensitive and civilized man who sees Mormonism for what it was." Vardis Fisher

+ N Y Times p10 Je 17 '51 650w

"Here is a recreation of a vanished time, authentic Americana, told with warmth and mellowness, yet restrained from sentimentality by Samuel Taylor's delightful humor." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 My 13 '51 500w

"I am sure it will delight many as a tale; at the same time it has a certain value as a contribution to our understanding of the mechanics and the infinite complexity and variety of the society in which we live." D. L. Morgan

+ Sat R of Lit 34:17 My 12 '51 800w

TAYLOR, SAMUEL WOOLLEY. Grinning gismo. 255p $2.50 Wyn

51-9686

Detective story.

TAYLOR, S. W.—Continued

"Weird fabrication of complicated conniving, with subtle interludes in hectic excitement." Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 My 6 '51 70w

Kirkus 19:39 Ja 15 '51 80w

"Romantic and lively, though somewhat repetitious in the expositions."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 My 6 '51 140w

"The plot, involving estates, impersonations and badger games, never makes too much sense, even though the characters constantly stop to explain it to each other for pages. And there is no attempt at subtlety in motivation or character-drawing. It is all fast, slick and grisly." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p20 Ap 15 '51 150w

"The complications are almost too thick for sustained interest, but Henry's a likeable unheroic hero." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ap 8 '51 80w

Reviewed by Kathleen Sproul

Sat R of Lit 34:38 My 19 '51 40w

TAYLOR, MRS SYDNEY. All-of-a-kind family; il. by Helen John. 188p $2.75 Wilcox & Follett
51-13398

Story of five little sisters in a Jewish-American family, living on New York's East Side in 1912. For ages eight and older.

Booklist 48:150 D 15 '51

Bookmark 11:61 D '51

"Little girls from 8 up will love to read of their simple but happy times together, so warmly related from the author's own childhood memories. Winner of the 1951 Charles W. Follett award, the book has been given a handsome format and numerous delightful illustrations." P. G.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 11 '51 170w

"Although the author's nostalgia for times past weighs heavily now and then to point the story adultward, this is a homey, gentle book, tailor-made for little girls."

Kirkus 19:617 O 15 '51 220w

"Characters are very real and have honest individuality. Heart-warming bit of Americana. Delightful." H. M. Brogan

+ Library J 76:2014 D 1 '51 80w

"There is a slight mystery, but mostly it is a tale of everyday home doings, in which, in spite of poverty, there is great family happiness. Younger girls who like to ask their mothers what it was like when they were eight or nine, will enjoy what this mother told her own daughter. Jewish children of orthodox faith will enjoy it particularly." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 N 11 '51 270w

"The devotion [of the five sisters] to the public library and the 'library lady,' Mama's cooking, Henny's high jinks, their Passover feast, and the whole feeling of family unity make Mrs. Taylor's story memorable." S. C. Gross

+ N Y Times p30 N 11 '51 180w

Sat R of Lit 35:37 Ja 12 '52 110w

School & Society 74:238 O 13 '51 20w

Wis Lib Bul 47:260 N '51

TAYLOR, THOMAS GRIFFITH, ed. Geography in the twentieth century; a study of growth, fields, techniques, aims and trends; with chapters by Kenneth Hare and others. 630p maps $8.75 Philosophical lib.

910 Geography

"This volume is the work of twenty authors, each of whom is a specialist in the section with which he deals. Its aim is to study the growth, fields, techniques, aims and trends of geography. Characteristics of its evolution since 1900 are stressed. . . The book is divided into three parts, of which the first deals with the evolution of geography and its philosophic basis. The second is concerned with studies of special environments and with advances in geomorphology, meteorology, climate, soils and regionalism. The last part describes field work, sociological and urban aspects, the function of the Geographical Society and geopacifics." Publisher's note

---

Reviewed by A. H. Hawley

Am Soc R 16:585 Ag '51 550w

Reviewed by H. J. Fleure

Manchester Guardian p4 F 16 '51 220w

Times [London] Lit Sup p248 Ap 20 '51 600w

TEAD, ORDWAY. Art of administration; foreword by Lawrence A. Appley. 223p $3.75 McGraw

658.3124 Business management. Executives
51-10816

"Examines the general problems and specific aspects of administration in discussions of human nature and the nature of democratic society with particular attention to personal power, authority, leadership, personnel work, collective cooperation, coördination, and the means of developing administrative ability." (Library J) Index.

"The author works with sound assumptions of the need for human dignity in the relationship between individuals and organization. Executives who have not learned his lessons would become better executives from reading this book. And society needs better executives. At the same time one wishes that Mr. Tead had shown more recognition of the temporal but persistent manifestations of original sin or, in his chosen context, more recognition of the dark and bothersome traits of personality encountered daily by psychiatrists, parents, and executives even when they try to be considerate." J. L. McCamy

+ — Ann Am Acad 278:201 N '51 400w

"Not easy reading, but rewarding for the thoughtful, ambitious executive."

+ Kirkus 19:199 Ap 1 '51 240w

"Essential book for any collection covering the subject of administration." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 76:962 Je 1 '51 120w

"Dr. Tead's book is scholarly and his philosophy seems sound, though some of it may be a bit too advanced for immediate acceptance. It would be more likely to be understood and accepted if his style were less professorial. The long and involved sentences and the complexity of expression may discourage many readers who would be interested in the ideas. However, while the book is not light reading, it is thought-provoking and well worth study by anyone who now is, or aspires to be, an administrator." H. A. Bullis

+ — Management R 40:449 Jl '51 600w

"The book is neither a manual on administration nor a compilation of research. While it draws on research in the social sciences, it is, to a large extent, a study of values. It should be particularly helpful to the complacent administrator. One would wish for more in the way of concrete illustrations, primarily to make the book more popular reading among median administrators on the Flesch scale. While this volume is primarily directed to administration in industry, it has equal application to administration in government and in large voluntary nonprofit organizations." A. H. Aronson

Survey 87:439 O '51 650w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:300 S '51 140w

TEALE, EDWIN WAY. North with the spring; a naturalist's record of a 17,000-mile journey with the North-American spring; illustrated with photographs by the author. 366p $5 Dodd

574.973 Natural history—U.S. 51-13966

A naturalist and his wife begin their search for the spring of the year in the Everglades and follow it north, by easy stages, to the Canadian border. Illustrated with photographs. Index.

Booklist 48:57; 96 O 15 '51; N 15 '51
Bookmark 11:38 D '51 20w

"I am happy to report that in 'North with the Spring' Mr. Teale has got himself back into his books. Now and then he drags in statistics by their heels. But primarily this is his own book. And when he is writing about himself and his own reactions to the world around him, Edwin Way Teale is at his best." Walter Harding
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 25 '51 500w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Yates
Christian Science Monitor p14 N 29 '51 750w
Cleveland Open Shelf p26 N '51

Reviewed by J. E. Brown
+ Library J 76:1803 N 1 '51 90w

"Essential for most libraries." W. K. Harrison
+ Library J 76:2118 D 15 '51 70w

"There are candor and simplicity about the writings of Edwin Teale that set him apart among contemporary naturalists. He enjoys his own outdoor experiences with irrepressible gusto; and happily his written record sounds as though it had been set down for his own delectation. With very rare exceptions, what he writes—regardless of how intricate or astonishing it may be—can be accepted at face value, for no naturalist is more scrupulous about checking facts and their interpretation." R. C. Murphy
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 N 11 '51 1200w

"Packed with solid learning and enriched with passages from the classics of natural history, this chronicle of birds and batrachians, saurians and ophidians, eagle banders, turtle taggers, and snake hunters, is deeply pleasant. As a story of adventure shared by husband and wife, it is warm and moving. And it has the time-sweep of a first-rate guide, leading one out to some remnants of wilderness beauty." W. M. Teller
+ N Y Times p16 N 4 '51 550w

"It's a book that, if you let it, can keep you the best of company all winter, a book you'll honestly hate to finish. They don't come any better than Mr. Teale in his field, and he's had the good judgment to write his book for the interested average reader rather than for his fellow-naturalists." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 9 '51 800w

"Written beautifully, and written out of a wide knowledge of nature. . . More, it is superbly illustrated with photographs." D. C. Peattie
+ Sat R of Lit 34:11 N 3 '51 1300w
Springf'd Republican p3D D 23 '51 240w

TEBBEL, JOHN WILLIAM. Conqueror. 352p $3 Dutton

Johnson, Sir William—Fiction 51-9844

Historical novel based on the life of Sir William Johnson, British superintendent-general of Indian affairs in North America. It begins with his arrival in New York as plain William Johnson, just landed from Ireland. It follows his career as overseer of his uncle's vast lands along the Mohawk, describes his management of the Indians, his marriages, and ends with the death of his greatest personal enemy.

"The book achieves a gratifying historical coloration in sections 2 and 3. Johnson's development as a powerful figure in wilderness affairs illuminates regional history. How he becomes spokesman for the Indian confederation, how the confederation aids him in bush fights against the French and their Indian allies, guerilla action which later became the French and Indian wars, is well told. Many historical events crowd the final chapters, with the result that the fictional touch is altogether lost." F. N. Litten
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 8 '51 370w
Kirkus 19:32 Ja 15 '51 120w

"Absorbing love affairs and a picture of elegant Colonial society add light touches to historical facts. Recommended." K. A. Shorey
+ Library J 76:514 Mr 15 '51 80w

"This book is a valuable, even though a little one-sided, introduction to a great and almost forgotten Founding Father." Margaret Widdemer
+ N Y Times p22 Ap 8 '51 290w

"Just another 'historical' for the lending libraries. The wise librarian will put it on the shelf between those novels which cater to the lover of 'history' and those which meet the less exigent demands of the pure romantic. This one will satisfy neither." E. J. Fitzgerald
Sat R of Lit 34:14 Ap 28 '51 290w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter
Springf'd Republican p26A My 6 '51 300w

TEBBEL, JOHN WILLIAM. Your body: how to keep it healthy; with an introd. by Morris Fishbein. 233p $2.95 Harper

613 Hygiene 51-124

"For many years John Tebbel has been a science writer and editor. He has written several books which testify to his competence. In this book, he has presented for the general reader his own research into personal hygiene. . . My job in reading this book was to authenticate it. As editor of some leading medical publications for more than thirty-five years, and as the author of several books in the same field, I can say that practically everything in the book represents the best medical opinion of this particular time." (Introd) Partial contents: Food; Digestion and elimination; Eyes and ears; Exercise; Hair; Posture; Colds; Sex; The mind and the body; How to live happily for a long time. Index.

"Mr. Tebbel has done more than express facts. He has expressed them in a simple, clear-cut style which is very appealing and readable." O. E. Byrd + Am J Pub Health 41:732 Je '51 200w
Booklist 47:216 F 15 '51
Bookmark 10:156 Ap '51 30w
Kirkus 18:688 N 15 '50 140w

"By the large, perhaps, this book does not contain any great news for the average reader. But 'news' is not what's needed for most people. What is needed—and what Mr. Tebbel provides is—a reminder. Take his book that way and it will give you sound guidance. It could even help you to turn the corner into the road marked 'Good Health.'" J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 14 '51 700w

"The book which is written in the language of the layman, is well organized for easy reference by the reader. . . It is written with a positive attitude and a common sense philosophy of healthy living." Richard Henchey
+ Springf'd Republican p10C Ja 21 '51 130w
Wis Lib Bul 47:85 Ap '51

TEETERS, NEGLEY KING, and REINEMANN, JOHN OTTO. Challenge of delinquency; causation, treatment, and prevention of juvenile delinquency. 819p il $7.35; to schools $5.50 Prentice-Hall

364.36 Juvenile delinquency 50-12402

"This book is primarily for use in colleges and universities. . . It attempts to combine a critical appraisal of theories, particularly regarding causation of delinquency, with a description and an evaluation of the machinery that society has set up to deal with the delinquency problem. . . The term 'delinquency'—as used in this book—refers to children and older youth only, even though today some penologists also apply the term to the criminal behavior of adults." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"The reviewer's opinion is that The Challenge of Delinquency will have a more responsive audience among practitioners. Students will probably be overwhelmed by the mass of details and will search in vain for threads of continuity, themes and major emphases. . . The authors' otherwise excellent scholarship is marred by their utilization of irrelevant descriptive data. Practitioners, on the other hand, will probably overlook and forgive such material and find other portions of the book useful as a manual or reference." M. L. Barron

TEETERS, N. K.—Continued
+ — Am Soc R 16:127 F '51 750w

Reviewed by G. B. Mangold
Ann Am Acad 275:200 My '51 450w

Booklist 47:183 Ja 15 '51

Reviewed by H. E. Jensen
Social Forces 29:460 My '51 330w

"This book can be recommended to judges, probation officers, social workers, and also to lay persons interested in this serious and growing American problem." L. T. Stern
+ Survey 87:302 Je '51 400w

TEICHMANN, FREDERICK KURT. Airplane design manual. 3d ed 382p il $7.50 Pitman 629.1341 Airplanes—Design and construction
50-58033

"The appearance of the revised edition of this well-known work is timely. The book remains a fairly inclusive but simple introduction for use by persons who must study the subject at home, engineers entering the field without specialized education in the subject, and draftsmen. The second edition was published in 1942 [Book Review Digest 1943]. In this edition, material has been added on such recent developments as jet engines, rockets, tricycle landing gears, and swept-back wings. Forty-two tables of useful engineering data are presented in the first appendix. Another appendix contains design data on several notable American planes." Library J

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 76:335 F 15 '51 90w

"The book is particularly suitable for such readers as production workers in airplane manufacturing plants and draftsmen, especially those who must gain their knowledge of the subject in home study. In this timely revised edition, there is a fair amount of new material including discussions of jet engines, recent research in seating arrangements, and new structural materials."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 36:1 Ja '51

TEILHET, DARWIN. Mission of Jeffery Tolamy. 287p $3 Sloane
51-11312

Historical novel of Hawaii in the early nineteenth century. Tho the hero and one or two others are fictional, most of the cast are historical figures. The plot of the tale is concerned with a Russian attempt to take over the islands.

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Je 10 '51 350w

"A vigorous adventure of old Hawaii, this underscores current events while making Island history and people come alive."
+ Kirkus 19:247 My 15 '51 150w

"This is a colorful and tensely told romance—based on a solid knowledge of Hawaii, past and present." Margaret Widdemer
+ N Y Times p14 Jl 1 '51 360w

"Here you will find setting and atmosphere that have been little used up to now, and a whacking good love-and-adventure story to go with it. You'll also get a new perspective on the history of Hawaii a century and more ago, for Mr. Teilhet has taken the greatest pains to be accurate about his historical fact as well as his lush tropical color."
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 26 '51 750w

"Mr. Teilhet's style and plotting is simple, direct, and serviceable. His action scenes carry the reader along with ease. Color of the kind known as local is supplied in requisite amounts, and the love story is never too obtrusive. The historical setting, presumably authentic, you can take or leave alone. It is at best merely a framework on which to hang an acceptably fast-moving adventure story." E. J. Fitzgerald
+ Sat R of Lit 34:16 Ag 11 '51 260w

TELLER, WALTER MAGNES. Island summer; il. by Donald McKay. 221p $3 Knopf
B or 92 Martha's Vineyard, Massachusetts
51-3316

Partly personal diary, partly fictionized anecdotes, relating the events and the thoughts of a summer the author spent with his family on Martha's Vineyard. Author is a newspaper editor, writer and part-time farmer in Bucks County, Pennsylvania.

Booklist 47:344 Je 1 '51

Bookmark 10:230 Jl '51 40w

Reviewed by Edmund Fuller
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 3 '51 320w

"Even the blessed island itself might well be grateful for this book which, skipping panegyric and all stuffiness, conveys the beauty and the spell." T. M. Longstreth
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 31 '51 450w

"A pleasant, intelligent diary-notebook which should find an appreciative audience in parents of all ages."
+ Kirkus 19:201 Ap 1 '51 180w

Reviewed by Edith Warren
New Eng Q 24:414 S '51 200w

"All who love islands or Martha's Vineyard, or who would stake out a claim of their own in summer as families did long ago before sophistication was the thing, will relish this book of a summer and a family that belonged. The truth of it is here, and the pure sunny heart of the season to be re-lived." H. B. Hough
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 My 27 '51 550w

"A family with its feet on the earth, happy with clams, sand, water, stars, sun, rain, primitive plumbing and mutual interest and affection—that is the Tellers. Those in tune to like this book will like it a lot. Mr. McKay's drawings are good." R. L. Duffus
N Y Times p7 Jl 1 '51 360w

New Yorker 27:79 Je 30 '51 160w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 S 9 '51 280w

Reviewed by H. B. Hough
Sat R of Lit 34:18 Ag 11 '51 460w

Springf'd Republican p8D Jl 1 '51 130w

TEMPLIN, MILDRED C. Development of reasoning in children with normal and defective hearing. 143p $3 Univ. of Minn.
136.7 Child study. Deaf. Reasoning

"The purpose of [the] study is to investigate the effect upon reasoning ability of a restricted environment due to (1) an intrinsic factor of reduced hearing acuity and (2) an extrinsic factor of residence in an institution." (El School J) "This study included 850 pupils in state schools for the deaf, in special day classes for children with defective hearing, and in the public schools." (School & Society)

"The reviewer feels that Templin has made a rare and significant contribution to the psychology of children with impaired hearing." S. A. Kirk
+ El School J 51:533 My '51 500w

School & Society 72:432 D 23 '50 20w

TENENBAUM, SAMUEL. William Heard Kilpatrick; trail blazer in education; with an introd. by John Dewey. 318p $4 Harper
B or 92 Kilpatrick, William Heard. Project method in teaching 51-6825

"This biography, written by a student and warm admirer of Professor Kilpatrick, sets forth his life and ideas in terms of warm praise and belief. Kilpatrick's chief contribution to the progressive education movement was his 'project method', and he believed the child's whole personality should be enthusiastically engaged in purposive activities, and that repetitive book learning, examinations, and sterile memory work on mental discipline subjects were futile. . . The main part of his life was spent as a most influential professor at Columbia University's Teachers' College, and he was later instrumental in founding Bennington College." (Kirkus) Index.

Booklist 48:64 O 15 '51

Bookmark 11:83 Ja '52 30w

"For educators, intellectuals, liberals, his story will command a definite and specific audience."

Kirkus 19:376 Jl 15 '51 240w

"This book should be read by all people interested in teaching and education. An excellent, readable handling of a difficult task." C. J. Roth

+ Library J 76:1566 O 1 '51 100w

Nation 173:573 D 29 '51 40w

School & Society 74:192 S 22 '51 30w

"Much of the excellence of this book is due to the fact that Prof. Kilpatrick's painstaking daily record of his life was opened to the author. It is Mr. Tenenbaum's achievement, however, that he has used his materials so skillfully and has produced a book that is both informative and readable. The volume belongs on any shelf devoted to really good studies on modern education and great teachers." Donald Derby

Springf'd Republican p10D O 7 '51 480w

TENNANT, RICHARD BREMNER. American cigarette industry; a study in economic analysis and public policy. 411p $5 Yale univ. press

338.47 Cigaret industry and trade

50-10509

"This book is a contribution to the analysis of monopolistic industries and is also relevant to current issues of public policy. Professor Tennant employs economic analysis and a historical approach to explain the development of the cigarette industry and its present structure and behavior. He shows how advertising serves both as the principal instrument of market tactics and as the most important influence on market structure. . . Although primarily concerned with the cigarette industry, this book throws light on the adequacy of present public policy toward monopoly power in general. Richard B. Tennant is Assistant Professor of Economics at Yale University." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

"This Volume I in 'Yale Studies in Economics' gives the series a commendable beginning. From the standpoint of technical economic scrutiny and statement the book is good; the author seems less sensitive as a social observer, to the capers cut by the industry." Broadus Mitchell

+ Am Hist R 56:671 Ap '51 500w

Am Pol Sci R 45:242 Mr '51 30w

"This scholarly analysis of the cigarette business brings together a wealth of valuable information, but its presentation suffers from divided purpose." G. B. Hotchkiss

+ Ann Am Acad 274:242 Mr '51 650w

"Although his subject is highly controversial, Tennant leaves few openings for disagreement with either his methods or his conclusions. He has done a thorough job of assembling and analyzing his materials. He reasons well, and he writes well." Reavis Cox

+ J Pol Econ 59:458 O '51 650w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 75:2006 N 15 '50 80w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 D 3 '50 140w

"Although there is, on economic grounds, no strong case for reforms, two possible ones in the structure are suggested; provisions against the earning of monopoly profits in the future, and a limitation of advertising. The suggested reforms may be questioned, especially since no practical methods are outlined for enforcing them. As a whole, the study provides a wealth of information and is a contribution to the economics of size in industry and business."

+ — U S Quarterly Bk R 7:46 Mr '51 280w

"This is a good book and it serves a highly useful purpose." J. K. Galbraith

+ Yale R n s 40:565 spring '51 1200w

TERRALL, ROBERT. Steps of the quarry. 350p $3 Crown

51-3930

A story of the American Occupation forces in an Austrian town, near a huge Nazi concentration camp of Hitler's time.

Reviewed by J. W. Rodgers

Library J 76:862 My 15 '51 140w

"Swiftly paced, the narrative is of necessity limited to men who personalize conqueror and conquered. . . Mr. Terrall is successful, too, on a more profound level. He firmly probes a world of transcendent human endeavor and value. His spokesman, Pertl, represents that quality in humanity which, if anything, will destroy the symbols of its ignorance and self-torment." John Nerber

+ N Y Times p17 My 27 '51 400w

"The accents are authentic. Millions of GIs will testify to that. But the obscene humor of the barracks rooms, the incidents of loot and lust, the savage and vicious pranks of American combat troops in an Austrian town in the spring and summer of 1945—all these pile up cumulative horror which becomes nearly unbearable." R. G. C.

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Jl 22 '51 330w

"A first novel and a very good one." Van Van Praag

+ Sat R of Lit 34:18 My 26 '51 550w

TETTEMER, JOHN MOYNIHAN. I was a monk; autobiography; ed. by Janet Mabie; with a foreword by Jean Burden and an introd. by John Burton. 280p il $3.50 Knopf

B or 92 Passionists 51-11062

In his youth and young manhood the author was a monk in a Passionist monastery. During a period of convalescence in Switzerland he came to the conclusion that he could no longer accept the Catholic creed. His years out of the monastery were spent in California. This partial autobiography published posthumously describes his childhood and his years in the monastery, concluding with his return to secular life.

"Entirely aside from the controversial subject which is the crux of the book, 'I Was a Monk' is interesting because of the detail it contains on the routine of the priestly life. Tettemer explains in simple language what it is which gives the apparently hard and unrewarding life of the Passionist monk its intense interest and joyfulness." Edward Barry

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 O 7 '51 380w

"While not a book theologians will like, it is an honest, sincere and reverent account of a spiritual pilgrimage from intellectual certainty and emotional ecstasy to philosophical doubt, emotional stability and peace of mind."

Kirkus 19:380 Jl 15 '51 200w

"The description of the life of a Passionist monk is of great interest, but readers, especially Catholic readers, will justifiably complain that the explanations given for the departure from the church are inadequate and unsatisfactory and that much of importance has been left unsaid. Since the spectacular event of Merton, such a book is bound to achieve a degree of popularity." G. W. Wakefield

+ Library J 76:1217 Ag '51 100w

Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 S 30 '51 750w

Reviewed by J. A. Pike

N Y Times p22 O 21 '51 370w

TETTEMER, J. M.—Continued
"There will be those, of course, who disagree. But few will find any offense in so transparently frank and honest a book. And even the ordinary reader who, perhaps, has spent little time thinking about such matters as occupied John Tettemer, will sense the sincerity and goodness of the man in this simply and reverently written record of a life and will profit by his story." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 5 '51 900w

"Sensation-seekers had best leave the book alone. There are no revelations here of dark doings in monastery cellars. Tettemer makes passing recognition of abuses in the Church (he feels that they are less than might be expected in any similar organization), then goes on to relate in unimpassioned tones the intellectual and intuitive reasons for abandoning what he had thought to be his calling. Many will hate him for writing this book, but John Moynihan Tettemer hated no one. Maybe that was why he had to do what he did." Harry Sylvester
+ Sat R of Lit 34:57 D 1 '51 500w

TEWKSBURY, DONALD GEORGE, comp. Source materials on Korean politics and ideologies [proc]. (Source bks. on Far Eastern political ideologies ser, v2) 190p pa $2.50 Inst. of Pacific relations
951.9 Korea—History—Sources. Korea—Politics and government

"Arranged chronologically, this is a compilation of the texts of documents relating to the government and foreign relations of Korea from 1871 to July 1950. Included are notes written between the Korean and Japanese governments before annexation, documents pertaining to the administration of Korea after the annexation, and material relating to UN jurisdiction of the country. In addition to documents, there are statements by individuals and newspaper articles. Some texts are presented in full, while some are excerpted, and each entry is carefully documented." Library J

Booklist 47:204 F 1 '51
Foreign Affairs 29:505 Ap '51 10w
Reviewed by Donald Wasson
Library J 76:112 Ja 15 '51 120w

TEXTOR, ROBERT B. Failure in Japan; with keystones for a positive policy. 262p $3 Day
952.033 Japan—History—Allied occupation, 1945- 51-10997

An inquiry into MacArthur's conduct of the occupation of Japan by a Cornell professor who was formerly a civilian official in the occupation. His "basic thesis is that the main defenses against communism in Japan are a strong democratic system and a decent standard of living; that the Occupation, after starting successfully to work for these goals, changed course midway and since 1948 has been harming rather than aiding the growth of democracy in Japan." (N Y Times) Index.

Booklist 47:379 Jl 1 '51

"There have been some lulus, but no other author has succeeded in crowding so many misstatements into fewer than 300 pages. . . The author has a keen ear for rumors and a phenomenal knack of forgetting the facts that would harm his argument. Owen Lattimore supplies a curiously restrained introduction to all this." Walter Simmons
— Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Je 10 '51 260w

"Mr. Textor's analysis of the hidden power structure behind the facade of new democratic institutions is sound and useful, though there is room for wide disagreement on the solutions he suggests, particularly in the economic and diplomatic fields." Robert Peel
+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 My 31 '51 700w
Foreign Affairs 30:168 O '51 50w
Reviewed by George Sansom
Nation 172:614 Je 30 '51 1100w
Reviewed by T. C. Smith
New Repub 125:19 S 10 '51 550w
Reviewed by A. T. Steele
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Jl 29 '51 550w

"There is need for a detailed and penetrating study of our record in Japan. We could learn much from our mistakes there. Mr. Textor has put his finger on some of our worst errors, but he has by no means given us a balanced picture of the whole. The very title of his book suggests a certain bias." E. O. Reischauer
N Y Times p3 Je 3 '51 900w
Reviewed by J. B. Cohen
Sat R of Lit 34:48 Ag 4 '51 950w

"This inquiry into MacArthur's conduct of the occupation is a forceful statement of one point of view, but it shows considerable bias."
U S Quarterly Bk R 7:290 S '51 180w

TEY, JOSEPHINE, pseud. See Mackintosh, E.

THACHER, RUSSELL. Captain. 280p $3.50 Macmillan
51-10799

A realistic novel about the navy in World war II. The hero is a youthful captain of an LST during heavy combat in the Pacific.

Booklist 47:266; 329 Ap 1 '51; My 15 '51

"It's a pleasure to report that Russell Thacher is not only good, but very good. 'The Captain' is a superior piece of fiction. It has a driving story, some excellent characters and, above all else, perspective. Mr. Thacher writes about a minute segment of World war II but he does, nevertheless, see the war whole." V. P. Hass
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 20 '51 380w
Kirkus 19:136 Mr 1 '51 190w

"The emergencies, the tensions and strains as they are reflected on the men, with comic relief into coarseness is well told. Salty, bawdy, vital for ex-service men." H. A. Wooster
Library J 76:773 My 1 '51 100w

"Mr. Thacher's skill increases as the story progresses, so that the final chapters in which the captain accomplishes his mission but is relieved of his command are touching but not maudlin, effective but not theatrical. He has made people out of his characters." E. L. Acken
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 My 20 '51 330w
Reviewed by Harry Gilroy
N Y Times p16 My 27 '51 280w

"One of those well-packed, thoroughly believable, thoroughly unimaginative United States Navy novels that after the first few pages begin to sound like family reminiscences of a very enthusiastic and detailed sort."
New Yorker 27:117 My 26 '51 80w

"This novel uses the naturalistic tradition while it does not overwhelm us with detail; yet a high technique is lacking. Mr. Thacher has done a workmanlike job of reporting—at times of dramatizing action—but he has not developed a prose or a technique worthy of his subject and his fine intent." L. O. Coxe
Sat R of Lit 34:11 My 19 '51 700w

"Though the author shows a feeling for the sea and a keen understanding of human nature in 'The Captain,' the work falls far short of being a major novel." Richard Henchey
Springf'd Republican p5D Je 17 '51 130w

THANE, ELSWYTH, pseud. See Beebe, E. T. R.

THAYER, CHARLES WHEELER. Bears in the caviar. 303p $3.50 Lippincott
B or 92 Diplomatic memoirs 51-10087

Reminiscences of an employee of our State department, who served as attaché and vice-consul in the Soviet, in Nazi Germany, and in Afghanistan, during the thirties and forties.

Booklist 47:265; 293 Ap 1 '51; Ap 15 '51

"This is one book of diplomatic memoirs that you can read for laughs without offending the author. The title 'Bears in the Caviar' sounds more than vaguely Russian. About two-thirds of Mr. Thayer's book is devoted to how he did, and did not, get along in the Soviet Union both before and during the war. On the whole, he seems to have had an enjoyable, if exasperating time in the long-forgotten Litvinoff era. . . Since we live in days when pleasantries about the Russians sound a bit awkward, some of Mr. Thayer's reminiscences seem wryly ironical. But they also contain a share of pleasant nostalgia, too." Herbert Kupferberg

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ap 22 '51 650w

Reviewed by Herbert Mitgang

N Y Times p23 Je 24 '51 450w

"The passage of time and the author's obviously favorable estimate of his own powers as a raconteur have undoubtedly resulted in a decrease in the factual content of his stories. Relatively few of them, however, have got completely out of hand in the process of being polished up for the edification of the peephole public."

New Yorker 27:120 Ap 28 '51 160w

"Mr. Thayer can make the most horrifying situations seem lots of fun. The train that got stuck, full of foodless diplomats, barely outside the line of German fire; trying to phone during an air-raid; taking VIPs out to their warship in a storm on a dark night in a mine-filled, sub-haunted harbor; going by bus to Kabul amongst bandits—in retrospect all these sound like one, roaring good time. And, like a good raconteur, Mr. Thayer always laughs first at himself and only afterward at the others." Anne Fremantle

+ Sat R of Lit 34:21 My 12 '51 650w

THAYER, LEE (MRS EMMA REDINGTON [LEE] THAYER). Guilt edged. 216p $2.50 Dodd

51-13637

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 N 18 '51 40w

"The detection, by Peter Clancy and his valet Wiggars, and the writing are exactly what Mrs. Thayer's small but steady audience expect." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p32 N 4 '51 50w

"You may spot the mysterious weapon very early, and thus solve the main puzzle, but those who like Mrs. Thayer's story-telling won't mind that." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 28 '51 70w

THAYER, VIVIAN TROW. Attack upon the American secular school. 257p $3 Beacon press

377.1 Church and education. Public schools—U.S. 51-10791

This book is a "review and appraisal of the fundamental principles of secular education in the United States." (Pref) Index.

Am Pol Sci R 45:908 S '51 20w

"Dr. Thayer's volume is a calm and careful study of the school problem. . . It is, of course, vigorously against any division of public funds between public and parochial schools. Many Protestant advocates of one form or another of religious education in the public schools will be critical of some of his conclusions, but though his arguments may not convince them, it will be to their advantage to use his method of trying to solve the problem on the basis of principle rather than on grounds of immediate expediency." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 68:741 Je 20 '51 260w

"If [the book] is defective in any respect, it is a tendency to minimize the question raised by those who want a theological orientation for their children without 'seceding' from the public school system." Joseph Fletcher

Churchman 165:16 Ag '51 220w

Kirkus 19:221 Ap 15 '51 160w

"This survey of the relation of moral to religious education in American public schools is one of the most constructive volumes yet published in a notable series."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:266 S '51 220w

Reviewed by W. L. Sperry

Yale R n s 41:142 autumn '51 300w

THEATRE ARTS (magazine). Theatre arts anthology; a record and a prophecy; ed. by Rosamond Gilder [and others]. 687p $5 Theatre arts

792.082 Theater—U.S. 50-11079

"There can be few theater-lovers in America who did not know and greatly value Theatre Arts Magazine. Begun in 1916 by Sheldon Cheney, this periodical was both a record and a prophecy of the American and international theatrical scene. When the old Theatre Arts fell at last in 1948, a victim of economic necessity, the whole theater world must have known that it had lost a friend." (San Francisco Chronicle) This anthology is a collection of 132 articles culled from those published during its years of existence.

Booklist 47:153 D 15 '50

Reviewed by Claudia Cassidy

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 Ja 14 '51 370w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '51

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 75:2155 D 15 '50 40w

New Repub 123:21 D 18 '50 50w

"There comes now from the presses a book which is a reminder that there once was [a theater publication] which was a giant among them—a theater magazine of depth and meaning, of good taste and fine appreciation. And the book will stir some of us of the theater into a feeling of guilt that we let it wither and die when we might have supplied the financial and moral plasma that would have kept it alive. . . The 'Theatre Arts Anthology' renews pride in those who write of the theater." Russel Crouse

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 D 10 '50 850w

Reviewed by Lewis Nichols

N Y Times p32 Mr 18 '51 310w

New Yorker 26:75 D 23 '50 120w

"This anthology of 132 articles carefully culled from 52 volumes comprises a full and comprehensive survey of all the theater arts during almost one third of the present century. It is not simply the most exciting theater book to appear this year; it is one of the most exciting to be published in the last 50 years." F. J.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 D 17 '50 200w

THEMERSON, STEFAN, and WRIGHT, BARBARA. Mr Rouse builds his house; drawings by Franciszka Themerson. 117p $1.25 Lothrop

"As Mr. Rouse decides what kind of house he wants, the reader is introduced to several types of dwellings, from an African hut to a New York skyscraper. Then comes the installation of plumbing and lighting. Modern methods are contrasted with the more primitive, and some information is given on how these mysteries work." N Y Times

Kirkus 19:529 S 15 '51 100w

"It cannot be classified as purely informative; indeed the informal, partly rhyming style is happily nonsensical. It would be a merry gift for any family of children moving to a new home. It brings together a lot of facts and thoughts and stimulates a child's curiosity about the mechanics of living. It is an odd sort of cross between a truly poetic book like Behn's 'All About Time' and the Schneiders'

THEMERSON, STEFAN—Continued
'Let's Look Under the City.' In its tiny space it does an unusual thing very well." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 11 '51 200w

"This appealing, square little book mixes pleasant nonsense with informaton in an original manner. . . The book needs some explanation, for the younger chldren, of the daft little jokes and the occasional oddities of type arrangement—6-year-old Ann was fascinated by the type that marches upstairs. With this help children will have a preliminary knowledge of what goes into building a house, by the time Mr. Rouse moves in." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p34 O 28 '51 180w

"Not quite five by five inches, this square book is a sort of juvenile version of 'Mr. Blanding's Dream House.' The line drawings are very much in the Thurber genre with a dash of Edward Lear's nonsense in the sketches and in some of the verses."
San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 25 '51 120w

THEOTOCOPULI, DOMINICO, known as EL GRECO. El Greco (Domenicos Theotocopoulos); text by Leo Bronstein. (Library of great painters) 126p il 50 col pl $10 Abrams
759.6 Paintings, Spansh 50-12757

"Containing 50 reproductions in color, including most of the old favorites such a 'View of Toledo,' 'Grand Inquisitor,' 'Burial of Count Orgaz,' 'St. Martin and the Beggar,' 'St. Dominic,' etc., its interest is enhanced by a challenging discussion both of El Greco as an artist and of each individual picture. The text is by Leo Bronstein, Associated Professor of Iranian Art and History, the Asia Institute, New York." Christian Science Monitor

---

Booklist 47:221 F 15 '51

"For those who sometimes feel the urge to spend an hour with El Greco, this new volume issued by Harry N. Abrams will be most welcome." J. G. Harrison
+ Christian Science Monitor p7 D 16 '50 650w

Manchester Guardian p4 O 30 '51 80w

"Bronstein's essay on El Greco, though it is over complex and broken up by excessive dashes and parentheses, achieves a kind of electric tension which is highly suitable for a discussion of El Greco's art." S. L. Faison
+ Nation 171:681 D 23 '50 300w

Reviewed by Lincoln Kirstein
New Repub 123:25 D 11 '50 60w

Reviewed by Emily Genauer
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 D 10 '50 500w

Reviewed by Clement Greenberg
N Y Times p5 D 3 '50 300w 80w

Reviewed by R. H. Hagan
+ San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 26 '50

Reviewed by A. W. Morgan
Sat R of Lit 34:29 F 3 '51 480w

Time 56:73 O 23 '50 330w

THIRKELL, MRS ANGELA (MACKAIL). Duke's daughter. 322p $3.50 Knopf 51-11080

The latest chronicle of Barsetshire continues with the doings of the leading county families, but especially with Lady Cora, the Duke of Omnium's daughter.

Booklist 48:86 N 1 '51

"An engaging satire on postwar society."
+ Bookmark 11:60 D '51 20w

"This book's greatest delight is in its wise or amusing observations on life tucked in as thick as raisins in a rich cake. Mrs. Thirkell has a livable philosophy of life that leaves the reader with the reassuring feeling that life is a tolerable business after all, and even at times quite pleasant, or is it so only in Barsetshire county?" Mildred Walker
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 N 4 '51 500w

Reviewed by Ruth Chapin
Christian Science Monitor p8 O 18 '51 280w

Kirkus 19:451 Ag 15 '51 60w

Reviewed by K. T. Willis
Library J 76:1334 S 1 '51 100w

"It is difficult to make any useful assessment of The Duke's Daughter for Mrs Angela Thirkell does nothing in it which she has not done before, and since her large public have not objected to anything of the kind already they are not likely to do so now. . . Why does not Mrs Thirkell study Trollope to some purpose and acquire a little of his common sense?" Elizabeth Jenkins
Manchester Guardian p4 S 28 '51 170w

Reviewed by Anne Brooks
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 N 4 '51 390w

"Even if one approaches Miss Thirkell's narrow little world somewhat impatiently, it is difficult not to become charmed, amused and engrossed. Her sense of the ludicrous is enchanting. Perhaps, above all, it is her basic human kindness and her remarkable insight into the delicate relationship between parents and adolescent and grown children, that endear her books to so many people." Nancie Matthews
+ — N Y Times p5 O 14 '51 470w

New Yorker 27:145 O 13 '51 160w

"Angela Thirkell's readers have an insatiable appetite for the same book, and the creator of Barsetshire and its lively, garrulous, unreconstructed people goes on happily writing that book over and over. Here is another tart and tasty serving of the same expert dish." Walter Havighurst
Sat R of Lit 34:18 N 3 '51 320w

Springf'd Republican p12C O 21 '51 300w

"It is to be wished that Mrs. Thirkell could refrain from using the names of Trollope's very own characters. Attempts which have been made to compare her to Trollope himself are, of course, egregiously misleading. She has a talent for light entertainment, but she entirely lacks Trollope's deep sociological flair and realistic approach."
Times [London] Lit Sup p617 S 28 '51 100w

THOBY-MARCELIN, PHILIPPE, and MARCELIN, PIERRE. Pencil of God; tr. by Leonard Thomas; with an introd. by Edmund Wilson. 204p $2.75 Houghton
50-58334

Life in a small town in Haiti is the background for this novel. Diogene Cyprien, owner of a warehouse, a man who had loved many women, finally reached the end of his philanderings thru the machinations of two women, plus voodoo, plus the gossip and superstitions of the townspeople.

Booklist 47:181; 220 Ja 15 '51; F 15 '51

Reviewed by Paul Engle
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 F 4 '51 270w

"A curious and sophisticated book. . . While obviously not a book for everybody, 'The Pencil of God' presents aspects of a unique culture. Edmund Wilson has contributed an urbane and enlightening introduction." Ruth Chapin
Christian Science Monitor p9 F 5 '51 230w

Kirkus 18:664 N 1 '50 260w

"The style and language of the story, which is done in primary colors lacking all shades and tones, reflects the environment of the country. An interesting if not important book. Recommended with great hesitation for the average public library." C. J. Roth
Library J 76:181 F 1 '51 80w

Reviewed by Ernest Jones
Nation 172:112 F 3 '51 1050w

Reviewed by J. W. Vandercook
New Repub 124:21 F 12 '51 450w

"In 'The Pencil of God,' the Brothers Marcelin have done something more than give to the world a moving and well told story. They have placed themselves in the same relationship to Haitian literature as Chaucer to the English. They fling wide the door of a hitherto hidden storehouse of fabulous native richness." Z. N. Hurston
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 F 4 '51 600w

"It may be entirely unjust to the translator to wonder whether some desirable qualities are lost in this very readable English version. Still, when it is said of the leading character who is knee-deep in tragedy, 'Diogène, who was already seething, blew his top,' the reader doesn't know whether the authors are laughing at him or not, or whether they are betrayed by translation. The story is too sad to be kidded in any language, even when told as a voodoo quickie." Langston Hughes
N Y Times p5 F 4 '51 500w

"It is a well-told story, which is made very moving by its cunning blend of tragedy and comedy; the characters are absurd but their situation in an intellectual desert is terrible." Anthony West
New Yorker 27:122 Mr 17 '51 480w

"An amoral affair if you like, free and wild and imaginative like the still half-primitive people it is written about, but a delightful and highly entertaining tale." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 20 '51 650w

"The fascinating contrasts of Catholicism and voodoo which underlie the story serve to underline the vitality of this most intensely vivid tale. . . The novelty of the material, the literary distinction of its treatment, and the 'serious basis, in anthropology and in moral insight, of the Marcelins' work in fiction' make this one of the most interesting books of the year." Pamela Taylor
+ Sat R of Lit 34:28 Mr 3 '51 550w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal
Springf'd Republican p8C F 4 '51 150w
Time 57:82 F 5 '51 550w

THOMAS, CHARLES W. Ice is where you find it. 378p il $4.50 Bobbs

940.542 World war, 1939-1945—Naval operations. Ice 51-12926

The story of the Greenland Patrol in World war II, by the one-time captain of the Northland, who later became commander of the whole unit. Illustrated with photographs. Index.

Booklist 48:63 O 15 '51

Reviewed by J. E. Brown
Library J 76:1419 S 15 '51 110w

"It is a fascinating story. While scholars will not read it for its contribution to Arctic lore and history, it is nevertheless a real contribution to military history and should be read as such for years—by those future historians and technicians who are interested in the modern (though all too slow) transformation of our Navy from the former warm-water navy into the kind of all-water organization that Len Bailey has been screaming about for years." E .P. Hanson
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 N 25 '51 800w

"These are adventures worth reading. Captain Thomas, an able, modest and daredevil sort of fellow when in a tight spot, tells his tale well, and has the gift of laughing at his own discomfiture." Russell Owen
+ N Y Times p20 O 7 '51 550w
San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 18 '51 950w

"In his writing Capt. Thomas is self-effacing and given to understatement, with a vein of humor running through his book. Sometimes laconic and not always clear as to who and what, and with no conscious attempt to build up or fictionize, sometimes too he is inclined to digress and drift into distracting details instead of getting on with his story." D. B. B.
+ — Springf'd Republican p30A N 11 '51 400w

THOMAS, GEORGE ERNST. Faith can master fear. 160p $2 Revell

248 Psychology, Religious. Pastoral work. Fear 50-10876

The author discusses the various fears modern man is afflicted with—fear of the future, fear of insecurity, fear of loneliness, fear of death, etc.—and shows how faith in Christianity can help him.

Bookmark 10:108 F '51 40w

Reviewed by Sam Nader
Churchman 165:15 F 15 '51 120w

Reviewed by O. J. Aldrich
Springf'd Republican p8C F 11 '51 150w

THOMAS, HAROLD EDGAR. Conservation of ground water; a survey of the present ground-water situation in the United States; sponsored by the Conservation foundation. 327p maps $5 McGraw

551.49 Water, Underground. Water Supply—U.S. 51-5576

"Harold E. Thomas' study of the ground water situation in this country is made up of case histories of the major areas where underground sources are used largely for domestic and industrial water supply. It is designed to bring home to the general public the seriousness of the current situation. . . In addition, it contains a large amount of factual information that will be of great value to practicing engineers." (Eng N) Bibliography. Index.

"The author adroitly handles the subject of controversial land use practices. His comments on case histories cited could give no offense to agencies attempting to justify certain practices by hiding behind the strange cloak of water conservation. . . The author expresses an easy-to-read message which could do much toward sounding an alert to the pyramiding need for water conservation." T. R. Simpson
+ Am J Pub Health 41:1529 D '51 250w
Booklist 48:6 S 1 '51
+ Eng N 147:44 Ag 16 '51 200w

THOMAS, IVOR. Socialist tragedy. 254p $2.75 Macmillan

335 Socialism 51-10368

"Mr. Ivor Thomas is a former member of the Labor government in Britain turned Conservative. . . He attacks the 'myth' that socialism is a barrier against communism. He recalls the actions of the Socialist parties in Eastern Europe and France and Italy as examples of how the socialists were not only powerless against the Communists but allied with the Communists. Mr. Thomas believes the only difference between socialism and communism is in degree; adoption of either results in loss of civil liberties and in reduced standards of living." Current Hist

Reviewed by R. DeV. Williamson
Am Pol Sci R 45:1233 D '51 200w
Booklist 47:357 Je 15 '51

Reviewed by W. S. Hudson
Christian Century 68:1015 S 5 '51 950w

Reviewed by Joseph Fletcher
Churchman 165:17 Ag '51 360w
Current Hist 20:347 Je '51 120w
Foreign Affairs 30:165 O '51 30w

"Ivor Thomas's conversion to Conservatism, despite a few of his more truthful and telling criticisms of Labour policies, will make the normal reader queasy." Frederick Kuh
— + New Repub 125:20 Ag 27 '51 460w

"Mr. Thomas has a good case to make against British Socialism, though his debating flair leads him to extend himself in support of some rather weak positions. His book will be of interest to Americans as an example of how the British carry on their political arguments." August Heckscher

THOMAS, IVOR—Continued
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Ag 26 '51 400w

"For an America which is somewhere in mid-passage between capitalism and socialism Mr. Thomas' study of the working of that political theory on the other side of the Atlantic should prove interesting and provocative reading." Foster Hailey
+ N Y Times p10 Ap 8 '51 350w

Reviewed by George Soule
Yale R n s 40:742 summer '51 410w

THOMAS, LEWIS VICTOR, and FRYE, RICHARD NELSON. The United States and Turkey and Iran [maps by R. L. Williams] (American foreign policy lib) 291p $4.25 Harvard univ. press

327.73 U.S.—Relations (general) with Persia. U.S.—Relations (general) with Turkey. Persia. Turkey 51-12894

"This volume deals with the modern Turkey of Ataturk, Inönü, and Bayar and the Persia of Reza Shah and Pahlevi. Authors appraise strengths and weaknesses of each, largely from the American point of view, considering both nations as possible bastions of defense against Russian military, economic, and ideological aggression." Library J

Booklist 48:94 N 15 '51

Reviewed by J. G. Harrison
Christian Science Monitor p9 O 20 '51 300w

Reviewed by Max Fischer
Commonweal 55:19 O 12 '51 800w

Current Hist 21:227 O '51 80w

"A timely book with appended reading lists for further study. For the general reader." J. C. Shipman
+ Library J 76:1332 S 1 '51 70w

"The informative little volume is just the thing for Americans caught with a breach in their background by recent developments in the Middle East. . . Though both sections of this book are tinctured with personal sympathy for the countries under study, they are also filled with intelligent understanding. In both countries there are large reserves of goodwill for the United States, an asset that may yet bring important dividends if properly nourished and preserved." A. T. Steele
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 O 28 '51 950w

"For the intelligent amateur who wants a balanced and factual presentation of the two countries most important to United States interests in the Middle East, the American Foreign Policy Library has just provided 'The United States and Turkey and Iran.' . . It is really two books, each by a young American scholar who has specialized in the field." Farnsworth Fowle
+ N Y Times p10 S 30 '51 270w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 N 11 '51 470w

THOMAS, LOWELL JACKSON, 1892-. Back to Mandalay. 320p il $3.50 Greystone

940.544 World war, 1939-1945—Burma 51-14403

An account of the guerilla operation in Burma, led by the British General Orde Wingate and the American Colonel Philip Cochran, which deflected the Japanese invasion of India in World war II. Copiously illustrated.

Booklist 48:142 D 15 '51

Reviewed by Robert Cromie
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 9 '51 430w

"If you want a war story that can be read quickly, is told with slap and dash, is entertaining without asking that the reader do more than scan . . . if you want, in short, just 'an exciting new book,' then take 'Back to Mandalay.' Lowell Thomas is a competent storyteller within the framework he selects to work." Roland Sawyer
Christian Science Monitor p9 N 19 '51 550w

"Except for several vivid chapters on the airborne landings, Lowell Thomas never transforms this exciting material into a rolling campaign narrative; nor does he let the story tell itself. . . And he never gives a lucid outline of the over-all Burma campaign; as a result, it isn't plain exactly how the guerrilla operation fits in." Wilmott Ragsdale
— N Y Times p34 D 9 '51 320w

"Mr. Thomas carefully traces the development of the campaign and writes in the crisp, lively style expected of this popular author. Interest never flags as the swift, dramatic action goes on from page to page." H. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p3D D 23 '51 250w

"Author Thomas tells a good story, especially when he is describing with veteran skill the wild night in March 1944 when the glider-borne attackers landed behind the Jap lines. The pity is that, after giving the Americans their due, he had relatively little room left to tell the story of the British and Empire troops—whose bitter work began when the gliders rolled to a stop."
+ — Time 58:66 D 24 '51 230w

THOMAS, MARY EDITH (MRS JOEL SCOTT BRANHAM). Medieval skepticism and Chaucer. 184p $3 Pamphlet distributing

821 Chaucer, Geoffrey. Skepticism 50-10677

"An evaluation of the skepticism of the 13th and 14th centuries of Geoffrey Chaucer and his immediate predecessors—an era that looked back on an age of faith and forward to an age of reason." (Subtitle) Bibliography. Index.

"It is good to have this view of Chaucer, because he has always been considered to be a man of wide experience and interests, one who knew human nature and found it his chief interest, enriching the world's literature by his recognizable and familiar-in-every-age men and women. We expect him, therefore, to write about the skepticism of his day. Not to be aware of it is to be insensitive, but not to notice it would be to merit the judgment of insincerity, or at best incompetent workmanship." R. E. Keighon
+ Crozer Q 28:256 Jl '51 450w

School & Society 72:352 N 25 '50 30w

THOMAS, NORMAN MATTOON. A socialist's faith. 326p $4 Norton

335 Socialism. U.S.—Politics and government 51-9725

"The American Socialist leader examines recent world affairs from the point of view of democratic socialism and points out the errors of both communist and capitalist developments. In a personal footnote on war he states that his present concern 'is to prevent both a third world war and the triumph of communism rather than to argue what might have been.'" (Booklist) Index.

Reviewed by R. DeV. Williamson
Am Pol Sci R 45:1233 D '51 130w

Reviewed by H. A. Bone
+ Ann Am Acad 276:143 Je '51 480w

Atlantic 187:86 My '51 130w

Booklist 47:229; 247 Mr 1 '51; Mr 15 '51

Reviewed by F. H. Underhill
Canadian Forum 31:160 O '51 1800w

Reviewed by Roland Sawyer
Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 14 '51 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '51

Foreign Affairs 30:160 O '51 20w

"Well-written, this may prove persuasive to readers caught in the net of world conflict."
+ Kirkus 19:85 F 1 '51 110w

"Well-written volume, finished before Korean war, still very timely and thought-provoking. Highly recommended for larger public and academic libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 76:516 Mr 15 '51 100w

Reviewed by R. N. Baldwin
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ap 8 '51 1000w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus
N Y Times p6 Mr 11 '51 900w

"This would have been a more interesting book to the general reader had Mr. Thomas not 'made socialism and not myself the center of interest.' Norman Thomas has had a full and interesting life, and his own story, told as well as he supports his beliefs here, would make good reading. He has devoted his life to fighting, in a rational, dignified, and quite effective manner for principles of free speech and civil rights." C. W. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p27 My 6 '51 400w

"Here is a calm, enlightened brief for expansion of Socialism, with one strong eye fixed on the danger of the police state. Jim Farley spoke wisely when he said we would be better off with more Americans like Norman Thomas. To which I add, we would be better off with more such books even though we disagree with the main thesis." M. L. Ernst

+ Sat R of Lit 34:11 My 12 '51 1100w

Reviewed by George Britt
Survey 87:182 Ap '51 850w
U S Quarterly Bk R 7:181 Je '51 350w
Wis Lib Bul 47:183 Jl '51

Reviewed by George Soule
Yale R n s 40:742 summer '51 410w

THOMAS, ROSEMARY. Immediate sun. 64p $2.50 Twayne

811 51-5479

"This is a first book of serene, pleasant lyrics written by a young woman whose compassion is happily tempered by a graceful wit. The subject matter [is] nature, art, religion, children." Chicago Sunday Tribune

"The poems are saved from triteness by sincerity and on occasion by a neatness and delicacy of phrasing. Like most books of verse, 'Immediate Sun' is uneven in quality. Miss Thomas' chief fault, I feel, arises from her concern with an attractive phrase rather than with the accuracy of her observation." R. L. Lowe

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 S 23 '51 230w

"The poems, by the careful use of images and memory, are in turn witty, intelligent and deeply moving; they are never dull." Herbert Cahoon

+ Library J 76:1427 S 15 '51 60w

"Some of Miss Thomas's poems are a little forced, or self-conscious, and she is somewhat inclined to overwork the word 'pain'; in others the emotion comes through with both force and simplicity. Mr MacLeish is right in finding this work accomplished; I am not so sure about the idiom being characteristic: it seems, as yet, too unsettled, venturing, rather tentatively, in too many directions, sometimes at once. Which, of course, is all right, and a good way to be beginning." Rolfe Humphries

+ — Nation 173:312 O 13 '51 100w

"Her seven sonnets and her 'London Elegy' seem the most serious efforts in a collection that MacLeish calls 'decisive, accomplished, and responsible.' The book deserves the Twayne award, as it deserves reading, for firm phrase and image." John Holmes

+ N Y Times p19 S 9 '51 240w

Reviewed by A. M. Sullivan
Sat R of Lit 34:24 D 29 '51 310w

THOMPSON, JAMES EDGAR. Inspection organization and methods. 369p il $5 McGraw

658.562 Industrial management 50-7916

"In this book, the emphasis is on those aspects of inspection which concern the executive and supervisory personnel of manufacturing companies. Some space is given to descriptions of inspection instruments and techniques but more is devoted to such topics as the organization of inspection programs, planning of routines and the keeping of records. Numerous forms for inspection reports, return of rejected articles, etc. are illustrated." (Library J) Index.

"The book is of interest to all who are concerned with inspection from the management viewpoint." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 75:1195 Jl '50 90w

"To those members of industrial organizations whose exposure to inspection activities is only incidental or is restricted to close-range departmental contact, Mr. Thompson's book provides an excellent opportunity to understand fully the functions of an Inspection Department." W. J. Hall

+ Management R 39:633 O '50 550w

THOMPSON, LAURA MAUD. Culture in crisis; a study of the Hopi Indians; with a foreword by John Collier and a chapter from the writings of Benjamin Lee Whorf [under the editorship of Gardner Murphy]. 221p il $4 Harper

970.3 Hopi Indians 50-10993

"This study of the contemporary Hopi contains enough historical background to explain the crisis the tribe faces. It reveals the amazing success of an intelligent group in making a living on the harsh northern Arizona desert, and in evolving a way of life that has produced a happy, artistic and peace-loving people." (N Y Times) Index.

"Dr. Thompson's book is a summation of an ambitious study along these lines, by many specialists in co-operation, of the Hopis of Arizona. It is a notable success. At one point, briefly, presentation is weakened by a cloudy passage on theory, postulates, and hypotheses more impressive to the ear than to the mind. Inadequate attention was paid to the central core of the Hopis on Second Mesa. Astonishingly, the study ignores the important influence at First Mesa of the Tewa-speaking colony there. These omissions are important, but not enough so to invalidate major findings, though they will require qualifications." Oliver La Farge

+ — Am Hist R 56:688 Ap '51 270w

"This volume should attract wide attention not only among those with special interest in the Hopi. Sociologists will find it a rewarding and stimulating book. It serves to indicate that much of sociological theory on social change is basically sound and fruitful." J. B. Gittler

+ Am J Soc 57:396 Ja '52 600w
Booklist 47:250 Mr 15 '51

"Her book is based on studies of specialists in social and cultural anthropology, psychiatry, pedagogy, public administration, linguistics and ecology, and on conversation with many Hopis. Miss Thompson reflects the belief of a growing number of anthropologists that such studies as this may have value to our country in our widening world relationships in which we need to understand and respect alien cultures." Erna Fergusson

+ N Y Times p29 F 18 '51 360w
School & Society 72:368 D 2 '50 20w

"It does much more than expand our knowledge of the Hopis. It demonstrates what is now generally recognized by social scientists—but not always by administrators—that officials dealing with a different culture should understand and utilize the native system of values and attitudes, and their traditional patterns of organization and leadership. Dr. Thompson also proves the importance of understanding the personality needs of individuals in their environmental setting—social, cultural, geographic, and historic. . . This is a stimulating book, but I wish to pose one concluding query applicable to all studies of cultures by alien scholars. How much of the personality of an author with a different cultural heritage is reflected in his 'facts' and 'conclusions?'" T. H. Haas

+ Survey 87:190 Ap '51 750w
U S Quarterly Bk R 7:152 Je '51 180w

THOMPSON, MRS MARY (WOLFE). Steadfast heart. 248p $2.50 Longmans
51-11628

Story of a motherless family of three girls and a boy, all in their teens except little Dot. The father, a drunkard, made them wards of the state and the story follows the course of their lives until the death of the father. Emphasis is on fifteen-year-old Jo, the dependable one of the four.

Bookmark 11:35 N '51

Reviewed by Lucille Pannell
Chicago Sunday Tribune p19 N 11 '51 130w

"An appealing tale." E. C. I.
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 S 6 '51 70w

Kirkus 19:297 Je 15 '51 230w

"A somber yet hopeful story, not outstanding, but useful in a guidance program where books are used to help young people meet personal problems or as a basis for discussion of group relations. Jacket will attract girl readers of 11-14." M. K. Walraven
Library J 76:1343 S 1 '51 80w

"The girls who read only to reach the engagement ring will gather on the way some solid human values, and quite a bit about 'Alcoholics Anonymous.' They will appreciate Jo's troubles in high school and be grateful for a book which, though so purposeful, obviously gets down to the realities which many a girl must face, both economic and emotional." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 S 23 '51 140w

"A sympathetic portrayal of child welfare work, the story has vocational values as well as the appeal of excellent characterization." Elizabeth Hodges
+ N Y Times p42 O 7 '51 120w

"In an evident desire to treat her theme with honesty and without sentimentality Miss Thompson does not altogether succeed in making Josephine the 'steadfast' heart of her title."
Sat R of Lit 34:64 N 10 '51 150w
School & Society 74:128 Ag 25 '51 20w
Wis Lib Bul 47:221 S '51

THOMPSON, SAMUEL WINFIELD. Basic layout design; a pattern for understanding the basic motifs in design and how to apply them to graphic art problems [il. by the author]. 79p $2.85 Studio

659.1324 Advertising—Layout

"A beginner's book on 'how to' design book and magazine pages, announcements, brochures, and how to lay out advertising matter. The author presents basic motifs in design and discusses their application to graphic arts problems. Imagination, symbols, movement, balance, symmetry, format, and counterchange are explained. Their use in layout, typography, and treatment of pictorial matter is shown." Library J

Reviewed by Winifred Baum
Chicago Sunday Tribune p11 Jl 1 '51 50w

"Concise and practical. Illustrative material well chosen; the book itself is an example of the author's theory and teaching. Good for beginning graphic arts workers." Karl Kup
+ Library J 76:965 Je 1 '51 80w

THOMPSON, TOMMY. See Thompson, S. W.

THOMPSON, VICTOR A. Regulatory process in OPA rationing. 466p $5.75 King's Crown press

339.47 Rationing, Consumer. U.S. Price administration, Office of 50-8814

"A study of the process by which the rationing rules were planned and communicated by the Washington staff of OPA, written by a former member. As used here: A Plan is a pattern of desired behavior; Communication is the means by which the desired behavior is elicited—including laws and regulations. It is intended to extract those aspects of rationing rules or decision making which would have general applicability to all administrative process." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by H. C. Mansfield
Am Econ R 41:490 Je '51 850w

"One should mention that, because of Dr. Thompson's experience, his book is heavy with examples from fuel, stove, tire and gasoline rationing. Illustrations from processed foods and meat-fats rationing in particular and shoes to a lesser extent are more sparsely employed. To a degree this serves to particularize the generalizations since in many respects the food point rationing programs were quite different. These drawbacks, of course, are not basic. Anyone interested in public administration theory and problems will find careful study of this book a rewarding experience." J. A. Kershaw
+ — Am Pol Sci R 44:1014 D '50 1200w

"The author appears to suffer from [a] lack of concern as to the practical consequences of his, or OPA's, efforts. His standard of values takes no account of results. Of his OPA experiences the most satisfactory to him was working on a program for rationing coal, which was never put into effect. In line with this preference for theory over results, this book is wholly confined to the rationing planning process in Washington; discussion of OPA field administration is specifically excluded from its scope. The result is like a book on World War II limited to Pentagon planning, with special stress on bureaucratic jurisdictional strife. Such a book would be interesting to people who worked in the Pentagon, but probably not to anyone else." T. E. Harris
Columbia Law R 51:800 Je '51 500w

"Such a study should have current usefulness." J. E. Cross
+ Library J 75:1414 S 1 '50 70w
U S Quarterly Bkl 6:468 D '50 300w

THOMSON, JOHN. Radio communication at ultra high frequency. 203p il $4.50 Wiley

621.384 Radio—Short wave

"In this work, the potentialities and also the limitations of the U. H. F. range in communication fields are thoroughly explored from the standpoint of communication engineers, especially engineers who are associated with research and development in telephony and radio. Such aspects as circuits and tubes are discussed at length. Actual and potential applications are discussed more briefly. The author is Professor of Physics and Electrical Engineering in the Royal Naval College of Great Britain." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"The book is for readers who are thoroughly familiar with standard radio and also with engineering mathematics." R. R. Hawkins
Library J 75:2012 N 15 '50 110w
N Y New Tech Bks 35:93 N '50

THOMSON, VIRGIL. Music right and left. 214p $3.50 Holt

780.4 Music—Analysis, interpretation, appreciation. Music—New York (city) 51-9702

"An anthology of reviews and essays by Virgil Thomson, all of which have previously appeared in the pages of the New York Herald Tribune. It marks the tenth anniversary of his career as chief music critic of that paper, and as such may be viewed, together with two previous collections, 'The Musical Scene' and 'The Art of Judging Music,' as a kind of summary of his critical labors and achievements in New York's, and, in fact, in the world's, turbulent and complex musical scene." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 47:230; 249 Mr 1 '51; Mr 15 '51
Bookmark 10:156 Ap '51 30w

"A thoroughly enjoyable and stimulating collection of essays."
+ Kirkus 18:748 D 15 '50 150w

Reviewed by C. K. Miller
Library J 76:518 Mr 15 '51 110w

"My chief quarrel with this book is precisely the fact that it gives us only a 'peep' into this fascinating field of cultural dynamics, the making of 20th-century music. This, in turn, involves the whole matter of criticism versus journalism. As a newspaper man, it is Mr. Thomson's job to deal in journalism. As a highly gifted, intelligent, and extremely competent writer on musical subjects, it is his responsibility to make a major contribution to musical criticism in America, comparable to what our leading critics—Ransom, Tate, Trilling, Wilson, and others—have accomplished in the realm of literature. The best criticism can never be tied to journalism." Gilbert Chase
Music Lib Assn Notes 83:46 Mr '51 1100w

Reviewed by B. H. Haggin
Nation 173:242 S 22 '51 1050w

"The scope of Virgil Thomson's interests are extremely wide, his knowledge sound, his love and devotion to the art he so well serves, sincere. What more can one ask of a music critic? It is perhaps because Virgil Thomson is himself a distinguished and prolific composer (one of America's best, and certainly our most original) that he is able to give to music criticism that supreme understanding which makes his writing such an invaluable contribution to the musical culture of our time." Nicolas Nabokov
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Mr 11 '51 1250w

"The most valuable thing in the book, in this reviewer's opinion, is the statement of principle contained in his three-page 'Prelude.' Not only is this shrewd and penetrating but, what is even rarer, it reflects in a striking way the seriousness, the directness and the basic simplicity of Thomson's approach. . . Though the 'Prelude' is by no means the only thing in the book which reaches a high level of insight, human warmth and brilliant presentation, it is a statement of critical principles difficult to improve on." Roger Sessions
+ N Y Times p6 Mr 25 '51 950w

"His articles are worth preserving. He is witty and well informed, and his writing, which is light and rapid, is notable for the deftness and precision with which it hits nails on the head. He also has as a first-rate critic should, the faculty of communicating enthusiasm for the art with which he is dealing."
+ New Yorker 27:131 Mr 17 '51 160w

Reviewed by Alfred Frankenstein
San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 24 '51 600w

"The best thing that can be said about the essays in this book is that, though they are reprints of articles that must have been written under pressure, every one of them is worth reprinting and none of them dates." Irwin Edman
+ Sat R of Lit 34:20 My 26 '51 750w

"We can think of no other critic whose daily writings would stand the test of compilation and consecutive reading as well as those of Mr. Thomson. He avoids the cliche and he is not over-repetitious, two faults which dig the deepest rut for a critic." Victor Prahl
+ Springf'd Republican p16A Ap 1 '51 390w

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:138 Je '51

THOREAU, HENRY DAVID. Journal; ed. by Bradford Torrey and Francis H. Allen; with a foreword by Henry Seidel Canby. Walden ed 14v il $35 Houghton

B or 92

"Thoreau left behind him 9 manuscript volumes of which the largest were found to contain about 100,000 words, and which in print have been reduced to about 6,000 pages of text. He had a short life, confined mainly to Harvard, Concord and Walden Pond; and he made it a point in the Journal not to describe what he felt to be temporal or merely circumstantial events. This is the biography of a soul. It opens in the year 1837, when Thoreau was twenty. . . The Journal closed in the year 1861, when Thoreau was forty-four." New Repub

---

"Thoreau lived his life in a way that he thought worthy of recording in the Journal, and it is all there, stored away, treasured, distilled into essences, kept sweet except during the moments, particularly in the later volumes, when his bitterness overwhelmed him and was, as he thought, unworthy of animal creation." Maxwell Geismar
+ New Repub 124:24 My 7 '51 600w

"Thoreau's Journal was not a hide-out for his lacerated soul, not altogether what he and others have most used it for—the storehouse out of which his published books would come. It was the thing he lived in, the containment of his love—and therefore had to be as well-written as a prayer or a love letter. . . This is where he sang, sentence by sentence; the journal took its 'shape' from the manner of his love. Actually, the Journal bogs down after the middle volumes into disjointed nature notes of whose barrenness even as scientific information he was well aware. But it is the unflagging beauty of the writing, day after day, that confirms its greatness among writers' journals." Alfred Kazin
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 My 20 '51 1900w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
N Y Times p1 My 20 '51 1400w

New Yorker 27:67 D 29 '51 260w

Reviewed by Townsend Scudder
Sat R of Lit 34:20 S 22 '51 2150w

THORNDIKE-BARNHART comprehensive desk dictionary; ed. by Clarence L. Barnhart. 896p il $2.75; thumb-indexed $3.25; de luxe ed $3.75 Doubleday

423 English language—Dictionaries 51-9483

"Mr. Barnhart in this new volume lists 80,000 words, which according to the Thorndike-Lorge word count appear most commonly in general adult reading matter. The Semantic count of these scholars was also used in giving the more frequently used meanings of words. Following the approach to language problems of the late E. L. Thorndike, the educational psychologist, and the late Leonard Bloomfield, linguist, Mr. Barnhart, his staff of 28 workers and a group of language scholars aimed at giving the current meanings of words, to list new words, to indicate the origins of words, especially Americanisms, and to give pronunciations in line with current usage." San Francisco Chronicle

---

Reviewed by L. T. Heron
Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Mr 4 '51 350w

"For its size and purpose, this seems a very satisfactory dictionary. Pronunciations, synonyms and etymologies are given. The list of the personnel of the editorial staff—the editor and his departmental consultants—looks like a who's who in lexicography." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 68:369 Mr 21 '51 210w

Cleveland Open Shelf p25 N '51

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley
New Repub 124:27 Ap 16 '51 1200w

"The print, though relatively small, is clear and plain, something that makes it possible to set some 80,000 main entries within the frame of some thousand pages. . . The choice of words to be defined is wide enough for an intelligent human being, old or young, to find the word for which he is looking unless he is more than ordinarily exacting in his wants."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 Mr 25 '51 320w

Reviewed by David Dempsey
N Y Times p6 F 11 '51 1350w

"If anyone thinks getting out a new dictionary is an easy job, he just ought to play around with some everyday words which have a plethora of meanings. . . The editor believes people shouldn't talk like a dictionary, and his book is a real contribution in keeping our language alive, flexible and fresh." I. B.

THORNDIKE-BARNHART—Continued
+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 Mr 18 '51 700w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 5 '51 550w

Springf'd Republican p8C F 18 '51 230w

"The Thorndike-Barnhart Comprehensive desk dictionary is recommended for the use of secretaries, writers, and students needing authoritative and up-to-date information on a basic vocabulary. While it will not take the place of more comprehensive dictionaries in library reference use, it is also recommended for libraries which maintain a supplementary or circulating collection of small dictionaries."
+ Subscription Bks Bul 22:59 Jl '51 1250w

THORNER, DANIEL. Investment in empire; British railway and steam shipping enterprise in India, 1825-1849. 197p $3.75 Univ. of Pa. press

385 Railroads—India. Steamboat lines
51-9390

"This is a study of the economic nexus between imperial power and a great dependency as reflected in the politics of Indian railway and steamship line development." (U S Quarterly Bk R) Bibliography. Index.

"The title of this otherwise competent and careful study is somewhat misleading. Dr. Thorner is concerned almost entirely with 'the process by which steamship and railway lines for India were launched. These undertakings, particularly the railways, involved a large-scale investment of British capital in India. The terms under which this capital moved and, more precisely, the struggle to secure these terms, form the heart of this inquiry.' Within these limits Dr. Thorner has provided an excellent account." N. V. Sovani
+ Pacific Affairs 24:318 S '51 550w

"Mr. Thorner is to be congratulated on writing a concise, convincing, and admirably documented monograph on a significant episode in British economic history, an episode that shows 'private enterprise in mid-nineteenth-century Britain' could sometimes be 'essentially a myth.' " G. B.
+ Sat R of Lit 34:54 Je 16 '51 240w

"This study is valuable in contributing to the understanding of the mechanics of the export of English capital in the nineteenth century, but it also makes clear that the men who put across the Indian railways in Parliament achieved values other than personal and profits other than economic."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:171 Je '51 180w

THORNTON, WILLIS, ed. Best of life; decorations by Robert Hallock. 280p $3 Houghton

808.8 Old age. Literature—Collections
50-10865

An anthology of prose and verse for those "who, at any age, have come to realize that life does not last forever, and for that discovery find it all the richer and more rewarding." Index.

"It makes astoundingly good reading, and one has a sense of sharing the reasoned philosophy of many who have lived the good life. . . My one quarrel with it is the great preponderance of writing by men; have then so few women given thought to the subject?"
+ — Kirkus 18:587 S 15 '50 100w

"It's all a matter of choice and as many more other selections might easily be made, but there is great wisdom here in a friendly book to be kept available at all times." D. B. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p12D D 3 '50 180w

Wis Lib Bul 47:20 Ja '51

THORWALD, JURGEN. Flight in the winter; Russia conquers, January to May 1945; ed. and tr. by Fred Wieck. 318p $3.75 Pantheon bks

940.542 World war, 1939-1945—Campaigns and battles. World war, 1939-1945—Germany 51-13895

"An abridged translation of two volumes which appeared in Germany some time ago. The author has set himself a double task: to describe the last stages of the military debacle of the Third Reich in the east and to show what happened to the civilian population wherever the Red Army set foot. . . A feature of the book is a day-by-day account, based on eyewitness narratives, of the last stand in Berlin. The author accepts the view that Hitler shot himself before the fall of the city, while his newly wedded wife, Eva Braun, took poison." Chicago Sunday Tribune

"Well edited and well translated, it is both exciting and depressing. Exciting because it is a swift moving narrative leading to Hitler's suicide in the besieged chancellery in Berlin; it is depressing because it tells of the indescribable sufferings of two million refugees who tried to escape the advancing Reds." N. D. Roodkowsky
Cath World 174:319 Ja '52 270w

"The book casts a flood of light upon a subject that has been played down in this country, altho it is common knowledge in central Europe. It should certainly convince any reader that Nazis had no monopoly on 'war crimes.' " W. H. Chamberlin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 4 '51 550w

Reviewed by E. S. Pisko
Christian Science Monitor p11 N 21 '51 700w

"Although readers of the German version may complain over the extensive deletions made in this edition, the task of compression has been done skilfully and has, in fact, heightened the impact of Thorwald's account by reducing the diffuseness which characterized the original text. The translation is readable and, except for occasional slips . . . accurate." G. A. Craig
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 4 '51 1250w

"This is a bitter book, both in tone and in contents. . . Nowhere is there any suggestion that the Germans might have brought all this horror upon themselves. However the book is written from the German viewpoint. It is a horrifying story of what defeat by the Russians means and the eyewitness reports ring true. I have heard too many like them in the last six years to doubt them." Drew Middleton
N Y Times p5 D 9 '51 490w

THROM, EDWARD LOUIS, ed. How to grow the best lawn. See Popular mechanics magazine

THURMAN, HOWARD. Deep is the hunger; meditations for apostles of sensitiveness. 212p $2.50 Harper

242 Devotional exercises 51-9391

"Howard Thurman is the Pastor of 'the Church for the Fellowship of all Peoples' in San Francisco. . . This book of devotional readings grew out of his weekly messages printed in his church bulletin. He calls them 'Meditations for Apostles of Sensitiveness' and presents them in three parts (1) A sense of history; (2) A sense of self; and (3) A sense of presence. At the end of the book Dr. Thurman gives us twenty-five 'working papers' for meditations which he has used in his own church." Kirkus

"You will make no mistake giving this beautiful book to anyone today who is ready to listen to what the great winds are saying out there in the arena where human beings are struggling for a chance to breathe." A. A. Hunter
+ Christian Century 68:306 Mr 7 '51 290w

"Deep Is the Hunger is a book of devotional readings different from the run of the mill. It is filled with practical, human, thought-provoking ideas which oftentimes challenge the reader and strike a responsive chord... There is a spirit of worship, a rapierlike insight, a consciousness of the writer's spiritual awareness of the eternal which carries the reader along and here and there provides an exceptional morsel of spiritual truth for his 'deep hunger.'" J. H. Ivey

+ Crozer Q 28:186 Ap '51 300w

"This is a book of rare quality, indeed, admirably suited for use during the Lenten season for personal or group devotions. Dr. Thurman has unusual insights and an extraordinary gift for using the penetrating word, phrase and illustration. There is nothing of the tritely pious in this book and the meditations deal with problems we all face today: on keeping one's nerve, on taking a stand, on finding serenity in the midst of confusion. One of the best devotional books of the year."

+ Kirkus 19:54 F 1 '51 220w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 25 '51 260w

Wis Lib Bul 47:56 Mr '51

TIETZE, HANS. Titian: the paintings and drawings with three hundred illustrations. See Titian

TILDEN, FREEMAN. National parks; what they mean to you and me; introd. by Newton B. Drury. 417p il map $5 Knopf

719.352 National parks and reserves—U.S. 51-11226

Considers the meaning and purpose of national parks in general and in particular, grouping the materials on the individual parks and national monuments under the categories: The primeval forest; Volcanic scenes; Earth-building and erosion; Caves; The desert and desert-mountain areas; The work of glaciers; The tropics. Illustrated with many photographs. An appendix gives information for tourists in tabulated form. Index.

Booklist 47:380 Jl 1 '51

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ag 19 '51 460w

Reviewed by R. R. Brunn

Christian Science Monitor p7 Je 28 '51 500w

"A panoramic perspective of our national parks which commutes a high enthusiasm as well as considerable information."

+ Kirkus 19:242 My 1 '51 110w

"Although much factual data regarding the location, size, history and points of interest of each park are presented, the author's discussion of the philosophy underlying the preservation of natural areas and their place in our national life, removes the volume from the guidebook class. Excellent photographs. Recommended for general purchase." J. E. Brown

+ Library J 76:1126 Jl '51 130w

"It is good to have an authoritative voice explain the underlying philosophy of the National parks; and even better to find the voice so quietly eloquent as that of Mr. Tilden. By example, anecdote and pervasive good humor, but never by anything approaching the self-defeating zeal of the consecrated crusader, he makes the reader understand why the parks are what they are and why they should remain so, immune to logging operators, mining men, stockmen and merchants of hotdogs and hamburgers. Readers are likely to finish his book and find themselves strong proponents of the author. They will be intelligent proponents, too." Stewart Holbrook

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Je 17 '51 700w

"This is a book that needed to be written. Freeman Tilden has done an excellent job in explaining the underlying meaning of our national parks. He gives the reader accurate guidance in an arm-chair trip through these beautiful areas." H. S. Pearson

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 19 '51 210w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 22 '51 900w

"Undoubtedly this is one of the best books on the National Parks issued in recent years." H. S.

+ Sat R of Lit 34:36 Ag 11 '51 120w

Wis Lib Bul 47:213 S '51

TILLETT, MRS DOROTHY (STOCKBRIDGE) (JOHN STEPHEN STRANGE, pseud). Reasonable doubt. 233p $2.50 Doubleday 51-10320

Detective story.

Bookmark 10:185 My '51

Reviewed by Drexel Drake

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Je 10 '51 60w

Kirkus 19:139 Mr 1 '51 70w

"This mystery novel opens with an excellently handled criminal courtroom scene, and keeps up a high level of suspense, good characterization, and Manhattan and Vermont local color." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 76:597 Ap 1 '51 80w

"Reasonable Doubt is the best book of hers that I have ever read." Ralph Partridge

+ New Statesman & Nation 42:504 N 3 '51 90w

"The familiar situation is given a credibility it's seldom had before. And in its own right, the whole is a lively and soundly worked out murder mystery."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 My 20 '51 140w

"The basic situation, of course, has been used a good many times before, but Mr. Strange writes with enough dash and ingenuity to make it seem quite fresh and exciting."

+ New Yorker 27:123 Ap 28 '51 100w

"There's a quietly realistic touch to this situation; it's almost a pity that it had to be resolved, though Strange does it skilfully and fairly." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 Ap 29 '51 80w

"Applause for know-how job." Kathleen Sproul

+ Sat R of Lit 34:41 My 26 '51 50w

TILLEY, MORRIS PALMER. Dictionary of the proverbs in England in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries; a collection of the proverbs found in English literature and the dictionaries of the period. 854p $15 Univ. of Mich.

398.9 Proverbs 50-62722

"There is nothing to compare to this Dictionary. There are 11,826 main entries, collected from the literature of England between the years 1500 and 1700, when every man's mouth was 'full of wise saws and modern instances,' and as many as a dozen variants may be quoted in a single entry. Each quotation is identified bibliographically and dated in a manner familiar to users of the Oxford English Dictionary. The proverbs are listed alphabetically according to the key word, the work is carefully indexed, and is supplied with copious cross-references and an extensive bibliography." U S Quarterly Bk R

"A 'definitive proverb dictionary' is a poet's dream, an impossible ideal for a waking lexicographer; but Professor Tilley has come as close to that ideal as one well can. His book is the best of its kind, and no one is likely to produce a better." James Sledd

+ Mod Philol 49:62 Ag '51 1000w

"Shakespeareans owe a special debt to Tilley, for in addition to segregating quotations from the plays in a separate paragraph following the main entry, Tilley has provided a special index in which Shakespeare's works are listed by title, with references to act, scene, and line in which proverbs occur, and keyed references to the Dictionary."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:214 Je '51 200w

TILLICH, PAUL JOHANNES. Systematic theology. 2v v 1 300p $5 Univ. of Chicago press
230 Theology (51-2235)

In his preface the author states: "My purpose has been to present the method and the structure of a theological system written from an apologetic point of view and carried through in a continuous correlation with philosophy. The subject of all sections of this system is the method of correlation and its systematic consequences illustrated in a discussion of the main theological problems." In this first of two volumes the subjects dealt with are the nature, organization, and method and structure of systematic theology; reason and revelation; being and God. Index.

"It is a book not only for the theologians, but for every person concerned with the interpretation of human existence." D. D. Williams
+ Christian Century 68:893 Ag 1 '51 800w

Reviewed by F. J. Moore
Churchman 165:16 Jl '51 180w

"Compact but clear, the volume is demanding in the sustained quality of its thought, but rewarding to those interested in any aspect of human culture, and of special interest to philosophers and theologians. Some Roman Catholic thinkers have found Dr. Tillich to be the ablest and most intelligible theologian of Protestantism."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:150 Je '51 220w

TIMLIN, MABEL FRANCES. Does Canada need more people? issued under the auspices of the Canadian institute of international affairs. 143p $2.50 Oxford
312.8 Canada—Population [51-3462]

"A study of the economic aspects of Canada's capacity to absorb additional population." (Foreign Affairs) Index.

"This attractively produced and up-to-date book . . . is the result of studies undertaken by Professor Timlin for the ex-Deputy Minister of Mines and Resources. The author is concerned mainly with economic factors, but even with this limitation she finds so many influences whose power cannot be foretold, that she will disappoint those readers who expected the author to choose a good round number of millions and then to advance whatever arguments might favor this as a desirable population for Canada. . . Those who are not 'hot for certainties in this our life' will find this careful study interesting and provocative." C. A. Ashley
+ Canadian Forum 31:116 Ag '51 250w

"As a lucid discussion of migration economics and as a guide to future research the monograph is of value." A. G. Bogue
+ Canadian Hist R 32:281 S '51 200w
Foreign Affairs 30:166 O '51 10w

TIMMONS, JOHN FRANCIS, and MURRAY, WILLIAM GORDON, eds. Land problems and policies. 298p maps $4 Iowa state college press
333.7 Land utilization. Conservation of resources 50-10502

"This is a collection of provocative lectures on the future of American farms, land, and wildlife and their vital relationships to the rest of us. It was edited from discussions held at the Land Economics Institute at Iowa State College during the summer of 1949." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

"The subject matter is difficult and has been made more so for the serious general reader by over-use of economic terms by some of the contributors. Since thoughtful citizens are already thinking about and discussing land and resource problems, it might have been well to couch the book in language they could understand. As it stands, it should serve as a useful reference for land economists because it condenses and analyzes in one volume material usually found scattered among a number of works." E. L. Peffer
Am Econ R 41:740 S '51 600w

"Its importance to economists and students of land-policy and population-trends is signified by the fact that the book is published under a grant from the Farm Foundation." R. W. Howard
+ Sat R of Lit 34:29 My 5 '51 350w
U S Quarterly Bk R 7:263 S '51 190w

TINGAY, LANCELOT OLIVER, comp. See Trollope, A. Bedside Barsetshire

TIPPETT, JAMES STERLING. Tools for Andy; pictures by Kay Draper. 47p $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury
684 Tools—Juvenile literature 51-12135

Explains the use of eight common household tools for ages five to eight. The tools are a hammer, screw driver, saw, pliers, plane, wrench, shovel, and paintbrush.

Booklist 48:72 O 15 '51
Bookmark 11:35 N '51
Kirkus 19:433 Ag 15 '51 90w

"Recommended." Juanita Walker
+ Library J 76:1572 O 1 '51 40w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p32 N 11 '51 100w

Reviewed by Irene Smith
N Y Times p28 S 16 '51 100w

TIPPETT, LEONARD HENRY CALEB. Technological applications of statistics. 189p $3.50 Wiley
658.562 Statistics 50-11118

"An illuminating presentation of statistical principles and methods from the standpoint of their applications in manufacturing, scientific experimentation, etc. It is based upon a series of lectures given at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1948 to an audience comprising 'industrialists, some of whom had little more than a general appreciation of statistics, students, and practiced statisticians working largely in industry.' The semi-formal style of the lectures has been carried over to make a book that is more readable than most books on statistics, and the frequent use of concrete examples of application in industry increases the interest for the nonspecialist reader. The author is associated with the British Cotton Industry Research Association." N Y New Tech Bks

"Mr. Tippett is a pioneer in the industrial applications of statistics and his book will accelerate the opening up of this territory to new colonists." W. J. Youden
+ Chem & Eng N 29:1359 Ap 2 '51 220w
N Y New Tech Bks 36:44 My '51

TIRRELL, SARAH REBECCA. German agrarian politics after Bismarck's fall; the formation of the farmer's league. 354p $4.50 Columbia univ. press
338.1 Agriculture—Germany. Germany—Politics and government 51-11302

"This study, originally prepared as a doctoral dissertation, presents an exhaustive array of carefully ordered facts about the chancellorship of Caprivi in Germany in relation to the agricultural problem. In addition, it provides an illuminating exposition of party strife and pressure politics, those maladies which eventually were to play havoc with effective and calculable governments in Germany." (U S Quarterly Bk R) Bibliography. Index.

Am Pol Sci R 45:915 S '51 40w

"Deftly constructed and ably executed book." Johannes Mattern
+ Ann Am Acad 278:245 N '51 300w
U S Quarterly Bk R 7:281 S '51 170w

TITIAN (TIZIANO VECELLIO). Paintings and drawings with three hundred illustrations, by Hans Tietze. 2d ed rev 414p $6.50 Phaidon

759.5 Paintings, Italian 50-11165

"Second revised edition of book first published in Austria in 1936. Text has been condensed; account of Titian's environment, work and life is confined to one-eighth of the volume. Even so there is a wealth of information with many references to source material writings by Dolce, Aretino, and Vasari. Major works fully analyzed; catalogue, chronological table, bibliography and list of illustrations are included. Numerous illustrations." Library J

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut
Library J 76:411 Mr 1 '51 80w

Reviewed by G. P. Du Bois
N Y Times p7 Ja 21 '51 180w

"It is a simply written, understanding and extremely well-balanced study of the life and works of a man who is still an astonishing phenomenon, not only for his longevity (he lived, and painted, until he was around ninety) and the tremendous breadth and volume of his work but also for the extent to which he typified, in his own person, all the richness and exuberant productivity of the High Renaissance."
+ New Yorker 26:107 F 10 '51 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 F 25 '51 290w

"A valuable feature is the reproductions of works by Titian now lost or destroyed. These were made by other hands while the originals were still extant." L. R. Sander
+ Sat R of Lit 34:39 My 5 '51 200w

"The text volume of Dr. Tietze's German monograph was thorough, modest and sensible, and these welcome qualities are carried over into the shortened introduction to the English book. If the new volume, like the old, never quite rises to the level of its subject, never successfully communicates the extent to which, in the words of Eckermann, the 'higher power of the artist's personality expands our own nature and elevates us above ourselves,' it provides a clear and serviceable introduction to Titian's work. . . The principal weakness of the book lies in its treatment of Titian's late style." John Pope-Hennessy
+ — Spec 185:22 Ja 5 '51 1000w

TIVERTON, WILLIAM, pseud. See Jarrett-Kerr, W. R.

TOBIN, RICHARD LARDNER. Center of the world. 286p $3 Dutton

51-2131

A small town in western Michigan is the scene of this novel narrated by one of the town's doctors. The banker's only son absconds with some of the bank's money and thus ruins his father. With this as the central point the doctor describes his own happy marriage, the two very old ladies who lived next door, the shiftless Polish family who "borrowed" not daily but hourly, and the effect on all of them of the trouble at the bank.

Booklist 47:266; 294 Ap 1 '51; Ap 15 '51

"Paced to the tempo of the times, this is a strong and tender story."
+ Kirkus 19:78 F 1 '51 190w

"Swift reading about believable, interesting people. Heartily recommended for small library purchase." F. A. Boyle
+ Library J 76:598 Ap 1 '51 90w

"Sympathetic and thoroughly likeable novel." Mary Ross
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ap 8 '51 550w

New Yorker 27:114 My 3 '51 60w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 My 13 '51 140w

"Mr. Tobin writes in the old, traditional, heliocentric style; his plot is the sun of the universe he creates, and his characters circle around it through the environment of the town. His craftsmanship is unpretentiously good, his architecture only at times uncertain, and his understanding consistently deep and sure. He knows his place and his people and he knows what he wants to say about the things that happened to the place and the people in the years of the Stutz Bearcat and the Franklin air-cooled engine. If he says other things as well he will be a novelist important to our scene." Thomas Sugrue
+ Sat R of Lit 34:44 Je 9 '51 440w

TOLSTAIA, TAT'IANA L'VOVNA, grafinîa. See Sukhotina, T. L. T.

TOMKINS, CALVIN. Intermission. 247p $3 Viking

51-11772

Story of the two Whittaker brothers and Roger Faxon, a college friend of the younger. The brothers are invited to Santa Fe, and discover that Faxon is living with a sophisticated married woman. The plot turns on the effects of this visit upon the Whittakers. The time is the present: the scene New Jersey and Santa Fe.

"Mr. Tomkins writes with polish and assurance. He possesses all the tools. But I find his craftsmanship expended on an empty development of what might have been a promising theme." Edmund Fuller
+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ag 12 '51 250w

Reviewed by William Pfaff
Commonweal 54:530 S 7 '51 380w

Kirkus 19:306 Je 15 '51 150w

"The detailing of wealthy suburban mores is never profound, but the book makes enjoyable enough reading. Recommended." W. K. Harrison
+ Library J 76:1224 Ag '51 80w

Reviewed by Coleman Rosenberger
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 S 2 '51 450w

"The author uses a notable descriptive talent to bring us the clichés, the tired bromides, the wheels within wheels of the cocktail party. He observes well-bred behavior and flossy conventions with collegiate freshness. . . 'Intermission' is informed, lively comment about a character neglected in this year's fiction—the young man too young to have either a war record or a peacetime label." James Kelly
+ N Y Times p4 Ag 12 '51 390w

"Mr. Tomkins writes a flat, discouraged prose, and displays an insistent curiosity that seems wasted on what is simply an account of an arid intermission in the lives of two members of a family."
New Yorker 27:119 S 29 '51 150w

"The trouble with Mr. Tomkins's fluently written first novel is that it tries to make a lost generation out of a generation that found itself years ago. It tries to deal in Jamesean subtleties with characters who are hollow rather than deep. It is an intermission almost without a play. . . When he isn't writing psychoanalysis or descriptions of silences that can 'throb,' 'burn' and 'ring furiously,' Mr. Tomkins commands a flexible and vivid style. His skiing passages are very fine, indeed." Charles Lee
— + Sat R of Lit 34:15 Ag 25 '51 400w

Springf'd Republican p22A S 9 '51 150w

TOMLINSON, HENRY MAJOR. Face of the earth. 246p $3 Bobbs

910 Voyages and travels [51-669]

A volume of essays by the author of The Sea and the Jungle, Gallions Reach, etc. Contents: A North Devon estuary; Some hints for those about to travel; On the Chesil bank; A Spanish journey; The little things.

Booklist 48:99 N 15 '51

Bookmark 11:83 Ja '52 30w

Reviewed by A. C. Ames
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 S 30 '51 300w

TOMLINSON, H. M.—Continued

"Travel sketches which, with the exception of two pieces, are 'remembrances of things seen in travel salvaged from books lost in the last war.' They are well worth salvaging: Tomlinson is a master of travel." J. B.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 S 19 '50 150w

"No other writer of our time can equal Tomlinson in the evocation of places; while reading him, you are veritably in the Brazilian jungle, or the marketplace of an Oriental city. . . The 'other worlds' to which his books transport us are, in the end, moral ones. He is, essentially, a poet—a topographer of the spirit, not of the globe. The conduct and aspirations of men, their plight in our century; these are his central subject. He brings to them qualities conspicuously rare in current literature. Magnanimity, compassion, insight shape his view of life. . . But, although the import of his writing is often tragic, Tomlinson is not a pessimist. Nor has he ever succumbed to the moral confusion which besets our culture." Lloyd Morris

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 S 2 '51 1550w

"These pages are, in their way, history. They reflect the impact of modern life and events on a gifted and sensitive man from the eve of one world war to nearly the end of another. They should be read by those who do not regard history as consisting largely of dates, statistics and names." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p7 S 2 '51 550w

"The Face of the Earth, the author's latest volume, shows Mr. Tomlinson observant, speculative, often moving, as he deals, on ground where he is altogether at home, with remembrances of things seen in travel. Only two of the essays in this volume—the first and the last—have not been published before in book form, but the new essays show the author at his best, and how excellent this best may be the reader will discover on turning to the pages entitled 'A North Devon Estuary.'"

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p559 S 8 '50 450w

TOMPKINS, JANE F. (MRS B. M. MCCONNELL). Red squirrel twins; il. by Kurt Wiese. 123p $2.25 Lippincott

50-14874

Story for grades three to five about twin red squirrels, their lives during their first year in the forest, and the Christmas tree for the forest animals trimmed by two children and their father.

Booklist 47:209 F 1 '51

Kirkus 19:608 O 1 '50 110w

"Another excellent nature story written in a style that suggests Felix Salten or Haaron Lie." J. M. Smith

+ Library J 75:1912 N 1 '50 60w

"This is a nature story, slightly sentimentalized, but appealing to younger boys and girls."

+ Sat R of Lit 33:58 N 11 '50 110w

TOMPKINS, JANE F. (MRS BURT MORTON MCCONNELL), and MCCONNELL, BURT MORTON. Presidents of the United States; the story of their lives, closely interwoven with the vast political and economic changes of the nation; portraits by Constance Joan Naar. 324p $3 Crowell

923.173 Presidents (U.S.) 51-12919

Brief biographical sketches of the presidents of the United States. Written for grades seven to nine. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:109 N 15 '51

Bookmark 11:35 N '51

"Away and above more dated collections of brief biographies, this promises to have a long life in libraries, schools and home."

+ Kirkus 10:580 O 1 '51 90w

"Readable, fair, and sympathetic portrayals, but history teachers in our school prefer Morgan's Our Presidents, 1789-1949. . . Useful for younger readers or slow ones in junior-senior high school or as a supplement to Morgan." M. K. Walraven

Library J 76:2017 D 1 '51 70w

"Considering that each sketch is done in less than ten pages, the readability plus concentrated information are admirable." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 N 11 '51 180w

TOOMBS, ALFRED. Honeymoon for seven. 246p $3 Crowell

818 51-13399

The author of Raising a Riot (Book Review Digest 1949) continues his life story. This is the description of what happened when he married a widow with two children, to add to his own three.

Booklist 48:2; 82 S 1 '51; N 1 '51

Kirkus 19:469 Ag 15 '51 170w

"Mr. Toombs relates these difficulties in a good-natured and amiable way, and his wife appears to be an equally gentle person. You can't help liking the pair as you read about their minor problems, but it's a sad fact that this kind of warmhearted serenity is not the stuff from which the most hilarious humor is made."

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 O 28 '51 330w

TORBET, ROBERT GEORGE. History of the Baptists; with a foreword by Kenneth Scott Latourette. 538p $6 Am. Bapt.

286.09 Baptists—History 50-9198

"This book was written to provide a history of the Baptists which would cover the nearly fifty years since the publication of Albert H. Newman's History of the Baptist Churches in the United States and Henry C. Vedder's Short History of the Baptists. A comprehensive study, it covers the European and English background for the origin of the Baptists and traces their growth in England, the Continent, America, and on 'foreign fields.' In the examination of their development due attention is given to the interaction of secular and religious forces. Particular emphasis is placed on the denomination's rise and activities in the United States." (Am Hist R) Bibliography. Index.

"This history of the Baptists, because of its comprehensive character, scholarship, and recent origin, bids fair to become the standard text in its field. Its appeal to the general reader, however, is less than compelling." H. D. Williams

Am Hist R 56:333 Ja '51 350w

+ Christian Century 67:1108 S 20 '50 360w

"The very appearance of a new history of the Baptists is sufficient to arouse considerable interest. This one is intended for laymen as well as for ministers and students of church history, but the price of the book will keep it from having the reception it deserves. . . In general Dr. Torbet's treatment of the whole span of Baptist history is excellent. While it is undoubtedly true that no one can write a truly objective history, Dr. Torbet's is as objective as they come. He is to be commended for his refusal to follow those who try to prove a spiritual apostolic succession." R. J. Bean

+ Crozer Q 28:72 Ja '51 750w

TORELLE, ELLEN. Your child's growth, health, and happiness; a biological primer for parents; together with a guide to your child's primary needs from birth through adolescence. 231p $3 Knopf

136.7 Children—Management. Children—Care and hygiene 51-11063

"The author attempts to show how a child's behavior and development are related to his inherent nature and his physical capacities. Included are chapters on the influence of heredity and of environment, the physical basis of a child's mind and emotion, the delinquent child, and an outline of the needs and behavior of a child from birth thru adolescence." (Chicago Sunday Tribune) Index.

"Altho labeled 'a biological primer for parents,' the book seems too technical for many beginning papas and mamas. It could be used in parents' discussion groups." F. D. Heron
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 S 9 '51 100w

"A book which makes available to the interested parent some of the more technical, scientific facts about child development, and which combines with this information a lenient, liberal approach."
+ Kirkus 19:311 Je 15 '51 100w

"Miss Torelle's conclusions, stated factually, are actually opinions, many of them controversial among competent medical authorities. In her obvious effort to be brief, yet inclusive, she indulges in over-simplification rendering this book meaningless to any reader lacking extensive scientific knowledge and useless to one possessing same." E. P. Nichols
Library J 76:1217 Ag '51 120w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p18 S 5 '51 290w

TOULMIN, STEPHEN EDELSTON. Examination of the place of reason in ethics. 228p $3.25 Cambridge

170 Reason. Ethics. Logic [51-5171]

"In this book, I have taken up the discussion [of reason in ethics] where Bacon left off. But I have also extended its range for, where he confined himself to pointing out the limitations of some of the more common ethical arguments, I have tried to discover, more generally, what it is that gives these arguments such value and scope as they possess. This has meant going at considerable length into the nature of reasoning and the foundations of logic; and here I have run up against a difficulty. Recent advances in the understanding of these subjects have never been coherently expounded, and there is no book to which readers can be referred. I have therefore had to sketch in as I went along descriptions of such logical methods as are necessary tools for my argument: this accounts in particular for the length of Part II, which might seem over-elaborate if one considered only its immediate purpose." (Pref) Index

"Mr. Toulmin has a talent for finding the illuminating illustration, whether taken from the sciences or from literature; and he writes with wit, candor, and a beautiful lucidity. He has written a book which uses the best tools of British analytic philosophy to correct that philosophy at its weakest point. It should do much to add to the growing, and what I think are the justifiable, suspicions of the premises of 'value theory' as something different from a theory of decision-making." C. F.
+ J Philos 48:734 N 8 '51 250w

Reviewed by Mary Scrutton
New Statesman & Nation 41:278 Mr 10 '51 1000w

"The unduly pragmatic attitude towards philosophy manifested by Mr. Toulmin prevents this clearly and pleasantly written book from penetrating as far into its subject as it might have done."
Times [London] Lit Sup p57 Ja 26 '51 450w

TOUSEY, SANFORD. Bill Clark, American explorer; story and pictures by [the author]. 46p $1.50 Whitman, A.

B or 92 Lewis and Clark expedition—Juvenile literature. Clark, William—Juvenile literature 51-11334

"This documented narrative of the Lewis and Clark Expedition written in an easy, rapid style will give boys and girls an appreciation of their heritage and a better understanding of the Louisiana Purchase. . . Suitable for ages 9-12." Library J

Kirkus 19:318 Jl 1 '51 90w

"Recommended for school and public libraries." M. M. Gantt
+ Library J 76:1235 Ag '51 60w

"Youngsters will not only enjoy reading about the expedition but should be able to understand its importance and the greatness of its co-leader, Bill Clark." Phyllis Fenner
+ N Y Times p22 Ag 19 '51 150w

"Parents and teachers will appreciate this readable account." S. M. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p4C Ag 5 '51 70w

TOWNSEND, OLGA. White-tailed deer; il. by Nils Hogner. (Whittlesey house publication) 224p $2.50 McGraw

51-5628

A city boy recuperating from an illness at a Maine camp is the hero. At first Jim resents the guide and his wife who are taking care of him, but when the boy finds and adopts two fawns everything looks different. As his health improves so does his sense of responsibility and his brave work in getting the much-needed doctor thru a Maine blizzard closes this story for ages eight to twelve.

Booklist 48:162 Ja 1 '52

"Boys who know and love the woods and its wildlife and those who would like a chance to know and love them will both find a rewarding reading experience in this fine story." Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 S 30 '51 220w

"A wide age range will enjoy this book, though it will probably belong most to the eleven and twelve-year-olds." J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews
+ Horn Bk 27:336 S '51 100w
Kirkus 19:224 Jl 1 '51 90w

"The story moves briskly, with plenty of action and fun, and character study on a boy's own level. The many children who have raised pet fawns will leap for it, since their problems will have been like Jim's." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 S 2 '51 150w

Reviewed by C. E. Von Norman
+ N Y Times p12 S 2 '51 150w
Sat R of Lit 34:62 N 10 '51 220w
Wis Lib Bul 47:262 N '51

TOYNBEE, ARNOLD JOSEPH. War and civilization; selected by Albert V. Fowler from A study of history [issued under the auspices of the Royal institute of international affairs]. 165p $2.50 Oxford

355.01 War. Militarism 50-9529

For descriptive note see Annual for 1950.

Am Pol Sci R 45:270 Mr '51 20w

Reviewed by D. F. Fleming
Ann Am Acad 273:269 Ja '51 470w

"The book is very well written, and makes most interesting reading. If one accepts the theory of history implied in it one must be deeply disturbed by the danger of the position in which civilization finds itself at present. Indeed the hope of survival at all is slight. But is Mr. Toynbee's understanding of history correct? It is unfair to pass judgement upon it merely on the strength of excerpts from the great work in which his thesis is set forth fully, and supported by innumerable facts; and the probability is that the interested reader will be led by this small book to a careful study of the six volumes from which it is drawn." H. V. R. Short
+ Canadian Forum 31:69 Je '51 400w
Cath World 172:319 Ja '51 120w

"This study is scholarly, even though the author ranges far and wide in time and space. Ideas are expressed in beautiful prose studded with rich metaphors and brilliant similes, but the author's erudition and metaphysics give an elusive character to his conclusions. The book contains much material for serious reflection on the present and grave concern for the future, but it expresses little more than a moralistic attitude toward war and a pious hope that Christian virtues will prevail." A. C. Bining

TOYNBEE, A. J.—Continued
+ Crozer Q 28:155 Ap '51 750w
Foreign Affairs 29:317 Ja '51 10w
Reviewed by C. C. Morrison
Survey 87:143 Mr '51 490w

TRACHSEL, MRS MYRTLE (JAMISON). Elizabeth of the Mayflower; il. by Stephani Godwin. 207p $2.50 Macmillan
50-10584

Thirteen-year-old Elizabeth Tilley, one of the children on the Mayflower, is the heroine of this story for girls of ten to fourteen. It begins on board the Mayflower and follows the Pilgrims thru their first year in the New World. The author is a direct descendant of Elizabeth Tilley.

Booklist 47:209 F 1 '51

"Elizabeth's courage and practical wisdom are on the remarkable side, but girls will find her and her budding romance of genuine interest." A. M. J.
+ Horn Bk 27:114 Mr '51 120w

"Gentle, slow-moving but authentic and human."
+ Kirkus 18:420 Ag 1 '50 160w

"The many quotations from early documents and the author's sincere presentation of the faith and spirit of the Pilgrims have value. . . Recommended for ages 12-15." L. E. Cathon
+ Library J 76:188 F 1 '51 80w

"The book is full of unusual detail, and the style is frequently rather dry. But there are also moments of high emotion, and the characters are interesting, especially the stepmother of Elizabeth, a wealthy Dutch woman of particular fortitude and integrity. The heroine is one whom girls over twelve may be proud to remember as a 'first American.'" L. S. Bechtel
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ja 14 '51 160w

TRACY, HONOR. Kakemono; a sketch book of post-war Japan. 205p $3 Coward-McCann 915.2 Japan—Social life and customs. Japan—Description and travel [50-12478]

"Miss Tracy's eight-month tour of Japan as a British newspaper woman on assignment has resulted in an indictment not only of MacArthur and the occupation, but of America, Americans, and all their works. The source of Miss Tracy's criticism of our record in Japan lies in her distaste for American food, manners, ideas, methods, products and personalities." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Reviewed by Edith Weigle
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Je 24 '51 190w
Foreign Affairs 30:168 O '51 20w
Reviewed by H. S. Taylor
Library J 76:963 Je 1 '51 120w

"The book is so excellent in the quality of its writing that it could be read with pleasure by somebody who supposed himself quite indifferent to Japan or to the problems of military government. It is the kind of book which is probably destined to be rediscovered from time to time by critics and written up as a small forgotten masterpiece." G. W.
+ Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 15 '50 480w

"By understanding the Japanese point of view she has written the best descriptive book of post-war Japan." Dorothy Woodman
+ New Statesman & Nation 40:104 Jl 22 '50 490w

"Since she sees nothing good in America except, occasionally, a rather flabby kindliness toward people in need, including herself, Miss Tracy is naturally unable to see any good in the reforms we have tried to carry out. . . Miss Tracy writes with an engaging ease and flow, as well as with a somewhat puckered humor. She sees Japan and the Japanese with sympathy, and though her observations on Japanese culture are far from new, she does some excellent pen portraits of Japanese personalities." Bradford Smith
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 6 '51 700w
New Yorker 27:116 My 3 '51 230w

"The medicine in Miss Tracy's spoon is a sour dose, but if we take a good big swallow it may ease the present headache and perhaps stave off a worse one." Eleanor Breed
San Francisco Chronicle p23 My 6 '51 550w
Reviewed by P. R. Levin
Sat R of Lit 34:56 Ag 4 '51 320w

"Miss Honor Tracy provides probably the best succinct account of the uneasy years of the American occupation, with all its paradoxes and banalities, that we shall ever get. Her account does not tally with the self-glorifying monthly reports from General MacArthur's G.H.Q. in Tokio; indeed, the author, who often woke to find rats sitting on her pillow during the night at the U.S. Press Club in Tokio, devotes much of her pronounced talent for Waugh-like invective to holding up Americans to ridicule. . . Besides being great fun to read, Kakemono deserves the closest attention by whatever department in Whitehall—or private individual, for that matter—takes stock of the principles of occupation and military government, to determine what a victorious nation or collection of nations can reasonably expect to put over on its former enemy, and what resources should be devoted to such a task." Mervyn Horder
+ Spec 184:90 Jl 21 '50 440w
Times [London] Lit Sup p402 Je 30 '50 950w

TRACY, MRS LENA (HARVEY). How my heart sang; the story of pioneer industrial welfare work. 192p il $3 Smith, Richard R.
B or 92 Welfare work in industry 50-9978

Mrs Tracy was born in a frontier settlement in Pennsylvania in 1860, was educated at Antioch College and Union Christian College, and then in 1897 took a position under John H. Patterson, president of the National Cash Register Company in Dayton, Ohio. Here she was responsible for doing pioneering in industrial welfare work and it is of this that she writes most fully in her autobiography.

"Mrs. Tracy's record of her life of service is written simply and from the heart." J. V.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Mr 11 '51 150w

"Mrs. Tracy died in 1941, leaving behind her these agreeable and heartening memoirs, now published under the sponsorship of her son, Stephen J. Tracy, Jr." J. T. Winterich
+ Sat R of Lit 34:43 Je 23 '51 180w

TRACY, MARIAN. More casserole cookery. 160p il spir bds $2.50 Viking 641.5 Cookery, Casserole 51-14055

"The casserole cookery book published 10 years ago was highly successful and the 150 new recipes here will gain many admirers. The ingredients are old, the combinations have a 'new touch.' No index. Each page gives a menu with the recipe of the 'piece de resistance.'" Library J

"All in all, it is another Must for the cookbook shelf."
+ Kirkus 19:475 Ag 15 '51 180w

"An excellent book for a busy woman who spends less than the whole day in her kitchen." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 76:2008 D 1 '51 70w

"An excellent list for the pantry shelf and delicious recipes for meals that almost cook themselves makes this an almost 'must' for busy women."
+ N Y Times p54 D 2 '51 20w

TRACY, RAY PALMER. Fighting sheepman. 307p $2.75 Little 51-9551

Western story.

Booklist 47:255 Mr 15 '51

"Well done."
+ Kirkus 19:37 Ja 15 '51 80w

"For libraries which buy westerns." M. J. Meade
Library J 76:607 Ap 1 '51 50w

"An informative unusual 'Western.'" L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ap 29 '51 100w

"Despite some naïveté, 'Fighting Sheepman' is both exciting and instructive reading." M. P. Allen
+ — N Y Times p16 Jl 22 '51 90w

TRAUBEL, HELEN. Metropolitan Opera murders. 234p $2.50 Simon & Schuster 51-13551

Detective story.

Reviewed by Drexel Drake
Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 N 4 '51 100w
Kirkus 19:542 S 15 '51 120w

"Miss Traubel's plot is conventionally lively but her prose is an agglutinate of cliché." James Sandoe
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 O 28 '51 120w

"Miss Traubel provides less inside operatic color than that earlier Metropolitan murder-monger, Queena Mario. . . Still, some of her own wonderfully warm personality filters through to her detective-diva Elsa Vaughn; and when you're through you can always put on some Traubel records and resume a justified adoration." Anthony Boucher
N Y Times p32 N 4 '51 140w

"Miss Traubel's writing is admirably simple, and scenes backstage or those dealing with music are fine, but the outsiders clutter up the plot. C plus." L. G. Offord
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 28 '51 80w
Springf'd Republican p14C N 4 '51 320w

TRAVERS, ROBERT JOHN. 20th meridian. 288p $3 Norton
51-11591

Story of a convoyed tramp steamer carrying a load of whiskey during wartime, and the effects of the situation on the crew.

Booklist 47:394; 48:14 Jl 15 '51; S 1 '51

"The author served throughout the war as chief mate in the merchant marine, but this information is not needed as a guarantee of the book's authenticity. Everything about it—the men, the ship itself, the action—rings true. What it needs is greater art. The story drags because of the many flashbacks, the author is at times laborious in his explanations, and the book as a whole needs focus." A. L. Bader
+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 S 16 '51 320w

"This jerry-built vessel never seems to make port. Off to a good start with a whisky-laden freighter headed back in slow convoy from England to the States, manned by a motley crew antagonistic to each other and the world at large, and with an obsessive-compulsive alcoholic as first mate, the story soon falls apart. The narrative becomes episodic, and stock characters and situations are used freely to paste the parts together." P. V. Farrell
— Commonweal 54:486 Ag 24 '51 300w
Kirkus 19:357 Jl 15 '51 150w

"A story of the sea wherein man and nature are at their brutal, elemental worst." R. W. Henderson
Library J 76:1224 Ag '51 60w

"There are inadequacies in his novel . . . but the voyage of the SS Branten is a memorable one, and it leads us to hope that we may hear more from Robert Travers in the future." Harvey Swados
+ — Nation 173:197 S 8 '51 380w

Reviewed by Stanley Cooperman
New Repub 125:20 D 31 '51 100w

"Mr. Travers has caught the atmosphere of his ship convincingly, and despite the first few chapters which deal mostly with the crew's wistful recollections of escapades ashore, builds up a tension that keeps the reader engrossed until the end."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 S 2 '51 160w

"Mr. Travers has written a story that stings like winter spray and rolls with the feel of the sea." Harry Gilroy
N Y Times p19 Ag 19 '51 180w
New Yorker 27:115 S 8 '51 90w

"As a picture of what it's like to be aboard a merchantman in wartime, the story is colorful. The author is at his best when he is describing action in a purely masculine sphere, and he writes dialogue with a ring of authenticity, so it is unfortunate that he has overlooked such essential ingredients as motivation and characterization." J. A.
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p16 S 2 '51 300w

"The point is that the just in Mr. Travers's book are never completely justified nor the unjust completely black-hearted villains. There is some attempt to round out character, not always successful, but it is there. . . If Mr. Travers will write a little less about the backgrounds of his characters and a little more about what their mutual association does to them, his next book ought to be really good." Fletcher Pratt
Sat R of Lit 34:13 Ag 25 '51 300w
Springf'd Republican p7C S 16 '51 130w

TREADGOLD, MARY. Mystery of the Polly Harris [Eng title: Polly Harris]. 247p il $2.50 Doubleday
51-10769

Mystery story for boys and girls. The scene is post-war London.

"A topnotch story for children over 10." Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Jl 1 '51 170w

"The atmospheric pen and ink sketches by Pat Marriott add excitement and pleasing chills to a superior mystery."
+ Kirkus 19:185 Ap 1 '51 140w

"Incredible but fascinating. Recommended for its absorbing characterization and unusual setting. Grades 5-7." Elizabeth Burr
+ Library J 76:1034 Je 15 '51 100w

Reviewed by Marjorie Fischer
N Y Times p12 Jl 8 '51 190w

"Here's an excellent real-sounding yarn." L. G. Offord
+ San Francisco Chronicle p4 N 11 '51 70w

"The setting of the story is fascinating, and there are some unusual and interesting characters. The drawings by Pat Marriott of the Thames and the older parts of London are unusual, too. They emphasize the background and, in the figures, the vigor and enterprise of Mike, Caroline, and the Hard Chaps."
+ Sat R of Lit 34:44 My 12 '51 180w
Wis Lib Bul 47:153 Je '51

TREAT, LAWRENCE (LAWRENCE ARTHUR GOLDSTONE). Big shot. 250p $2.50 Harper 51-1696

Detective story.

Kirkus 19:80 F 1 '51 90w

"An excellently worked out portrait in full dimensions. Mr. Treat is an old hand in the mystery game, but he has never before achieved such depth either in plot or in character."

TREAT, LAWRENCE—Continued
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 Ap 29 '51 250w

"Character development is a fictional fine point that few whodunit writers have the time or the talent to bother about. Lawrence Treat is one of the few. He writes a fairly good novel about an interesting character and then throws in a fast mystery as a bonus." Hillis Mills
+ N Y Times p27 Ap 8 '51 160w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord
+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 1 '51 70w

"Absorbingly excellent."
+ Sat R of Lit 34:40 Ap 28 '51 50w

TREAT, NOLA, jt. auth. See Richards, L. Quantity cookery

TREE, GREGORY, pseud. Case against butterfly. 220p $2.50 Scribner 51-9733

Detective story.

Kirkus 19:13 Ja 1 '51 70w

"The plot is so wildly implausible and based on such whopping coincidences that it has a certain strange fascination, heightened by the author's apparent ignorance, in fields as varied as fingerprinting and yo-yos." A. B.
N Y Times p31 Ap 29 '51 120w

"Underneath the verbiage and the small print is a fantastic plot, involving girl gangs and a psychic cameraman, which might have been tolerable if cut down by about one third."
San Francisco Chronicle p22 Mr 25 '51 70w

"Disappointing."
Sat R of Lit 34:44 Mr 17 '51 50w

TREGASKIS, RICHARD WILLIAM. Seven leagues to paradise; drawings by Rafael Palacios. 268p $3.75 Doubleday
910.4 Voyages around the world 51-12862

A travel-study in which the author of Guadalcanal Diary (Book Review Digest 1943) describes his round-the-world trip in search of an earthly paradise. In his search he covered the East Indies, Asia, Australia, Africa, Europe, and the United States.

Booklist 48:64 O 15 '51

Reviewed by Mason Warner
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 S 30 '51 400w

Reviewed by Gordon Walker
Christian Science Monitor p10 O 25 '51 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p27 N '51

Kirkus 19:382 Jl 15 '51 170w

"Recommended." W. K. Harrison
+ Library J 76:1420 S 15 '51 70w

"A book which is a mixture—an odd and surprisingly successful mixture—of travelogue and sociological study." Marcus Duffield
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 S 30 '51 550w

"Tregaskis is a good reporter. He and his book are at their best when he is reporting; then the odd corners of the world in India and China and the people who inhabit them come alive." P. J. C. Friedlander
+ N Y Times p6 S 30 '51 750w

New Yorker 27:169 N 24 '51 210w

"All of this is pleasant and informative reading. Mr. Tregaskis, without being too serious about it all, manages to get in a good deal more useful fact than most travel writers do, even when they are obviously working hard at it." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 1 '51 650w

"Richard Tregaskis has done what I thought to be impossible. He has written a book so bad (in the first hundred pages) that every critical sense is revolted, and so good (in the remainder) that one can only applaud, all the time wondering how it came about that such folly and such excellence could be compounded within two covers." Robert Payne
Sat R of Lit 34:19 N 10 '51 900w

TREMAIN, ARTHUR. Successful retailing; a handbook for store owners and managers. 363p $4.95 Harper
658.87 Retail trade 51-9950

"Fundamental principles of retailing, the establishment of store policies, selection of a store location, personnel work, advertising, record keeping, buying procedures as well as other problems connected with the business of retail selling are carefully considered." Wis Lib Bul

"Tremain's volume has been properly termed a handbook rather than a textbook. As such its primary task must be to serve as a reference for those persons who may wish at one time or another to look up some particular matter relating to retailing. To serve this purpose the present volume has had to be written in a condensed, meaty style that precludes the lengthy arguments and detailed expositions so characteristic of textbooks." R. F. Breyer
+ Ann Am Acad 277:247 S '51 450w

Booklist 47:324 My 15 '51

"An excellent and constructive handling of problems of retailing which should be must reading for anyone entering the field."
+ Kirkus 19:87 F 1 '51 140w

Wis Lib Bul 47:118 My '51

TRESSELT, ALVIN R. Follow the wind; pictures by Roger Duvoisin. [26p] $2 Lothrop 50-10974

Picture book in color for the ages four to six. It shows the course of the wind on a spree, and short paragraphs tell about the kite, the bird, the windmill, the airplane, all competitors of the frolicking wind.

Booklist 47:209 F 1 '51

Bookmark 10:110 F '51 10w

Reviewed by A. L. Shea
Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 D 31 '50 50w

"A poetic fantasy for the picture-book age, this colorful book will delight and amuse as well as interest youngsters."
+ Christian Science Monitor p4 D 23 '50 30w

"Excellent not only as a picture book but also for use in the younger children's nature classes."
+ Horn Bk 27:28 Ja '51 80w

"The uncomplicated, simple story and the quiet, satisfying climax makes this pleasant bedtime reading."
+ Kirkus 18:724 D 15 '50 120w

Reviewed by N. L. Rathbun
Library J 76:55 Ja 1 '51 60w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ja 21 '51 90w

"It is no small feat to have caught in a few words the force and movement, the gentleness and the violence of the wind, as Mr. Tresselt has done. In his vigorous pictures Mr. Duvoisin has combined bold and subtle colors with great taste, although the effect is somewhat marred by the rectangles of color in which the text is printed." E. L. B.
+ — N Y Times p35 N 12 '50 130w

Wis Lib Bul 47:65 Mr '51

TREVELYAN, GEORGE MACAULAY. Illustrated English social history; 4v; v2, The age of Shakespeare and the Stuart period; il. selected by Ruth C. Wright. 206p $4.50 Longmans
942 Great Britain—Social conditions. Great Britain—History (50-5891)

The second volume of this series covers the Tudor and Stuart periods in English history. There are four color plates, 124 gravure plates, and some black and white illustrations in the text. Index. For first volume see Book Review Digest 1950.

Booklist 47:222 F 15 '51

"Dr. Trevelyan's admirable work shines forth newly embellished by Miss Wright's excellent choice of illustrations. More than ever, the 'English Social History' is an indispensable book for scholar and layman alike." Milton Crane

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 7 '51 410w

Reviewed by Leila Flower

Christian Science Monitor p5 Ja 10 '51 500w

Current Hist 20:103 F '51 30w

Manchester Guardian p4 N 28 '50 70w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 Ap 29 '51 60w

New Yorker 27:114 Mr 3 '51 170w

"Demonstrates the great informative value of well chosen illustrations in a work of history. Many of the hundred and more pictures that accompany this text evoke the past with a vital clarity beyond the power of words. But the author's verbal power is also of a rare order."

+ Sat R of Lit 33:18 D 23 '50 160w

TREYBAL, ROBERT EWALD. Liquid extraction. 422p $7.50 McGraw

660.284 Extraction processes 51-3134

"Techniques of extracting selected substances from solutions and mixtures of liquids by the use of liquid solvents are important in both laboratory and industrial chemistry. In industry, liquid-extraction processes find application in petroleum refining, the refining of vegetable and animal fats and oils, and in the manufacturing of numerous organic chemicals, etc. This book is written so that it is potentially useful in either advanced courses in chemical engineering or as a reference manual in industry." Library J

"This is a comprehensive and excellent book." T. K. Sherwood

+ Chem & Eng N 29:3113 Jl 30 '51 210w

"An excellent and thorough compilation of material widely scattered throughout the technical literature. It can be employed both as a text for the teaching of this subject and as a reference book for engineers." M. J. P. Bogart

+ Chem Eng 58:272 Jl '51 300w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 76:1135 Jl '51 120w

TRIMBLE, JOE. Phil Rizzuto; a biography of the Scooter. (Most valuable player ser) 184p il $2.50 Barnes, A.S.

B or 92 Rizzuto, Philip Francis 51-10778

Biography of the Yankee shortstop, nominated the "most valuable player of 1950" in the American league.

Kirkus 19:221 Ap 15 '51 60w

"An excellent, likable biography of a very likable player." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 76:1128 Jl '51 30w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 My 6 '51 30w

+ N Y Times p22 N 11 '51 70w

TRIMMER, JOHN DEZENDORF. Response of physical systems. 268p $5 Wiley

530.1 Physics—Philosophy 50-9732

"A philosophical and mathematical treatment of certain general problems relating to instrumentation, servo-mechanisms, etc. The author states that a new scientific discipline, which may be called 'system response' and which is related to the new discipline of cybernetics, is emerging. If so, this is one of the first works in the field." (Library J) Index.

"The book should serve as an admirable text for courses in the theory of instrumentation where it can be supplemented by an able lecturer and by laboratory experiments. One who attempts to master it by himself may find many parts too brief to follow without difficulty." R. H. Munch

+ Chem & Eng N 29:3486 Ag 20 '51 170w

"The author's arguments are not easy to follow. Nevertheless, scientists and engineers who make a practice of keeping up with advanced thinking in technical science will at least want to look at the book." R. R. Hawkins

Library J 75:1832 O 15 '50 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 35:86 N '50

U S Quarterly Bkl 6:500 D '50 200w

TROLLOPE, ANTHONY. Bedside Barsetshire; comp. by Lance O. Tingay; il. by Gwen Raverat. 311p $3.50 Knopf

An anthology of the compiler's favorites from Anthony Trollope's Barsetshire novels. Concludes with a chapter on map making in Barsetshire, a handy guide to Barsetshire, and a who's who in Barsetshire.

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ja 21 '51 380w

Kirkus 18:681 N 15 '50 120w

"Those still to be initiated will find this a most enticing introduction to the Barsetshire Chronicles. Old Trollopians will be delighted to renew acquaintance. Format and illustrations make a most attractive volume. Recommended for general reading." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 75:2150 D 15 '50 120w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 F 18 '51 80w

Reviewed by Angela Thirkell

N Y Times p5 Ja 7 '51 650w

New Yorker 26:90 Ja 27 '51 70w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Mr 18 '51 250w

"Mr. Tingay has chosen well and has dovetailed his selections skilfully. In addition to his introduction he has provided a learned discussion of the cartography of Barset, a 'handy guide' to the county, and a 'Who's Who in Barsetshire' that may be used to test the memory of the most knowing Trollopian. But his selections are not as self-sufficient as he believes them to be." B. R. Redman

+ — Sat R of Lit 34:25 Mr 3 '51 500w

TROLLOPE, ANTHONY. Letters; ed. by Bradford Allen Booth. 519p $8 Oxford

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 51-5349

"In 1944 the death of an enthusiastic American Trollopian, M. S. Parrish, brought some 300 autograph letters of Trollope to the library of Princeton University. . . Professor Booth became aware about the same time of two other collections of Trollope letters: the one (83 letters) in the possession of Trollope's granddaughter, Miss M. R. Trollope; the other (55 letters) belonging to Mrs. Reginald Smith, daughter of Trollope's publisher, George Smith. Of Miss Trollope's collection most of the items are letters addressed to Trollope. . . In all, Professor Booth has managed to bring together as many as 932 letters. Of these, he tells us, 'considerably more than 750 are unpublished, and among those published a majority have appeared only in fragmentary form.' " Times [London] Lit Sup

"The general reader, no doubt, might have preferred more explanatory material to fill in the interstices between letters, but Professor Booth also aims at supplying complete source material for the student. He could scarcely have added more and kept within the compass of a single volume. He has succeeded in compiling a reference work that has abundant interest for both types of reader." Henry Sowerby

TROLLOPE, ANTHONY—Continued
+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 S 6 '51 850w

"In spite of the utilitarian character of most of the letters and their lack of literary embellishment, they are revealing of the author's personality." B. B. Libaire
Library J 76:1336 S 1 '51 120w

Manchester Guardian p4 Ag 14 '51 180w

"It is hard to imagine anyone not interested in Trollope gaining any profit from this volume. Functional must be the word, and at least three hundred of the 931 letters in the collection are so severely functional that even Professor Bradford, than whom there is no more ardent Trollopian, finds himself constrained to synopsise them in tiny type. . . For the rest, these letters may be regarded as an addendum rather than as a complement to the Autobiography. They reveal the generous, downright, irascible, warm-hearted man shown there." Walter Allen
New Statesman & Nation 42:160 Ag 11 '51 1050w

"Trollope cannot be numbered among the great English letter-writers. His editor admits as much even while permitting himself slightly derogatory comments upon Walpole, Cowper, and other famous practitioners of the art. But the contrast to their self-conscious artistry which is presented by Trollope's forthrightness and plain clarity is refreshing." S. C. Chew
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ag 19 '51 1050w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman
Sat R of Lit 35:15 Ja 5 '52 900w

"Professor Booth decided to accept lacunae and to set out in a single chronology texts or summaries of all letters discoverable, down to the most trivial. These texts and summaries he annotates with a patient assiduity beyond praise. I know of no other similar work to which the editor has given such unsparing labour. But, alas, this tireless tracking down of letters, this meticulous commentary, can adorn but cannot transform a work which, because it lacks continuity, because letters of individual importance and scraps devoid of interest follow one another with the monotony of water dripping from a tap, is (one hates to say so) dull. It need not have been. A volume two-thirds the size, containing only letters worth printing for their own sake and arranged under main headings, each section chronological within itself, would have been engrossing." Michael Sadleir
Spec 187:247 Ag 24 '51 1200w

"Professor Booth has done his work well throughout. . . We may be grateful to him for a book which adds not a little to our appreciation of Trollope."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p498 Ag 10 '51 1100w

TROLLOPE, ANTHONY. North America; edited, with an introd, notes and new materials, by Donald Smalley and Bradford Allen Booth. 555p il $6 Knopf

917 U.S.—Description and travel. U.S.—Politics and government—Civil war. Canada—Description and travel 51-11097

"This traveler's account of the United States and Canada during the early years of the Civil War was undertaken by the English novelist to describe for his fellow-countrymen the social and political scene but more especially 'to mitigate the soreness' created in this country by earlier accounts of absurdities and imperfections, particularly described by Trollope's mother. With the omission of five chapters, intended for the convenience of British readers on the machinery of government, this text follows the original edition of 1862." Library J

Booklist 48:145 D 15 '51

"Donald Smalley and Bradford A. Booth edited this highly entertaining book and provide an interesting introduction and footnotes on the travelog of this wise, observant, fair, and witty reporter who, thruout his experience, never stopped being solidly English." Richard Blakesley
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 25 '51 460w

Reviewed by R. R. Brunn
Christian Science Monitor p9 D 14 '51 700w

Kirkus 19:552 S 15 '51 180w

"The false prophecies and the criticism based on misinformation lend the work today a naïve charm; but it is on the whole a painstaking effort to understand American institutions and the philosophy back of them. . . It should be welcomed by the larger libraries." B. B. Libaire
+ Library J 76:1702 O 15 '51 160w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 D 9 '51 320w

"The format of this new edition is handsome, the illustrations well selected, the binding and typography distinguished, the editing full, accurate, discriminating and intelligent. Publisher and editors alike are to be congratulated on restoring to usability one of the most valuable and most neglected interpretations of America." H. S. Commager
+ N Y Times p3 D 23 '51 800w

TROLLOPE, ANTHONY. Way we live now; with an introd. by Marion E. Dodd. 825p $3.95 Knopf

50-10379

This second of the Borzoi reprints of Trollope's novels is a study of aristocracy versus trade in the 1870's.

Booklist 47:158 D 15 '50

"A bitter book and an angry one, 'The Way We Live Now' has not one whiff of self-pity about it. This is the book of an old lion of a man who loved virtue and hated sham, and who believed that he had lived into a world where nobility had vanished and even decency become a thing to marvel at. Yet Trollope's instinct for honesty is so great that he gives that world its due." Elizabeth Janeway
Christian Science Monitor p8 D 23 '50 1050w

"However illuminating the picture of social conditions may be to historians, this novel is something less than top-flight Trollope. For the most memorable people of his creation we must look elsewhere."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p52 D 3 '50 360w

New Yorker 26:186 N 18 '50 160w

"The famous history of the Eustace 'paraphernalia' is probably Trollope's most tightly knit novel, and its central character is one of the liveliest, if not one of his most virtuous, heroines. . . In this novel, as in many others, Trollope displays his ability to bring a minor character to life in only a few lines." B. R. Redman
Sat R of Lit 33:40 D 16 '50 270w

TROYAT, HENRI. My father's house; tr. from the French by David Hapgood. (While the earth endures, v 1) 692p $4.50 Duell

51-10417

"A naturalized Frenchman who escaped from Moscow during the Revolution writes in this long novel of the Russia he knew in his youth, with its pre-revolutionary mutterings and assassinations and riots fomented by the revolutionaries set over against the comfortable lives of the merchant class." Library J

Kirkus 19:412 Ag 1 '51 200w

"It is a simple straightforward tale that will enlighten the reader about events in Russia, and although the scene is large the family is small so the book is not crowded with people. Recommended for leisurely reading." K. A. Shorey
+ Library J 76:1564 O 1 '51 90w

" 'My Father's House' is a book in the grand style, a book of stature, thickly populated with characters each of whom is a rounded human being in whom reticence struggles with indiscretion, courage with baseness, love with hate, good with evil, as is the universal fate. This is a book in which scene after scene imprints itself upon your memory." Virgilia Peterson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 O 28 '51 750w

"The author has tried to strike a happy balance between creating flesh-and-blood individuals and making those individuals typical of different groups of Russians. Only the common people are left out. At times, the characters serve as pretexts for inserting brilliant descriptions of Cherkess horseriders, Armenian marriage and burial customs, snowstorms on the steppe, battlefield scenes, riots in the revolution of 1905, etc. Yet Troyat's skill is such that the slight artificiality of his all-embracing purpose is not resented by the reader." Henri Peyre
+ — N Y Times p5 O 14 '51 600w

"This is one of those gigantic books in which whole families, and even whole communities, have a part, but no amount of local detail or public activity can really interrupt the strong central theme of the story, which ends, as it began, with the three characters separated, perhaps forever this time, but indissolubly bound together in spite of anything they may do."
+ New Yorker 27:162 N 24 '51 180w

"Magnificent novel." Jack Aldridge
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 28 '51 900w

TRUEBLOOD, DAVID ELTON. Life we prize. 218p $2.50 Harper

323.4 Liberty. Democracy. Civilization, Occidental 51-12247

An examination into the causes and remedies of the present "moral depression" by a Quaker philosopher.

Booklist 48:60 O 15 '51

"He attempts to formulate a statement of western values in terms which modern, scientifically trained men can understand, and, after a somewhat wordy and indecisive first chapter, he makes, in general, a very good job of it, taking the secularly minded man as far along the road as he is willing to go, and studiously avoiding all specifically religious discussion until, in the final chapter, he formulates a 'basic faith.'" Edward Wagenknecht
+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 S 9 '51 550w

Christian Century 69:45 Ja 9 '52 100w

Reviewed by Earl Cranston
Crozer Q 29:86 Ja '52 550w

"A valuable book for all those concerned with the present world struggle and who want to go to the root of the matter."
+ Kirkus 19:562 S 15 '51 180w

School & Society 74:320 N 17 '51 20w

Wis Lib Bul 47:209 S '51

TRULLINGER, O. O. Red banners over Asia. 212p $3 Beacon press

950 Communism—Asia. Eastern question (Far East) 51-2910

"The major thesis of 'Red Banners Over Asia' is that East and South Asia, with more than half the world's population, is the object of a skillful Kremlin-directed conspiracy. That conspiracy is making use of discontent in any form and has been especially successful in capturing and diverting honest nationalism. The author is at some pains to show that Communist propaganda has been flexible, imaginative and potent. This is in contrast to democratic propaganda which he holds to have been slight, ill-advised and inept. O. O. Trullinger [is the] pseudonym of an Asiatic diplomat." (N Y Times) No index.

"The subject about which the author writes needs a good going over, and a book on it would fill a gap. Unfortunately, however, this is definitely not that book. Most of the material published in it could be culled from a good metropolitan daily. The book is slight. . . A concentrated type of writing would help, but the author wastes valuable space by editorializing constantly and at the most unlikely places." Emil Lengyel
— + Ann Am Acad 277:273 S '51 550w

Reviewed by George Scharschug
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ap 29 '51 180w

Foreign Affairs 30:166 O '51 20w

Reviewed by Victor Purcell
New Repub 125:18 Jl 23 '51 320w

"All this is good, but unhappily the manner of presentation is such that it will not reach the audience it deserves. The amateur in Far Eastern affairs will find the style much too baffling. The specialist will probably be irritated by minor mistakes that do not affect the validity of the author's major theme but that can be exasperating. Most of these are slips in subsidiary fact, name spelling, dates and identifications."R. A. Smith
N Y Times p33 Je 10 '51 360w

TRUMAN, DAVID BICKNELL. Governmental process; political interests and public opinion. 544p $5 Knopf

328.368 Lobbying. Public opinion—U.S. 51-4187

"This book endeavors to refine and extend the path-breaking work of A. F. Bentley's The Process of Government, 1908. Dr. Truman's thesis is that groups comprise, in the deepest sense, the 'raw materials' of politics and government because they embody the basic 'interactions of men' in pursuit or defense of their interests. What he has done therefore has been to analyze the formation and activities of representative interest groups particularly in relation to the formal institutions of government." U S Quarterly Bk R

"Professor Truman's book is a contribution to the literature of systematic political science." Avery Leiserson
+ Am Pol Sci R 45:1192 D '51 650w

"All of Mr. Truman's theoretical offerings deserve to be carefully considered and will, on the whole, be found useful. It is regretted that Mr. Truman did not go somewhat further in his theoretical analysis, for he seems always to be tottering on the brink of developing a conceptual framework for analyzing the total political process, as manifested in various political systems, but he never quite takes the final plunge." Roland Young
+ — Ann Am Acad 278:200 N '51 500w

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:291 S '51 200w

TRUSS, SELDON. Never fight a lady. 251p $2.50 Doubleday 50-10878

Mystery story.

Reviewed by E. Fowke
Canadian Forum 31:164 O '51 80w

Reviewed by Drexel Drake
Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ja 7 '51 70w

Kirkus 18:572 S 15 '50 70w

"Mr. Truss writes like Raymond Postgate—which is high praise—and one hopes to hear from him again, often and soon." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 75:1903 N 1 '50 70w

"A thin and insufficiently motivated plot, with none of the wit one has come to expect from this author."
— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ja 28 '51 220w

"As joyously readable a thriller as you could ask." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p27 D 10 '50 160w

"A little disorganized, but livelier than most."
+ — New Yorker 26:88 Ja 6 '51 100w

"Don't miss this one for all round competence and charm." L. G. Offord
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 D 24 '50 90w

TRUSS, SELDON—Continued

"Writing excellent and skip-proof; plot's Stalin-stooge involvements improbable, but action, suspense, and year's nicest heroine all tops."

+ Sat R of Lit 33:35 D 23 '50 50w

TUCKER, WILSON. City in the sea. 250p $2.50 Rinehart
51-13119

Science-fiction.

Bookmark 11:61 D '51

Kirkus 19:458 Ag 15 '51 60w

"A well-written time killer—and that's about all that can be said for it." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 76:1564 O 1 '51 90w

"'The City in the Sea' could have been an outstanding science-fiction novel, but a weak and indefinite ending spoils its effect. Despite this, it is well worth reading." V. G.

+ — N Y Times p41 N 18 '51 110w

"A most disturbing evening's reading." Don Fabun

San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 18 '51 140w

TUCKER, WILSON. Red herring. 214p $2.50 Rinehart
51-11446

Detective story.

"A set of stock characters, but they've been woven rather neatly into an intricate plot."

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ag 26 '51 90w

"Seekers for an interesting murder plot will be disappointed. Charles Horne, however, continues to be a private detective more likable and credible than many of the cases in which he appears." Anthony Boucher

— + N Y Times p13 Jl 29 '51 90w

"Mr. Tucker has tried a difficult trick in this readable story; see if you think it's successful." L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 15 '51 70w

"Not too good, not too bad." Kathleen Sproul

Sat R of Lit 34:52 S 8 '51 60w

TUNIS, JOHN ROBERTS. Sport for the fun of it; a handbook of information on nineteen sports including the official rules [il. by Johan Bull]. rev ed 248p $3 Barnes, A.S.

796 Sports 50-11248

"Originally published ten years ago [Book Review Digest 1940]. . . Two sports—croquet and fencing—have been omitted and bicycling, paddle tennis, and roller skating have been added. Text and bibliographies have been brought up-to-date. Book carries no statement of the revision, and except for old copyright date and a revision note on the jacket, would appear to be a new publication." Booklist

Booklist 47:158 D 15 '50

"We like Tunis' emphasis on the amateur spirit in sports—active participation instead of spectatoritis. His Foreword should be required reading for high school and college students—and for fans in general." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 75:1908 N 1 '50 80w

TURGEON, MRS CHARLOTTE SNYDER. Cooking for Christmas [decorations by the Strimbans]. 116p $2.50 Oxford

641.5 Cookery. Christmas 50-10317

Gives menus for the traditional Christmas and New Year's dinners, and for holiday entertaining, and includes recipes for both American and European dishes.

Booklist 47:112 N 15 '50

Bookmark 10:57 D '50 20w

"A slight but useful book. . . It has the flavor of European as well as American kitchens. A delightful gift book for the collector of cook books and the working housekeeper!" K. T. Willis

+ Library J 75:2153 D 15 '50 60w

"There's a real lift in this book for the hostess with her many entertaining problems. Directions are clear and the surrealistic drawings by the Strimbans are amusing." M. A. Gram

+ Sat R of Lit 34:47 Mr 10 '51 80w

TURKIN, HY, and THOMPSON, S. C. Official encyclopedia of baseball. jubilee ed 620p il $5 Barnes, A.S.

796.357 Baseball 51-10369

"This long awaited encyclopedia fulfills most expectations. Authorized by big league executives, it contains a record of every player in every big league game since 1871, with managers and records of all kinds. Origin and history of baseball, especially of the big leagues. Business organization, and all kinds of miscellaneous information." (Library J) No index.

Bookmark 10:183 My '51 30w

"The nation's fans will find fascination in a casual browsing thru the book, and there is material to settle those curious bets that baseball bugs always seem to be making. And sportswriters or baseball historians can't afford to be without the book." Robert Cromie

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 29 '51 400w

"An absolutely indispensable reference work that surely should be in every library, large or small." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 76:780 My 1 '51 70w

Wis Lib Bul 47:118 My '51

TURKUS, BURTON B., and FEDER, SID. Murder, inc; the story of the syndicate. 498p $4.50 Farrar, Straus

364.973 Crime and criminals—U.S. 51-8065

"Mr. Turkus is a political independent who as assistant district attorney under William O'Dwyer, the Democratic D. A. of Kings county, N. Y. (Brooklyn) prosecuted seven members of a nation-wide murder ring and sent them to the chair, along with Lepke Buchalter, head of the organization. Mr. Feder, a newspaperman, has written for him this sensational, detailed, and rather appalling record." Library J

Reviewed by William Moore

Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 D 9 '51 460w

Kirkus 19:597 O 1 '51 140w

"Plenty of grotesque humor. . . Should be widely read." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 76:1803 N 1 '51 140w

"The three hundred pages of this book which deal with Murder, Inc. itself, the liquidation squad, are fine, engrossing stuff. The other two hundred, in which the authors try to support their subtitle, are much less so. I wish they had been left out, pending further research." John Lardner

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 D 16 '51 650w

"The thorough and incisive chronicle compiled by Mr. Turkus and his collaborator is a valuable addition to the source library of American crime. It is too bad, however, that they marred its otherwise commendable objectivity by disparaging unduly the work of the Kefauver committee because of a few misstatements of fact or omissions in testimony." Emanuel Perlmutter

+ — N Y Times p54 N 25 '51 700w

"Although the factual material backing up this thesis is of an extremely persuasive nature, Mr. Turkus's collaborator has regrettably set it down in the sort of explosive baby talk most often encountered in detective-story magazines."

+ — New Yorker 27:65 D 29 '51 260w

TURNBULL, ROBERT B. Radio and television sound effects; with drawings by the author. 334p $4.50 Rinehart

621.384193 Radio broadcasting—Sound effects 51-9845

"This is a combined how-to and demonstration book on radio and television sound effects.

Written by a practicing 'sound man,' it has authority in every line and illustration." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 47:268 Ap 1 '51
Wis Lib Bul 47:211 S '51

TURNELL, MARTIN. The novel in France. 432p $4.25 New directions

843.09 French fiction 51-9687

"An excursion into the field of literary history by a perceptive British critic who explores in this book the work of seven French novelists, Mme. de la Fayette, Choderlos de Laclos, Constant, Stendhal, Balzac, Flaubert, and Proust. In place of the usual concepts of plot, character, or structure as main clues to a writer's art, Mr. Turnell bases his judgments on the novelist's use of language itself in mirroring the society of which he is writing." Library J

Booklist 47:378 Jl 1 '51

Reviewed by Paul Engle
Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 My 27 '51 380w

"Mr. Turnell's title is in part misleading. Although the novels discussed are those which appear in chronological order, his book is not the usual history of a literary genre. It is rather a discussion of those French novels which Turnell feels to be among the finest. A very personal history, as all worthwhile history is bound to be." Serge Hughes
+ Commonweal 54:287 Je 29 '51 1750w

"A penetrating analysis of French literature and language and of French cultural history as well. Of particular interest is the application of modern psychological insights to the classical French novel. Strongly recommended for college libraries." B. B. Libaire
+ Library J 76:597 Ap 1 '51 140w

"I doubt if Mr Turnell understands what was meant when Proust was called 'un excellent disciple de l'ancienne rhétorique.' And in the realm of fact it is staggering to be told that Constant was 'Président du Conseil' in 1829; or—having regard to the 'language of fiction'—that Proust's hero 'nags Albertine into suicide.' Such considerations apart, the final impression is one of sincerity, decent moderation, a refusal to be hustled by mythical reputations, and a real and sometimes infectious enjoyment of good fiction." A. G. L.
+ — Manchester Guardian p4 D 8 '50 240w

"The Novel in France is an excellent book as a whole and one that defines again the true and broad province of literary criticism itself." Maxwell Geismar
+ New Repub 125:20 Ag 6 '51 300w

"One of the most illuminating books on the French novel that I have ever read." V. S. Pritchett
+ New Statesman & Nation 40:627 D 16 '50 2350w

"Thoughtful and suggestive inquiry." Marvin Lowenthal
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 Ag 19 '51 1050w

"Mr. Turnell's standards might justly be termed classical. . . His sensitivity to style is keen, and the screen of words interposed between the object or the reader and the author by Romantic writers naturally grates upon him. He is nostalgic for the alert, electrical prose of the French eighteenth century and for the pitiless lucidity of the novels then written by not very moral moralists, from Laclos to Stendhal. He is unfair to the vitality, splendor and experimenting audacity of French literature since 1830." Henri Peyre
+ — N Y Times p5 My 13 '51 700w

Reviewed by Edmund Wilson
New Yorker 27:124 S 15 '51 800w

" 'The Novel in France' is well worth careful reading because it is the work of an acute, intelligent, hardy, and provocative critic. But this critic—to borrow his own favorite word—possesses a strictly limited sensibility. And it should be added that he is strangely tolerant of inadequate and even inaccurate translations from the language he knows and loves so well." B. R. Redman
+ — Sat R of Lit 34:14 Je 9 '51 1150w

Reviewed by J. M. Cohen
Spec 184:738 D 22 '50 800w

"The permanent virtues of The Novel in France are that it does not dogmatize, and that it not only illuminates many new aspects of its subject but suggests quite as many themes for future reflection. In view of its importance, it is a pity that the text is marred by a number of errors and misprints."
Times [London] Lit Sup p809 D 22 '50 6000w

TURNER, FRANCIS JOHN, and VERHOOGEN, JEAN. Igneous and metamorphic petrology. 602p maps $9 McGraw

552.1 Rocks, Igneous. Rocks, Crystalline and metamorphic 51-11252

"A substantial treatise in which a considerable amount of space is given to the chemical and physical principles that are useful in understanding the formation of crystalline rocks. . . Pertinent literature is cited in footnotes. The authors are members of the faculty of the University of California." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 76:1135 Jl '51 80w

"An advanced treatise of interest to graduate students preparing for work in petrology and to graduates already at work in the field. In addition to its use for instruction, it will become a standard reference book."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 36:61 Jl '51

TURNER, KATHARINE C. Red Men calling on the Great White Father. (Civilization of the American Indian ser) 235p il $3.75 Univ. of Okla press

970.5 Indians of North America—Government relations 51-274

"A historic record of pilgrimages to the White House at Washington made by 'typical and exceptional Indians' from our first President's time through Taft's administration. Map and photographs. Bibliography, index." Bookmark

Bookmark 10:106 F '51 30w

"The book is full of amusing anecdotes. And everyone who likes to combine laughter with comprehension and who cares a feather about the American Indian will find this volume rewarding." Stanley Vestal
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 F 18 '51 330w

Current Hist 20:291 My '51 110w

Reviewed by J. E. Brown
Library J 76:178 F 1 '51 140w

"Unpretentious as Mrs. Turner's book is, it nevertheless casts a great deal of light on a tangled and unedifying phase of American history." H. N. Smith
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ag 5 '51 750w

"There are irritating but minor faults in the whole context. The book, in attractive format, brings together hundreds of vivid documents, many of them rare and some of them flashingly brilliant. The brightness and darkness of an immense human drama are here; and the relevancy abides, because the drama is not yet played out." John Collier
+ N Y Times p19 Mr '51 550w

"Mrs. Turner's book is the thirty-second unit in the Civilization of the American Indian Series. It is a pathetic little series of narratives, and a righteous indignation occasionally erupts through the pathos. And it is excellent reading in its own right."
Sat R of Lit 34:34 Ag 18 '51 150w

Springf'd Republican p8D Jl 1 '51 320w

TURNER, MINA. Town meeting means me; il. by Lloyd Coe. 48p $1.50 Houghton

352 Community life—Juvenile literature. Local government—Juvenile literature 51-6743

A simple study of local government for grades three to six. The example chosen is a New England town of 3,000.

Booklist 48:72 O 15 '51

Bookmark 11:61 D '51

"A useful tool for the classroom around election time, particularly, this may also be used with older children to explain the democratic process."

+ Kirkus 19:531 S 15 '51 80w

"Clear exposition and delightful illustrations throughout the book by Lloyd Coe, make this a valuable contribution to the second-third graders who are learning about their towns." Elizabeth Johnson

+ Library J 76:1572 O 1 '51 50w

"The part about taxes is good, and the description of a town meeting a fine climax. It is a good first civics book for second to fourth grades." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 D 9 '51 100w

TURNOR, REGINALD. Nineteenth century architecture in Britain (British art and building ser) 118p 127il $4.75 British bk. centre

724.142 Architecture—Great Britain 51-5636

"Reginald Turnor, himself an architect and a writer of distinction, here surveys the chequered course of British architecture from Regency times to the beginning of the present century. . . The book has 127 illustrations, many of them from photographs taken specially by A. F. Kersting, F.R.P.S.; among them are some of the most famous buildings of the century, and also many obscure but representative examples." (Publisher's note) Index.

"[The book] comes as a much-needed corrective, at once putting some balance into our view of the Victorians and pointing out the dangers of such fashionable overemphasis." John Willett

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 24 '51 350w

"If there is one reason more than another why 19th-century English architecture is interesting, it is because, not in spite, of the ugliness of some of its masterpieces. This is not the ugliness of neglect and incompetence, but of an emotional crisis in the arts, of limitless creative consequence. It deserves some attempt, at least, at analytical, if not sympathetic, handling. . . Nevertheless, Mr. Turnor is entitled to his standpoint, which is that of the modern Man of Taste. Accept that standpoint and the book turns out to be an engaging essay on its subject. Mr. Turnor has a pleasant, epigrammatic style; indeed, one wonders why he quotes other authors' felicities so constantly, when he can often be more felicitous himself. He is an essayist, and at his best when most personal: perhaps, even, when most perverse." John Summerson

+ - New Statesman & Nation 42:102 Jl 28 '51 450w

"Though few readers will agree that the Victorians made a mess of things when they 'threw away their chance of adapting the Georgian heritage smoothly to the uses of modern materials and engineering,' and though scholars may not be the only ones to wince at the author's colloquial style, no one can deny that this volume, like all books that bear the Batsford imprint, is richly illustrated." Wayne Andrews

Sat R of Lit 34:39 D 22 '51 260w

"Books on nineteenth-century architecture are rare, books on Victorian architecture in particular are still more rare. So here was a responsibility and a great opportunity for Mr. Turnor; but he has missed it. . . If an architectural critic cannot see the merits of either so restrained and careful, so sensitive and refined a designer as Pearson, or of so original and forceful if harsh a designer as Butterfield, he should not choose to write a book on Victorian architecture. Moreover, Mr. Turnor seems not always especially well informed on his subjects."

- Times [London] Lit Sup p160 Mr 16 '51 1000w

TWENTIETH CENTURY FUND. Defense without inflation. See Hart, A. G.

TWENTIETH CENTURY FUND. Financing defense. See Hart, A. G., and others

TWISS, CLINTON. Long, long trailer. 238p $3 Crowell

818 Automobiles—Trailers. U.S.—Description and travel 51-13400

The author and his wife had not had a vacation in years, so they decided to take a long one, maybe two years long. They sold everything they could and invested in a resplendent trailer, and set out to see the whole of the United States. But it was more expensive than they had thought and in one year they were broke. The book was written in an effort to retrench.

Booklist 48:42; 80 O 1 '51; N 1 '51

Bookmark 11:83 Ja '52 30w

"You will find 'The Long, Long Trailer' good for reading aloud. If you read it to yourself, you will stop often to laugh, and wish you had someone to share the fun with." A. F. Otis

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 28 '51 230w

Kirkus 19:510 S 1 '51 160w

Reviewed by Joanna Spencer

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 O 14 '51 380w

Reviewed by R. C. Lewis

N Y Times p55 D 2 '51 440w

"An unfailingly good-humored account of how two people embarked on something they knew nothing about, learned as they went, and had a pretty good time doing it." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 12 '51 650w

TWORKOV, JACK. Camel who took a walk; pictures by Roger Duvoisin. [28p] $2; lib ed $2.50 Aladdin

Nonsense picture-story book about a beautiful young camel who took an early morning walk, about a terrible tiger that planned to pounce on her, and the plans of the monkey, the squirrel, and the bird—all of which came to naught.

Booklist 47:386 Jl 1 '51

Bookmark 10:233 Jl '51

"An absolutely charming story, destined, I suspect, to become a classic not only because of its perfect story but of its perfect telling as well. Roger Duvoisin's illustrations are choice. The whole thing is practically perfect." Phyllis Fenner

+ Library J 76:1233 Ag '51 90w

"Suspense builds up well in this nonsense tale. Yet, the climax has no catastrophe: it lies in a series of 'did nots,' and its humor may be a bit subtle for four or five year old listeners. However, it is all so different, and so well written otherwise, that they may take it to their hearts as they did the picture book of 'Caps for Sale.' " L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 My 13 '51 170w

"Excitement rises to a surprise ending, which will be a relief to young children and a merry joke to slightly older ones. Some of the fine details of Roger Duvoisin's pictures are obscured by over-dark tones, but the pictures are full of imagination and humor." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p26 My 20 '51 110w

Reviewed by K. T. Kinkead

New Yorker 27:171 D 1 '51 60w

Wis Lib Bul 47:192 Jl '51

TYNAN, KENNETH. He that plays the king; a view of the theatre, with an introductory letter by Orson Welles. 256p $2.75 Longmans

792 Theater—Great Britain A51 3556

"Kenneth Tynan is a young producer who has already had his name on several London theatre programmes since he came down from Oxford. His book is prefaced by a letter from Orson Welles, who was a much younger prodigy when he first attacked the stage professionally. Mr. Tynan's object seems to be to insure himself against insufficient success, either as actor or producer, by staking his claim to be a critic. The book contains his comments on the stage since 1944 (when he was 17), on his elders (and in some cases betters) among critics, on the Edinburgh Festival, and on a few comedians." (Manchester Guardian) Index.

"An impudent and searching mind makes this an excellent book for theatre collections anywhere, particularly in university collections where his wit and wisdom will be particularly appreciated." George Freedley

+ Library J 76:114 Ja 15 '51 80w

Manchester Guardian p4 N 7 '50 180w

Reviewed by Montagu Slater

New Statesman & Nation 40:520 N 25 '50 350w

"When Mr. Tynan writes about contemporaneously important American, English, and French plays and movies in essay and review form he is respectfully irreverent and brilliantly mature. His analysis of the art of acting as represented by Olivier, Gielgud, Jean-Louis Barrault, Aldo Fabrizi, and a host of others is criticism at its best." Siegfried Mandel

+ Sat R of Lit 34:46 My 19 '51 320w

School & Society 73:328 My 26 '51 20w

"An engaging book of dramatic criticism. . . We are completely won over by Tynan, for his love for the 'legendary' theatre is more than a passion. He is [illegible] in his admiration and [illegible] 'Wolfit' [illegible], and reverence for a royally knighted rattletrap of Thespis, all raptures that we share." W. H. [illegible]

+ School & Society 74:11 Jl 7 '51 1650w

Reviewed by E. M. Browne

Spec 185:773 D 22 '50 650w

"By far the most rewarding section of this book is the last, in which tragedy, its nature and its decline, are examined. In it Mr. Tynan takes his wide reading to very real account. If he is ready to drop the flippancy from his writing, as he has for some time past dropped it from his name, Mr. Tynan should find a large and responsive audience." Charles Morgenstern

Theatre Arts 35:8 Mr '51 650w

"Mr. Kenneth Tynan's flair for the theatre comes out more clearly in these first essays in dramatic criticism than in anything he has yet had the opportunity to do as a professional producer. . . . Mr. Tynan certainly possesses the quality which he finds so sadly lacking in the established critics of the day. He has [illegible] and if his critical theorizing is [illegible] and [illegible], his critical practice is [illegible]."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p766 D 1 '50 750w

TYTLER, SIR WILLIAM KERR FRASER-. See Fraser-Tytler, W. K.

U

UCHIDA, YOSHIKO. New friends for Susan; il. by Henry Sugimoto. 180p $2 Scribner

[illegible]

Describes the adventures of Susan Sasaki, a third grader in Berkeley, California, who has to go to a new school because her old one has been damaged by an earthquake.

Booklist 48:110 N 15 '51

"Happy days at school, a gay doll festival party at Susan's home and a visitor from Japan are among the things that make it just the kind of book little girls enjoy." I. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews

+ Horn Bk 27:413 D '51 60w

Kirkus 19:570 O 1 '51 100w

"Book is well-written, and I think second, third, and fourth graders will enjoy every word of it." M. C. Skinner

+ Library J 76:2121 D 15 '51 70w

"The Berkeley background is woven in subtly and deftly by the author, who grew up there. The wartime experiences of the Japanese Americans on the West Coast are not touched upon, nor is there the faintest plea for racial tolerance. A good story for little girls who have just learned to read well." G. C. Coster

+ N Y Times p42 N 4 '51 150w

"Miss Uchida has written, and Henry Sugimoto has ably illustrated, a story that girls will enjoy."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 N 11 '51 200w

ULAM, ADAM BRUNO. Philosophical foundations of English socialism. 173p $3.75 Harvard univ. press

335 Socialism in Great Britain. Philosophy, English. Political science—History 51-1617

"Mr. Ulam picks up the trail of pure political science where it was dropped somewhere around the days of Jefferson and the Founding Fathers to make way for the more pragmatical considerations of expanding economy and mounting prosperity. . . . He finds his most helpful leads in the English scene, around the turn of the century, when Oxford was immersed in the teachings of T. H. Green, F. H. Bradley and Bernard Bosanquet. . . . Having analyzed the liberal system he sums up his conclusions through critical reviews of the work of social reformers—the Fabians, the Webbs, the Coles, Laski, Keynes—covering the period of the rise of political Labor, the fall of Liberalism, down to the emergence of Socialist rule." (Christian Science Monitor) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by T. P. Jenkin

Am Pol Sci R 45:[illegible] [illegible] '51 410w

"If Ulam's treatment is unquestionably correct, he has, indeed, made a contribution to the discussion of modern socialism. Yet, one might ask by contrast whether a study of the writings of the leaders of English socialism from the Fabians on cannot offer us a different picture, for few actual socialists are discussed and the international contacts of British socialism hardly enter the picture. . . . [illegible] of understanding the ideas of [illegible] and in particular [illegible] to understand the [illegible] theory of reform, even in England." F. G. Wilson

Ann Am Acad 276:[illegible] Jl '51 [illegible]w

Reviewed by Henry Sowerby

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 19 '51 400w

"This is a most interesting book." Lord Lindsay of Birker

+ Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 20 '51 650w

Reviewed by Norman MacKenzie

New Statesman & Nation 42:[illegible] S 29 '51 1150w

ULLMAN, ALLAN. Night man; a novelization from the screen play by Lucille Fletcher. 218p $2.50 Random house 51-1097

Mystery story.

Kirkus 19:37 Ja 15 '51 60w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 42:504 N 3 '51 90w

"Lucille Fletcher and Allan Ullman wrote the screen play 'Sorry, Wrong Number,' based on the radio playlet of the same name. It was ingenious and realistic, and made an excellent movie. They've now tried in a novelized screen-play to recreate the same kind of agonized suspense story. . . The crack-up of their present heroine is less credible. And unfortunately, this fact reduces a deliberately created mood of hysteria to something less than believable."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Ap 1 '51 150w

"A thoroughly satisfying performance." Melville Heath
+ N Y Times p30 F 25 '51 170w

"There's a certain thinness about this novelization of a screen play, as if the bones showed through, although the skeleton is fairly well constructed." L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p25 Mr 18 '51 70w

"Not so hot."
Sat R of Lit 34:42 Ap 7 '51 50w

"Adequate but depressing." Esther Howard
Spec 187:310 S 7 '51 30w

ULLMAN, MRS EGON V. See Kennelly, A.

ULLMAN, JAMES RAMSEY. River of the sun. 444p $3.50 Lippincott
50-10995

A philosophical novel that is also a tale of adventure. It relates the story of a search, by a group of men and one woman, for a legendary river, a tributary of the Amazon.

"The scenic effects, the descriptions of the rivers and the jungle, are remarkably good; so too the friction between the men as heat and frustration rub them raw. But in matters of smell, taste, and suffering, the prose is not as graphic as I think it might be, and the mystery man in the story, Dr. Barna, is as much a mystery at the end as he was on discovery." Edward Weeks
+ — Atlantic 187:79 Ja '51 700w

Bookmark 10:109 F '51 80w

"A story of adventure which never becomes puerile or cheap in attaining its effects. An adult book by one who respects intelligence and spiritual values." Riley Hughes
+ Cath World 172:390 F '51 220w

Reviewed by Kelsey Guilfoil
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 7 '51 600w

Christian Science Monitor p13 Ja 25 '51 210w

Cleveland Open Shelf p4 Ja '51

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 27:196 My '51 80w

Kirkus 18:678 N 15 '50 330w

Reviewed by H. L. Roth
Library J 76:40 Ja 1 '51 100w

"There are only a few spots still left in the world where a writer can set a story about a mysterious mountain range, a fabulous secret valley, or an unknown river. . . James Ramsey Ullman in his new novel, 'River of the Sun,' has chosen Brazil out of the possible candidates, and has constructed an exciting adventure story garlanded with lightweight philosophy. He did the same sort of thing perhaps better in his first novel, 'The White Tower,' but the qualities that made the earlier book popular are in the new one also—a high degree of readability, characters whose problems bring them to liveliness rather than life, and a sharp eye for scenic details and technical lore." James Hilton
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ja 7 '51 800w

"It is a story told in Mr. Ullman's fine and strong style, with the accurate knowledge personally gathered in the adventure he has already related in 'The Other Side of the Mountain.' It is excellent reading, and the characters will live in the reader's mind. Those who do not wish to be unduly depressed at this time can be reassured; the tragedy is not unrelieved. The love story, one judges will turn out all right. And Mr. Ullman will continue to be spoken of, for the present, as the author of 'The White Tower.'" R. L. Duffus
+ — N Y Times p5 Ja 7 '51 480w

New Yorker 26:90 Ja 27 '51 80w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 F 25 '51 1000w

"The reader should be warned that the book begins badly, considering how good it gets to be. The first chapter is a prodigy of linguistic pretentiousness. . . No, don't start there. If you want a gripping tale of tropical adventure begin at chapter two and see if you can stop before the end." L. J. Halle
+ — Sat R of Lit 34:13 Ja 20 '51 460w

Springf'd Republican p6D F 25 '51 210w

"Read as a travel account of the Amazon country, River of the Sun has some sharp, descriptive stretches. The sullen natives, the oppressive jungle and the endless, swollen waters often seem as real as the thick river heat. But as a novel, River loses itself in the swampland long before it reaches the sea."
— + Time 57:74 Ja 8 '51 550w

UNAMUNO Y JUGO, MIGUEL DE. The Christ of Velazquez; tr. by Eleanor L. Turnbull. 132p $2.50 Johns Hopkins press

861 Jesus Christ—Poetry 51-10741

"'The Christ of Velazquez' [was] originally published in 1920. This poem of some 2,550 lines represents a culminating point in Unamuno's development. . . In 1913 Unamuno expressed his admiration for a painting of Velazquez: 'the loftiest art expression of Spanish Catholicism: a Christ who is forever dying, without actually dying, in order to infuse us with life.' [It] is conceived not as consecutive scenes or 'stations' from the life, death and resurrection of Our Lord, but rather as monologues and observations inspired by the Crucifixion. The meditations deal at random with Christ's symbolic names (Lamb, Lily, Lion, etc.), with the Sacraments, with attributes of the Passion (Crown, The Nails, etc.), with Christ's body." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"Even when the poet embarks on highly individual interpretations, the painting with all the emotion and fervor it inspires remains the central vision and imparts to this work, unique for Unamuno, a forceful and fine unity." John Sebastian
+ Cath World 174:238 D '51 110w

Reviewed by J. F. Davidson
Churchman 165:16 N 15 '51 100w

"This warm and all-embracing allegory reads like a summarization of the 'tragic sense' of death and life. There is passion, fervor, and poetical intensity. Because of its simple, almost bare, even harsh style, a kind of lean free verse, the impression left is one of utter sincerity, of a pietism devoid of rhetoric and literary fireworks. . . Because of its directness and prosaicness 'The Christ of Velazquez' might seem untranslatable; yet here it is, intact (one is tempted to say improved) in this superb version by Eleanor Turnbull." Angel Flores
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ag 12 '51 450w

"In essence, these poems are not just anti-secular, they are anti-religious, not only anti-humanistic but anti-human and murderous. Such poetry, however depraved, might have some literary interest if it were well done. Unamuno's Spanish is characterized by a false elegance, at once tortured and vulgar—Huysmans without the dirty words. Eleanor Turnbull's translation is excellent, too excellent;

her English is considerably more dignified and gracious than the original." Kenneth Rexroth
N Y Times p5 Je 17 '51 160w

UNGER, LEONARD. Donne's poetry and modern criticism. 91p $3 Regnery
821 Donne, John 50-14643

"This essay opens with definitions of metaphysical poetry drawn from the writings of H. J. C. Grierson, T. S. Eliot, George Williamson, John Crowe Ransom, Allen Tate, and Cleanth Brooks. These definitions Mr. Unger subjects to penetrating analysis in an attempt to discover the precise meanings of their terms. The one agreement seems to be that metaphysical poetry is characterized by the conceit and by wit, and is exemplified by the poetry of John Donne. An acute analysis of a score of poems selected from Donne's Songs and Sonnets produces a startling result that they have no common structural pattern such as the critics have postulated." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Bibliography.

"Mr. Unger writes as though his chief interest in poetry were as an object of critical analyses. If he does not murder to dissect, he yet leaves the reader with a sense of having visited a somewhat airless laboratory rather than of having breathed that exhilarating air in which literature illuminates life and life invigorates literature. For a man who is at pains to emphasize the dramatic character of Donne's poetry, these are singularly pedestrian pages." Babette Deutsch
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 F 4 '51 300w

"I am troubled by what looks to me like Mr. Unger's own misreading, or unwarrantedly narrow reading, of the critics on certain crucial points. . . There is a tendency to let the poems get lost in the author's effort to make all his observations relate, either as agreement or disagreement, to the various pronouncements he is considering. And the final result is something worse than such possibly inadequate or mistaken readings of the critics as those I have suggested. It is another inadequate reading of Donne. . . Finally, Mr. Unger's categories are inadequate in their coverage of such phenomena as symbolism and submerged or implicit metaphor. . . The book is one which ought to be read by everyone interested in Donne and the metaphysicals which, I suppose, is anyone interested in poetry today. I hope that my comments have not obscured the fact that the essay is provocative of thought. But the task Mr. Unger sets himself is yet undone." J. E. Hardy
Poetry 77:175 D '50 1150w
U S Quarterly Bkl 6:415 D '50 210w
Reviewed by L. L. Martz
Yale R n s 40:562 spring '51 80w

UNITED NATIONS EDUCATIONAL, SCIENTIFIC AND CULTURAL ORGANIZATION, comp. Freedom and culture [with contributions by German Arciniegas and others] introd. by Julian Huxley. 270p $3.75 Columbia univ. press
323.44 Liberty [51-2461]

"A collection of essays by seven distinguished men of six nations." (San Francisco Chronicle) Contents: Culture, a human right, by German Arciniegas; The right to education in the modern world, by Jean Piaget; Freedom of information, by Lyman Bryson; The rights of the creative artist, by Maurice Bedel; Freedom in literary and artistic creation, by Rex Warner; Freedom of science, by Bart Bok.

Booklist 47:376 Jl 1 '51

"Nearly every page of this volume bristles with sentences of literary merit and philosophical material. The problems pertinent to freedom are recognized and pushed to the very borderland of human understanding, and there faith, hope, love and reason play upon that limit with stimulating suggestions." R. E. Gilmore
+ Christian Century 68:917 Ag 8 '51 500w

"The book suffers most from inadequate editing. Each author is unable to define the subject of the book, or of his own essay. The introduction by Julian Huxley is thoughtful, but was obviously written without access to the other essays and is of little use in defining the subject or integrating the book. . . Perhaps the best paper is the dissertation on educational psychology by Jean Piaget, the Swiss psychologist and sociologist. Lyman Bryson's thorough exposition of the western faith in free inquiry also deserves mention." Malcolm Wood
San Francisco Chronicle p11 Je 8 '51 550w
School & Society 73:270 Ap 28 '51 30w

UNNERSTAD, MRS EDITH. Saucepan journey; il. by Louis Slobodkin [tr. by James Harker]. 180p $2.50 Macmillan
Children in Sweden 51-10742

When the Larssons inherited a pair of horses and some wagons from their uncle, it was just in time to solve a number of problems. Mr Larsson was an inventor, the wagons were turned into a caravan, and all nine of the Larssons started off on a summer's journey, selling Papa's wonderful invention—a whistling saucepan.

Booklist 47:370 Je 15 '51

"Such a lively family well warrants another book. Here's hoping." Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 Jl 15 '51 140w
Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '51

"I read this story first in Swedish and found it amusing and lively. It is not one of the great children's books of Sweden, but it has been immensely popular there and in translation will show American children that their Swedish friends enjoy exciting adventures with a touch of mystery as much as they do." J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews
+ Horn Bk 27:248 Jl '51 160w

"A delightful family, each child having his own personality, and the parents are enchanting. Lars, the oldest boy, tells the story. The pictures by Slobodkin are very much his usual style. It would have been wonderful to have had pictures by a Swedish illustrator." Phyllis Fenner
+ Library J 76:605 Ap 1 '51 90w

"The boy's eye portrait of a pair of very bohemian adults and their characterful children lends a humor hard to describe, which several other adult readers have not found funny. This reviewer enjoyed it hugely, and thinks that the skill of this able novelist has brought to it a freshness of reality and invention that many American children will like." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 My 13 '51 260w

"As told by young Lars, the story is a little slow getting started, but once the caravan gets rolling it proceeds at a good clip. The Larssons are a lively, unpredictable crew." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p22 My 27 '51 140w

"Despite an improbable snaring of a thief at the end, eleven- to thirteen-year-old readers should find this importation from Sweden one of the most gratifying books of the season." K. T. Kinkead
+ — New Yorker 27:180 D 1 '51 90w

"It is one of the nicest importations that we have had for a long time. . . The sale of this saucepan, the many adventures on the road through the Swedish countryside, the humor and good sense of the Larsson children are described by Lars, the oldest boy. From little Pyson, who eats everything that he sees, to Dessi, the oldest girl who is going to be an artist, the Larsson children are a joy to meet. Their adventures take you through a lovely part of Sweden."
+ Sat R of Lit 34:27 Ag 18 '51 150w
Wis Lib Bul 47:192 Jl '51

UNONIUS, GUSTAF ELIAS MARIUS. Pioneer in northwest America, 1841-1858; memoirs; tr. from the Swedish by Jonas Oscar Backlund; ed. by Nils William Olsson; with an introd. by George M. Stephenson; pub. for the Swedish pioneer historical society. 2v v 1 419p $5 Univ. of Minn. press

917.3 U.S.—Description and travel. Swedes in Wisconsin. Frontier and pioneer life—Wisconsin (50-11209)

"First volume published under auspices of Swedish Pioneer Historical Society. . . Unonius, a Swedish theologian who immigrated to this country with high hopes, but was disappointed in his foundation 'New Upsala,' returned in 1858 to his native land and published these memoirs in his mother tongue. They [are] now, at last, ably translated by Jonas Oscar Backlund; Professor George M. Stephenson, noted expert in immigration history, [has written the] introduction and editor Nils William Olsson (University of Chicago) [has] prepared detailed notes." (Library J) No index.

"Folklorists will delight in the character portrayals, the lively anecdotes, and the tales of Indian life. Swedish people everywhere will derive entertainment and enlightenment from this early account of their countrymen's penetration into the upper lakes region. Those of them who through purse and pen made possible the publication of this volume may well feel proud of the first production of their newly founded society." A. E. Smith

+ Am Hist R 56:1004 Jl '51 250w

"This volume which makes excellent reading, is heartily recommended for all libraries stressing the immigration problem." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 76:182 F 1 '51 160w

"The volume barely grazes the theological field. Its central interest is social and cultural as the record of a sharply observant, cultivated Swede. . . . It is a straightforward narrative written in lively style, with salty, incisive commentary on manners and customs not only in the small, somewhat élite Scandinavian group of which Unonius was the leader, but also in American society before the Civil War, particularly on the frontier." T. C. Blegen

+ N Y Times p7 Ja 28 '51 800w

"These memoirs are at their best and most entertaining when they recount [the author's] own direct experiences and observations."

Sat R of Lit 34:47 Je 16 '51 300w

UPFIELD, ARTHUR WILLIAM. Bachelors of Broken Hill. 221p $2.50 Doubleday

50-13232

Detective story.

Kirkus 18:491 Ag 15 '50 80w

"Mr. Upfield has a talent for suggesting the infinite detail of police work as well as its artistry particularly in the somewhat prima-donna-like person of Inspector Bonaparte, who is becoming one of detective fiction's more colorful characters."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p36 D 3 '50 200w

Reviewed by M. H. Oakes

N Y Times p27 F 25 '51 140w

"This Upfield item, though absorbing, is nearer to the stereotyped than his previous ones with bush or plains background." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 D 10 '50 70w

"Upper bracket."

+ Sat R of Lit 33:52 N 18 '50 50w

Wis Lib Bul 46:37 D '50

UPFIELD, ARTHUR WILLIAM. New shoe. 189p $2.50 Doubleday

51-11693

Detective story.

Bookmark 11:81 D '51

Kirkus 19:280 Je 1 '51 70w

"Colorful and carefully plotted."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 S 2 '51 120w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p15 Ag 12 '51 80w

"The story is human and well-plotted—background excellent, character of the old coffin maker really fine. You may still feel nostalgic for a bush mystery with scope for Bony's special talents." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Jl 29 '51 60w

"Expert criminology." Kathleen Sproul

+ Sat R of Lit 34:40 S 1 '51

Springf'd Republican p22A S 9 '51 80w

UPSON, WILLIAM HAZLETT. No rest for Botts; earthworms make the world go round. 279p $2.75 Rinehart

51-12927

Alexander Botts, supersalesman, returned from the war with a full quota of his old verve and bounce. In these stories reprinted from the Saturday Evening Post we are allowed to follow some of his ideas which cause so many headaches for his boss

Booklist 48:60 O 15 '51

"If you can think of any kind of scrape Botts doesn't get into, and out of, in this series of adventures, I'm sure William Hazlett Upson would like to know about it and I'm sure he will take care of the lack next time. Of course, there is the horrid thought that you simply can't stand Alexander Botts. I understand there are such people. But I don't know any." A. F. Otis

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 O 14 '51 410w

Kirkus 19:412 Ag 1 '51 120w

"New and welcome assembly of stories about the souped-up super-salesman of tractors." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 11 '51 550w

"Our reaction is that it's pretty good, if you've got 10 or 15 minutes you can spare. You need not knock yourself out laughing; you need not concentrate, and you will probably end up a chuckle or two in the black." J. L.

San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 25 '51 350w

URIBURU, ERNESTO C. Seagoing Gaucho; il. with photographs and drawings. 218p $3 Dodd

910.4 Voyages and travels. Gaucho (Ketch)

51-1636

An account of a 27,000 mile voyage in a fifty foot ketch from Buenos Aires to the Suez canal and back, including a side trip to New York. The crew were four Argentines, resolved to "get away from it all." Includes plans of the Gaucho, and some excerpts from the log.

Booklist 47:271 Ap 1 '51

"We'll guarantee you'll have a hilarious and unusual trip and you'll have as companions four of the jolliest uninhibited natives of the Argentine you'll care to meet." Al Chase

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Mr 18 '51 250w

"There can be little doubt that this is a most subversive book, for it proves that escape is possible, easy (if you really want it), and above all, delightful. Only those who believe that getting ahead means staying in a rut will disapprove of it." E. L. Acken

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Mr 4 '51 360w

"Skipper Uriburu sets his own free and rollicking course, with gusto and humor. An able skipper, he does not neglect the nautical angle, though he is mainly concerned with the persons he met in odd ports, with wine and feasts and the philandering of his crewmen. Uriburu spins tall yarns—and right well. You may not swallow them whole, but you laugh at them and ask for more." K. B. Hayward

+ N Y Times p12 Mr 18 '51 260w

"Mr. Uriburu describes his and his crew's experiences in their ports of call in a style both buoyant and elliptical which is probably just as well. Good photographs."

+ New Yorker 27:142 Ap 14 '51 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 13 '51 90w

Reviewed by A. F. Loomis
Sat R of Lit 34:18 My 12 '51 700w
Springf'd Republican p30A Mr 18 '51 [illegible]w

URQUHART, ELIZABETH. Horace; il. by Rosita Pastor. 115p $2 Dutton
51-5490

The adventures of a little English girl who met Horace, the baby dragon, on London Bridge. Her first adventure was being invited to tea at the house of Horace's mother, under the Thames, and other exciting things happened thick and fast. Grades 3-5.

Booklist 48:38 S 15 '51

"The Alice in Wonderland quality of this story will enchant the lovers of that classic, who will enjoy reading 'Horace' and having it read to them. The illustrations are numerous, very well done, and most amusing." Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 S 23 '51 170w
Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '51

"I was afraid I was not going to care for Horace because he is a gentle dragon and we have had so many of those in children's books; but I found his story full of freshness and charm." J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews
+ Horn Bk 27:325 S '51 120w
Kirkus 19:387 Ag 1 '51 70w

"Plenty of adventure, but not quite the story The Reluctant Dragon was. Recommended for the fairy-tale age." S. J. Johnson
+ Library J 76:1433 S 15 '51 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 N 11 '51 [illegible]

"This fantasy is in a modest way a story of the conflict between good and evil. The in-[illegible] Horace carries a pocket handkerchief; [illegible] the atmosphere is convincing, when [illegible] into a strange misty world." E. L. B.
N Y Times p12 S 2 '51 180w

URQUHART, LEONARD CHURCH, ed. Civil engineering handbook. 3d ed 1002p il $8.50 McGraw

624 Civil engineering—Handbooks, manuals, etc. [illegible]

"A well-known desk book for technical librarians and the offices of practicing civil engineers. The three editions have been dated [illegible] and [illegible]. Although much material has been carried over from the second edition, important additions have been made. These include new material on airports and airport pavements, on foundations, soil mechanics and water purification. All of the bibliographies have been revised." Library J

Eng N 145:44 D 14 '50 180w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 76:325 F 15 '51 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 26:5 Ja '51

URQUHART, LEWIS K., and BOYCE, CARROLL W., eds. Materials handling case book. [illegible] McGraw

658.781 Materials handling

"One hundred twenty-six case studies from [illegible] companies, reprinted from Factory Management and Maintenance [illegible]. Illustrations show the job to be done, the equipment in action, [illegible] and flow-charts where needed to show the application and work-and cost-cutting. Articles are arranged in chapters according to where the problem exists—in receiving and shipping, in storage, on assembly lines, in the yard, etc. Indexes of companies studied, equipment used, products handled." Library J

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 76:871 My 15 '51 80w

"Valuable source of materials-handling ideas."
+ Management R 40:722 N '51 70w

USSHER, ARLAND. Magic people. 177p $2.75 Devin-Adair

296 Jews. Jews—Political and social conditions
51-6790

"An Irish philosopher presents an appraisal of the Jews. His concern is not so much with present day Jewry as it is with the whole background of Jewish civilization, relationships with non-Jews throughout history, Jesus and the Jews and an analysis of anti-Semitism." Library J

"Neither Christians nor Jews should miss the experience of reading this stimulating book."
+ Kirkus 19:284 Je 1 '51 250w

"The style is sprightly and quite good humored so that this is pleasant reading indeed. [illegible] the allusions and grasping the points made. However, it is well worth reading with Bible in hand." H. L. Roth
+ — Library J 76:1336 S 1 '51 100w
Nation 173:408 N 10 '51 60w

"A gay and vigorous dissertation on a subject which is usually given over to a dreary portentousness, a dissertation which mingles [illegible] into apocalyptic utterances whose interpretation is hidden, at least for me." C. E. M. Joad
+ — New Statesman & Nation 40:659 D 22 '50 1000w

"[illegible] personal and eclectic, but it is also lively and stimulating. It may be just what is needed." N. K. Burger
+ N Y Times [illegible]
Time 58:118 S 17 '51 600w

"[illegible] trouble. . . But it is all very entertaining, and often uncommonly shrewd."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup [illegible] D 22 '50 [illegible]

UTLEY, FREDA. China story. 274p $3.50 Regnery

[illegible] U.S.—Foreign relations—China. Communism—China. East (Far East)—Politics [illegible]

"In this book Mrs. Utley charges [illegible]" N Y Times

Reviewed by [illegible]
[illegible] N '51 [illegible]
Booklist [illegible]

"[illegible]"

UTLEY, FREDA—Continued
persons and official policies which have remained practically unanswered." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 173:314 Jl '51 450w

"The line of our policy is inexorably traced right down to the present war waged by the Chinese Communists against American forces in Korea. If this were all, the book would live as a valuable, yet distinctly specialized history of our blunders in a far-off continent. But it is also a first class story of one chapter in our history, for the author knows her United States and, in particular, Washington." F. C. Hanighen

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 My 13 '51 700w

"Immediately after the war the market was flooded with books favorable to the Chinese Communists. Miss Utley has presented the other side of the case more thoroughly and more ably than any other American publicist. Her story throws a good deal of light (if sometimes controversial light) on one of the most burning and tragic issues of American foreign policy." W. H. Chamberlin

Christian Century 68:893 Ag 1 '51 950w

"There is a crying need for a scrupulous reexamination of United States policy in relation to the Chinese Communist rise to power, an examination which will be neither a whitewash nor a smear. . . Unfortunately this book does not do what is needed. . . As a counterbalance to the works of Owen Lattimore, including his 'Ordeal by Slander,' it may have value. As a guidebook to recent Chinese history and to America's China policy it is dangerously misleading." R. P.

— + Christian Science Monitor p11 My 31 '51 340w

"In 1939 Freda Utley came to live in the United States (where she became a citizen in 1950) and is now one of our most acid anti-Soviet writers. Her previous books are abundant in detailed research but mostly badly organized, ill-tempered, full of personal resentment and sometimes clumsy in argumentation. The China Story is better written, aptly organized and much more restrained." Max Fischer

+ Commonweal 54:195 Je 1 '51 1000w

Current Hist 20:347 Je '51 90w

Foreign Affairs 30:168 O '51 20w

"A presentation that will be applauded in many quarters, discounted in others."

Kirkus 19:171 Mr 15 '51 350w

"Readers must realize that hers is a virtually one-sided version. The author's dynamic style and her ability to make her own interpretations sound water-tight are dangerous without close scrutiny of a saner analysis of this very complex problem." H. P. Linton

Library J 76:865 My 15 '51 220w

"Apart from Miss Utley's opinions, which the reader can take or leave as his intelligence dictates, the background material that this book contains makes it worth reading. Miss Utley's thesis on our policy in China is often open to valid dispute, but it has to be remembered that her views on the essential nature of Chinese Communism have stood up rather well to the test of time." A. T. Steele

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 My 20 '51 1000w

"Mrs. Utley was one of the key witnesses against Owen Lattimore in the Tydings Committee investigations of Senator McCarthy's charges of Communist influence in the Department of State, and she devotes two chapters to her side of the story. Since this is her answer to Owen Lattimore's 'Ordeal by Slander,' it must in all fairness be read by those who have read that volume." R. L. Walker

N Y Times p6 My 13 '51 950w

Reviewed by Randall Gould

Pacific Affairs 24:327 S '51 550w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Jl 8 '51 390w

"To bolster her thesis the author cites—often with small regard for context—a wide variety of sources, including the State Department's White Paper on China. In so doing she is careful to exclude any evidence that might point to a different conclusion. It would take a lengthy article to analyze all the resulting distortions and inaccuracies. . . In the present crisis, when more than ever before an objective understanding of what is happening in the Far East is needed, this book seeks to discredit and intimidate those who might contribute to this understanding. In its readiness to fit facts to formula and its uncompromising intolerance toward any deviators from its own dogma it disturbingly resembles the techniques of those same Communists whom it excoriates." Derk Bodde

Sat R of Lit 34:17 Je 2 '51 900w

"A particularly timely book. . . 'The China Story,' coming closely on the heels of the Truman-MacArthur split and the subsequent heated debate on U. S. policies in the Far East, is likely to be of more than ordinary interest to all persons who are concerned over the current worldwide tension and who want to know more about the whys and wherefores of the tangled international situation." H. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p9B My 20 '51 200w

Time 57:32 My 21 '51 1550w

Wis Lib Bul 47:117 My '51

V

VACZEK, LOUIS C. (PETER HARDIN, pseud.) Frightened dove. 192p $2.50 Scribner 51-981

Mystery story.

Kirkus 19:12 Ja 1 '51 60w

"This belongs to that little group of suspense mysteries which are superior both in depth of concept and in style."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 F 25 '51 180w

"Mr. Hardin apparently never quite made up his mind whether he was writing a mystery story or an intensely serious straight novel; and the misbegotten result is not apt to please readers in either field." Anthony Boucher

— N Y Times p25 Mr 18 '51 140w

"Mr. Hardin's book has the merit of novelty and is carefully plotted, and it is well above the average in style."

+ New Yorker 27:115 Mr 3 '51 90w

"There's some good atmosphere in this philosophical novel. Unluckily a seeming anticlimax and the explanation take up so much space that suspense dies too soon." L. G. Offord

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p25 F 25 '51 100w

"You can really care about this one."

+ Sat R of Lit 34:40 Mr 31 '51 50w

VALAER, PETER. Wines of the world. 576p $6.50 Abelard

663.2 Wine and wine making 50-12641

"Peter Valaer, who has been connected with the Bureau of Internal Revenue for over 40 years, has drawn upon his wealth of experience in analysis of wine and in interpretation and application of Alcohol Tax Unit Regulations to wine-making to prepare a clear, simple description of the characteristics of the major wines of the world." (Chem & Eng N) Index.

"While his discussion of the technological aspects is limited in scope, that which pertains to production of berry and fruit wines is particularly useful to enologists and wine chemists. The layman will profit from the interesting general historical and descriptive treatment of wines, but the chemist will be most interested in the 25 tables of wine analyses." M. A. Joslyn

+ Chem & Eng N 29:1056 Mr 12 '51 200w

"This is a factual book and most useful to the industry but the cook who loves to use wine and wants to know 'the reasons' will be delighted with the historical, geographical and scientific detail that is given." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 75:2153 D 15 '50 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:16 Ja '51

"Generally speaking Mr. Valner's discussions of foreign vinelands are less authoritative than his firsthand data on the American industry and are marred by a few outright errors of fact. Even so this book belongs beside 'Grossman's Guide' and Julian Street's 'Wines' on the reference shelf and offers information not to be found in either." Lawton Mackall

+ — Sat R of Lit 34:25 Je 9 '51 420w

VALENTINER, WILHELM REINHOLD. Studies of Italian renaissance sculpture. 239p 24711 $12 Phaidon

735.45 Sculpture, Italian 50-11166

Ten essays on Renaissance sculpture, by an authority on Italian sculpture. Among the 259 illustrations are many which are here published for the first time. Index.

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 76:964 Je 1 '51 80w

"One of the chief merits is the illustrations, mostly small but all beautifully clear, which abound on nearly every page." Stephen Bone

+ Manchester Guardian p4 N 10 '50 120w

Reviewed by G. P. Du Bois

N Y Times p7 Ja 21 '51 180w

"This rich material stood in type for five years before printing could be consummated, so its publication date is actually 1945, since reference to more recent works on the subject could not be included. But beyond that rather special limitation, not enough to worry any but the expert, Mr. Valentiner has further enriched the literature with this presentation of his essays previously published in various periodicals." D. P.

San Francisco Chronicle p24 F 25 '51 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p112 F 23 '51 1150w

VALLENTIN, ANTONINA (MME JULIEN LUCHAIRE). H. G. Wells; prophet of our day; tr. by Daphne Woodward. 338p $4 Day

B or 92 Wells, Herbert George

For descriptive note see Annual for 1950.

"Mme. Vallentin—the author of biographies of Leonardo, Mirabeau, and Goya—has turned in a disappointing job which, though she knew Wells, gives the appearance of being almost entirely based on his published writings and facts already in the public domain. . . The interest of this biography—and, flaws notwithstanding, it is considerable—is that its subject was such an extraordinarily interesting figure. The first third of the book, which is 'straight' narrative, is thoroughly absorbing." C. J. Rolo

+ — Atlantic 187:82 Ja '51 550w

Booklist 47:173 Ja 1 '51

Bookmark 10:85 Ja '51 40w

"Wells deserves to have a biographer who says to the public which now neglects him, 'He told you so.' But Mme. Vallentin's book is not the final study. It presents Wells at full length as prophet, and at equal length as a man. . . But Wells was more than a prophet, a self made man and an amorist. He was also a remarkable novelist. . . Yet, save for a brief and not too penetrating comment on 'The Country of the Blind,' Mme. Vallentin says little about any of those amazing short stories, nor does she discuss many of the novels as novels." De Lancey Ferguson

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ja 14 '51 950w

"The book is not only one of the most readable of modern biographies; it is also the study of a mind through which flowed the ideas of the present and the future." Harrison Smith

+ Sat R of Lit 34:21 Ja 13 '51 1200w

VAN ARSDALE, WIRT, pseud. See Davis, M. W.

VANDERCOOK, JOHN WOMACK. Great sailor; a life of the discoverer Captain James Cook. 339p $3.50 Dial press

B or 92 Cook, James. Discoveries (in geography) 51-9943

Biography of Captain James Cook, English farmer's son, who became the famous explorer of the south seas. Map of Captain Cook's voyages on end papers. No index.

Booklist 47:272 Ap 1 '51

"Vandercook's thoughtful and thoro study of his master mariner's adventurous life is a splendid addition to the many biografies already written about the famous English explorer. Excellent end paper maps show the voyages of Capt. Cook." Al Chase

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 Ap 1 '51 200w

"Mr. Vandercook succeeds in presenting the great navigator with charm and historical precision." William McFee

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 My 10 '51 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '51

"This is a brilliant and charming portrait of James Cook. John W. Vandercook, radio news analyst and explorer in his own right, has written it lovingly in a somewhat lapidary style, which occasionally is just a bit more overwrought than the material can really stand. But what material!" C. H. Grattan

+ N Y Times p19 Ap 29 '51 400w

"Mr. Vandercook's enthusiasm makes for an exciting book, even if his overfondness for the short declarative sentence, which too often constitutes the short declarative paragraph, is annoying. He leaves no doubt whatever that James Cook was a very great man."

+ — New Yorker 27:122 Ap 7 '51 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 My 6 '51 240w

VAN DER POST, LAURENS. Venture to the interior. 253p $3 Morrow

916.897 Africa, British Central 51-13158

"This is a book of travel and adventure by a distinguished British soldier and author. It's a story of a trip from London to Nyasaland in southeast Africa and of two expeditions into the wilderness areas of Nyasaland. There is an account of the journey from England to Africa by plane: the passengers, the weather, the scenery and the storms. . . There are detailed accounts of the expeditions—the reconnoitering and climbing of Mlanje; the exploration of Nyika and the discovery of a new vast tableland." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) No index.

"His beautifully composed book catches the spirit of a continent and imprints it on the reader's mind. It casts a beam of light, too, into the sources of the hate which is bedevilling the West from Suez to uttermost Asia." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 189:89 Ja '52 350w

Booklist 48:58; 83 O 15 '51 N 1 '51

Bookmark 11:83 Ja '52 40w

Reviewed by M. A. Fitzsimons

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 25 '51 450w

"On the adventure level, the book is completely fascinating. The chapter about the flight from England over the Alps, high across the African desert, and on through a cosmic storm in the clouds surging above and about the mountains of the Kenya country, is stirring and evocative as some of Saint-Exupéry's finest. . . Equally, the chapters on exploration will bear comparison with the best that has been written of the 'vast physical fact that is Africa.'" O. D. Hormel

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 N 1 '51 350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p27 N '51

Kirkus 19:278 Jl 15 '51 180w

VAN DER POST, LAURENS—Continued
"Well-written, with beautiful descriptions of land and people, this book can be placed beside his friend, Alan Paton's Cry, the Beloved Country." R. S. Taylor
+ Library J 76:1562 O 1 '51 100w
Nation 173:408 N 10 '51 40w

"These are interesting and fascinating tales. The color, the music, the spirit of Africa are in them. There are beautiful descriptive passages of the mountains and plains, the trees and flowers, the streams and springs, the skies, clouds and storms, and the animals that hunt and haunt these areas. There are some excursions into folk ways and problems. . . The story of the drumming and the dancing by the villagers is as lovely and moving as one will find anywhere." W. O. Douglas
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 O 28 '51 850w

"One of the most inseeing books on Africa in many years. 'Venture to the Interior' beats no drums, hurls no brickbats, flourishes no colors. Yet those who know their Africa will instantly recognize it as a book which catches the unique and indefinable spirit of the ancient continent. . . This book is so rich in atmosphere that it lingers in the mind long after you lay it down." John Barkham
+ N Y Times p40 N 4 '51 800w

"His book is both a powerful portrait of the physical majesty of Africa and a most compelling exposition of what that continent and its people mean to those who love it."
+ New Yorker 27:175 D 8 '51 160w

"Col. van der Post puts his finger shrewdly on the split in our world's personality, the split that grows wider every day it is not mended. And it is this extra adventuring into the 'interiors' which are his own mind and yours—that makes this testimony of faith the fine thing it is. For its sheer humanity, this is a book not to be missed." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 29 '51 900w

Reviewed by Hassoldt Davis
+ Sat R of Lit 34:18 N 10 '51 650w
Springf'd Republican p41A D 9 '51 310w

VAN DER SPRENKEL, OTTO B., ed. New China; three views; with an introd. by Kingsley Martin. (Asia bk) 241p il $3 Day
951.042 Communism—China. China—Politics and government [51-2194]

"Three co-authors, all 1948-49 visitors to New China, give their probably honest reactions to the new regime. Van der Sprenkel (London School of Oriental Studies) gives a rosy description of Communist occupation and effects on daily life in Peking. Guillain (foreign editor of Le Monde) will give no conclusions at this stage but it is ominous to read that 'Nowadays, one is beginning to think correctly very young.' Lindsay has interesting theories of 'scientific' v. 'doctrinaire' interpretations of communist principles. All three have something to say about China's relations with Russia and about many other points important in arriving, someday, at our final judgment of Chinese Communism." Library J

Reviewed by M. B. Jansen
Christian Science Monitor p11 My 31 '51 550w

"Honest and intelligent books on Communist China are all too rare, but fortunately one has recently been added to the list. It is the work of two Englishmen and a Frenchman. . . Each has written one part of the book, and a fourth, consisting of documents, has been appended by the editor, Professor van der Sprenkel." H. C. Hinton
+ Commonweal 53:596 Mr 23 '51 900w
Foreign Affairs 29:505 Ap '51 40w

"Recommended." H. P. Linton
+ Library J 76:410 Mr 1 '51 130w

Reviewed by Benjamin Schwartz
New Repub 124:19 My 28 '51 750w

Reviewed by K. H. C. Lo
New Statesman & Nation 40:432 N 11 '50 750w

"There is some value in this group of three brief first-hand reports by three European observers, even though all of them date back to 1949 and some of their optimistic and even rosy conclusions have been rather harshly upset by more recent events." H. R. Isaacs
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 Mr 11 '51 1150w

"The value of this book, I believe, comes in that very quality of detachment which Americans will find most irritating. For, being uncommitted by the sorrows and angers of Americans who face the Communists across bloody trenches in defense of the law, the book records dispassionately the initial strength, the undeniable accomplishment, and the first foretaste of ugliness in the new Communist state of 1949." T. H. White
+ Sat R of Lit 34:42 Ag 4 '51 800w
Times [London] Lit Sup p795 D 15 '50 850w

VAN DOREN, MARK, ed. Best of Hawthorne. See Hawthorne, N.

VAN DOREN, MARK. Introduction to poetry. 556p $4; text ed 568p $3 Sloane 821.08 American poetry—Collections. English poetry—Collections 51-2061

"Analyses of 30 poems precede the British and American selections in this anthology, ranging from the 13th century to the present. Glossary of terms, index of authors, titles and first lines." Bookmark

Booklist 47:270 Ap 1 '51
+ Bookmark 10:132 Mr '51 30w

Reviewed by Russel MacFall
Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ap 8 '51 220w
Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '51

"Invaluable for students; a delight for all who read poetry."
+ Kirkus 18:746 D 15 '50 160w

Reviewed by G. D. McDonald
Library J 76:519 Mr 15 '51 90w

Reviewed by Howard Doughty
Nation 172:565 Je 16 '51 750w

"This critic's method is flexible and various. It yields exciting results when applied to all types of poetry, not merely when applied to abstract cerebral 'constructs.' . . The publishers have designed a book that admirably supports the author's purpose. It is attractive to hand and eye, and the printed pages give the poems every advantage that sound typography can lend them." G. F. Whicher
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Mr 18 '51 700w

"If the reader keeps in mind the title of Mark Van Doren's book, 'Introduction to Poetry,' he will not be put out by the simplifications to be found in the first of the two-section volume, called 'Commentaries.'. . Though the language is a little too unembellished, the knowledge and taste are patent. This, of course, goes doubly for the anthology that follows—an anthology that is a small model of discrimination and value." Harvey Breit
+ N Y Times p22 Mr 4 '51 110w
New Yorker 27:68 Jl 7 '51 100w

"If you really want to comprehend and live with good poetry, be counseled by Editor Van Doren. Stop random tasting in every available honeypot and really discover a few good poems. On that framework he has constructed a refreshingly different anthology." Don Pitt
+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Mr 4 '51 800w
Springf'd Republican p8D Mr 11 '51 70w

VAN DRUTEN, JOHN. Bell, book and candle; a comedy. 168p $2.50 Random house 822 51-9443

Text of a successful play which opened on Broadway on November 14, 1950. It is about some present day witches living in the Murray

Hill district of New York, and what happens when one of them falls in love.

Booklist 47:234 Mr 1 '51

Kirkus 19:40 Ja 15 '51 10w

"Every little theatre will want to stage it when available. Order liberally." George Freedley

+ Library J 76:520 Mr 15 '51 30w

"A success in the theater, it is also pleasant reading. As but one simple set is called for, and a cast of only five actors, it will doubtless have a long life in the summer theaters, and with the amateurs, after its Broadway run is over. A clever man, Mr. van Druten." W. P. Eaton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 F 18 '51 170w

"Not since Noel Coward's 'Blithe Spirit' has there been such hilarity surrounding the hocus-pocus of seance, incantation and cabalistic mumbo jumbo." Frank Jones

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ap 8 '51 150w

Wis Lib Bul 47:86 Ap '51

VAN DUSEN, HENRY PITNEY. God in education; a tract for the times. 128p $2 Scribner

377.1 Religious education. Colleges and universities—Religion 51-3202

"The President of the Faculty of Union Theological Seminary makes a challenging plea for the restoration of religion as a central force in all fields of learning. Bibliography, index." Bookmark

Booklist 47:397 Jl 15 '51

Bookmark 10:231 Jl '51 30w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 68:844 Jl 18 '51 1800w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell
Churchman 165:17 Ag '51 210w

Reviewed by C. H. Moehlman
Crozer Q 28:355 O '51 700w

"This is an immensely timely volume by the President of Union Theological Seminary. . . The importance of the subject, its controversial nature, and the position and reputation of the author will attract widespread attention to this volume. One wishes that fuller treatment could have been given to the subject, for this is one of the great issues before us today."

+ Kirkus 19:181 Mr 15 '51 300w

"The singular merit of this study is that Mr. Van Dusen deals with the problems of contemporary education from the larger perspective provided by the whole course of modern philosophy. He ranges from the Cartesian faux pas to the Supreme Court's latest." Paul Ramsey

+ N Y Times p14 My 27 '51 330w

Reviewed by K. D. Miller
Sat R of Lit 34:33 Je 30 '51 260w

School & Society 74:223 O 6 '51 30w

VAN DUSEN, HENRY PITNEY. Life's meaning; the why and how of Christian living. 244p $2.50 Assn. press

248 Christian life

"The college students for whom Dr. Van Dusen wrote in Quest of Life's Meaning 25 years ago now have sons and daughters of their own in college. That earlier book, long out of print, was based on lectures given and conferences held during two years that Dr. Van Dusen spent in visits to American college campuses under the auspices of the Student Christian Movement. The present work is a revision, an enlargement and, in important respects, an enrichment of the former one." (Christian Century) Bibliography. Index.

"This book covers the essentials of Christian faith and living. It is to be highly recommended for reading and study, especially by college students and intelligent young people generally and by any who have responsibilities for stimulating and guiding the thinking of such young people." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 68:1192 O 17 '51 1050w

"A book particularly suited for groups of Protestant young men and women of college age."

+ Kirkus 19:559 S 15 '51 170w

"Most topics of moment—(God, Jesus, church, evil, worship, etc.)—are given sustained treatment which should provide almost anyone with ample to think about. Perhaps it is a weakness that the continuing world crisis does not enter significantly except in a single chapter on the Christian movement in today's world." Paul Ramsey

N Y Times p24 N 18 '51 230w

VAN EVERY, DALE. Captive witch. 362p $3.50 Messner

51-12806

An historical novel about the opening of the American west, which begins with Clark's victory at Vincennes in 1779. It is the story of Adam Frane, and the two women in his life: Cynthia Wyeth, a beautiful widow, and Nita, a white girl who had been a Cherokee captive.

Booklist 48:23; 50 S 15 '51; O 1 '51

Bookmark 11:60 D '51 40w

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 O 14 '51 350w

"A good yarn, with much of the spirit of the times, and the men that built our country. That the emotional values are tenuous and superficial may, perhaps, matter little to the audience for this sort of tale."

+ Kirkus 19:406 Ag 1 '51 270w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 D 23 '51 150w

"Van Every deals zestfully with this predictable situation—though there are times when his dialogue smacks more of the cocktail lounge than of an eighteenth-century cabin. His wilderness lore, however, is fascinating. He makes the Kentucky forest, the building of a frontier town, and armies on the march vivid and real." Charles Lee

+ — N Y Times p37 N 4 '51 270w

"In telling of Frane's military and romantic exploits, Mr. Van Every sustains at a steady pace the sense of imminent danger. It is a technical device, to be sure, but when it is developed to a high point, it requires artistry as well as skill, especially when conveying that sense of exhilaration that accompanies danger. The love story escapes from being the general run of the mill kind because the three main characters are developed to an extent beyond what is customary in historical romance." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 N 18 '51 280w

Reviewed by J. M. Grant
Sat R of Lit 34:70 N 17 '51 260w

VAN RIPER, CHARLES. Teaching your child to talk. 141p $2 Harper

136.72 Speech. Children—Language 50-10585

In this book the author shows how to guide your child's speech development, starting just as soon as he begins to make little sounds, and continuing through his formative years.

Bookmark 10:108 F '51 30w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '51

"Worthwhile for new parents and interesting for old hands."

+ Kirkus 18:581 S 15 '50 120w

"A book that is at once charming and richly informative." Wendell Johnson

+ N Y Times p27 Mr 11 '51 270w

"Anxious parents, who begin to doubt that their children will ever talk, may find much reassuring information in Mr. Van Riper's book,

VAN RIPER, CHARLES—Continued
but on the whole his treatment of this important subject is too divorced from the child's instinctual development."

San Francisco Chronicle p25 D 3 '50 40w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman
School & Society 73:120 F 24 '51 200w

"Excellent material clearly and entertainingly presented."
+ Wis Lib Bul 46:32 D '50

VAN RIPER, GUERNSEY. Will Rogers, young cowboy; il. by Paul Laune. (Childhood of famous Americans ser) 196p $1.75 Bobbs

B or 92 Rogers, Will—Juvenile literature
51-10118

A fictionized biography of Will Rogers during his boyhood, with one chapter which summarizes his later success on stage and screen. For ages eight to eleven.

Bookmark 10:158 Ap '51

Reviewed by E. E. Frank
Library J 76:782 My 1 '51 50w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ap 29 '51 30w

"Western fans will enjoy this fictionized account of young Will's ambition to be a top cowhand, his boyish scrapes and his exploits with rope and pony." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p26 My 13 '51 50w

Sat R of Lit 34:48 Je 9 '51 40w

VAN VOGT, ALFRED E. House that stood still. 210p $2.50 Greenberg
50-10531

This "science-fiction" novel "is the story of a house of ancient lineage that has the added advantage of conferring immortality (through radiation) on its inhabitants, who are struggling to keep possession of the house and at the same time prevent an atomic war. The hero is a young (mortal) attorney, the heroine an immortal left over from a very long time ago." San Francisco Chronicle

Booklist 47:188 Ja 15 '51

Kirkus 18:438 Ag 1 '50 90w

"Certainly one of the more original science fiction stories, if not one of the sounder." F. P.
N Y Times p18 D 17 '50 230w

"Told forwards and backwards and from both sides, as is common with van Vogt, the plot is a little complicated, to say the least, and the attempt to reproduce the routine of a small District Attorney's office is a rather inadequate one. On the other hand, it's van Vogt, it's full of action, and it makes for a happy evening's reading, whether it makes any sense or not." Don Fabun
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 19 '50 150w

VAN VOGT, ALFRED E. Weapon shops of Isher. 231p $2.75 Greenberg 51-11115

Science-fiction.

Booklist 48:32 S 15 '51

"Good."
+ Kirkus 19:216 Ap 15 '51 70w

"A surprisingly well-integrated novel, rich in plot and movement and so absorbingly paced that no true aficionado will question its implausibilities. This is probably, as a whole, the best van Vogt yet to appear in hard covers." H. H. Holmes
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ag 19 '51 130w

N Y Times p16 Ag 5 '51 80w

VARNEKE, BORIS VASIL'EVICH. History of the Russian theatre; seventeenth through nineteenth century; original tr. by Boris Brasol; rev. and ed. by Belle Martin. (American council of learned societies. Russian translation project) 459p $6.50 Macmillan

792 Theatre—Russia
51-2057

"The standard work on the Russian Theatre published in 1908, now in its third revised edition made available in English. [It] is a basic work and as such is an essential volume for any theatre or Slavonic collection." (Library J) Indexes.

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '51

"Highly recommended." George Freedley
+ Library J 75:2014 N 15 '50 50w

"Varneke's book is written in a surprisingly sprightly style for a scholarly textbook, and to a gratifying degree Boris Brasol and Belle Martin have been able to preserve this quality in their translation. This edition, unlike the Russian original, includes an index of persons and an index of the plays mentioned; regrettably, pictures of actors and actresses, and the bibliography have been omitted." J. T. Shaw
+ Sat R of Lit 34:10 Ag 11 '51 490w

Times [London] Lit Sup p631 O 5 '51 270w

VAUGHAN, LADY AURIEL ROSEMARY MALET (ORIEL MALET, pseud). Green leaves of summer. 277p $3 Little 51-10288

An almost plotless story about one summer in London as it appeared to a varied group of people, among them a young schoolgirl, an ex-opera singer, a fishmonger's son, an actress, a poltergeist, a psychic investigator, and the lovely Lucy who was annoyed by the poltergeist.

Booklist 47:311 My 1 '51

"Miss Malet writes out of such high spirits, and with so much ease and imagination that one can only smile all the way through this sunshiny divertissement and applaud with the hope of more." Ruth Chapin
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 19 '51 320w

"A deliberately demure and pleasantly inconsequential presentation which soothes, rather than stimulates, and which should find an appropriate audience."
+ Kirkus 19:135 Mr 1 '51 190w

"The plot is slight, the style diverting. Sometimes Elizabeth Cadell, Margery Sharp and Dorothy Stevenson seem to cross the pages of this young novelist." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 76:773 My 1 '51 100w

Reviewed by Norman Shrapnel
Manchester Guardian p4 Ja 20 '50 90w

"Underneath the honey of 'The Green Leaves of Summer' lies the honeycomb: neat, precise wit and intuition giving firm, orderly support to the palatable sweetness of a most appealing novel." F. H. Bullock
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ap 15 '51 420w

Reviewed by Andrea Parke
N Y Times p22 Je 10 '51 160w

"A placid, summery book that is more than a bit long-winded."
New Yorker 27:126 Ap 21 '51 50w

Times [London] Lit Sup p21 Ja 13 '50 110w

Wis Lib Bul 47:121 My '51

VAUGHAN, RICHARD. Moulded in earth. 256p $3 Dutton
50-11144

A story of life in a Welsh village some sixty or seventy years ago. The story concerns chiefly the love of Edwin Peele for Grett Ellis, daughter of Daniel Peele's bitter enemy. The feud between the families is finally brought to a close, partly thru the marriage of the young people, partly by the violent deaths of two older sons.

Booklist 47:166; 188 Ja 1 '51; Ja 15 '51

Bookmark 10:134 Mr '51 40w

"Lovingly written, firmly-grounded first novel. The story itself has been told innumerable times before, and will be again. But Mr. Vaughan's account of a young man and a girl whose love is thwarted by a bitter family feud has setting and characters which give it a genuine and individual ring." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 173:74 Ap '51 100w

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan

Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 F 11 '51 350w

"This first novel is part one of a proposed trilogy and I hope the other parts will be as good. . . Sensual allusion there is, with some brawling in barrooms, and Justin Peele is no model for the young. Yet there is a radiance in these pages, and, when the action ends, it is the romantic pulse of the prose and the beauty of imaged nature, rather than the naturalism, that linger in the memory." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 Ja 25 '51 600w

Kirkus 18:662 N 1 '50 180w

"A most enticing story for mature readers." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 76:40 Ja 1 '51 110w

"As a picture of Welsh village life before modern civilization tamed its ferocities with motion pictures and football pools, 'Moulded in Earth' may well have the flavorful exaggeration of childhood tales, but this gives it also a true poetic realism. . . Mr. Vaughan has a warm affection for his people and gives the 'I' of his story a power of description which does not, against its background, seem anachronistic. . . Mr. Vaughan's first novel is one of unusual promise as well as achievement." James Hilton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ja 14 '51 750w

"What is it that reduces this promising book to harmless romance? First, the style, a mixture of Welsh idiom and literary English. Instead of blending, these strains come out in a kind of piebald rapture. There is a soft lyricism in conception as well. The book is essentially in the great tradition of the lyric lout. Yet the poesy of simple-mindedness, as presented here, seems a highly sophisticated posture, almost a stunt." Donald Barr

N Y Times p20 Ja 21 '51 400w

"Mr. Vaughan manages a bittersweet and quite anticlimactic ending, with two sudden deaths in the last few pages. The writing soars a little too high too often, and the story, a simple one, could have been told with more effect in half the space."

— + New Yorker 26:82 Ja 13 '51 70w

"Mr. Vaughan, himself a Welshman and a poet, has caught the haunting beauty of the Welsh mountain country with a vivid descriptive power as distinguished and as unusual in a first novel as his ability to draw characters who determine their own dark fate is outstanding. His announced Welsh trilogy, if the succeeding volumes maintain the standard of the first, should find a place in the great tradition of English romantic novels." Pamela Taylor

+ Sat R of Lit 34:34 F 17 '51 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p145 Mr 9 '51 180w

Wis Lib Bul 47:89 Ap '51

VAWTER, JAMISON, and CLARK, JAMES GORDON. Elementary theory and design of flexural members. 215p il $4 Wiley

624.2 Flexure. Structures, Theory of 50-12253

"An engineering college textbook intended for use in intermediate courses offered to students who have had a basic course in strength of materials. In effect it is a first book in practical design and as such is of potential interest to architects, practical builders, etc., who need an introduction or refresher on the engineering aspects of elementary structural design. The authors are Professors of Civil Engineering in the University of Illinois." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"Where possible, formulas have been avoided, with the thought that the student will thus obtain a clearer picture of the behavior of beams."

+ Eng N 146:48 F 8 '51 120w

"A well-written, relatively brief book on an important aspect of structural design." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 75:2012 N 15 '50 110w

N Y New Tech Bks 35:96 N '50

VENEZKY, ALICE S. Pageantry on the Shakespearean stage. 242p il $3.50 Twayne

822.09 English drama. Theater—Great Britain. Shakespeare, William—Sources 51-10234

"This study attempts to analyze the influence on the Elizabethan drama of the most popular forms of public display—the procession, pageant, and progress entertainment. The non-Shakespearean plays considered here have been limited, except for a few references, to those written in Elizabeth's reign. A thorough investigation has been made of all extant plays presented from 1581 to 1603, when both pageant and drama reached their heights as purely public entertainments, to decline later, as the private masque and theatre increased in importance. . . The appendix lists the events which are referred to in the text and gives the most accessible printed sources." (Introd) Index.

"A welcome addition to Shakespearean stage history." George Freedley

+ Library J 76:868 My 15 '51 40w

+ Sat of Lit 34:30 S 29 '51 250w

"Miss Venezky's erudition and academic thoroughness, together with comprehensive research, are admirable and give authority to her analysis of the ebullient theatrical activities prior to the introduction of the professional London theatre by James Burbage. She discusses the abundance of pageants, masques, tableaus—all entertainments with which the court and the communities seasoned their days—and she presents this bustling theatrical life with relish, admiration, and deft humor." W. H. Beyer

+ School & Society 74:119 Ag 25 '51 750w

VENK, ERNEST A. Automotive engines; maintenance and repair; co-ordination of illus. by Arthur E. Burke. 381p $4.50 Am. tech. soc.

629.25 Automobile engines 51-9310

"The book is primarily a vocational school textbook with a purpose to prepare men for practical work as automotive engine mechanics. The discussions of engine components and of maintenance and repair operations are exceptionally clear and full. Numerous illustrations, most of which are reproductions of photographs, are included. An advantage over older books is the descriptions of modern machines, such as crankshaft grinding machines, now found in well-equipped garages." Library J

Booklist 47:201 F 1 '51

"Young mechanics who are just beginning work will find the book useful for reference." R. R. Hawkins

Library J 76:335 F 15 '51 130w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:3 Ja '51

VENN, MARY E. (MARY ADRIAN, pseud). Garden spider; il. by Ralph Ray. 38p $2 Holiday

595.4 Spiders—Juvenile literature 51-12856

The story of the life span of a garden spider. For third and fourth graders.

Booklist 48:88 N 1 '51

VENN, M. E.—Continued

"A fascinating and worthwhile book for younger children and a good method to interest them in natural history." R. C.

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 11 '51 100w

"A simply told and extremely interesting life story." J. D. Lindquist and S. M. Andrews

+ Horn Bk 27:336 S '51 60w

Kirkus 19:438 Ag 15 '51 90w

"Text is good, straightforward writing, and the decorations in gold, yellow, and black are both useful and very attractive." V. K. Fitch

+ Library J 76:2011 D 1 '51 40w

"With an adult's help, a child could have a most interesting time studying this queer, common creature after reading this book." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 O 21 '51 40w

"Young children will understand, enjoy and remember this descriptive-narrative. The fine drawings and beautiful page designs will charm nature lovers of any age." Irene Smith

+ N Y Times p38 N 11 '51 90w

VENTURI, LIONELLO. Italian painting. See Italian painting

VERGER, PIERRE. Indians of Peru; photography; with a text by Luis E. Valcárcel. (Pocahontas Press bk) 87pl $7.50 Pantheon bks.

980.4 Indians of South America—Peru—Pictures, illustrations, etc 51-1612

A collection of photographs of Indian life in Peru, showing the remnants of ancient architecture; houses, churches, and sculpture of today; and some photographs of men, women, and children at work and play.

"Verger's range is terrific. . . He is more than 'documentary,' for his pictures get under the skin of his subjects; his lucid French mind keeps him from sentimentality and condescension. He sees into and beyond the desperate loneliness and grim labor of the Peruvian Indian; he catches him in noble moments where he shows himself the descendant of the Incas." D. C. Rich

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 24 '50 500w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 76:411 Mr 1 '51 70w

"The individual photographs are often of great beauty and vitality. Most of them apparently were taken either early or late in the day, with the result that they show unusual contrasts of light and shade. The Indians of the Peruvian highlands are perfect subjects for color photography, and it is regrettable that, because of the prohibitive cost, this medium could not be used." S. K. Lothrop

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 D 31 '50 420w

VERISSIMO, ERICO. Time and the wind; tr. by L. L. Barrett. 624p $4.95 Macmillan 51-12487

Long chronicle covering about a hundred and fifty years in the lives of a Brazilian family, the Terra-Cambarás. From the 1740's to 1895 the course of their adventures is traced. The story ends on the last day of a siege of a Republican stronghold by federalist forces.

Booklist 48:3; 32 S 1 '51; S 15 '51

"A remarkable and distinguished piece of writing." Richard Sullivan

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 S 23 '51 360w

"Time and the Wind is a very historical novel of very self-conscious intent. Both as a novel and as history, it is more than a little messy, decorated by romantic, impressionistic bias—historical, philosophic and literary. . . The unity of the book, however, is largely geographic and ethnological. Its various passages and scenes retain large independence. Most of these parts have their own life and interest, and this makes a large part of the reading, taken by itself without long thoughts, good reading." Philip Burnham

+ — Commonweal 55:181 N 23 '51 220w

"There's a kind of authenticity in the feel and mood of story and setting, in the characteristic blend of realism, superstition, violence and poetry, but the story itself seems to ride off in all directions, and the thread loses itself again and again. Possibly, the shift back and forth in time, from 1745 to 1895, makes it not wholly successful in what the author aims to do, but at its close, the scattered pieces seem to fit into a whole. Not always easy reading, there are moments when it recalls the traditional novels of the picaresque pattern."

+ — Kirkus 19:361 Jl 15 '51 340w

"The author very skillfully details the endless wars and their impact on the populace, in general, and the Terra family in particular. However, his canvas is so broad that he must use overbold colors to bring people and events to our attention. And coupled with the almost complete lack of the detail, the novel (if such it can be called) has little life (even though there is a good deal of movement, plus a good many characters). Nonetheless, it effectively and interestingly spells out the sense of Brazil and should, therefore, be a valuable start for those wishing to know something of its history." M. S. Byam

Library J 76:1566 O 1 '51 100w

Reviewed by B. D. Wolfe

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 N 18 '51 1150w

"The fourth of Erico Verissimo's novels to be published in the United States, 'Time and the Wind' ought to be by all odds his most popular book, for it is as lively and colorful as any swashbuckling historical romance that has ever appeared on the best-seller lists. At the same time it avoids the stereotypes and improbabilities of the genre, and is marked by a deep feeling for the mystery of human existence." Granville Hicks

+ N Y Times p4 S 23 '51 600w

"This is a full-blooded historical novel in the best traditions of the type, sound in its factual background, peopled with living men and women, well-written and well-translated, and packed with exciting reading. . . This reviewer is not much given to superlatives, but he does not hesitate at all to say that 'Time and the Wind' is as fine a novel as Latin America has yet produced at any time. Also, it makes most contemporary fiction written in this country seem pale, thin, and shallow indeed." Herschel Brickell

+ Sat R of Lit 34:15 S 22 '51 700w

VERLAINE, PAUL MARIE. Confessions of a poet; pref. by Martin L. Wolf; tr. from the French by Ruth Saltzman Wolf and Joanna Richardson. 192p il $3 Philosophical lib.

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc.

A translation of Verlaine's autobiography, which he wrote during the last year of his life. It closes with his meeting with Rimbaud.

Reviewed by Enid Starkie

Manchester Guardian p4 O 31 '50 1350w

"No one with Philistine prudery should read these memoirs. One had better have nimble fingers in matters of ethics, and neither be too harsh nor too easy with this unbridled, penitential nature." Edward Dahlberg

N Y Times p10 Mr 4 '51 450w

Reviewed by G. P. Meyer

Sat R of Lit 33:27 O 14 '50 600w

School & Society 73:206 Mr 31 '51 30w

Spec 185:258 F 23 '51 180w

"This edition, the first in English, is enlivened by five portraits of Verlaine. The translation itself is, unfortunately, often far from good. Shades of meaning in Verlaine's strange poetic prose have been lost or ignored, the syntax is uneasy, there are tiresome mistakes with homographs, and innumerable merely careless errors. . . The narrative is not crippled by these faults, but Verlaine deserves something better."

Times [London] Lit Sup p610 S 29 '50 900w

VIGOUREUX, PAUL. Ultrasonics. 163p il $4 Wiley
534 Supersonic waves [51-2940]

"An introductory book for persons with considerable education in basic physics. It is particularly suitable for physicists and laboratory workers engaged in industrial research and who find themselves in need of a compact survey of ultrasonics. Methods of generating ultrasonic radiation are described briefly in an early chapter. The remainder of the book is devoted to the theory of wave motion and transmission in the ultrasonic range." Library J

Reviewed by D. H. Andrews
+ Am Chem Soc J 74:284 Ja 5 '52 400w

"'Ultrasonics' will be a welcomed addition to the chemist and engineer interested in the principles of research, developmnt, and application of ultrasonic energy to fluid systems." Dudley Thompson
+ Chem & Eng N 29:3563 Ag 27 '51 200w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 76:1431 S 15 '51 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:62 Jl '51

VILLIERS, ALAN JOHN. Quest of the schooner Argus; il with the author's photographs. 348p $3.75 Scribner
639.2756 Voyages and travels. Fisheries—Greenland. Fisheries—Newfoundland. Argus (schooner) 51-6528

An account of the author's "voyage to the Banks and Greenland" aboard the schooner Argus, one of the thirty or more deep-sea fishing boats which annually set sail from Portugal. Illustrated with photographs. Index.

Booklist 48:22; 45 S 15 '51; O 1 '51

Bookmark 11:59 D '51 30w

"Another shipshape, seaman like, and comprehensive chronicle of a phase of salt water life which has probably never been covered so thoroly." Al Chase
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 S 30 '51 290w

Reviewed by Roland Sawyer
Christian Science Monitor p11 O 11 '51 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '51

Kirkus 19:509 S 1 '51 170w

"Recommended." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 77:59 Ja 1 '52 70w

Manchester Guardian p4 D 7 '51 250w

Reviewed by George Thomson
New Statesman & Nation 42:636 D 1 '51 310w

"This well told and complete chronicle of an ancient sea art will be read with interest and pleasure and will bring deep satisfaction to all sailormen. It will remain, besides, a most valuable contribution to our knowledge of much primitive lore." Alfred Stanford
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 O 14 '51 550w

"Villiers, who is appreciated by all who love to read about the sea, has circumnavigated the globe in majestic square riggers. He spent an adventurous year aboard a deep-sea Arab dhow. He is one of the last living writers to know intimately the nearly vanished age of sail. Yet he never before encountered the North Atlantic fishing dory, and it is a fortunate meeting which makes capital reading." S. T. Williamson
+ N Y Times p6 S 30 '51 350w

"Mr. Villiers writes about his experiences with the same persuasive enthusiasm and knowingness that have earned him the reputation of being the English-speaking world's foremost writer on non-sporting blue-sea sailing."
+ New Yorker 27:126 O 6 '51 130w

"For anyone who likes the sea, it will make fascinating reading." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 25 '51 650w

VINES, SHERARD. Hundred years of English literature. (Hundred years ser) 316p $3.50 Macmillan 820.9 English literature—History and criticism [51-9787]

An interpretation of English literature beginning in 1830 and covering up to about 1940. The subject is divided principally by genres, subdividing into chronological periods for poetry and the novel. Table of dates of publications from 1830 to 1941. Bibliography. Index.

School & Society 73:142 Mr 3 '51 30w

"The author's method of dealing with his indigestible mass of facts is to aerate it with ironic wit. This produces some neat epigrammatic summaries, and the book is frequently amusing. But the wit falls at times into mere smartness and, sustained over long stretches, it has its own monotony. It cannot be said that clear critical standards emerge from the account."
Times [London] Lit Sup p130 Mr 2 '51 1200w

VIPONT, ELFRIDA, pseud. See Foulds, E. V. B.

VIRGIL (PUBLIUS VERGILIUS MARO). Aeneid; a verse translation by Rolfe Humphries. 381p $3.50 Scribner 873.1 51-9736

"A spirited and satisfying version of Virgil's great epic by a gifted New England poet. The narrative is modern in tone and though translated freely preserves the essential qualities of the Latin epic." Cleveland Open Shelf

Reviewed by Peter Viereck
Atlantic 189:83 Ja '52 100w

Booklist 47:249 Mr 15 '51

"Though the text is handled somewhat freely—'a swift and unscrupulous job,' he calls it—the spirit and substance of Virgil are transmitted faithfully. Considering how easy it would have been to write some such brief comment as this after reading the introduction and a few sample passages at random, the most eloquent praise of this translation is that the reviewer read every line of it and sat up to late hours to finish it. If Virgil knew English, I think he would be delighted with it." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 68:1193 O 17 '51 240w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '51

"Mr. Humphries says his translation is a quick and unscrupulous job: it is certainly a magnificently successful one. It is written in a loose iambic pentameter, but its author warns that in some passages where the tempo runs faster 'you might not recognize it.' He never uses the second person singular pronoun, and 'I have preferred solecisms to archaisms.' The great thing is that it lives: the reader feels he is hearing the story for the first time, and it is impossible to put down, so impelling is the sense of what E. M. Forster calls the 'and then? and then?'" Anne Fremantle
+ Commonweal 54:411 Ag 3 '51 600w

Kirkus 19:19 Ja 1 '51 140w

"Although I shall want to spend much more time with this book I am ready to call it the preferred verse translation of our time." G. D. McDonald
+ Library J 76:519 Mr 15 '51 160w

"In making it not only possible but also agreeable for those who cannot read Latin to read straight through the 'Aeneid,' Mr. Humphries has done this generation and, I hope and believe, several generations to come a service for which no public reward could be too great." W. H. Auden
+ Nation 172:231 Mr 10 '51 1650w

VIRGIL—Continued

"In his introduction, Rolfe Humphries calls his translation 'a quick and unscrupulous job.' His humility is refreshing, but his judgment is too harsh. Of quickness, indeed, there are some traces: a certain sloppiness of versification, an occasional lapse in taste; but the work is scrupulous, without being pedantic, in its attention to the curious alterations of pitch and pace which characterize the Virgilian tone, and it succeeds remarkably well in recreating them. The most engaging quality of this new version is its fresh unpretentiousness." Dudley Fitts

+ New Repub 125:20 Jl 30 '51 800w

"Rolfe Humphries has done a signal service by making a continuously and excitingly readable version of 'The Aeneid of Virgil'. Using a very flexible blank verse as an appropriate medium, he has managed to preserve more of the life and vigor of Virgil's language than any other translator commonly read." G. F. Whicher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 Ap 1 '51 280w

"It is not a literal translation. Here and there Mr. Humphries has reduced lists of names, shortened descriptions, transposed sentence elements, or taken other liberties to free his text from obstructions. He has chosen a loose iambic pentameter as a suitable verse form, weaving across it the rhythms of natural speech and varying the tone and tempo by every conceivable means. . . He makes the anguish of the loss of comrades seem really anguish and competition in the games really exciting. The result is a poem that is fresh and vivid in its impression, as the 'Aeneid' must have been fresh and vivid to its first Roman readers." G. F. Whicher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 N 18 '51 550w

"His editing has brought great lucidity without the loss of any essential part of the story, while the easy flow and heroic resonance of his verse give the feeling of reading a poem in one's native tongue." E. L. Tinker

+ N Y Times p12 Ag 12 '51 410w

"Using a loose iambic pentameter with great skill, and steering clear of archaisms, Humphries is everywhere conscious of the original's large and small effects, its ground swell of action contrasting with its accurate rendering of emotional nuance. As a result, the twelve books of this formidable work become as readable in our day as Dryden's version was in his. Humphries outlines his aims in a stimulating preface and appends an account of Virgil's life and times."

+ New Yorker 27:67 Jl 7 '51 120w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:147 Je '51 200w

"Mr. Humphries, a meticulous and sensitive poet as well as an excellent Latinist, has transmuted the stately and marmoreal Virgilian hexameters into an irregular and free-flowing blank verse, in a language that is terse, racy, idiomatic, often downright colloquial, but never tiresome. The action moves at a stirring pace, but with no sacrifice of the tenderness and brooding pity of the original. Here indeed 'There are tears for things, and what men suffer touches The human heart,' but here also are the real Virgilian vigor and virility." W. E. Brown

+ Yale R n s 40:736 summer '51 440w

VITTORINI, ELIO. Twilight of the elephant; tr. by Cinina Brescia. 120p $1.50 New directions

51-10545

"The Elephant is the nickname given to an aged man, the great-grandfather of a large family, who has lost his sense and his vigor but not his appetite, and who eats so much bread that the rest of the household goes hungry. Mr. Vittorini tells how, through the rambling talk of a visitor, the Elephant is finally brought to realize that his time on earth is up." New Yorker

"This successful and moving tour de force has the qualities of the Italian film: earthy realism and worldliness and yet a firm sense of the poetry and worth of the human spirit." Riley Hughes

+ Cath World 173:473 S '51 200w

Reviewed by T. C. Bergin

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 Ag 26 '51 210w

"Important for an understanding of the Italian scene, both social and literary, 'The Twilight of the Elephant' is, however, an artistic failure. It will seem particularly so to American readers who need most to understand the insight it affords." Nancy Lenkeith

+ — N Y Times p5 Jl 8 '51 220w

"The situation is extremely painful and memorable, but something in the writing, a kind of heaviness or lack of care in focussing, blurs the story, so that its full effect is never felt."

New Yorker 27:85 Je 23 '51 100w

"'The Twilight of the Elephant' is strange and moving. It is well done—well worth a reading or two." L. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 My 13 '51 220w

VIVAS, ELISEO. Moral life and the ethical life. 390p $6 Univ. of Chicago press

170 Ethics. Naturalism 50-10775

"Advances three major propositions: first, that the moral philosophy of naturalism, in particular that of John Dewey, is grossly inadequate; second, that moral values have objective existence; and, finally, that moral man becomes ethical man by recognizing the supreme value of the human person. . . The second and third parts of the essay are devoted to the author's own moral philosophy." (Publisher's note) Index.

"Vivas writes with eloquence and passion. At its best his style compares with the best in contemporary prose in English. He carries his great learning easily for the most part, and there are pages and pages which it is sheer pleasure to read. Occasionally, however (this is particularly true in the latter portion), his own original thoughts do not find a comfortable frame in language. Also, in spite of his carping at Herskovits' 'barbarous neologism,' 'enculturation,' he himself resorts to needless neologisms and strained turns of phrase." Clyde Kluckhohn

+ — Am Anthropol 53:568 O '51 550w

Reviewed by Ernest Nagel

Ann Am Acad 275:208 My '51 450w

"The book is more than a philosophical argument. It is the testament of a human spirit that has anxiously sought a way of salvation for his own spiritually lost generation—and has found it. Its scholarship is sound and broad. The writer is familiarly at home in every phase of philosophy, psychology, social science and literature relevant to his problem. In particular, he knows the theories he attacks." A. C. Garnett

+ Christian Century 68:175 F 7 '51 1050w

"Vivas is a thorough intellectual in the sense that he will not allow the intellectual life to end anywhere else but where it begins. Thus his book The Moral and the Ethical Life is something more than a treatise. It is in its own way the rehearsal of a career, a dialectic in the true sense of something really gone through. It takes the reader as Eliseo Vivas himself has gone, through the various 'naturalistic' explanations of the moral life to his present position: that moral values are 'objective' and that among these values 'the absolute primacy' goes to 'the espoused value of the other as person.'" Henry Rago

+ Commonweal 54:576 S 21 '51 2100w

J Philos 48:390 Je 7 '51 650w

"Despite [a few] strictures, Vivas' book emerges as the most significant contemporary attack on naturalistic theory. It is likely to become a storm center in the journals of philosophy, and if Vivas' frequent philippics are any guide, the debate promises to be heated as well as enlightening." David Spitz

+ — New Repub 124:27 Ap 16 '51 650w

U S Quarterly Bk R 7:39 Mr '51 170w

VLASAK, JAN, and SEGET, JOSEF. Snowy; the story of a polar bear cub [Eng title: Snow White]; ed. by Maurice Burton. 87p il $2.50 Schuman

591.5 Bears 51-9788

A record in prose and photographs of the first five months of a young polar bear, raised scientifically in the home of the superintendent of the Prague Zoo.

Booklist 47:277 Ap 1 '51

"A scientific—and completely charming—account of the first polar bear cub brought up by hand." N. S. Chasteen
+ Library J 76:717 Ap 15 '51 70w

"Something both charming and of special interest to all adults concerned with such matters, for various scientific data on food, measurements, growth, are given at the back. The text could be read with pleasure by any curious animal lover of about twelve and over." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Mr 11 '51 220w

"This chronicle will make fascinating reading for all animal lovers." E. H.
+ N Y Times p12 Jl 8 '51 160w

VOGEL, NANCY (CASTEEL). Four and twenty beds. 279p $$2.75 Beechhurst

647.97 Tourist camps, hostels, etc. 50-11626

"There is one nationally familiar enterprise which hitherto no one as far as I know has done a book about—the running of auto-camps. . . If you've ever wondered just how such an enterprise looks to the owner, or how you, the customer, look to the man or woman on the other side of the desk in the little building marked 'Office' in pale blue neon, then here's your chance to find out." San Francisco Chronicle

Reviewed by E. P. Nichols
Library J 75:2076 D 1 '50 140w

"A highly entertaining yarn. . . Nancy Vogel writes her how-we-did-it story lightly, humanly, and readably." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 29 '50 800w

"Seldom have readers been blessed with such a riotous, wholesome experience of how an adventuresome couple conquered adversity and got themselves embarked on a new way of earning a living, and liking it. Running the motel is the background against which the author weaves her rollicking yarn about the eccentricities of her transient guests." S. M. Neal
+ Springf'd Republican p12B D 31 '50 240w

VOGT, EVON ZARTMAN, and KLUCKHOHN, CLYDE. Navaho means people. See McCombe, L.

VOGT, VON OGDEN. Cult and culture; a study of religion and American culture. (Minns lectures) 269p $3.25 Macmillan

901 Culture. U.S.—Civilization. U.S.—Religion 51-13989

"The central thesis is that religion is the creative, cohesive and comprehensive element which gives life to culture. This is elaborated through the examination of primitive and contemporary materials and through a survey of the many facets which constitute any culture, such as philosophy, art, commerce, government." (N Y Times) The author is minister emeritus of the First Unitarian Church of Chicago.

Reviewed by W. M. Krogman
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ja 6 '52 220w

"The author was for many years pastor of the First Unitarian Church of Chicago. He has specialized knowledge of religious art and liturgy and these interests are quite evident throughout the book. Many who will not agree with the author's conclusions will appreciate his presentation."
+ Kirkus 19:276 Je 1 '51 200w

"A thoughtful book by a thoughtful person for thoughtful people. Good chapters on religion in relation to art, business, government, and philosophy. Recommended for public, college, and university libraries." A. D. Osborn
+ Library J 76:1218 Ag '51 130w

"It is doubtful that Mr. Vogt has sufficiently taken into account that the power of religion does not reside in any general characteristic but in its distinctive historical expressions and its particular understandings of life. To eliminate the latter would be to empty religion of its meaning and power." John Dillenberger
N Y Times p22 D 9 '51 320w

"There is an inescapable feeling that Dr. Vogt is crying in the wilderness, but those who will stop to listen will learn a great deal about the past, and possibly begin to work toward a calmer and more reasonable future." R. F. H.
Springf'd Republican p8C D 16 '51 290w

VOIGHT, VIRGINIA FRANCES. House in Robin Lane; il. by Jean Martinez. 220p $2.50 Holiday

51-5185

Story of a little girl who journeyed from Connecticut out to Cedarville, Ohio, in the days of stage-coaches. Jennifer had been left an orphan and took the long, adventuresome trip to join her uncle in the West.

"The atmosphere of early Ohio is very well done, the characters are interesting and the events appealing. A sweet story for little girls of about 8 to 12, and others will enjoy it also." M. J. T.
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 7 '51 220w

Kirkus 19:208 Ap 15 '51 150w

"Reader gets a picture of family life during mid-nineteenth century, mode of traveling, and some political aspects of a small town. Story sets a fast pace, but some of Jennifer's adventures seem fantastic for a little girl." M. J. Meade
Library J 76:1138 Jl '51 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Jl 29 '51 60w

"Delightful story." S. C. Gross
+ N Y Times p12 Jl 8 '51 150w

VOLPE, MARIE (MICHELSON) (MRS ARNOLD VOLPE). Arnold Volpe; bridge between two musical worlds; with a foreword by Olin Downes. 223p il $3.50 Univ. of Miami press; for sale by Farrar, Straus

B or 92 Volpe, Arnold 50-10815

Biography of a Russian musician who arrived in this country in 1902, and stayed to be the founder of two symphony orchestras. His widow, who has written this book, is now manager of the University of Miami symphony orchestra, which Arnold Volpe founded. Index.

"Crammed with interesting accounts of well-known names and organizations." C. K. Miller
+ Library J 75:2154 D 15 '50 110w

"Mrs. Volpe's account moves swiftly over the span of some 40 years. Still, it does not neglect the touching or the amusing overtones connected with an event. Her narrative, too, has one of the main advantages of readable biography. Often a participant in them, she sees events through Arnold Volpe's eyes, in the living matrix of his times. It thereby gains in the warmth and vividness of an intimate journal what it possibly lacks in the analytical polish of more scholarly biography." C. E. M.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ja 28 '51 320w

VON LE FORT, GERTRUD. See Le Fort, G. von.

VOORHIS, HORACE JEREMIAH. Christian in politics. 136p $1.75 Assn. press

172.1 Christianity and politics. Democracy. Political ethics 51-10834

"Jerry Voorhis, now an officer of the Co-operative league, for 10 years represented a California district in congress. It is with a background of practical experience, then, that he has written of the theory of Christian citizenship as expressed in political activity." Chicago Sunday Tribune

"A bland, easily swallowed book, in definite but by no means shocking advance of the times." A. C. Ames
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 S 16 '51 270w

"An honest, worthwhile book." W. B. Spofford
+ Churchman 165:15 Jl '51 160w
Kirkus 19:268 Je 1 '51 150w

"The former United States Representative from California exhibits in this brief book those qualities of vitality and forthrightness that have marked his public life. It also presents him in another characteristic light: a crusader whose strength is primarily of the heart." J. W. Chase
N Y Times p10 Jl 1 '51 320w

W

WADDY, LAWRENCE. Pax Romana and world peace. 240p il maps $3.75 Norton

937 Rome—History. Rome—Civilization 51-10164

History of the Roman empire starting from a study of the characteristics of the Roman people themselves which made possible their building and expansion in so many localities. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 48:8 S 1 '51
Reviewed by E. T. Bachmann
Christian Century 69:44 Ja 9 '52 420w

"Mr. Waddy treats Roman history as a relevant part of our past, with lessons to guide our reflections about modern problems, and so has written a fresh and lively though occasionally careless history of Rome." D. R. G.
+ Manchester Guardian p4 O 3 '50 420w

"Mr. Waddy's book is a gratifying example of how scholarship can make the past alive and pertinent." Hans Kohn
+ N Y Times p17 Ag 12 '51 450w
San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 13 '51 90w

"The task that Montesquieu, Gibbon, Spengler, and Toynbee attempted in the large is reduced here to concrete, unphilosophical terms the general reader can appreciate. The virtues of the Roman character and Roman administration have seldom been assessed more frankly and convincingly. Mr. Waddy is equally specific but not equally convincing when he moves onto more debatable ground—the causes of the decline." Geoffrey Bruun
+ — Sat R of Lit 34:18 S 15 '51 200w

"Substantially, Mr. Waddy's book is to be welcomed as a survey of Roman history rather than as a contribution to modern political theory; and its title hardly serves it well. There is little in it that is new, but the whole is well informed and pleasantly documented. The style, which is that of an enthusiast talking, has the merit of freshness but can be irritatingly loose. Nevertheless the author strides about his subject with confidence and zest, and his book may be commended as a stimulating presentation of the significance of imperial Rome."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p569 S 8 '50 360w

WADE, BOB, and MILLER, BILL (WADE MILLER, pseud). Murder charge. 244p $2.50 Farrar, Straus 50-10761

Detective story.

Kirkus 18:619 O 1 '50 60w
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p11 Ja 7 '51 200w
Reviewed by M. H. Oakes
N Y Times p25 Ja 28 '51 110w

"As you might expect, superior toughness triumphs in the end. Fast and hard-boiled, if not a really distinguished specimen of its school."
New Yorker 26:192 N 18 '50 120w
Reviewed by L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 17 '50 70w

"Good job."
+ Sat R of Lit 33:58 D 2 '50 40w

WAGER, PAUL WOODFORD, ed. County government across the nation. 817p maps $7.50 Univ. of N.C. press

352 County government 50-10780

"This comprehensive volume, the work of Professor Paul W. Wager, of the University of North Carolina, together with a group of his former students and several acquaintances in the field of political science, is designed to provide a clear picture of the organization and operation of county and township government in the various states 'with the particularity which a general textbook must necessarily lack.' With this end in view, the authors have made a thoroughgoing, on-the-spot investigation of the organization and operation of the local government of a selected county and, where desirable, a selected township in each of the forty-eight states. Each of these case studies contains a concise statement with respect to population, geographic and economic conditions, finances, and state-county relationships, along with a detailed description of the operation of the county as a governmental unit." (Social Forces) Bibliography. Index.

"This information, nowhere else available in such convenient form, should be of tremendous value to students and teachers of American local government. Much has been written and spoken on the importance of local government in a democracy; here is local government in this country, as close to reality as is possible on the printed page." W. B. Graves
+ Am Pol Sci R 45:237 Mr '51 500w

"There certainly was a need for such a book as this, but it is most regrettable that the costs of publishing have increased so much that a basic study such as this must sell for $7.50. Many students in courses in local government will have to read it in their libraries when they should buy and keep it." D. D. McKean
Ann Am Acad 274:224 Mr '51 320w

"This book climaxes in a fitting way the valuable contributions Professor Wager has made over a long period of years to a better understanding of the operations of local government in the rural areas of the United States. It is indispensable for students of local government, for political scientists in general, and for others who would seek to understand and appraise the conditions of rural local government in the American states." R. H. Tucker
+ Social Forces 29:337 Mr '51 600w
U S Quarterly Bk R 7:71 Mr '51 260w

WAGGONER, HYATT HOWE. Heel of Elohim; science and values in modern American poetry. 235p $3 Univ. of Okla. press

811.09 American poetry—History and criticism. Literature and science 50-9322

"This book states briefly the problems to be explored and then examines the work of six representative American poets who have, the author maintains, been concerned with the place of values in a world of fact, a world of scientism. Poets, he contends, have written as though values were real; they have longed for, accepted, or attempted to create a myth or metaphysic which would explain the reality of value and so allow for meaningfulness." (U S Quarterly Bk R) Index.

"His examination of the poets considered is thoughtful, lucid, and on occasion illuminating. It is possible to find oneself in agreement with many of his judgments while unable to travel the identical road in order to arrive at them." Babette Deutsch

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ap 1 '51 240w

"Part of Professor Waggoner's field has been covered, if not completely plowed and seeded, by Douglas Bush in the recent 'Science and English Poetry,' reviewed in SRL July 29. The present work confined to this side of the Atlantic, suffers somewhat by comparison with the richer and wider-ranging volume. Nevertheless, 'The Heel of Elohim' is a personal, sometimes persuasive, and, in both senses, provocative examination." Louis Untermeyer

+ Sat R of Lit 33:15 N 18 '50 650w

"A lively, useful essay. Here, the Zeitgeist notwithstanding, a critic of poetry prefers to assess its significance in terms of its intellectual, moral, and emotional values rather than to make a close analysis of narrowly defined questions of texture and structure. . . The danger in a book of this sort is, of course, oversimplification, and here the critic is certainly guilty, especially in his discussion of Jeffers. Nevertheless, this work is particularly to be recommended to readers who seek links between the positivism of science and the sense of alienation so marked in our literature."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:23 Mr '51 350w

WAGNER, CHARLES ABRAHAM. Harvard; four centuries and freedoms. (American college and university ser) 326p il $5 Dutton

378 Harvard university 50-10560

For descriptive note see Annual for 1950.

Bookmark 10:156 Ap '51 30w

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 Ja 7 '51 310w

"Mr. Wagner's fundamental perception is splendid. There are fine pages and chapters. Any intelligent person will say 'Amen' to his praise of Conant, even though it is rather fulsomely expressed. His section on Percy Haughton is most excellent. His account of John Harvard and his part in the founding of the college is well written, clear and interesting. The good points of the book are many, but they are shadowed by faults which, although secondary, too often prevent communication." Oliver La Farge

+ — N Y Herald Tribune R p13 Ja 21 '51 500w

"If the author undertakes the difficult defense of such controversial figures as Charles William Eliot . . . and Abbott Lawrence Lowell . . . he at least packs such a wealth of historical detail into his arguments as to make his position convincing. On the other side of the ledger Mr. Wagner suffers, along with his book, from a near-fatal case of what to all non-Harvard men is that most irritating of Harvard diseases—the belief that Harvard is perfection itself." Cleveland Amory

Sat R of Lit 34:14 Ja 20 '51 750w

"The reocrd of the university's origins is here, including the part played by John Harvard himself, as well as of its expansions. Harvard's academic standards and its traditional insistence on freedom of thought and expression are emphasized. Not least of this volume's virtues are the many illustrations, photographs of campus scenes and famous personages, and engravings of ancient buildngs, many of them now gone. Harvard men will treasure this book and others will find it enlightening." D. B. B.

+ Springf'd Republican p8B Ja 7 '51 500w

WAGNER, HUGHES. Word in season. 176p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury

252 Sermons 51-1879

"Contains 29 [sermons] that point up the spiritual meaning of the Christian year—Advent through Thanksgiving. They offer to the minister new patterns and striking illustrations for his own sermons, and illustrate a flexible, orderly framework for a year's preaching program." Springf'd Republican

---

"More and more the churches of the evangelical heritage are finding and using the effectiveness of the great seasons of Christian experience. Here this use is well exemplified by an author whose sermons have clarity, conciseness, human interest, and charm. Particular attention should be called to his use of illustrations; they satisfy." R. E. Keighton

+ Crozer Q 28:188 Ap '51 90w

"Since an increasing number of ministers in non-liturgical churches are planning their sermons with an eye to the church year this volume will be welcomed."

+ Kirkus 19:50 F 1 '51 100w

"The book has rich, suggestive material for bringing greater variety and meaning to individual pulpit work, greater unity to the Christian church as a whole—vivid messages that demonstrate the vitality and power of preaching by the Christian year."

+ Springf'd Republican p8C F 11 '51 110w

WAGNER, RICHARD. Letters; the Burrell collection presented to the Curtis institute of music by its founder Mrs Efrem Zimbalist; ed. with notes by John N. Burk. 665p il $10.50 Macmillan

B or 92 Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 51-241

"More than sixty years ago Mrs. Mary Burrell, an English woman of means and determination, set out to gather truthful material about Richard Wagner, whose works she admired. She planned to write a comprehensive biography that would hew to the facts. . . She began to write and got as far as the composer's twenty-first year, when, in 1898, she died. Her heirs published what she had written but kept secret her collection of original materials. . . In 1931 Mary Curtis Bok, now Mrs. Efrem Zimbalist, acquired the collection, which she presented to the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. Now, at long last, the collection is made public. . . This book, published with the permission of the Wagner heirs, attempts to put much of the material into a unified narrative. What could not be handled in this way has been treated in three extensive appendices where the documents are printed in full or summed up in brief." N Y Times

---

Reviewed by Claudia Cassidy

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 7 '51 550w

"There is hardly a chapter in this fascinating book that does not shed new light on Wagner's life and personality. Mrs. Zimbalist and Mr. Burk have through their joint efforts produced a work, for which music lovers all over the world owe them a debt of gratitude." Karl Geiringer

+ Christian Science Monitor p7 Mr 26 '51 400w

"Essential to any shelf of Wagner biography." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 76:329 F 15 '51 230w

"The Burrell letters do not offer any new factual material that would render Ernest Newman's monumental The Life of Richard Wagner outdated. They do, however, substantiate and confirm many speculative conclusions he was forced to make. They may fail to amaze us with any startling revelations, but they do succeed in giving us fresh and intimate glimpses into the unfathomable genius of the most complex of all artistic personalities." G. D. McGeoch

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 8:694 S '51 500w

"The documents of the Burrell Collection are kept in the Curtis Institute, both in original and in microfilm. Every word of every paper

WAGNER, RICHARD—Continued
is not in this book, but we may be sure that everything of importance is. The work deserves all praise. If gratitude were common we should in common be grateful to Mrs. Efrem Zimbalist for this added light upon the splendor and misery of human genius." Vincent Sheean
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 D 24 '50 1700w

"This book is not, and does not pretend to be, a full biography. Nevertheless, if you have any knowledge of Wagner's turbulent life and works, it will make stirring reading. Mr. Burk, biographer of Beethoven and Clara Schumann, has helped with his quiet and thoughtful notes, which serve as connecting tissue for the main body of the book." Howard Taubman
+ N Y Times p18 Ja 21 '51 850w

Reviewed by Thomas Mann
Sat R of Lit 34:7 Ja 20 '51 2100w

"I have read many books concerning this composer. I don't believe any of them, however present a finer picture of the terrible struggle before his operas were recognized. . . These stories about the operas told through Wagner's letters are extremely interesting and, I think, give us new insight of the composer himself. The book should interest music lovers." Lauritz Melchior
+ Theatre Arts 35:2 Ap '51 360w

WAHL, ARTHUR CHARLES, and BONNER, NORMAN A., eds. Radioactivity applied to chemistry [contributors, John W. Barnes and others]. 604p il $7.50 Wiley

541.38 Radiochemistry 51-5978

"A comprehensive work, primarily for professional chemists, designed to demonstrate how radioactive elements may be used in chemical research and chemical analysis, and also to describe the more important of such work that has been published." (Library J) Tables. Bibliography. Index.

"This is a book about a technique, and the results to which it has led. A generation of researchers have been rendered a service by it, if through no other means than the documentation. Properly, the book stimulates more questions than it answers, and can be recommended for text, reference, or just plain interesting reading." J. F. Flagg
+ Chem & Eng N 29:4884 N 12 '51 200w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 76:1941 N 15 '51 80w

"The work will be highly valuable as a reference tool to all chemists interested in the use of radioactive substances in chemistry."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 36:76 S '51

WAITHMAN, ROBERT. Day before tomorrow. 240p $2.75 Scribner

917.3 U.S.—Description and travel. U.S.—Civilization. National characteristics, American 51-7241

An appraisal of the present day United States by an English newspaperman who has lived in this country since 1937. The result of his comment amounts to a warning to Americans to appreciate what they have and improve on it.

Booklist 48:83 N 1 '51

"Here's a book that might be today's equivalent of Dickens' American sketches, and one that is rewarding reading."
+ Kirkus 19:512 S 1 '51 130w

Nation 173:507 D 8 '51 40w

"This is a glittering book, the kind of book that can be written only by an Englishman of a certain type—the slightly sardonic, extremely suave, and unostentatiously erudite British journalist. . . Possibly the most interesting idea in the book is his analysis of the nominating convention as the most important American contribution to politics." G. W. Johnson
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 D 30 '51 500w

Reviewed by S. T. Williamson
N Y Times p44 N 25 '51 700w

"Mr. Waithman has availed himself of such hackneyed devices as dialogues in bars, reports —presumably verbatim—of cocktail- and dinner-party chitchat, arch little excursions into the national stream of consciousness, and so on. Since his straightforward commentary is both shrewd and well presented, these stage effects clutter things up rather annoyingly."
New Yorker 27:186 N 17 '51 160w

"Americans will do well to read [this book], since it comes from a frank admirer. . . Mr. Waithman writes sharply and well; his book is enormously good reading." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 5 '51 850w

WALD, ABRAHAM. Statistical decision functions. 179p $5 Wiley

311.2 Mathematical statistics 50-9735

"An important contribution to statistical theory. It contains the first full statement of a general theory of statistical decision functions. The work has particular application to multi-stage scientific experiments, quality control procedures, etc., where steps beyond the first are selected or modified on the basis of the results of the first experiment or sample. However, it is written on the theoretical plane, and is chiefly of interest to persons who are experts in statistics or who at least have a fair knowledge of basic statistical theory and technique." (N Y New Tech Bks) Bibliography. Index.

"The book is of interest to professional workers in applied statistics and also to scientists who have the requisite background of mathematical knowledge." R. R. Hawkins
+ Library J 75:1833 O 15 '50 130w

N Y New Tech Bks 35:94 N '50

"The book is for the statistical theorist, and not for the user of statistical methods as tools. General ideas and results are emphasized throughout, rather than specific methods or techniques. The presentation is highly mathematical, requiring for full comprehension previous knowledge of statistical theory, and a full grounding in probability theory and measure theory for finite and infinite dimensional spaces. Written for today's inner circle but destined to become a classic, the book's substance will need translation into more practical terms before it will exert much influence on the conduct of research and everyday affairs."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 6:498 D '50 240w

WALDECK, COUNTESS. See Graefenberg, R. G.

WALDEN, AMELIA ELIZABETH (MRS J. W. HARMON). Girl called Hank. 254p $2.50 Morrow

51-12032

"The only girl in a family of four boys, Henrietta was inevitably nicknamed Hank and, just as inevitably, was a tomboy. A brilliant basketball player, she thought of little else beside the game. Then along came Greg, who insisted, willy-nilly, on being her beau. It's a little hard to believe that any girl could resist Greg, but gentling Hank proved to be a job in which the whole family joined." N Y Times

Booklist 48:72 O 15 '51

Kirkus 19:325 Jl 1 '51 110w

"A wholesome, interesting story. Well written and will be popular with high-school girls." E. E. Frank
+ Library J 76:1435 S 15 '51 30w

"The family spirit is fine, and the square dances in their big barn are delightful. It is good reading for girls of twelve up." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ja 6 '52 190w

"The two themes are neatly fused here, to make a story which is very readable and considerably more original than was Miss Walden's last book, 'Skymountain.'" E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p34 O 28 '51 160w

WALDO, EDWARD HAMILTON (THEODORE STURGEON, pseud). Dreaming jewels. 217p $2.50 Greenberg

50-9541

Science-fiction novel about a mad-scientist, a race of alien crystals, whose dreams are real objects in our world, and several people belonging to a carnival.

"The beginning of the story . . . is quite as original and smooth as anything Mr. Sturgeon has written. However, the author brings the tale down on its face in a welter of corn, telepathy, violence and the hackneyed properties of sentimental fiction. These include an evil old judge who keeps a seduction nest for young girls and a mad scientist who wishes to destroy the world. Too bad." F. P.
N Y Times p33 S 24 '50 140w

"There's plenty of action in this story, and some very sympathetic characters, two of them midgets who are not quite perfect dreams." Don Fabun
+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 O 1 '50 170w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt
Sat R of Lit 33:17 D 30 '50 60w

WALES, HUGH G., ed. Changing perspectives in marketing. 292p $4 Univ. of Ill. press

658.8 Marketing 51-10793

"A series of papers compiled to give historical treatment and perspective to the development of marketing. Seven of the papers were delivered at a symposium by noted marketing leaders in connection with the Paul D. Converse National Awards of the American Marketing Association; nine by invitation by others representing their respective contributions to the historical literature of marketing. There emerges a swing in point of view from the 'how' to the 'why' of marketing, as marketing research has achieved a dominant place in the field." Library J

"An interesting collection." J. E. Cross
+ Library J 76:1130 Jl '51 90w

"While largely theoretical and historical, these articles nevertheless are also of first importance as an analysis of the techniques which are now being employed to bring products to the consumer, and, indeed, as a consideration of the future prospects of such techniques in the American economy." A. B. T.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 26 '51 70w

WALKER, FRANKLIN DICKERSON. Literary history of southern California. 282p il $3.75 Univ. of Calif.

810.9 American literature—California

50-62715

"A decade ago in 'San Francisco's Literary Frontier' [Book Review Digest 1939] Franklin Walker told the story of the beginning and development of letters in California's first few decades. . . Recently Mr. Walker, on a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation through the Huntington Library, has been investigating the literature and culture of the American Southwest, including Southern California. Out of this comes his new study." (San Francisco Chronicle) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p28 N 30 '50 700w

"With good, solid knowledge, a sympathetic, yet often quietly ironic, manner 'A Literary History of Southern California' not only reveals a body of little-known literature but makes it meaningful in relation to its own cultural area." J. D. Hart
+ Sat R of Lit 34:24 Je 16 '51 1000w

WALKER, HELEN (MRS HOMAN). Letters to the martyrs. 236p $3 McKay

272 Martyrs 51-12033

"In order to tell the story of eight present-day Catholics who have been imprisoned or martyred for their faith, Mrs. Homan embodies it all in a series of letters either to the victim himself or to some Saint in whom she perceives his prototype. In each letter the heroism of the ancient and of the modern martyr is unfolded." Commonweal

Commonweal 54:510 Ag 31 '51 250w
San Francisco Chronicle p14 S 16 '51 110w

WALKER, MILDRED (MRS F. R. SCHEMM). Southwest corner; with decorations by Robert Hallock. 144p $2 Harcourt

51-2761

A short novel about an indomitable Vermont woman of eighty-three. Except for one year spent with her husband in Illinois Marcia Elder had spent her whole life on her Vermont hilltop farm, and many of those years she had been alone. But the approach of another winter worried her, so she advertised for a companion. The working out of that arrangement makes the story.

Booklist 47:312 My 1 '51
Bookmark 10:208 Je '51 30w

"As a study in old age, it has dignity and restraint. its sentiment rings true, and Mrs. Elder is very much a person. But essentially 'The Southwest Corner' is no more than a quiet, appealing little exploration of one woman's adjustment to her advancing years, of one woman's joy in her home place." August Derleth
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ap 29 '51 350w

"The story is told with restraint and a keen sense of humor. The descriptions are vivid and full of charm. Mr. Hallock's illustrations are a worthy and intelligent contribution. It takes life to love life." L. E. Cannon
+ Christian Century 68:798 Jl 4 '51 160w

"A moving and satisfying story that the reader will not soon forget. The decorations by Robert Hallock are delightful." O. D. H.
+ Christian Science Monitor p15 My 10 '51 440w

"A gem of a story, which leaves the reader wishing it hadn't stopped when it did (and how seldom that is true today)."
+ Kirkus 19:215 Ap 15 '51 190w

"Public library clients in their middle years and older will enjoy this choice bit of authentic New England lore." H. R. Forbes
+ Library J 76:776 My 1 '51 80w

" 'The Southwest Corner,' however slight in form and treatment, however limited in emotional scope, is true and convincing, and its author, largely through her own sincerity, not only ensures the complete interest of the reader but as well enlists his sympathy. Indeed, he will find himself surprised that these ordinary happenings, enacted in a hundred remote New England communities, can so engross his attention. For these simple and universal emotions, which never rise either to comedy or to tragedy, nevertheless are real and poignant, impressive and true." M. E. Chase
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ap 29 '51 400w

New Yorker 27:118 Ap 28 '51 30w

"It's a sentimental tale, yes. Because it centers about the way in which one woman, who was old, solved her problem, it should be sentimental. But because Mildred Walker manages to tell her story without once slopping over, without the slightest trace of the maudlin, the word 'sentiment' may be used in this case as high praise." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 20 '51 750w

"A warm-hearted book and one that is both wise and tender. Without undue emphasis, with brevity, common sense, and a dash of humor Miss Walker has told a story that has meaning for all of us." Dorothy Van Doren
+ Sat R of Lit 34:12 Je 9 '51 500w
Wis Lib Bul 47:122 My '51

WALKER, ROBERT AVERILL. Planning function in urban government. 2d ed 410p $4.75 Univ. of Chicago press

711 City planning 50-10651

"Based on a field study of planning in 37 American cities, and first published in 1941 [Book Review Digest 1941]. Now reissued with little change except the addition of two new chapters on recent planning." Booklist

Am Pol Sci R 45:242 Mr '51 10w

Booklist 47:190 Ja 15 '51

"In the first edition of this book Mr. Walker reported his visits to thirty-seven cities on a graduate fellowship and his observations of the limited effectiveness of their planning commissions. In the intervening decade . . . he has made fresh contact with planning activities in leading cities; and, more important, he now speaks with authority in his own right as an analyst of the planning process. He has not rewritten the first edition of his book, but has added chapters on developments during and after the war and a reappraisal of the planning function." C. S. Ascher

+ Survey 87:244 My '51 450w

WALKER, TURNLEY. Journey together. (Story Press bk) 144p $2.50 McKay

616.83 Infantile paralysis 51-13383

In his Rise Up and Walk (Book Review Digest 1950) the author described his own battle with polio. In this volume he recounts his experiences and the obstacles he overcame in his efforts in getting back into everyday living, helped by his loyal wife and their two children.

Booklist 48:118 D 1 '51

"Painful as the record necessarily is at points, for Mr. Walker pulls no punches in telling what the experience meant to all the family, the book is heartening rather than depressing. It should be of real and concrete help to others who must struggle against a handicap and perhaps even more to those who love them and want to help them." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 D 2 '51 230w

WALL, JOHN W. (SARBAN, pseud). Ringstones, and other curious tales. 283p $3 Coward-McCann

51-26056

Five eerie short stories, some of them being stories within stories. The strange adventures take place in Persia, Russia, Egypt, and England.

"Sarban's imagination is without bounds, in a rather old-fashioned, Castle of Otranto way; his approach is chatty and enthusiastic; and his Englishmen are the ironic, well-informed, pipe-smoking sort hardly ever found outside the English detective story."

New Yorker 27:126 My 12 '51 60w

"Like the carved Chinese balls, each of these tales leads you on to new and more curious delights; and whoever 'Sarban' is (the publishers do not identify him by his real name) he is a writer of the very highest order and the stories in this book are exciting examples of fantasy at its best." D. F.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 S 2 '51 700w

" 'Sarban' writes pleasantly enough with occasional touches of unemphatic wit in his prose. His little surprises are often telegraphed a little too clearly for them to titillate any but the sleepiest reader. But if the day is hot and you are very willing to suspend disbelief the book is as light as its contents and it won't very much matter if you drowse off." E. J. Fitzgerald

+ — Sat R of Lit 34:31 Jl 7 '51 170w

"Moderately eerie short-stories that are too discursively written to chill the blood quite enough." Marghanita Laski

Spec 185:356 Mr 16 '51 60w

Times [London] Lit Sup p209 Ap 6 '51 180w

WALLACE, FRANCIS. Dementia pigskin. 252p $2.75 Rinehart

796.33 Football 51-12396

"Football's famous Previewer, and Notre Dame fan, admitting a predilection for pigskin, draws on his experiences as a football writer, with sidelights on the sports-writing fraternity. He reiterates his criticism of 'amateurism,' frankly advocating payment of college athletes." (Library J) Index.

"The general effect of reading 'Dementia Pigskin' probably would compare to that of browsing thru a football writer's mind if such a trip were feasible. Wallace, author of the fine 'The Notre Dame Story,' is more discursive in the current work." Robert Cromie

Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 O 7 '51 90w

Kirkus 19:342 Jl 1 '51 120w

"[Written] entertainingly, informally and with humor." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 76:1814 N 1 '51 60w

"When one football nut writes a book, another football nut probably should not be entrusted with the job of passing judgment on it. Francis Wallace is a self-confessed football filbert. He's so crazy that he picks All-America teams before the start of a gridiron season rather than after it. No one is better qualified than he to dash off a book such as 'Dementia Pigskin.' " Arthur Daley

+ N Y Times p16 O 7 '51 320w

WALLACE, MAY NICKERSON. Race for Bill; il. by Jean Macdonald Porter. 127p $2 Nelson

51-5107

The soap-box derby is the background for this story for ages eight to twelve. Bill Mason had to overcome his fear of racing and endure a lot of hard luck before he could win the race.

Booklist 47:406 Jl 15 '51

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 S 16 '51 140w

Kirkus 19:323 Jl 1 '51 80w

"Among the soap-box crowd . . . it should be welcomed as readable and quite credible enough." Mary Strang

+ Library J 76:1235 Ag '51 50w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 O 14 '51 50w

"This is a story of real grit, backed up by family loyalty and friendship. It also contains a lot of hints for future racers." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p18 Ag 12 '51 90w

WALLACE, WILLARD MOSHER. Appeal to arms; a military history of the American Revolution. 308p il maps $4.50 Harper

973.33 U.S.—History, Military. U.S.—History—Revolution 51-348

"Using the Clinton, Gage, and Germain Papers the author has successfully presented the American Revolution in the dispassionate light it deserves. Mr. Wallace has taken pains to correct many of the mistaken ideas about the Revolution which have for so long been accepted as gospel. In a systematic way he has covered all phases of the extended conflict pointing out mistakes made on all sides emphasizing the attitudes which both hindered and helped the final outcome." (Library J) Index.

"The struggle Mr. Wallace portrays is alive and in motion; it has all the ingredients of reality, drab and heroic. He has read widely in the literature of the subject, from the classic authorities to the newest monographs, and has managed to integrate his material in a relatively brief account. He has also managed to hold the balance between the combatants: the British receive almost as much attention as the Americans, and Washington's blunders are shown as clearly as Howe's. The result is an impartial and eminently readable story." W. B. Willcox

+ Am Hist R 56:904 Jl '51 430w

Booklist 47:234 Mr 1 '51

"Any layman, proud of his heritage and interested in the lessons of the past, will enjoy and profit from 'Appeal to Arms.'" R. J. Graf

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 18 '51 550w

Current Hist 20:229 Ap '51 40w

"A terse, valuable account which may have plus sales with the current interest in military history."

+ Kirkus 18:718 D 1 '50 250w

"This is good military history and in short one volume form which should recommend it as good introduction to the understanding of early American military history." H. L. Roth

+ Library J 76:178 F 1 '51 130w

"Appeal to Arms is both eminently readable and very good history. With an admirable sense of perspective, Mr. Wallace gets rid of the emotional smoke screen which so often has confused both the events and the issues. Under his hand emerges a pattern which for clarity would be hard to beat." A. W. Smith

+ New Eng Q 24:279 Je '51 700w

"Mr. Wallace writes with a lively and graceful pen, with a sharp eye to character, an awareness of terrain and background and a sense of humor." H. S. Commager

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Mr 4 '51 1150w

"'Appeal to Arms' is notable for its critical quality; the provincial Fourth-of-July Anglophobia that permeated earlier accounts is here replaced by a fair-minded appraisal of friend and foe and a similar allocation of credit and blame." Carl Bridenbaugh

+ N Y Times p23 F 4 '51 600w

New Yorker 27:109 F 17 '51 160w

"In which the military history of the American Revolution receives full, careful and scholarly treatment in a highly readable, eminently fair one-volume summary." C. W. Weinberger

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 Mr 3 '51 850w

"Despite errors and indifferent maps, 'Appeal to Arms' is a good book. Mr. Wallace, a man with the temerity to attempt to tell the whole military history of the Revolution in 274 pages, has accomplished with notable success a monumental task of condensation." G. F. Scheer

+ — Sat R of Lit 34:9 Je 2 '51 850w

"The author has written the military history of the Revolution almost with a professional soldier's grasp of tactics and strategy, allotting proper space to such subjects as the organization of the British and American forces, but he has also presented the material in a stimulating and readable manner completely understandable to the general reader."

+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:172 Je '51 270w

Wis Lib Bul 47:87 Ap '51

WALLACH, IRA JAN. Hopalong-Freud, and other modern literary characters; il. for chapter 8, Babykins, by George Price. 134p $2 Schuman

817 51-2164

"This anthology of humor [is] an enthusiastic one-man show in which Mr. Wallach exhibits his talent as a quick-change artist. There is the Ernest Hemingway character in Out of the Frying Pan and Into the Soup . . . the Truman Capote creation in the Second-Hand Magnolia; [and] the Thomas Merton-type autobiographer in The Fourteen Carat Molehill. Plenty of other literary celebrities also are embalmed in this collection. Among them are Sir Aubrey Hopalong-Freud (none other than T. S. Eliot's 'The Cocktail Party's' psychiatrist, Sir Henry Harcourt-Reilly)." Sat R of Lit

---

Reviewed by Robert Cromie

Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 My 6 '51 270w

"Under the load of the unremitting pile-on, there is some humor, which is sometimes questionable."

Kirkus 19:89 F 1 '51 90w

"A book of parodies which will displace no laurels from the brow of Wolcott Gibbs, the best living parodist. . . Take in small doses." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 76:406 Mr 1 '51 110w

Reviewed by Harry Gilroy

N Y Times p14 Mr 25 '51 230w

"Most of Mr. Wallach's acrobatics come off, but there are a few handstands—such as Death Opens the Mail, the 'What's your racket?'-type whodunit—that suffer from Mr. Wallach's uncontrollable use of the ludicrous. Still, why complain? This collection is as amusing and cutting as his well-received first venture into satire, 'How to Be Deliriously Happy.'" Bernard Kalb

Sat R of Lit 34:37 Ap 7 '51 400w

WALLER, LESLIE. Bed she made. 248p $2.75 Dial press

51-9688

Ann Bowie came to New York to become a writer and to forget an unhappy home. Her New York days and nights are anything but happy or secure, as she drinks, smokes marijuana, and indulges in promiscuous sex experiments. All the time she despises herself for the way she is headed, and finally makes one last effort at regaining her self respect.

"Altho there are many Ann Bowies in the world, this one strikes us as a little unbelievable. To us 'The Bed She Made' is strictly a class B psychological novel which could have been told in a lot fewer words—if it was necessary to tell it at all." William Yates

— Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 Mr 18 '51 300w

"Whether the author intended to make her a typical business girl or simply to write a shocker, is difficult to determine. The end-product is too ambitious to be read as pornography, and too preoccupied with excesses to be accepted as literate fiction." Richard Plant

— N Y Times p22 Mr 11 '51 110w

"Mr. Waller's pungent, staccato style reflects the corrosive tempo and mood of New York. His understanding of the city's brutalizing influences and of Ann Bowie's inner drives makes her a tragic figure. Except for her background, she somehow reminds one of Tennessee Williams's unhappy heroines. Like the playwright, Mr. Waller has the gifts of eloquence and compassion." Ray Pierre

Sat R of Lit 34:34 Mr 31 '51 270w

WALLERSTEIN, JAMES SCHEUER. Demon's mirror. 326p $3 Bellamy press, 152 W. 42d st, N.Y. 18

51-20331

A fantasy concerning a demonic mirror which gave men their heart's desire, but at a terrible price.

"Though richly imaginative, the book is a hodge-podge of unmotivated action and wooden characterizations." V. G.

N Y Times p19 Jl 22 '51 70w

"Quite a readable story." Don Fabun

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 25 '51 120w

School & Society 73:80 F 3 '51 30w

Springf'd Republican p8C F 4 '51 180w

WALLICH, HENRY CHRISTOPHER. Monetary problems of an export economy; the Cuban experience, 1914-1947. 357p $5 Harvard univ. press

332.4 Money—Cuba. Cuba—Economic conditions 50-11178

"Author is chief of Foreign Research Division of The Federal Reserve Bank of New York, and has worked closely for some years with the Cuban Finance Ministry and Central Bank. With this background he is able to give an instructive picture of the Cuban monocultural (sugar) export economy. He describes the monetary situation in 1914, traces the developing conditions through successive legislative enactments, and concludes with a careful and thorough analysis of the significance of Cuban monetary experience and prospects under its Central Bank, established in 1940." Library J

WALLICH, H. C.—Continued

"This book is a welcome though delayed addition to the growing literature applying modern tools of economic analysis to the problems of underdeveloped economies. . . The time span involved in the preparation of the study accounts in part for its major deficiencies, which take the form of internal inconsistencies and an undue emphasis, particularly in the historical chapters, on the cyclical aspects of Cuba's monetary experience." Gerald Alter
+ — Am Econ R 41:692 S '51 1050w

"This book is a thorough and competent study of Cuban economics." Renzo Sereno
+ Ann Am Acad 275:226 My '51 420w
Foreign Affairs 30:169 O '51 20w

"This book is a scholarly contribution to the economic history of Cuba and to the understanding of the problems of international adjustment in a country whose economic welfare is so closely tied up with the world market for a product over whose price it has little control. It does well what it attempts to do, but I wish that the author had done more to put the Cuban experience into a broader historical setting." F. W. Fetter
+ — J Pol Econ 59:272 Je '51 600w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 76:47 Ja 1 '51 110w

"Specialists will find much of interest in both its financial history and economic analysis."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:156 Je '51 210w

WALLIS, CHARLES LANGWORTHY, ed. Treasury of sermon illustrations. 319p $3.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

251 Homiletical illustrations 50-10619

"This is a voluminous collection of little stories and quotations, alphabetically classified and cross-referenced." Churchman

"The selections are of varied value, but many preachers will find the book helpful." W. L. Caswell
Churchman 164:17 D 15 '50 60w

"Although this book will be widely used it will, unfortunately, aid and abet the speaker who (a) has not learned what sermon illustration really is, and/or, (b) has not learned how to get better illustrations himself. It may be carping criticism to point out that this volume has several more or less serious misquotations and several inaccurate titles; these things may be mere carelessness. . . All these are serious defects that occur in the usual volume of sermon illustrations, and the present one is only slightly less free than most. Of course there is some wheat." R. E. Keighton
— + Crozer Q 28:95 Ja '51 160w

"For those who need such a crutch (and one fears there are many) this is as well constructed and handy a one as they are likely to find."
+ Kirkus 18:696 D 1 '50 80w

WALSH, EDMUND ALOYSIUS. Total empire; the roots and progress of world communism. (Science and culture ser) 293p maps $3.50 Bruce pub.

327.47 Russia—Foreign relations. Communism 51-11366

"Father Walsh, regent of the School of Foreign Service of Georgetown University, is a lifelong student of geopolitics. . . As director of the papal relief mission to Soviet Russia, Father Walsh witnessed the Bolshevik Revolution. These first-hand observations plus his own encyclopedic knowledge enable him to examine the grave question: Why has Russia's attempt thus far succeeded where Germany's failed?" N Y Times

"The present reviewer is in so complete agreement with practically everything in this volume, that he feels a special obligation to confess that he was not convinced by the arguments and comparisons of the last chapter, which are supposed to justify the preventive use of the atom bomb. But when reading the last page of the whole book, he found the agreement again so complete that he only regretted not to be able here to quote that page in full." O. Halecki
+ — Cath World 174:156 N '51 420w

Reviewed by Walter Trohan
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Jl 8 '51 550w

"Father Walsh seems to identify the Communist party with the Russian people, but his historical parallels (Russian imperialism—Soviet imperialism; Ivan the Terrible—Stalin, and so on) are wholly unconvincing. Apart from this, 'Total Empire' is a timely book." Mikhail Koriakov
N Y Times p6 Jl 8 '51 650w

"The sober, calm, and factual approach is characteristic of the manner in which this penetrating work is written." Martin Ebon
+ Sat R of Lit 34:11 D 22 '51 430w

WALSH, JOSEPH PATRICK (JOSEPH PATRICK, pseud). King's arrow. 380p $3.50 Lippincott

51-11191

This tale of smuggling in American colonial days begins in Edinburgh in 1758, and after many adventures at sea and ashore in the West Indies and the colonies, comes to a climax in Boston in 1770.

Reviewed by Pat Patten
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 O 21 '51 300w

"Patly plotted and superficially motivated, but done with zest and pace; good yarn spinning in the manner of Van Wyck Mason. For that audience."
Kirkus 19:408 Ag 1 '51 230w

"Mr. Patrick has drawn a most interesting picture of the times, though his character drawing leaves something to be desired."
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 O 21 '51 250w

"Neatly plotted and peopled with believable characters, this is a cracking good yarn of adventure on sea and land, balanced by an engaging element of love and romance." W. B. Hayward
+ N Y Times p26 N 11 '51 280w

"Lovers of historical fiction and of sea stories should enjoy this one. It is fast-paced and shows a fine technical knowledge of colonial vessels and shipping. The pursuits and escapes off the Massachusetts coast make good reading, though the love story and characterizations are run-of-the mill. Mr. Patrick is at his best with the sea." J. C. C.
+ — Springf'd Republican p14C O 28 '51 170w

WALSH, MAURICE. Trouble in the glen. 256p $2.75 Lippincott

51-9441

"On a visit to his native Scotland, proud, daring Sir Gawain Micklethwaite, ex-Wing-Commander, meets his match in lovely, madcap Isabel, daughter of the new laird of the glen." Bookmark

Booklist 47:255 Mr 15 '51
+ Bookmark 10:134 Mr '51 30w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Cath World 173:75 Ap '51 140w

Reviewed by Robert Cromie
Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 Ap 22 '51 90w
Kirkus 18:708 D 1 '50 160w

"Maurice Walsh is fond of his hearty, heathery characters, and 'Trouble in the Glen' is plentifully stocked with ghillies, keepers, stalkers, herders and bonnie lassies."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 F 18 '51 90w

"It would seem that neither time nor wars nor gloomy forebodings can subdue the romantic spirit of Maurice Walsh whose new novel . . . is as fresh and sparkling as the waters that flow through the glens in spring." N. M.

+ N Y Times p30 Mr 18 '51 500w

WALTARI, MIKA TOIMI. Wanderer; tr. by Naomi Walford. 438p $3.75 Putnam
51-13622

Continues the story of Mikael, the Finnish youth of The Adventurer (Book Review Digest 1950). This time his wanderings cover a large part of North Africa and the Ottoman Empire. The time is the sixteenth century.

Reviewed by Henry Cavendish
Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 O 28 '51 370w

Kirkus 19:491 S 1 '51 240w

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 O 28 '51 800w

"Waltari's new book, 'The Wanderer,' is a sequel to 'The Adventurer' and in it the saga becomes a cyclorama. Though less filled with a dazzling succession of episodes than its predecessors, it has other compensations and I have no doubt that it will be just as popular." T. C. Chubb
N Y Times p4 O 21 '51 550w

New Yorker 27:160 N 10 '51 70w

"The picture of the Moslem empire at its height of splendor and power is fascinating. . . Mr. Waltari adds to his growing body of distinguished work, extends his comic gifts, and gives more than a hint that we have not seen the last of Michael. That is all right with me." Edmund Fuller
+ Sat R of Lit 34:16 N 3 '51 600w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn
Springf'd Republican p8C D 16 '51 380w

"The Wanderer may be a bit of a disappointment to the author's fans. Its story moves intelligibly from episode to episode, and its characters are sufficiently self-consistent so that it is possible to tell them apart. But the old Waltari charm is not there."
Time 58:128 N 5 '51 130w

WALTERS, MARGUERITE. Real Santa Claus; il. by Meg Wohlberg. 31p $1 Lothrop 50-10975

"With a feeling for the things that can puzzle a child, the author answers the twentieth-century's special brand of Christmas dilemma; which of all the Santa Clauses you see is the real one? Whether children believe in Santa Claus or not, they will be sympathetic toward Jerry's problem and will feel with him the spirit of Christmas as Mr. Riley, the policeman, gives his answer." Library J

Booklist 47:209 F 1 '51

"Charming little story." Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 17 '50 40w

Reviewed by H. M. Brogan
Library J 76:55 Ja 1 '51 80w

"The big, gay pictures will please small listeners, who could well hear this either before or after Christmas." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 D 10 '50 130w

"Christmas is a time for telling and for reading aloud stories which underline the real spirit behind the bustling excitement of the season. 'The Real Santa Claus' is a fine example of this." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p60 D 3 '50 140w

Wis Lib Bul 47:65 Mr '51

WALTON, HARRY. Plastics for the home craftsman. 191p il $4 McGraw 745.59 Plastics. Handicrafts 51-5162

"This new addition to the literature on plastics craftsmanship covers the standard techniques such as sawing, drilling, and polishing; but it is especially good for its descriptions of trickier methods such as the shaping of heated plastics by means of jigs, forming domes with air pressure, cutting threads and carving. The chief emphasis is on descriptions of techniques, but a fair number of plastic articles are shown in illustrations. Construction methods and details are illustrated in a large number of line drawings." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 48:7 S 1 '51

"Illustrated and with diagrams, this will be useful in a little covered field."
+ Kirkus 19:289 Je 1 '51 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 36:71 S '51

WALTON, LORING BAKER. Anatole France and the Greek world. 334p il $6 Duke univ. press
843 France, Anatole. Civilization, Greek 50-11179

"Professor Walton offers here the results of years of study and meditation on Anatole France as an exponent of the Greek. . . In the first chapter the author situates his subject in relation to the Greek revival which surrounded France's youth and the attitudes towards antiquity which prevailed subsequently. . . In the later chapters Professor Walton turns to Greek pictures and themes in France's work and his use of Greek literary forms." Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by Laurence LeSage
+ Sat R of Lit 34:16 Mr 31 '51 380w

"This important and interesting study of the Greek world as it was known to and interpreted by Anatole France offers a valuable affirmation of the persistence of the classic tradition in French humanism."
+ U S Quarterly Bk R 7:24 Mr '51 300w

WALZ, MRS AUDREY (FRANCIS BONNAMY, pseud). Man in the mist. 253p $2.50 Duell 51-13660

Detective story.

Kirkus 19:542 S 15 '51 100w

Reviewed by James Sandoe
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 N 11 '51 130w

"For a spy melodrama, the story is possibly a bit slow and lacking in surprises; but detective Peter Shane is in fine form, from first to last." Anthony Boucher
N Y Times p32 N 4 '51 90w

"The Mastermind's eccentricities take some believing, and the explanation's too wordy, but general plot structure and scenery are good. C plus." L. G. Offord
San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 18 '51 70w

Reviewed by Sergeant Cuff
Sat R of Lit 34:76 N 17 '51 30w

WARBASSE, JAMES PETER. Cooperative peace. 273p $3 Coop. pub. assn, box 2000, Superior, Wis.
334 Cooperation. International cooperation. Peace 50-9608

"In this book a pioneer of the cooperative movement examines the causes of war and possibilities for peace offered when society is organized on the cooperative principle through local associations, regional and national federations, and world federation." (Am Econ R) Index.

"The book is well organized and clearly written. It draws heavily from the author's previous books with little use being made of recent literature on the economics of war. Since it is apparently intended for popular consumption, the general lack of supporting references and the extreme brevity of some chapters may be justified. Though offering little that is new to the specialist, Cooperative Peace should prove interesting, provocative, and timely to the general reader." R. C. Cave
+ Am Econ R 41:703 S '51 700w

WARBASSE, J. P.—Continued

"Readers will view the final chapters of this book with much skepticism. This should not blind them, however, to a sincere and authoritative pronouncement on the values of co-operative methods in business." R. W. Kelso

+ — Ann Am Acad 273:203 Ja '51 370w

WARBURG, JAMES PAUL. Faith, purpose and power; a plea for a positive policy. 180p $2 Farrar, Straus

327.73 U.S.—Foreign policy 50-9736

For descriptive note see Annual for 1950.

Current Hist 20:39 Ja '51 130w

Foreign Affairs 29:322 Ja '51 20w

Reviewed by A. H. Uhl

New Repub 124:28 Ap 16 '51 480w

"The climax of Mr. Warburg's thinking, like the later pages of his book, stresses the need for a world federation—not a mere Atlantic union—that can bring the two sundered portions of the globe into a nearer relationship. As an economist, Mr. Warburg knows the uses of economic measures in forging the ultimate settlement. It is in dealing with immediate choices of practical policy, however, that Mr. Warburg is at his most interesting, and certainly at his most controversial." August Heckscher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ja 14 '51 480w

WARBURG, JAMES PAUL. Victory without war. 73p pa $1 Franklin & Marshall; Current Affairs press, 25 Vanderbilt av, N.Y. 17; distributed by Farrar, Straus

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations. World politics 51-4249

"His book, based on lectures James P. Warburg delivered this spring at Franklin & Marshall College, gives a good summation of the faults he finds with Washington policies as well as remedies he would offer. The major faults that Mr. Warburg finds with the Truman-Acheson policies are that they are fear-inspired and negative. . . He would place our moral, political and economic strength behind two definite and positive objectives: (1) The creation of a world organization under which it will no longer be possible for any nation to use force as an instrument of foreign policy. (2) The establishment of a world economic organization under which an effective attack would be made on hunger, poverty, disease and insecurity." N Y Times

"There are details in Mr. Warburg's program with which one may not agree. But in its constructive approach to the main problems it offers a promising alternative to acting from either fear or from boastful self-delusion." Ernest Pisko

+ Christian Science Monitor p9 Je 26 '51 320w

"Mr. Warburg's objectives are worthy and few Americans would not like to see his proposed organizations function successfully. Many, however, are bound to doubt that either is possible in the kind of world we have today." Neil MacNeil

+ — N Y Times p33 Je 10 '51 290w

WARD, BARBARA. Policy for the West. 317p $3.75 Norton

940.55 World politics. Economic policy 51-9115

"An economist whose reputation for cleancut analysis has been established in previous books here explores the scale of the challenge the West is facing, and the costs of the necessary policy of containment. She weighs the relative strengths of opposing forces, seeing the economic balance with the West but the extent of mobility inadequate for sustained effort to the end of defense and social and economic stability. She then advances the arguments for some measure of unity of operation. She meets head-on the arguments against controls, government supervision, risk of inflation and overexpansion, and with cogent reasoning supplies many of the answers. She then presents the alternatives—negative measures, rather than the unpalatable positive measures. She suggests methods of off-setting the dangers, of stimulating growth of wealth, of expansion of national resources. She weighs the arguments of Britain against partial federation in a European council, and America's reluctance to accept world federalism as a solution, and discusses the steps by which unity could be attained within the framework of a strengthened United Nations." (Kirkus) Index.

Reviewed by Charles Hitch

Am Econ R 41:991 D '51 1300w

"Barbara Ward has done a real service to the cause of freedom. Her latest book gives real meaning to today's headlines at a time when the average citizen has every right to be confused about world affairs. It is clearly, concisely, even beautifully written. Free men who are looking for a keen analysis of the position of the West, together with a prescription for what must be done to win our struggle against Communism, should read this book—not once but twice." F. O. Wilcox

+ Am Pol Sci R 45:1189 D '51 650w

"The entire work is distinguished by a clear and simple style and an uncommon understanding of economic forces." J. F. Rippy

+ Ann Am Acad 275:163 My '51 330w

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 187:86 F '51 500w

Booklist 47:165; 186 Ja 1 '51; Ja 15 '51

Bookmark 10:108 F '51 50w

Reviewed by F. H. Soward

Canadian Hist R 32:270 S '51 210w

"Despite her reputation as a professional economist, there are statements in this volume which make one wonder if she fully understands the organism of a national economy. . . So far as I can detect there is little more to this volume than one can find in the ceaseless flow, week after week, from the planning evangelists of the New Republic, the Nation and the Keyserling Economic Policy Committee of Mr. Truman." J. T. Flynn

— Cath World 173:76 Ap '51 420w

"This new attempt to clarify for us the nature of our struggle with the soviet union . . . shows all the brilliance, wealth of information, and ease of style which have adorned the author's previous writings. Yet, while there is much to be praised in this book, it is not quite as satisfactory as the previous one. For the situation which confronts us now is infinitely more serious than that which confronted us in 1948 when 'The West at Bay' was published. Then we could drift along, intellectually, politically, and militarily, protected as we were by the American monopoly of the atomic bomb." H. J. Morgenthau

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 Ja 21 '51 450w

"For one who knows so much, she can also write with great clarity and persuasiveness. The point of view is definitely British but not offensively insular. . . On the whole, the exposition and defense of British policies is very persuasive. This is undoubtedly one of the chief purposes of the book. It is done so ably and in such fine spirit that it ought to be read, especially by those who believe —and who may still believe after reading it— that perhaps America might have a little more consideration for her own national interest even in a world situation in which 'mutual aid' means that she must necessarily do most of the aiding." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 68:210 F 14 '51 500w

Reviewed by J. G. Harrison

Christian Science Monitor p3 Ja 16 '51 600w

"Miss Ward has made an important contribution to the development of a positive ideology for the West. Her book deserves wide reading." J. B. Parrish

+ Churchman 165:18 Ap 1 '51 210w

Cleveland Open Shelf p4 Ja '51

Current Hist 20:104 F '51 110w

Foreign Affairs 29:488 Ap '51 60w

"This is a very able statement by the assistant editor of the London Economist of the policy of 'containment' upon which the Western world is now acting. It should contribute to an understanding of what that policy is and what it implies and to a stronger faith in its ultimate effectiveness. May it be widely read and fully understood." V. W. Bladen

+ J Pol Econ 59:455 O '51 750w

"A stimulating and constructive book for thoughtful citizens."

+ Kirkus 18:714 D 1 '50 180w

"Lucid, persuasive, and urgent book." J. B. Brebner

+ Nation 172:62 Ja 20 '51 1300w

Reviewed by A. Z. Carr

New Repub 124:19 Ja 29 '51 1150w

"The fabric is rich and intricately woven; and yet the pattern is as clear—and perhaps as stylized—as a seventeenth-century tapestry." L. M. Hacker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 Ja 7 '51 2100w

"Barbara Ward, formerly on the staff of The London Economist, has perhaps the clearest and sanest voice reaching the United States from post-war Britain. Her previous book, 'The West at Bay,' was a thoughtful political essay. Her far deeper present volume is a careful, factual analysis of danger, policy and resources." A. A. Berle

+ N Y Times p1 Ja 7 '51 1700w

"If anyone has written a better exposition and defense of the administration's theory of containment, word of it has not come my way. I gather that most of Miss Ward's book was written before the beginning of the fighting in Korea, last June, but that before the book went to press she had time for a certain amount of revision and reconsideration. . . 'Policy for the West' will stand not only as a good restatement of the general theory of containment but as an instructive and attractively composed historical survey of a very unattractive period." R. H. Rovere

+ New Yorker 26:93 Ja 20 '51 280w

"This book itself may be regarded as a contribution to the rallying of the West and to the creation of needed confidence. Simply written and intelligently presented, it is a useful tract for the times." René Albrecht-Carrié

+ Pol Sci Q 66:295 Je '51 750w

Reviewed by G. G. Stevens

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ja 28 '51 750w

"Miss Ward knows the United States—pretty well. Her present prescription is carefully planned and tries to be fair. Its partial failure to be objective is a result of the place and date of her birth. Miss Ward is an exceptionally fine representative of that generation of Europeans (she is thirty-six years old) who came to maturity during the Great Depression and were indelibly stamped by it. . . In yet another way Miss Ward is a typical postwar European. As a Catholic and as a Socialist she represents the two strains that have dominated the political life of that Continent since 1945. Her views seem to reflect both the social encyclicals of the Roman Church and the doctrine of the British Labor Party." E. A. Mowrer

Sat R of Lit 34:27 Ja 13 '51 1500w

Social Studies 42:232 My '51 10w

"The book spells out with remarkable completeness many of the details in the program it recommends. It is not an empty exhortation to attempt the impossible, an unrealistic formula which disregards practical obstacles. By confronting the crisis boldly and intelligently, Barbara Ward robs the future of much of its terror." George Soule

+ Survey 87:86 F '51 1050w

Times [London] Lit Sup p95 F 16 '51 1050w

Wis Lib Bul 47:23 Ja '51

"Anyone who reads 'Policy for the West' should find it impossible hereafter to indulge in any of the cheap criticisms of American and British policy that have been voiced on both sides of the Atlantic in recent months. . . Not the least of the merits of her book, incidentally, is her excellent account of the technical functioning of the Marshall Plan, which she makes understandable to readers lacking her own knowledge of economics." T. J. Hamilton

+ Yale R n s 40:730 summer '51 750w

WARD, ELIZABETH (LESTER). No dudes, few women; life with a Navaho range rider [foreword by Frank Waters]. 251p $4.50 Univ. of N.Mex. press

B or 92 Navaho Indians. Ranch life 51-12315

An account of the author's life on a Navaho reservation, where her husband was a range rider for the government.

Booklist 48:29 S 15 '51

"An engrossing autobiografy of a woman with keen understanding, vision, sympathy, and courage. It's a colorful picture of a situation in which the writer's viewpoint might well be used by officialdom to play fair with our fellow Americans." Al Chase

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 O 14 '51 200w

"Little did a cautious reviewer expect to get such refreshment laced with real illumination about current history from a book with a title like 'No Dudes, Few Women.' No book was ever more unpretentious, more simply written, yet so quietly revelatory of what has gone on in the changing picture of the last years." Ernestine Evans

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 O 14 '51 950w

WARD, FRANCIS KINGDON. Footsteps in civilization; il. by Erna Pinner. 240p $3 Beacon press

901 Civilization—History 51-12364

"A short book for the general reader about some of the discoveries on which modern Western European civilization is ultimately based—fire, the cultivation of crops, the domestication of animals, writing and power machines, for example. The author draws extensively on his knowledge of modern primitives, and the book is illustrated with sketches by Erna Pinner." Spec

Reviewed by John Randolph

Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 S 23 '51 200w

Reviewed by E. S. Pisko

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 D 13 '51 470w

"Some of the findings of modern anthropology and archaeology seem to have been only half digested by Mr. Kingdon-Ward. His use of the word race is not scientific. . . It may be faulty proof-reading that gives Chapter III different (and wholly erroneous) dates from those in the prefatory synoptic table. . . These errors should be corrected and a list of books for further reading added."

Spec 185:324 Mr 9 '51 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p818 D 22 '50 450w

WARD, MARY JANE (MRS EDWARD QUAYLE). A little night music. 244p $3 Random house

51-979

"Elizabeth, on the eve of a fortieth birthday, listens to the night music of the past while her self-indulgent relatives carry on a chattering counterpoint in the present. Elizabeth, who had always nursed along an unacknowledged adoration of her father, now dead, faces for the first time a weakening of that love, [and] recognizes what Ralph Chapin's amused, proprietary domination had cost her." Kirkus

Booklist 47:197; 238 F 1 '51; Mr 1 '51

Bookmark 10:158 Ap '51 40w

"In a prose that more and more becomes its own end instead of being content to remain an instrument, Miss Ward explores and exploits states of consciousness which range from irritated nervousness to downright insanity, but little comes of it all beyond the exposing

WARD, M. J.—Continued
of nerve ends of a group of sensitive, not intensely interesting, people." Riley Hughes
Cath World 173:234 Je '51 200w

"Readers and theater-goers who took hilarious delight in 'The Women' will find an even subtler picture of woman [unkind] in 'A Little Night Music.' Despite its serious implications it is a light hearted novel." Fanny Butcher
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 F 25 '51 600w

Reviewed by M. W. Stoer
Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 8 '51 600w

Kirkus 18:737 D 15 '50 160w

Reviewed by E. P. Nichols
Library J 76:517 Mr 15 '51 100w

"Intricately planned, and fastidiously executed, every scene, almost every word, adds to the cumulative effect of the whole." F. H. Bullock
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 F 25 '51 450w

"Readable, witty, interesting." Evelyn Eaton
+ N Y Times p4 F 25 '51 650w

New Yorker 27:111 Mr 3 '51 60w

"'A Little Night Music' is better than sensational, but it is true that none of the so-called sane characters in this work are as freshly and happily delineated as is crazy Aunt Elie in her cock-eyed world where she ignores the existense of her daughter-in-law, steals spoons cheerfully, and makes seemingly insane wisecracks which are intuitively close to the truth." M. S.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Mr 18 '51 300w

"Mary Jane Ward handles her materials skillfully, integrating the family relationships and background with Elizabeth's introspection so deftly that her characters breathe naturally. As sometimes happens, one of these, assigned a minor part, steps right into the limelight and leaves the reader hungry for more. Aunt Ellie, whose tragic story might easily have been repeated in Elizabeth (Jeanette Chapin understood and feared the possibility) dominates the last chapter in the book with a charm and insouciance that will be envied by the responsible and sane." Josephine Lawrence
+ Sat R of Lit 34:13 F 24 '51 600w

Wis Lib Bul 47:89 Ap '51

WARDLE, RALPH MARTIN. Mary Wollstonecraft; a critical biography. 366p $4.50 Univ. of Kan. press

B or 92 Godwin, Mary (Wollstonecraft) 51-12250

"Based on much new material found in the unpublished letters of Godwin and Mary Wollstonecraft, and on a careful ferreting out of his subject's translations and her contributions to periodicals, Dr. Wardle's critical biography is alive with the revolutionary thought of the 18th century with which he is obviously very familiar." (Library J) Index.

"Invaluable addition to all sorts of libraries, and heartily recommended for wide purchase." F. A. Boyle
+ Library J 76:1423 S 15 '51 100w

"Any reader who wants all the available facts about the author of 'A Vindication of the Rights of Women,' the first wife of William Godwin and the mother of Shelley's Mary, will have to refer to this book. Unhappily the facts are decked out in the worst professorial English, so larded with 'would haves,' 'must haves,' and 'probablys' that one grows dizzy shuttling between actual events and banal conjectures and comments."
+ — Nation 173:313 O 13 '51 160w

"Professor Wardle has done a solid and workmanlike job, but his book is overweight in spots, especially in the long discussion of Mary's affair with Imlay."
+ — New Yorker 27:155 N 3 '51 190w

"Mr. Wardle evaluates Mary Wollstonecraft's work in the light of the present and does a brilliant portrayal of her personality." J. V.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 21 '51 190w

WARFEL, HARRY REDCAY. American novelists of today. 478p il $6.50 Am. bk.

813.09 Novelists. American fiction—History and criticism 51-10144

"Alphabetically arranged guide to fiction writers of the past decade, including brief biography of each author with annotated list of works and summary of leading theme and style. Photographs. Index of married names and pseudonyms." Bookmark

Booklist 47:86; 309 N 1 '50; My 1 '51
Bookmark 10:231 Jl '51 40w
Wis Lib Bul 47:187 Jl '51

WARNER, REX. Men and gods; il. by Elizabeth Corsellis. 223p $3 Farrar, Straus

292 Mythology, Classical 51-10289

A collection of thirty-two stories from Greek mythology, translated or retold mainly from the Metamorphoses of Ovid.

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '51

